By the printed and by the spoken word, Mr. Reilly has contacted and sold the executives of America's foremost manufacturing interests. His experience in the fields of publicity and advertising will, I know, be of creative service to all the units in this industry where production of good pictures and good exploitation of pictures go hand in hand.

And he comes with the full vigor of youth, having the distinction of being the youngest who has served in this capacity since the paper was founded in 1907.

I can assure the thousands of readers of MOVING PICTURE WORLD that under Mr. Reilly this paper will continue firmly to adhere to the principles of fair play, honesty, and truth as laid down by its founder, the late James P. Chalmers.

Mr. Reilly has worked and developed under these principles. And under these same principles he will work for you.

Behind him are the resources of the CHALMERS PUBLISHING COMPANY and a large staff of trained specialty men. MOVING PICTURE WORLD will keep on maintaining its clean record of service to the industry as a whole.

Two Sunday Arrests

The policy of operating on Sundays in defiance of city ordinances and smiling upon being arrested seems to be on a decided increase in Missouri. This week two exhibitors were arrested—C. R. Wilson, his wife and the operator of the Liberty Theatre, Liberty, Mo., and J. W. Cotter, Moberly, Mo., exhibitor. When the case comes before the police court this week Mr. Wilson will demand a jury trial, he said. There is no state Sunday amusement law in Missouri.

After being arrested in the Moberly case, Mr. Cotter was released on bond and his theatre continued operation Sunday. The Moberly city council recently passed an amendment to an old city ordinance and paved the way for Sunday shows, but it was vetoed by the mayor. Moberly exhibitors still are hopeful that the council again will pass the measure over the mayor's veto.

UNITED ARTISTS CORP. NAMES GERMAN MANAGERS

A. C. Berman, in charge of United Artists Corporation interests in Germany, which recently purchased the Ifa-Film-Verleih-G.m.b.H., sends word to the New York office of the appointment of branch sales managers as follows:

Berlin, 8 Friedrichstrasse, Alfred Peters; Dusseldorf, 46 Graf Adolfstrasse, Rudolph Saklikower; Frankfort am Main, 52-60 Taunesstrasse, Benna Lachmann; Hamburg, 6 Esplanade, Louis Segall, and Leipzig, 1 Karlstrasse, Arthur Peters.

Hays Now Interested Mainly in Appeal of Connecticut Tax Law

By Tom Waller

WAGING their own war without outside allies, is the path that now faces the Connecticut exhibitors, we are given to understand. Exclusive of carrying the fight to the United States Supreme Court and seeking a re-hearing before the Federal Court, as a matter of formally completing the record, the Hays organization from now on makes known the fact that it will have nothing to do in other respects with the Connecticut mess.

As far as paying the tax goes Manhattan hears that things are now on a fairly smooth running basis at the present time. The stamps or trailers are said to be on hand for daily or weekly shipments of film into the state. Thus contracts are being lived up to and film is being delivered even though exhibitors may have to suffer the hardship of tardiness now and then.

Attorney Charles C. Pettijohn, who for the first few weeks after the Hays proclamation concerning Connecticut spent a good part of his time traveling from New York to New Haven, has been in the Middle West during the past week. It would seem that the exhibitors have already commenced being on their "own."

The Hays office has come to the conclusion that if public sentiment is to be excited for a repeal of the obnoxious measure it cannot be hoped to be aroused by outsiders. The creating of such a movement is therefore left to native exhibitors. The impression in this respect is that with local men alone in the battle with the public for the repeal there can be no inference about string pulling and foreign pressure.

The belief that the Legislature will not be adverse to the repeal has gained credence since the announcement by the head of the projectionists' union in Connecticut that thirty law makers have expressed their willingness to be reasonable, in writing. This, together with later developments, causes some New York circles to express the belief that the exhibitors will be willing to bide their time for legislative relief until 1927.

As has already been told in Moving Picture World, however, action by the Legislature has been relegated to second place. The Hays organization, although it now withdraws from active participation in stirring up Connecticut sentiment, feels that the quicker solution will be found in the United States Supreme Court. Should this fail, then the 1927 session of the Connecticut Legislature will be looked to as the last stand.

One-Month Term and Commission in Contract Queried—Seider Explains

Dr. Price, Member of St. Louis Board, Submits Constructive Criticism to Moving Picture World—Chairman Tells Why

WHAT Joseph M. Seider considers the two most important points on constructive criticism yet raised about the new form of contract and system of arbitration he has just presented for the industry's contemplation are incorporated in a letter to Moving Picture World from Dr. J. L. Price of St. Louis, Mo.

Price questions especially the wisdom of men being appointed to serve on the arbitration board for one month only, as is included in the Seider document. He seeks also to ascertain the advisability of a national arbitration commission. The importance of these two interrogations caused the World to present Dr. Price's letter to the chairman of the national committee on contract and arbitration. The letter and Chairman Seider's replies are, in their respective order, as follows:

"As a subscriber to the Moving Picture World and an exhibitor and also a member of the St. Louis joint arbitration board, I hope you will be so kind as to grant me the privilege of expressing myself on two exceptions taken to the new contract as submitted by Mr. Jos. M. Seider as published in the trade papers.

"As constructive criticism is solicited on the new contract, my criticism has to do only with that part of the contract pertaining to arbitration.

"In part (1) under arbitration the contract calls for two exhibitors and two exchange men to serve for a period of one month. I am at a loss to understand just why they are appointed for only one month. Being a member of an arbitration board, I very readily realize the fallacy of such a working arrangement and know that better and more meritorious work could be done by them if their appointment was for six months or a year instead of for only one month.

"Under the arrangement called for in the new contract, the board would be continuously changing its personnel. Members would not be on the board long enough to familiarize themselves with the work, and as most complaints registered with the board, under the present arrangement of handling complaints, take from three weeks to a month and even longer to settle, no board would be in power long enough to give a decision on cases, the evidence which they are thoroughly acquainted with, and which in a great many instances is given in person by some out-of-town exhibitor.

"One board would be always trying to finish the work started by the preceding board, and it goes without saying that work started by someone else is always a difficult thing to finish in a satisfactory and efficient manner. So, if anything is done in the way of adopting this new contract I hope it will be amended so as to provide for members of the joint arbitration boards to serve periods of from six months to one year.

"Another thing I am unable to understand in the new contract is why a commission is necessary to supervise the work of the board. This I consider uncalled for and would only tend to complicate matters. If competent men are selected to serve as arbitration board members and are appointed for a long enough time to become thoroughly acquainted with the work, their findings should be accepted as final and they should not be hampered by any supervising commission.

"If the men appointed to serve as arbitration board members have not the undivided confidence of the people they are appointed to represent and there is an undercurrent of feeling as to their not being able to do the work in an impartial manner and that a commission is necessary to supervise their work, then these men are not big enough men for the job, because they have not the undivided confidence of the people who appointed them.

"In no other industry that I know of where arbitrators are appointed to render a decision on a question or questions is a commission found necessary to supervise their work. If men big enough and possessing the necessary qualities to act as joint arbitration board members are appointed, a commission to supervise their work would not be necessary."

"Dr. J. L. Price's letter to Moving Picture World raises two questions," says Seider:

"First: Why does the proposed contract provide for the appointment of arbitrators for one month only?

"My answer to this interrogation is simply this: Because of the difficulty encountered in most territories to find theatre owners who would give the time necessary to serve for even the one-month period. In the New York district the arbitrators are now appointed for one month only.

"Experience is not necessarily a qualification for an arbitrator. Ability to grasp the proposition submitted and a sense of fairness is more necessary than experience.

"It is not the intention that in the event a board does not complete its hearings that it is to be supplanted and the balance of the evidence submitted to the succeeding board. A board should not be dismissed until it had completed its work.

"Sight must not be lost of the fact that under the proposed contract arbitrators are appointed for convenience only. Both parties to a dispute have the right to SELECT their side of the arbitration board.

"Therefore we are not opposed to boards being appointed for a longer period than one month. Boards may function for one day or one year providing the personnel of the exhibitor members of the arbitration board are acceptable to the exhibitor involved in the dispute.

"Second: Why a national arbitration commission?

"My answer to this interrogation is this: To make the changes in the contract that future experience will show necessary. To gather information and promulgate same to all exhibitor members on the arbitration boards and not only to distributor members as is now done by the Film Board of Trade. To supervise (not in the sense of scrutinizing every act of the local arbitration board or instruct it as to its every procedure) the arbitration board, advise it and step in only to prevent an injustice being done to either party. A board may err; it is made up of humans. No offense is intended to any individual or group. The exhibitors now serving on arbitration boards in most instances are doing real good. In many cases, in spite of the present unfair contract, through their individual ability and their devotion to the work, they obtain for the theatre owner a square deal. Yet, to really protect the theatre owner it is necessary to equalize the advantage held by the distributor because of the activities of the Film Board of Trade, by providing for a 'Film Board of Trade' to consist of both exhibitors and distributors and which WOULD function for the benefit of both. This exactly is the purpose of the provision for a National Arbitration Commission in our proposed contract."

Incorporations

Only three motion picture concerns recently incorporated in the Empire State and received their charters from the secretary of state. The following gives the names, capitalization and incorporators of the trio: Open House, Inc., $10,000, R. J. Joseph, C. F. Collins, Jr., Jacob Rosenfeld, New York City; Goodwill Distributing Corporation, $10,000, Toby Hodes, Henry Sonenshein, Jack Ferst, New York City; John G. Jermon, Inc., $50,000, I. L. Baldwin, P. E. Jacobs, J. G. Jermon. New York City.

Ensor Picture Corporation, Little Rock, Ark., capital stock $25,000; incorporators, J. M. Ensor, Gus Fulk and L. U. Cassinnelli.

The companies incorporated more recently in Albany, include: Self-Protection Pictures, Inc., capitalized at $10,000, with M. R. Loewenthal, A. C. Gratz and Grace Ahearn, of New York City; Rogowsky Amusement Company, Inc., of Port Chester, $10,000, Sarah Jacob and Samuel Rogowsky, of Port Chester; Cohen-Weidberg Theatre Corporation, $20 000, Abraham and Beckie Cohen, Isidore Cohen, New York City; Van Wyck Amusement Corporation, $420,000, Julius Gufkle, Ridgewood; Isaac Katz, Mitchell Kuy, Brooklyn.

ENLARGING F. B. O. STUDIOS

Upwards of $250,000 has recently been invested in improvements on the F. B. O. studio at Melrose avenue and Gower street, Hollywood, where, under the general supervision of B. P. Fineman all of the F. B. O. attractions are being produced. The new work includes projection rooms, dressing rooms and offices.

Katz Head, Zukor Treasurer of New Combine—Each Retains Own Houses

Betterment of Showmanship Declared by Paramount Executive to be Sole Object of Merger; Not Material Amalgamation—Statement

By Tom Waller

SAM KATZ is president of the yet unnamed and unincorporated unit under which are combined the theatre interests of Balaban and Katz and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Barney Balaban and Harold B. Franklin are the vice presidents. Adolph Zukor is treasurer. A board of directors for the combined interests will be named shortly. Also at this time a title for the combine will be selected when its certificate of incorporation will be officially filed.

That portion of the powerful Lubliner and Trinz circuit which the B. and K. magnates recently acquired is also included with the Balaban and Katz interest in the merger.

"Power and power and big business united with big business brings greater business," is the definition of a Famous executive for the sole reason of the merger.

The merger is not one in every sense of the word, he stated, in making known the above and latest facts in the deal to Moving Picture World. By this statement he explained that although the theatres will be grouped under one banner and will be governed by the above officers and directorate yet their ownership will be the same as before negotiations which culminated last week after being in the embryo for several years.

The objective point of the merger is essentially one of showmanship brain power so that through the collaboration of what "is acknowledged to be the best showmen minds in the industry" better methods of theatre operation in every detail should be realized.

That there will be such collaboration is a foregone conclusion that the theatres in this combine will be conducted under a uniform policy.

The Famous Players theatres in the combine number exactly 342, the World learned from its informant. In all there are "slightly less" than 500 theatres. The remainder are therefore Balaban and Katz houses with those of their interest in Lubliner and Trinz.

The new combine will issue stock but this stock will be owned in its entirety by Famous, we are officially informed.

Another very significant point at this time is the declaration by the Famous executive that Balaban and Katz will have full control of their own interests the same as heretofore, as will Famous. This would further prove that there will be little change, if any, in the financial scheme of things. Other than the corralling of these theatres under one policy of showmanship it would be gleaned from the comment made that under the combine each organization will be assessed only for the expenses its interests actually accrue.

It has been persistently rumored for some time in the past that Fitzpatrick and McElroy had aligned or were about to align their chain of houses with the Balaban and Katz interests. Efforts on the part of the World's Chicago correspondent to secure a statement from Fitzpatrick and McElroy on their position in this respect has brought only the repeated reply that no statement will be made at the present time and will not be made until they are ready to give it out.

When the World asked the Famous executive as to whether Fitzpatrick and McElroy were included in the deal or that the acquisition of that chain is being contemplated, he stated he did not know, in fact that he knew very little about the details concerning the Chicago end of the entire deal.

When a question was put to him, much broader in scope and to the effect: Is it the intention of the new combine to further increase its power by absorbing other circuits, he replied:

"We have no plans at this time to absorb any other chains. Any concern in business has to grow. All of these matters will be taken up individually as we progress."

Pressed as to other details concerning the merger he declared:

"The companies are just the same as they were before the merger. Each controls its own theatres. In other words both organizations exist as heretofore and neither will be dissolved. But in a unit of this kind there is power which will be for the benefit of better showmanship and will thus be for the betterment of the industry at large."

The only official statement generally issued by Famous Players concerning the merger is as follows:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation decided to separate their theatre interests from their production and distribution departments. A new corporation will be formed under separate management, but will be wholly owned by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The theatres will thus be operated as a separate unit and will rent and exhibit both Paramount and other pictures strictly according to their merit and suitability.

"After protracted negotiations Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation have been able to effect a mutually satisfactory agreement with Balaban & Katz Corporation of Chicago, whereby Famous Players-Lasky Corporation secures the advantages of the Balaban & Katz management for the new theatre corporation, working in association with these officers who have already built up the Famous Players theatre department to its present efficient standard.

"The enviable record and reputation of Messrs. Balaban & Katz as eminently successful and progressive theatre operators is generally recognized among those familiar with the film industry."

Moving Picture World's Chicago correspondent this week wired the following report concerning the perspective on the merger from his territory:

Herbert L. Stern, president, Barney Balaban and Sam Katz of Balaban & Katz Corporation returned from New York after completing negotiations with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to take over the management of that company's motion-picture houses throughout the country and said that they would busy themselves with working out the details of the management, during the next few weeks. Under the arrangement completed in New York several hundred motion picture houses scattered throughout the United States will be brought under the one management of the Balaban and Katz executives.

Balaban & Katz recently purchased controlling interest in Lubliner & Trinz circuit and the Great States Theatres, Inc. is another of their subsidiary companies recently organized.

W. K. Hollander, director of advertising for Balaban & Katz said it was too early to Blank in Deal?

A. H. Blank of Des Moines, who controls the Strand and Rialto in Omaha, has been busy for many months in conferences over the formation of a chain of theatres extending from Maine to California. He now plans to spend some time in Omaha finishing up preliminary details regarding the building of his fine new theatre in Omaha, Neb. His attorney W. C. Fraser said this would mean obtaining of loans, discussion of contracts, and laying of preliminary plans.. The company will be known as the A. H. Blank Theatre Co. of Nebraska. Its officers are A. H. Blank, president; W. C. Fraser, vice president; M. B. Griffin, secretary; and. J.. W.. Denman, treasurer.

Since Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has announced its divorcement of the theatre interests from its production interests, and put the theatres under control of Balaban & Katz of Chicago, it is believed here that this will affect one of the principal Omaha theatres at least, as Blank who owns two big Omaha theatres, is said to be associated with Balaban & Katz. It is thus expected that Blank will have a large voice in the management of the theatres this combination controls in the United States.

THE STUDIO TO BE ERECTED AT STUDIO PARK IN ST. PETERSBURG, FLA.

NIAGARA MUSICIANS STRIKE

The strike of musicians, operators and stagehands in the Strand, Cataract and Bellevue Theatres in Niagara Falls, N. Y., is developing into anything but a peaceable affair. William Sargeson, 31 years old, secretary of the musicians' union, has been arraigned before Acting Police Justice Frank S. Nicholson on a charge of disorderly conduct. George H. McKenna, assistant manager of the Strand Theatre, laid the information of which the warrant for Sargeson's arrest was issued. Sargeson later denied all allegations made by McKenna. He declares he is the victim of a frameup on the part of the theatre interests and the men brought into the city to take the places of the union men.

The union musicians are making much ado about the strike. They have one band going around in a truck, signs on which set forth that the Strand, Bellevue and Cataract are unfair to organized labor. When the band and truck arrive in front of any of the three mentioned houses the men give a soulful rendition of Chopin's Funeral March. There is another band giving concerts on the top of the marquise of the Ritz Theatre, one of the houses which are paying the new scale asked by the union workers. The Ritz is well postered with announcements that it is fair to organized labor.

say just how the theatres will be managed. Whether or not they will be run on a uniform policy is one of the things that will be worked out within the next few weeks.

Asked for the financial arrangement of the management, Mr. Hollander said: "That is one of the things the officers of the company refuse to disclose, but I imagine it will be somewhat along the same lines as those which have governed our management of McVickers theatre in Chicago which we have been managing for Famous Players—a percentage of the net profit."

The official statement issued says that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation decided to separate their theatre interests from their production and distribution departments. A new corporation will be formed under separate management, but will be wholly owned by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. After protracted negotiations, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have been able to effect a mutually satisfactory agreement with Balaban & Katz Corporation of Chicago, whereby Famous Players-Lasky Corporation secures the advantage of the Balaban & Katz management for the new theatre corporation.

H. P. Carver Sponsors Move To Make Florida Film Land

H. P. CARVER, former general manager of Cosmopolitan Productions, and one of the best known executives in the production end of the motion picture industry, is sponsoring the latest film-making development in Florida. Mr. Carver, it became known this week, is associated with the organization handling Studio Park, near St. Petersburg, and will be in complete charge of all details pertaining to the motion picture side of the new development.

James Sayles, formerly advertising and publicity director for the Hearst motion picture enterprises, is another well known film figure identified with the latest West Coast undertaking.

Studio Park is located in Pinellas County, Florida, about two miles from the hustling metropolis of St. Petersburg. It is past the stage of "virgin" development, the tract of six hundred acres being already cleared and on the threshold of development as an ultra residential community, and work on the erection of a modern motion picture studio is expected to start any day. Mr. Carver, on a recent trip to New York, conferred with numerous important picture men and received warm assurances regarding their attitude towards a properly equipped Florida studio.

"Studio Park," say the proponents of the new picture producing center, "meets the objections to so many previous Florida attempts at picture production and then puts forward many advantages. Outstanding, of course, is its location. It would be impossible to successfully make pictures in Florida or California if your studio is located many miles distant from a city of real size. Transportation difficulties, inability to secure enough extras and variety of types, scarcity of proper settings and furniture, all these are but a few of the handicaps in the way of many ill-conceived attempts at the creation of new picture producing colonies.

"Studio Park, on the other hand, is only two miles from St. Petersburg, the city that even now seems destined to be the metropolis of the Southland. Skyscrapers, modern hotels, everything that could be asked is to be found in St. Petersburg.

"Of even greater importance, possibly, than the location of the studio is the quality of executive brains that will plan its erection and operation. H. P. Carver's association with Studio Park is assurance sufficient to all the industry that both in the studio and surrounding localities Studio Park will offer practical, efficient, complete production facilities."

N. Y.'s Film Eye on Legislature

That New York state exhibitors intend to more closely safeguard their interests this coming year than ever before has become evident during the past few days through action taken which will result in Congressman Clarence MacGregor, of Buffalo, being authorized on behalf of the exhibitors of the state to investigate the music tax situation. The first move in this direction was taken recently in Syracuse at a conference of the by-laws committees from the Albany and Buffalo zones. New York state exhibitors witnessing with their own eyes the great damage done to the industry in Connecticut through adverse legislation, are also taking steps these days that will prevent any repetition of such in this state during the coming session of the Legislature.

Legislation in New York state will probably be more closely watched this winter than ever before. That there will be both favorable and unfavorable legislation is a foregone conclusion. Exhibitors, to a man in New York state, will be expected to get behind a bill that will be introduced to shorten the season of daylight saving and make it uniform throughout the state.

CHAPLIN ENJOINS AMADOR

The end has come in the litigation of Charlie Chaplin against Charles Amador and the Western Features Productions, with the Superior Court confirming a lower court decision prohibiting either Western Features or Amador from producing or distributing motion pictures which Chaplin alleged were in imitation of those in which he was the featured actor.

Is It a "Czar" or a Special Prosecutor for Independents?

Elliott Waxes Hot, Calling It "Curb Gossip" But Ex-U. S. Attorney Hayward Does Not Deny Subject Was Broached to Him —"Big Things" for October 2

By Tom Waller

IS the Independent Motion Picture Association of America going to have a "czar," or is it going to retain the services of a high powered attorney and statesman to draw up complaints with allegations of monopoly, restraint of trade and violation of the Sherman law and use them as the basis for prosecution to the highest court of certain film interests?

Although he admitted to Moving Picture World early this week that "big things are in the works" for his association and that they may be aired following a vitally important meeting of the entire organization in New York on October 2, General Manager Frederick Elliott refused to commit himself.

Later in the week from one very reliable film authority came the report that Colonel William Hayward, former United States Attorney under the late President Harding and also in that capacity for a time under President Coolidge, had been interviewed by the independents and had expressed his willingness to accept the post of prosecutor.

This report reached the World on September 22. This publication immediately commenced a thorough investigation resultant in news being gleaned from another particularly well informed and creditable source that Hayward had been interviewed by certain independents about one month ago, when he is credited with having made the expression of willingness.

The World then sought out Hayward. The Colonel readily agreed to an interview with this publication a half hour later. That Hayward was already familiar with the subject was the impression made upon this writer. During the interview not once did he deny that the proposition had been broached to him. The interview was concluded with the further impression that negotiations between the independents with the Colonel are still under way and that the eminent attorney up to date has not actually been retained.

In the course of the interview Hayward used the word "opportune" in connection with "announcement," with the inflection that such would only suitably and ethically come from the client.

"It would be strictly unethical for me to discuss any affairs of any of my clients," Hayward declared.

"Did you not meet with the independents about a month ago and then agree to be retained as counsel by them in prosecuting certain units in the film industry on charges of alleged monopoly, conspiracy to restrain trade and violation of the Sherman law?"

"I refuse to be interrogated. It would be up to my clients to make any announcement in any case."

Elliott earlier in the week had sharply declared: "No one will talk. No one will issue statements. Our organization is doing some big things and for the next few weeks will maintain silence. No one is authorized to talk here."

At that time the interview with Elliott had been on the subject of the present financial status of his organization. He refused to give any comprehensive answers in this respect and to commit himself on a published report that the independents were "consternated" over the Playdate Bureau. In the latter respect he said that neither he nor his organization was responsible for comments made by individuals. He refused, however, to give anything which would indicate his organization's attitude toward the bureau.

After the interview with Colonel Hayward and the reliable reports as to Hayward being retained and such action awaiting only the official confirmation of the organization on October 2, the World again sought Elliott. The general manager in reply to a request over the telephone for a personal interview at his office refused to make an appointment, saying that an interview at this time would be inopportune.

"Is it true, Mr. Elliott, that your organization has retained or is about to retain the services of Colonel Hayward?"

Elliott refused to give any answer which could be interpreted as decidedly positive or negative. To repeated questioning with the desire to obtain a "Yes" or "No" Elliott replied: "No such proposition could be handled. Our organization has not met."

Further pressed, Elliott waxed indignant, saying that credence should not be given to "curb" talk and that the mentioning of Hayward might be placed in the same class with past comment about the retaining of Hughes or General Pershing.

When reminded that the World did not base its source of information on the "curb" and that the reports had emanated from highly creditable and well informed sources, Elliott said that he could not be held responsible for propaganda sent out by "opponents" of the organization. As to the opponents he stated: "We wish they would leave us alone. We can get along without them."

"U" After Theatres

Following the purchase of several theatres in the Kansas City territory by Universal last week a persistent rumor started afloat that deals were pending whereby Universal would purchase the theatres operated by Capitol Enterprises, one of the largest chains in the Middle West, and the Sears Circuit, operating in Missouri and Kansas.

"There positively is no negotiations pending between Universal and Capitol Enterprises, and no grounds for assuming that there are any," said David Harding, an officer of Capitol Enterprise and brother of Samuel Harding, president of the organization. "We cannot stop rumors, but we can say that we don't intend to sell out to Universal."

However, the fact that Universal has launched an extensive theatre purchasing plan in the Kansas City territory cannot be denied. The Royal and Crystal theatres of Atchison, Kas., were purchased from Lee Gunnison last week, while the Best Theatre, Parsons, Kas., was obtained from Fees Brothers. Walter Fenney, formerly Pantages manager in Kansas City, was placed in charge of the Parsons house, while Lee Jones, widely known exhibitor, has been made manager of the Atchison theatres.

The Apollo Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, also was added to the Universal string, being leased. Improvements totaling $20,000 will be made, it was announced.

The Canadian Universal Films, Limited, Toronto, has acquired three important moving picture theatres from A. R. McNichol of Winnipeg, Manitoba, these being the Lyceum, Starland and College theatres, on a five year lease basis. Charles A. Meade, lessee of the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, for the past 12 months, has been appointed general manager of the three houses by Canadian Universal. The three theatres have an aggregate valuation of $500,000, with a combined seating capacity of 4,000.

PROJECTIONIST IS HERO OF DETROIT BOOTH FIRE

While Arcady Bubnov, projectionist at the Comique Theatre, Detroit, lies on a hospital bed suffering from severe burns, steps were being taken by officials of the operators' union and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan to determine some way of properly rewarding him for the valor he displayed in a fire in the Comique one evening last week.

Bubnov's action in closing his booth tightly after a film had become ignited, stamping out the fire with his hands and feet, turning in a general fire alarm and then opening the door and shouting reassurance to the milling crowds probably saved many lives, for the Comique,

Associated's New Directorate Named, with Powers Chairman

BACKED by some of the biggest banking interests in the country and guided by some of the greatest brains in the film industry, according to a statement released by the organization, Associated Exhibitors started its first week under a new ownership which places this company in the front rank of independent distributors of motion pictures. The statement relates:

"At the instigation of the banking interests involved in the purchase of the company, P. A. Powers was appointed chairman of the board of directors with the other members of the board consisting of Elmer Pearson, vice president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., Oscar Price, W. B. Levy, R. M. Hamilton, Henry Kelly, and Harold Donnegan. W. B. Levy was made treasurer of the corporation, while R. M. Hamilton was elected Secretary.

"Mr. Powers is president of Powers Film Products and is known as the leading financer of film productions in the country and Powers was one of the founders of Universal when that company was organized, and was also the representative of the Graham Bank of England who founded the company later known as the Film Booking Offices. Mr. Powers founded and is now handling both the Celebrities Pictures, Inc., and the Marshall Neilan Producing Corp.

"John S. Woody, one of the outstanding figures in the picture industry for the past decade, was made general manager of the organization and placed completely in charge of its affairs. Jay A. Gove remains general sales manager.

"Oscar Price, the new president of Associated Exhibitors, represents the pinnacle of Americanized push and go get 'em. As the organizer and first president of the United Artists he brought together the great principals of this organization and is credited with the immediate success of the company. Following this he organized Associated Producers.

"Recently Mr. Price organized the Fine Arts Pictures Corporation of which he is now the head. This company took over all the pictures controlled by the old Triangle Corporation. During the war, Mr. Price became a national figure as Assistant Director General of Railroads under William G. McAdoo and was also the director of the First and Second Liberty Loan drives. Prior to his entrance into the motion picture field he was a builder of waterworks and power plants and an officer in the United States Army.

"The divorcing of Associated Exhibitors from Pathe Exchange, Inc., will be complete in every way except for the physical handling of film, says Mr. Price. Plans are now afoot to enlarge every department in the organization and to install new departments to handle the work formerly done by Pathe.

"The home office quarters will be enlarged to allow for the installation of art, advertising, publicity and exploitation departments.

"The releasing program scheduled for the coming season for Associated Exhibitors will number thirty feature productions. This does not include several specials which will be added to the program over the coming season. The selling plans of the organization will remain as they were originally started by General Manager Woody, featuring the guarantee as the company's biggest selling argument."

Yeggs Blow Safe and Fire Theatre in New York

Fire started early Wednesday morning, September 23, in the Florence Theatre, 83 East Broadway, New York, as a result of an attempt to blow the safe. The house, seating 1,200, is owned by the Allwon Theatre Corporation and is the last word in fireproof construction. It was not proof, however, against the after-effects of nitrogylcerine used by the would-be cracksmen. Owing to the noisy location, just under Manhattan Bridge, the explosion was not heard. Fire extinguishers left near by told the story of their efforts to put out the blaze and go on with their work. They were unable, however, to get the flames under control and fled.

By the time a policeman had discovered the smoke and turned in an alarm, fire damage to the extent of $5,000 had been done the interior of the house. Only the outer door of the safe suffered from the explosion. The burglar-proof chest inside remained intact and the funds of the theatre which it contained were untouched.

Rosenzweig and Katz, the managers, who operate twelve Brooklyn theatres and five others on the East Side, were insured through the Herbert R. Ebenstein Company against both fire and burglary. This is the second attempt within a short time to blow the safe at the Florence Theatre.

Coming and Going

Micky Neilan, with his business manager, Leeds L. Baxter, arrived in New York this week from the Coast.

Abe Warner has returned from a lengthy bnsiness trip to Europe.

Joseph Fleisler, publicity director for UFA-USA, is en route to Germany in the interest of his organization.

W. J. Morgan, sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, started an extensive sales tour this week.

Harry Rathner, president of Astor Distributing Corporation, has returned to New York from a tour of the country.

Nathan H. Gordon, former head of Gordon's Olympia theatres in New England, was given an ovation this week by over 200 friends before he left Boston for New York en route for a trip to Europe.

M. H. Hoffman, Abe Carlos, Joe Schnitzer, Harry Cohen, Harry Rapf and Harry M. Warner were among those who were reported to have left the Coast en route for New York this week.

Dorothy Gish sailed this week for Europe.

N. L. Nathanson has returned after a tour of Europe.

St. Louis Amusement Co. Acquiring 10 More Theatres

The St. Louis Amusement Company within the next few weeks will take over ten more of the leading neighborhood theatres and airdomes in St. Louis. Papers in the deal are now said to be in preparation. An official announcement is anticipated soon. This information was obtained from a most reliable source. It was also learned that the officials of the company have extensive plans for the construction, purchase and leases of theatres outside of St. Louis.

The deal for the lease of the Cinderella Theatre, 2731 Cherokee street by the St. Louis Amusement Company has been closed and the new management took charge on Tuesday, September 22. The Cinderella was owned and operated by Freund Brothers, who also have the Woodland and Kingsland Theatres on Gravois. It is said they have been given a very attractive leasing proposition from the St. Louis Amusement Company.

In furtherance of their plans for expansion the St. Louis Amusement Company has arranged to float a $600,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bond issue. It is possible that the $300,000 capital of the company may be increased.

Despite reports to the contrary harmony prevails in the company and an extensive program of expansion has been worked out by Harry Koplar and the Skouras boys. The company's connection with Skouras Brothers Enterprises, which is controlled by Spyros and Charley Skouras has given it a dominant position in the local film world.

The St. Louis Amusement Company will be secured by a first mortgage on the ten theatres owned in fee simple by the company. This property has been appraised at $1,232,500. In addition the company has valuable leases on fifteen other theatres and airdomes. One airdrome and three theatres leased by the company are closed at present.

The company's earnings for the first six months this year before deducting the estimated Federal income taxes were $87,601.69 after allowing for depreciation. For the two year period ended December 31, 1924. the earnings averaged $125,451.93 after allowing $124,618.81 for depreciation but before taking Federal taxes.

Ben Grimm Gets Big Job in Warners' Theatre Dept.

Ben H. Grimm, who for sometime has been advertising manager of the Moving Picture World, has resigned from that publication and joined Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., with headquarters at Warners Theatre, New York City.

He will be in charge of publicity and advertising for the Warner Theatres working with George H. Dumond, head of the theatre activities of the Warner chain.

Mr. Grimm has been associated with the motion picture industry for many years in various capacities and has a wide circle of friends in the business. Formerly a New York newspaper man, he left Park Row to join the old Metro Publicity department and was sent to the coast to handle the company's stars there.

EXHIBITORS' NEWS AND VIEWS

EDITED BY SUMNER SMITH

Buettner of Cohoes, N. Y., Arch Enemy of Woodchucks

Louis Buettner of Cohoes, exhibitor, chairman of the Albany Zone, woodchuck hunter-extraordinary. The first title has been Mr. Buettner's for many a year. The second came as the result of the Syracuse meeting, and the third has just been acquired. Perhaps Mr. Buettner eventually will take first rank as the woodchuck champion of the state and of the nation. He may issue a challenge to any exhibitor in the United States. Thirty-five woodchucks in a single day! Such is the present record of Mr. Buettner. Mrs. Buettner should come in for her share of honors, for equipped with powerful field glasses the two range the country these days, Mrs. Buettner with the aid of the field glasses often discovering woodchucks so far distant that they resemble a stone or hillock. But Mr. Buettner's eye is true. Two rifles are carried, the more powerful one for the distant shots.

Where in the world did Harry Hellman of the Royal Theatre in Albany get the bathing suit in which he appeared at Saratoga Lake on the day of the outing of the Film Board of Trade? Although Mrs. Hellman was with him, watching from the shore, she had no need of fear from the water nymphs, for Harry, in his bathing suit, was in a class by himself. It resembled the English conception of a roomy overcoat.

If any women in Troy this week did not attend the Fashion Show at the Troy Theatre, along with pictures from September 15 to 18, they must have been cripples or past the age, if there is such, when latest modes appeal. The theatre was jammed afternoon and evening. Manager Walter Roberts was put to his wits' end in seeing that everyone was made comfortable.

Probably Charles Gilmore of Syracuse, known to exhibitors throughout New York State, has the largest house of any man in the business and occupies it less. Although Mr. Gilmore is located in Syracuse, he has theatres in Oswego and likewise a twenty-seven room residence, which he occupies each week end.

Season in and season out, Charles Sesonske, who now owns the Grand in Johnstown, sets the styles among exhibitors of New York State. Even Bob Wagner of Little Falls doesn't measure up to Mr. Sesonske. Here's a fair sample. Beautiful gray suit, equally handsome silk shirt, gray checkered tie to match and the latest thing in gray fedoras. Beau Brummel among the exhibitors!

According to postals that have reached Troy, Ben Apple is now selling real estate in Florida. His last postal came from Palm Beach. Mr. Apple remarks that he is not feeling lonesome a bit, meeting many of his friends, and it was only two days after he arrived in Miami that he ran across Charles Walder, former manager for Fox here.

William Tweedy, owner of the Star Theatre in Mechanicville, has been sick with hay fever for three weeks at his home.

Harry Berinstein of Elmira was in town during the past week, joining his brothers, at the unveiling of a monument on Sunday to his father and mother. Harry remained over for a few days with his brother, Julius, who is looking after the Berinstein interests in Albany, Troy and Schenectady.

Although Ben Davis, who was with the Schine brothers until recently in Gloversville, is just taking things easy these days and incidentally living at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany, he is keeping his eye open, and he has a sharp eye at that, for another theatre which he will personally own and run.

CAROL DEMPSTER

Featured in the D. W. Griffith production, "That Royle Girl," for Paramount release.

One doesn't often see B. J. Straus of the Palace in Saratoga along Film Row, so when he showed up at last week's outing of the Albany Film Board of Trade it was almost necessary for him to introduce himself to many present. But after that Mr. Straus felt perfectly at home and enjoyed himself thoroughly. The big pictures in Saratoga are now over with the closing of the racing season, and Mr. Straus, like other exhibitors there, has dropped his prices. He is now getting 25 cents, four changes to the week.

Jake Rosenthal of the Rose in Troy had as his guests one day last week 200 children who were the athletic champions from the city's playgrounds, the group including the Inter-park winners in baseball, track, swimming and basketball. The directors accompanied the children. Mr. Rosenthal is now using illustrated songs on Monday and Tuesday nights in an effort to boost business a bit.

Baseball teams made up from among the employes of the Mark Strand Theatre in Albany and the Troy Theatre clashed Sunday at a clambake and general good time on the Williams farm. Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, and former assistant manager of the Troy Theatre, twirled for the Trojans, with John Wall catching. The final score is still held secret by the contestants.

Chris Buckley of the Leland and Clinton Square Theatres in Albany and the Empire in Glens Falls has booked "The Iron Horse" for a two weeks' run at the Leland, beginning October 12, and may extend it into three weeks. He plans to do plenty of exploitation.

Jack Little of New York, whose wife is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hellman of Albany, received a wonderful reception in the Capital District last week as he broadcast his latest selections over the stations of Schenectady and Troy. Mr. and Mrs. Hellman rigged up a radio in the Royal Theatre in Albany and treated their patrons to their son-in-law's latest and best.

Well, Will Dillon of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., is a landholder in Florida. He has just put up $150,000 for real estate at West Palm Beach, and that fact speaks pretty well for the man who has earned every dollar through his showmanship.

Morris Silverman, who has the Happy Hour and Pearl Theatres in Schenectady, attended the outing last week at Saratoga Lake. With every film manager on hand, not forgetting some forty or fifty salesmen, Mr. Silverman remarked so many times that he was "not buying anything" that it was only natural for him when a waiter passed him a second helping of fried chicken to remark that he "wasn't buying anything."

George Trembley, who was recently appointed manager at the American Theatre in Troy, is doing exceptionally well. His Sunday night crowds are running heavy and Mr. Trembley, who was formerly doorman at the Lincoln Theatre, is showing himself able to handle the crowds in an excellent way.

Joe Weidman of the Central Theatre in Albany has the rare distinction of being the only exhibitor in this part of the state who jots down in ink his bookings in the daybook, a practice that makes them definite. As a result, Mr. Weidman is always a welcome buyer on Film Row. Exchange managers declare that if all other exhibitors would follow Mr. Weidman's practice there would be less confusion in the exchanges as well as less overbuying.

Jake Golden of the Griswold in Troy is packing his theatre each Monday night with Charleston dance contests, now in their third week. Last Monday night he had eight dancers, together with his feature pictures. The contests will end on November 2, at which time the winner will receive a silver loving cup as well as $100.

There is one exhibitor in this section of the state who hasn't a telephone in his office and doesn't intend to have one installed. He is James Rose, who has five or six houses in Troy and Rensselaer, and who does all his buying at a recently opened office in Rensselaer, which is without telephone service.

Accompanied by Mrs. McNamara, who does all the booking, Harry McNamara of Valatie was along Film Row during the past week. Sam Hochstim of the Star in Hudson was also a buying visitor in town.

The Strand in Schenectady and the Avon in Utica are planning to run Saturday morning movies for the children of these cities along lines similar to the Mark Strand in Albany. The first of these Saturday morning showings in Schenectady will start on October 12, while the Avon gets under way on October 3.

Buffalo, N. Y.

J. W. Straub and F. N. McCullough are reported to be interested in a new theatre to be built in Oil City, Pa. Plans call for the utilization of the vacant McGuigan lot on Elm street and the Straub and Cunningham property.

It is reported that Vassiliadis Brothers, who operate the Clinton-Strand, have taken over the Linden Theatre on Jefferson street, Buffalo. Rumor also has it that they have leased the Central Park. Both are community houses.

Well, Charlie Bowe, manager of the Frontier, has gone and done it. Yep, stepped right up to the parson and said "I do!" Charlie's back from his honeymoon looking as spry as ever and all set for a busy season at the popular Buffalo West Side neighborhood theatre.

George T. Cruzen, manager of the Palace, Lockport, put over the first fall fashion show of the season last week when he tied up with local merchants in introducing the new modes for milady on living models on the Palace stage. A double page splash in the local newspaper announced the event to the public.

The Cataract Theatre Corporation of Niagara Falls, N. Y., operating the Strand and Cataract Theatres, has declared the semi-annual dividend of 8 per cent. In addition to this, Charley Hayman continued to clean up by winning bets right and left. He recently bet Marvin Kempner, Buffalo Paramount exchange manager, that "The Freshman" would beat "The Covered Wagon" record at the Eastman, Rochester. Charlev took the cash.

The members of the boards of directors of the Buffalo and Albany zones of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. will meet with the officers of the Producers and Distributors of America in New York City, October 5, to discuss arbitration matters.

Monta Bell, the famous Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, has completed work on "Lights of Old New York," starring Marion Davies.

Ohio

The questions of finance which have caused the plans for the new Pythian Temple and picture theatre at Mansfield, Ohio, to be held in abeyance have now been satisfactorily settled, according to reports, and the project is scheduled for procedure as originally planned.

The building will be erected at Fourth and Mulberry streets, and will contain business rooms on the first floor in addition to the theatre.

Canada

D. E. L. Fisher of Winnipeg, Manitoba, president of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association, has now secured control of the Garrick Theatre, one of the leading independent cinemas of the Canadian West. The Garrick was built at Winnipeg several years ago by Walter Wilson with local capital exclusively. Financial difficulties were encountered but the creditors agreed upon an extension so that the Garrick might continue, Mr. Fisher being made managing director of the enterprise. Securing various creditor claims and associating with several other directors, a reorganization has been effected and Mr. Fisher is now in complete charge. Mr. Wilson has been manager of the Capitol Theatre at Edmonton, Alberta, for some time past.

George J. Forhan, manager, has reopened Griffin's Theatre at St. Catharines, Ontario, the house having been dark for a period of two months. The Griffin house has a mixed policy of moving pictures and vaudeville.

When George Rotsky, manager of the Palace Theatre, Montreal, played "The Slave of Fashion," starring a Montreal girl, Norma Shearer, he used a full page display in the Montreal Herald, the top line, "Montreal's Own Darling," being in red ink. As a special feature he had Mrs. Shearer, the mother of the star, and a party of personal friends as guests of the Palace Theatre on the opening night of the week's run, and the crowd was quite interested.

A recent visitor in Ottawa, Ontario, was Ray Tubman, former prominent local athlete and football star, who for five years has been manager of the Palace Theatre at Calgary, Alberta, but who was recently transferred to Western Ontario where he is now the manager of the Algoma Theatre at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. A dramatic incident occurred in connection with Mr. Tubman's departure from Calgary for Eastern Canada. Two hours before his train pulled out his sweetheart arrived in Calgary from Vancouver, B. C. After a brief consultation between the contracting parties, it was decided to get married immediately. Then the chase for a registrar started, the ceremony being performed at midnight. A few minutes later the happy Mr. and Mrs. Tubman departed on their honeymoon. After a brief stay at Port Arthur, Ray Tubman and his young wife visited Toronto and Ottawa and then went back to Sault Ste. Marie.

Manager D. C. Brown of the Regent Theatre, Toronto, started with Charles Chaplin's "Gold Rush" on August 15 as a special feature. On September 19 the production started on its sixth consecutive week at the Regent, this being the first Canadian run. Announcement was made on September 19 that 90,723 people had seen the picture so far during its Toronto engagement. That "The Gold Rush" will continue at the Toronto Regent at least two weeks longer is indicated by an announcement at Hamilton, Ontario, by Manager W. E. Wilton of the Savoy Theatre that the film will play the Savoy for its second Canadian showing about October 12.

W. G. Rupay, manager of Griffin's Theatre at Woodstock, Ontario, arranged a corn roast and outing for the staff of the theatre on a farm near Woodstock a few nights ago, about seventy-five people enjoying the event.

For the first time in the history of Chatham, Ontario, a picture was held longer than a one week's engagement when "The Ten Commandments" played the Princess Theatre there. Manager P. Drohan held the feature over for two extra days.

Indiana

A new picture theatre will be opened on the southeast corner of Forty-second street and College avenue, Indianapolis, about December 1 by Oscar Markum and his son, Louis, who operate several neighborhood houses in the city. The present building on the site will be converted into a theatre at a cost of about $25,000. The new theatre will be known as the Paramount and will be modern in every respect.

Baltimore

On the evening of September 15 a fire started in the projection room of the New Preston Theatre, Preston street and Central avenue. The house was crowded to capacity. Small boys raised the cry of "fire." The projectionist, C. R. Moore, called to the audience to remain quiet and the pianist, Mrs. Westergard, began playing "My Best Girl," which helped to avert a panic. Arthur Price, manager, was absent at the time.

Frank Hornig of the Horn Theatre has installed a new organ.

James Hartlove, former manager of the New Gem Theatre, has taken over the management of the Flag Theatre in South Baltimore.

Warner Brothers retain Bernard Depkin as manager of their newly acquired Metropolitan Theatre, now known as Warner's Metropolitan.

Walters Albers of the Eagle Theatre, Eastern avenue at Third street, has returned from his beautiful summer home at Baylight Beach on the Chesapeake Bay.

Pittsburgh

Loew's Aldine in Pittsburgh celebrated its second birthday during the week of September 14. "The Mystic" was the screen attraction, and on the stage the feature attraction was Van and Schenck, appearing for the first time in a picture theatre. The Pittsburgh Press on the Sunday preceding the showing had an eight-page section known as Loew's Aldine Anniversary Edition. Business all week was sensational. Louis K. Sidney is managing director of the theatre, A. E. Kochendoerfer is resident manager and Russell Bovim is his assistant.

Plans for rebuilding the Strand at Parkersburg, W. Va., which was damaged by fire recently, call for a more modern and larger picture theatre, according to P. W. Barrett, proprietor. Mr. Barrett has secured ground in the rear of the theatre which will permit of its enlargement. When completed it will seat 1,000.

Denver

The new State Theatre opened with a bang on Friday night, September 18. Thousands of people gathered in the street in front of the theatre. Bands were playing and confetti and souvenirs showered from the windows and roof of the building on the crowd below. The first night attendance was strictly an invitation affair and those who were fortunate enough to see the first performance were greeted by something entirely new in the way of theatre decoration and entertainment. The decorations and remodeling were under direct supervision of Hal Horne. The transforming of a run-down second-class theatre into a gorgeous first-run house is nothing short of miraculous when the work performed within the time used is taken into due consideration. The entire interior was redecorated, the lighting system changed, new curtains hung and stages erected, and a new organ installed. New features were the tapestries which appeared on the walls, unique lighting system throughout, and the ascending organ console which was used very effectively the opening night. Under the management of Floyd Rice, Denver will now truthfully boast a real and up-to-date first-run theatre.

A fatal accident occurred in the Avalon Theatre, the largest theatre in Grand Junction, Col., on September 18. Albert Haehnel, an expert decorator from Salt Lake City, was working on a scaffold inside the theatre when he fell, landing on the seats below. He died a few moments after the fall. The theatre is managed by Walter Walker.

A DEPARTMENT FOR THE INFORMATION OF EXHIBITORS

EDITED BY A. VAN BUREN POWELL

These dependable tips come from exhibitors who tell the truth about pictures to help you book your program intelligently. "It is my utmost desire to serve my fellow man," is their motto.

Use the tips; follow the advice of exhibitors who agree with your experience on pictures you both have run.

Send tips to help others. This is your department, run for you and maintained by your good-will.

Associated Exhibitors

RACING LUCK. (5 reels). Star, Monty Banks. A slow start gets away to whirlwind finish that kept audience roaring. This satisfied them. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes, for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

STORMY SEAS. (4,893 feet). Special cast. Played this one in "Thrill Week" and it pleased almost everyone. A good surrounding program is also necessary to get this one over. Good tone, appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

F. B. O.

BANDIT'S BABY. (5 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. An excellent western. The horse, Silver King, is some horse! This makes a fine picture for Saturday night. Fair tone. Appeal 90 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

BLOW YOUR OWN HORN. (6 reels). A Troy church (Pros.) wanted a picture, so we gave them this. Because it was the first picture screened in the church it drew a crowd. The picture went over big and pleased everyone. It has plenty of good comedy and interesting action. We ran an "Our Gang—Tire Trouble" with it. This made a big hit. Although this show was four months ago the people still compliment us on the pictures. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Conoat Projection Service (A. J. Sloat), Troy, New York.

BLOODHOUND. (4,800 feet). Star, Bob Custer. Just another picture, that's all. Tone, yes. Appeal, none. No for Sunday. Special, nix. Draw from small town, 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

BROKEN LAWS. (6,413 feet). Star, Mrs. Wallace Reid. If you haven't played this one, do so by all means. It doesn't draw like "Human Wreckage," but if you can buy it right you can't afford to pass it up. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw farmer and small town class, town 800. Welty & Son, Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

FIGHTING DEMON. Star, Ruchard Talmadge. Not as good as some of Dick's previous ones. But will get by where this star is liked. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

HIGH AND HANDSOME. (6 reels). Star, Lefty Flynn. A six-reeler that will stand a one-day showing and please them if surrounded by short subjects. Good tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

ISLE OF HOPE. (5,500 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Some school kid must have written this story; in fact it disgusts one to see his favorite star in a "lemon" like this one here. Outside of two athletic stunts it is punk all the way through. Little appeal. No for Sunday. As special—help! Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

NO-GUN MAN. (4,522 feet). Star, Lefty Flynn. A good western, but not as much action as in some of his other pictures; however, it went over good and had many favorable comments on it. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Sunday or special, no. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Synder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

PARISIAN NIGHTS. (6,278 feet). Stars, Tellegen, Elaine Hammerstein. This might be labeled the cat's whiskers in some towns, but my bunch said it was punk and I had to agree with them. As special all that I could see was price. Tone questioned Very little appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

RIDIN' COMET. Star, Yakima Canutt. An extra good western story with plenty of action and hard riding. Will more than please action fans. Print new. Tone O. K. Very good appeal. No for Sunday or special Draw all classes, big city. Admission 10 cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

STEPPING LIVELY. (5,311 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Not so good. I have been a booster for this star, but someway his latest pictures lack something. I would say that the stories are not as good as they used to be. Good tone. Just fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30 H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

TEARING THRU. Star, Richard Talmadge. Moved slowly through first reels, but ended up in lively fashion in the last reel. Talmadge fans want Dick's stunts in evidence from start to finish and not just near the end! Pleased as a program picture. Fair appeal. No as special. Draw general class, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

WILD BULL'S LAIR. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. One of the best Thomsons I ever saw. Thomson's fight with the bull was exciting and the work of the horse, Silver King, was great. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

First National

ASHES OF VENGEANCE. (10 reels). Star, Norma Talmadge. Very, very good, but paid too much, as we did on all First Nationals, and made no money. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and as special (with regard to above). Draw farmer and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

AS MAN DESIRES. (7,650 feet). Star, Milton Sills. Very entertaining picture that's different from the usual run of love dramas. Keeps you guessing how it's going to end. Plenty of action. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

BLACK OXEN. (7,831 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Not a small town picture. This might go over good in a city. As usual, we paid too much. Didn't pay the overhead with what we took in. It's just an average program picture and I'd say don't buy at special price. Fair tone. Appeal not so good. No for Sunday. Draw small town and farmer class, town 800. Welty & Son, Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

DECLASSE. (7,889 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Very good; but, oh! what a title. Those who came in lauded it to the skies. Draw mixed class, town 2,145. Admission 10-25. H. D. Wharton, Pastime Theatre (500 seats), Warren, Arkansas.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (7 reels). Star, Owen Moore. This was a hilarious comedy that pleased and satisfied everyone. It kept the audience laughing continuously. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacation class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

IDLE TONGUES. (5,447 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. A good production of its kind and a moral that should teach the scandal mongers who see it to keep their tongues in their mouths and their lips closed. But why is Marmont always cast as a character who always gets the worst of it through all his pictures? Good tone. Appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. Wm. T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

IDLE TONGUES. (5,447 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. A good program picture. Will draw those who have read the story of "Dr. Nye." A very pleasing picture. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from college town, 2,-100. Admission, 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

LEARNING TO LOVE. (6,099 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. A pleasing comedy drama, suitable for hot weather and any day as a light program. Good tone. Appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday,, no as special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

LEARNING TO LOVE. (6,099 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. Constance Talmadge always a good draw here, and this picture made more friends for us. Yes as to tone, Sunday and special. Appeal a hundred per cent. Draw conservative class, city 23,000. Admission 25. D. J. Adams, Auditorium Theatre (1,000 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

LILIES OF THE FIELD. (8,500 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. A fair picture for which we paid a special price and made nothing at all. We are almost through with First National, and until they come down to earth we will buy our service elsewhere. Fair tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw farming and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). Good program picture. Story could have been improved somewhat if they cut out some of the race, which took up too much footage, just as the cows did in "Sundown." Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

LOVE MASTER. (6,779 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). This is a great picture. Had a good many compliments and every one was well pleased. Picture was in good condition. Box office receipts were very good. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

LOVE'S WILDERNESS (7,057 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Pleasing picture, but business off. Yes as to appeal and for Sunday. No as special. Draw conservative class, city 23,000. Admission 25. D. J. Adams, Auditorium Theatre (100 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

NEW TOYS. (7,811 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Barthelmess drew them in but didn't please them. He is too good to play light entertainment. However, it pleased the kids, judging from their laughter. I hope "Shore Leave" is to be as good as "Classmates." Good tone. Appeal 40 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

ONE WAY STREET. (5,600 seats). A fine program picture. Pleased here. Draw mixed class, town 2,145. Admisison 10-25. H. D. Wharton, Pastime Theatre (500 seats), Warren, Arkansas.

ONE YEAR TO LIVE. (8,064 feet). All star cast. Fair program picture only. Many women enjoyed it, but men didn' care for it. Will get by with little pushing. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

PAINTED PEOPLE. (5,700 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Colleen certainly has a charming personality which certainly helps please. This is an ideal picture to play during the warm weather. She and Lloyd Hughes are certainly a fine combination. Good tone. Appeal 99 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A very excellent picture with wonderful acting, but we lost money on it. People don't seem to care much for costume plays, and we are through with them for some time to come. Folks come out to see the villain get a thrashing by the hero for paying attention to his good looking girl. This picture had no vilyun. Small town exhibitors, study your patronage before booking this one. Fair tone and appeal. Special—in some places. Draw general class, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

SO BIG. (8,562 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. A picture that gives Colleen Moore a chance to show her ability in playing different roles. We prefer her in the flapper type of story where her good looks show. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from college town, 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

SO BIG. (8,562 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. You've got to hand it to Colleen for her remarkable work in this one. At times she overdoes herself, but this is only a minor defect. The kids liked it, too, though not all of them; it pleased the adults a hundred per cent. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

SUNDOWN. (9,000 feet). Star Bessie Love. A superb feature. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (8 reels). Star, Blanche Sweet. An expose of bootlegging that went over big. Picture has plenty of thrills. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw small town and vacation class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Service to exhibitors is always my first idea: so when I see somebody else with the same idea I can't help yelling out the facts!

Not so long ago we acquired a new member of "Our Gang." He has been sending tips regularly since.

And in these reports he almost invariably puts something that I bet you appreciate:

Or—

"Not a Saturday bet."

Good stuff, isn't it? Helps you to sidestep a sore houseful on the night you look for the Saturday types.

More power to this contributor who (as Steve Brenner incorporates the quality of print, and D. W. Strayer too) is out to help with all the information.

You know this good scout by now:

Sure—O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre, Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

—VAN.

WHAT A WIFE LEARNED. (5,700 feet). Featured cast. A very good program picture, especially for the ladies. Fine tone. Ninety per cent appeal. I'd say not a Saturday picture; yes for Sunday and no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN. (6,910 feet). Star, John Bowers. A good picture; follows the book closely. John Bowers' best performance to my knowledge. Excellent tone. Appeal ninety per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmers and average class, town 600. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. H. P McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Matoma, Kansas.

Fox

ARIZONA ROMEO. (4,694 feet). Star Buck Jones. This is a good western. Pleased our patrons ninety per cent. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Admission, regular, 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

DARWIN WAS RIGHT. (4,983 feet). Stars, Monkeys. This picture is somewhat out of the ordinary, and should please most any type of patronage. Has lots of laughs. Print good. Very good tone. Good appeal, Yes for Sunday. Draw all classes, big city. Admisison ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DARWIN WAS RIGHT. (4,983 feet). Star, no one. No good for any house, and one of those so-called specials that Fox makes. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

DEADWOOD COACH. (6,346 feet). Star, Tom Mix. This was Tom Mix in a western, so it was Tom Mix at his best, and the box office sang with glee. Everyone was pleased. That includes the manager! Good appeal. Tone, Sunday and as special, yes. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

DICK TURPIN. (5,224 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Oh, boy! Here's Tom Mix in the days of the notorious Dick Turpin, the celebrated highway robber. You'll be surprised at Tom; he sure puts it over and acts Sir Knight in gallant and romantic style. I didn't think it was in him. Then there's Tony, the wonder horse, who helps his master out of many a nasty scrape. A money maker for you or I'll miss my guess. Draw from tourist city, 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

FOX SPECIALS. Fox has about six or seven drags that lose what money you might make on the others. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

HEARTS AND SPURS. Star, Buck Jones. Two days to fair business. Picture not liked as well as some others with Jones. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

HUNTED WOMAN. (4,954 feet). Star cast. For some reason this failed to draw; lost money on it. The picture is all right. Doutbful tone, some appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

IN LOVE WITH LOVE. (5,677 feet). Star cast. One of Fox's specials. We class it as a very ordinary program picture. 'Nuf Sed. Draw general class, town about 1,000 Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

PORTS OF CALL. Star, Edmund Lowe. Very good picture, on the class of "The Man Who Came Back." Good acting and a good story. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

RAINBOW TRAIL. (5,257 feet). Star, Tom Mix. We did a tremendous business with this one. Mix, Tony and Zane Grey make a wonderful combination. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

ROUGHNECK. (7,519 feet). Star, George O'Brien. Fellows—grab this one! Absolutely one of the best melodramas we have shown this year, and patrons are still talking about it. A hundred per cent. real entertainment, perfectly directed, with excellent photography. George O'Brien is a wonder in the "Roughneck," and we want some more action pictures with him as the star. We would have done well on this one but a town dance kept the crowd away. Don't be afraid to advertise it; it's fine. Tone pretty rough, but appeal 100 per cent. Maybe for Sunday, yes as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

STARDUST TRAIL. (4,686 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. Just a plain, ordinary program picture. It seemed to please the majority of the people, especially the ladies. Not for Saturday. Fine tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

WARRENS OF VIRGINIA. (6,000 feet). Star cast. A very poorly constructed story, put together in a haphazard maner, resulting in a punk feature. Tone—yes. Appeal, nix. Sunday no. Special—price only. Draw from small town, 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Metro-Goldwyn

GREAT WHITE WAY. (10 reels). Star, Anita Stewart. Too long and draggy. Most of our audience either left or went to sleep before it was over. Just couldn't hold interest. These long pictures won't do for the small town. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

JANICE MEREDITH. Star, Marion Davies.

Although extra long and drawn out, this picture pleased ninety per cent. of our patrons. It is educational and well made. A two-day picture. Tone extra good. Appeal good. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Regular admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

MONSTER. (6,435 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. A hair-raising, cold-chill mystery picture that made 'em holler right out loud. Grasping fingers, hideous faces peering from the darkness all on account of a nutty doctor trying to change a woman's soul into a man, or something like that; anyway, it's a thriller. Fair tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. Wm. T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

PRETTY LADIES. (6 reels). Star, ZaSu Pitts. The prettiest and best novelty picture, done partly in natural colors, with a good story, that I have ever seen. Picture did not draw enough for me for expenses. Print new. O.K. in tone. Too spicy for Sunday, though. O.K. as a special, but not for older class. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

UNHOLY THREE. (7,000 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Either the long green is "short" or the picture is not much. Didn't see it myself. Print new. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

Paramount

ADVENTURE. (6,002 feet). Stars, Moore, Starke, Beery. A South Sea adventure story that pleased all who saw it. And it drew a little better than ordinary business with a tent show for opposition. The paper is good. I would call this an extra good picture of its kind. The work of Beery is exceptionally good. I wish I could get more pictures like this one. All comments were good. Some stopped and said it was the best in months. Tone and for Sunday O.K. Yes as special. Good appeal. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

AIR MAIL. (6,796 feet). Star cast. A good picture. Plenty of action. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

AIR MAIL. (6,976 feet). Star cast. This is the story of a crook who gets a job as an air pilot for Uncle Sam, for the purpose of robbing the mail; but through the inspiring heroism of his buddies and a girl's love, reforms and lives happily ever afterwards. As a novelty it is good entertainment; its thrills in the clouds and its wonderful view from the plane as it flies on its journey from New York to Frisco with a cast including Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Mary Brian (who played Wendy in "Peter Pan") make it well worth showing. Draw from tourist town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

EVE'S SECRET. (6,225 feet). Star, Betty Compson. This is a pretty good picture, but due to the foreign locale of the story it failed to draw. The paper, also, was bad for my town, as it also looked foreign. Tone O.K. Bad appeal. No as special. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

IN THE NAME OF LOVE. (7 reels). Star, Ricardo Cortez, with Greta Nissen. Good picture and well acted. Beautiful settings. But the picture didn't do much for me. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SOCIETY SCANDAL. (6,433 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. My people seemed pleased and said they liked it, and that is what I go by. Not a Saturday picture. Fine tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

STRANGER. (6,660 feet). Stars, Betty Compson. Richard Dix. Not as good as "The Woman With Four Faces" in my opinion. Tully Marshall good. On account of machine trouble it did not impress my patrons. Well acted. Fair tone. Appeal 60 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

EVELYN BRENT

The charming F. B. O. star was the guest of honor at a luncheon to the trade paper fraternity and newspaper and dramatic critics at the Biltmore Hotel, September 10, 1925.

STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,986 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. A pretty good picture with a good story. Mary Brian is good in this kind of a role. Acting of entire cast is excellent. Print new. Good tone. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

THUNDERING HERD. (7,187 feet). Star cast. This is a very fine picture and will please any audience anywhere. It is just about as fine a drama as was ever filmed of the type and has everything that one could desire in a picture. Wonderful cast and very finely produced. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw from industrial town, 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats, Hazard, Kentucky.

UNGUARDED WOMEN. (6,051 feet). Stars, Dix, Daniels. A pretty fair picture. I made a little money on a two-day run. Fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

WELCOME HOME. (5,509 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. This is a very pleasing picture. true to life and well acted. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Regular admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

WELCOME HOME. (5,509 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. Billed it two days—ran it one. Nothing to it here. Patrons walked out. Draw mixed class, town 2,145. Admission 10-25. H. D. Wharton, Pastime Theatre (500 seats), Warren, Arkansas.

Pathe

BATTLING ORIOLES. (5,600 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. This was a good comedy. The kids raised the roof with their laughter and many of the older folks got their money's worth; a few thought it was silly. Tone none (not meaning bad tone). Appeal eighty per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

CALL OF THE WILD. (5 reels). Star, Buck (dog). The action in this picture pleased the people and gave them entertainment—the thing they came after. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacationists, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). This picture pleased a hundred per cent. It was different from the usual run of pictures. Many told us how they enjoyed it. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

Principal

CAPTAIN JANUARY. (6,194 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. Fair, but paid twice what it was worth to us. Think the exhibitor should say so if he pays too much to make money on picture. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

BAD LANDS. Star, Harry Carey. Not the best he has made but a good picture of the pioneer days and will please all classes. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-25. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE. (7,179 feet). Star cast, includes Florence Vidor. A very good story of the Civil War. A few war scenes in it. A story of a Northern soldier in love with a Southern girl. Excellent tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

BARBARA FRIETCHIE. (7,179 feet). Star, Florence Vidor and feature cast. Just a fair picture with average program value. Played it on Decoration Day and drew a little extra business. No record breaker. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw farming and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

CHALK MARKS. (6,000 feet). Star cast. Another pleasing little story. Nothing big, but will get you some money. Fine tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

CHARLEY'S AUNT. (7,245 feet). Star, Syd Chaplin. An honest-to-goodness comedy. Had stock company playing across the street for opposition; did very good business. Advertise big and you should do business with this. Enclosed is envelope we used as throw-away—(lettered "FROM BRAZIL, where the NUTS come from—CHARLEY'S AUNT. She's not an ordinary person—she's a HE. Enough to make a Cat laugh! Attend the matinee if possible as all cannot be seated at night). We put nuts in these envelopes. Tone is O. K. Good appeal. Yes as special. Draw mixed class, town 5,333. Admission 10-30. C. W. Davis, Broadway Theatre (500 seats), Reidsville, North Carolina.

GIRL ON THE STAIRS. (6,214 feet). Star, Patsy Ruth Miller. Pretty good program picture that will please the majority. A good mystery story. Fair tone. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER. (5,326 feet). For us just a lemon we had to take to get a few good ones. Old costumes and no entertainment values. No for Sunday. Appeal not so good. No tone. Draw farming and small town class town 800. Welty & Son, Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

SILENT SANDERSON. Star, Harry Carey. Very good. Played to big Saturday business. Many said it was Carey's gest so far. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TIGER THOMSON. (5,700 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Good, as are all of Carey's late ones. Our patrons like Carey. Good tone and appeal. No, for Sunday or special. Draw farming and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

Schulberg

BOOMERANG. (6,714 feet). Stars, Bert Lytell, Anita Stewart. A pretty love romance, with Bert Lytell as a doctor in a sanitarium and Anita Stewart as a nurse furnishes a picture full of comedy and amusing situations. Good tone. Appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

United Artists

ONE EXCITING NIGHT. (11 reels). D. W. Griffith Prod. A very good mystery picture—but too long, especially on a hot night. Fair tone. Appeal 70 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

ROSITA. (8,800 feet). Star, Mary Pickford. Not a small town picture. Too much Kings and Queens stuff to suit this locality. A good picture, though, and in fine shape. Good tone. Small town appeal 60 per cent. Yes for Sunday. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

TESS OF THE STORM COUNTRY. (10 reels). Star, Mary Pickford. If you haven't played this picture, buy it. Surely was a surprise. Many people said the best they ever saw. Step on it. Good tone. Yes for Sunday. Appeal 100 per cent. Draw farmer and small town class, town 800. Welty & Son, Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City Kansas.

WAY DOWN EAST. D. W. Griffith prod. Have run it for the second time and it is the same old good picture. Buy it again if you can get a good print like I did. Fine tone. Wonderful appeal. Yes for Sunday and I should say as special. Draw mixed class, town 3,000. Admission 10-20. Chas. Martin, Family Theatre (300 seats), Mt. Morris, New York.

WHITE ROSE. (11 reels). D. W. Griffith prod. A splendid show that pleased the fine audience that saw it. Good tone, fine appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

WILD JUSTICE. (6,000 feet). Star, Peter the Great (dog). A good box office title for a small town. Dog is fine. Others in cast not known here. A good picture for the hot weather. Good tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. No for Sunday or special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

Universal

FIGHTING AMERICAN. (6 reels). Star, Pat O'Malley. While this was nothing extra, it pleased fairly well. Tone O. K. Appeal sixty per cent. Draw summer vacationists and small town class from small towns around 300. Avard J. Sloat (with Mitchell Conery), Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

FLYING HOOFS. Star, Jack Hoxie. Terrible. Hoxie should quit. He's no drawing card here at all. No for Sunday or special. Town 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

HURRICANE KID. Star, Hoot Gibson. Only a fair Gibson. This star is a good drawing card; however this is one of the poorest pictures we have had him in. Drew well, but lacks the necessary punch to put it over with the audience. Good tone. Appeal eighty per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw neighborhood patronage, city 77,000. Admission 10-20. Wm. A. Leucht, Jr., Savoy Theatre (486 seats), St. Joseph, Missouri.

HURRICANE KID. Star, Hoot Gibson. A very good picture which pleased action-and-western fans. This has lots of comedy scenes and the photography is great. Print new. Tone O. K. Appeal very good. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Admission always ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN. (7,400 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. A good feature length comedy that kept the kids shouting with glee and the grownups laughing with pleasure. Denny possesses an original, pleasing personality and is becoming quite a favorite. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday and yes as a comedy. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

K—THE UNKNOWN. (8,146 feet). Stars, Virginia Valli, Percy Marmont. One of the best pictures we ever used. A remarkable picture in that it is so different. Not a draggy foot of film and an abundance of comedy. We received more compliments on this than on some much-heralded productions. Tone O. K. Appeal a hundred per cent. Yes for Sunday and yes as special for small towns. Draw rural class and town of 175. Admission 10-25. D. B. Rankin, Co-operative Theatre (200 seats), Idana, Kansas.

MAN IN BLUE. (5,624 feet). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. A fine police story, with pep and action; just long enough; and entertaining all the way. Especially suited for Saturday. Good tone. Appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. Wm. T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

RECKLESS AGE. (6,954 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. Very good. Should please any audience. Lots of action and comedy stuff all good. Book it. Good tone. Fine appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw small town and farmer class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,500 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. This is a good comedy and Gibson takes his part in good shape. This picture is a good buy. Good tone. Appeal ninety per cent. J. M. Blanchard, Lone Rock, Kossuth County, Iowa.

TAMING THE WEST. (5,304 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. This is what I call a real good one; packed the house on this one and, what is more, satisfied all that I got in. Yes as to tone, Sunday and special. Lots of appeal. Draw small town class, town 300. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats—admission 10-25), Osage, Oklahoma.

TEASER. (6,800 feet). Star, Laura La-Plante. A clean, entertaining comedy-drama, lots of laughs and chuckles; while this may not be Laura's best it is good one just the same, and I am glad that I ran it. Yes for tone and Sunday. No as special. Appeal 75 per cent. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WHITE OUTLAW. Star, Jack Hoxie. This is a pip. I pushed this one to the limit and broke my Saturday night house record and pleased a hundred per cent. Give us some more like this one, Jack. Yes as to tone, Sunday and special. Lots of appeal. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

WHITE OUTLAW. Star, Jack Hoxie. About the best western that this star has made, and it was not his fault that it was good, as the horse and dog put this picture over and the support was very good. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

Vitagraph

BARREE, SON OF KAZAN. (6,803 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. A good story: a good picture. Well acted, did a nice business for us and pleased. Miss Stewart splendid; dog not so much, but gets by, so far as he goes. Will please in most any house. Tone O. K. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 3,600. Admission 10-20. W. A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

CLEAN HEART. Star cast. Good; appealed to the educated. Good tone, yes for Sunday. Draw average class, city 10,000. Admission 10-25. H V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

CLEAN HEART. (7,950 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. Good Sunday picture but didn't draw enough to pay expenses. Print good. Tone O.K. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

COWBOY GRIT. Star, Pete Morrison. Just a fair western—that's all. Don't promise much when you run this. Print new. Tone O.K. Fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

MIDNIGHT ALARM. (6,000 feet). Star, Cullen Landis. O. K. But the print was terrible. Here it is impossible to get a Vitagraph print through the projector without a dozen stops. Appeal O. K. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

REDEEMING SIN. (6,237 feet). Star, Nazimova. Some liked this one and some did not. Personally thought it was very good. Good tone. Yes as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

STEELE OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED. (5,700 feet). Star cast. Very good north-west woods picture. Had favorable comments on this one and it drew fairly well, in face of county fair and dance. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and as special. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

TWO SHALL BE BORN. (6 reels). Star, Jane Novak. Good program picture that will please most of the audience. Not a big picture but one that will please. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,500. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (730 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

Warner Brothers

FIND YOUR MAN. (7,300 feet). Star, Rin-Tin-Tin. A sure enough audience picture and we had a good price on it. Just can't go wrong on a Rin-Tin-Tin picture. Good for any time, any place. Good tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. Hardly for Sunday but yes as special. Draw farming and small town class, town 800. Admission 10-25. J. N. Welty (Welty & Son), Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

NARROW STREET. (7 reels). Stars, Matt Moore, Dorothy Devore. This comedy-drama gave entire satisfaction and pleased a hundred per cent. Tone O.K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacation class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

Comedies

ASLEEP AT THE SWITCH. (Pathe). Star, Ben Turpin. The best of the Turpin comics to date. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

BABY BLUES. (Educational-2 reels). This is a real comedy. Kept my house in an uproar from start to finish. Several people came back the second night, bringing their friends to see it. Tone O. K. Good appeal. O. K. for Sunday. Draw all classes in small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

BELOW ZERO. (Educational). Star, Lige Conley. Ought to be called the best hot weather picture of the season as the scenes in this are as cold as the North Pole. Worlds of snow and the scenery is fine. Comedy kept them laughing while they shivered. Don't pass it up, Gang. If you don't play it this summer—BOOK IT FOR NEXT JULY. Better than a cooling system. Fine tone. Strong (summer) appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

THE BURGLAR. (Fox-Van Bibber). All of these comedies are good and clean entertainment. Print good. Big city draw. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

CHASING THE CHASER. (Pathe). Star, Jimmie Findlayson. This star is good enough for two reelers. This comedy is very good with lots of very funny situations. Print new. Good appeal. Draw all classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

CORNFED. (Educational). Another good laugh producer. No trouble to get a laugh out of an Educational except their Juvenile comics—they are not very good. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

DINKY DOODLE CARTOON. (F. B. O). Here is a short subject that is worth playing; kids are crazy about them; grown ups enjoy them. Good tone, good for Sunday. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

FAKE ALARM. (Arrow). Just a fair comedy with well worn situations done time and time again; but will go over. Big city draw. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

GRIEF IN BAGDAD. (Fox). Monkey stars. A monkey comedy that is good if your audience likes that type of comedies. No for Sunday. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HEEBIE JEEBIES. (F. B. O.) Star, Jimmy Aubrey. Not as good as some of the Aubrey comedies. I thought it got rather silly at times. Fair tone and appeal. No for Sunday. Draw farmer and town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

HUSTLING HANK. (Pathe). Nothing much. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

IRON MULE. (Educational-Tuxedo). Star, Al St. John. This is "The Iron Horse" in comedy form. It is a scream from start to finish. There is a laugh every foot of the picture. It has lots of novelty comedy gags, some funny and exciting chases, and enough refined slapstick to please the rough crowd. The subtitles are alone worth the price of admission. The train is a peach. It is not silly or foolish like so many comedies. Tone O. K. Appeal 100 per cent. O. K. for Sunday. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

JUNIOR PARTNER. (Educational-Juvenile). The best of the Juvenile comics so far. Most of them are not good in laughing material. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

JUBILO, JR. (Pathe-Our Gang). The Gang again pleases. My motto: "A 'Gang' a day keeps the blues away." If you believe, run an Our Gang comedy. Print good. Very good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

LLOYD HAMILTON COMEDIES. (Educational) This fellow is a laugh producer, and must say his comedies are great. But prints are not in extra shape. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

MILK BANDITS. (Fox). A laugh a minute. A good comic. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

NEW SHERIFF. (Educational). Star, Hanaford. Most of Educational's pictures are real laugh-producers—and this is one of them. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

OMAR KAYHAM. (Universal-Hysterical History.) The second of this series and not as good as the first, "William Tell." I liked that and perhaps the next will suit me better. Draw farm and town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

OUR GANG COMEDY. (IT'S A BEAR). (Pathe). Fine comedy that grownups liked as well as kids. Plenty of good laughs. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

PAUL JONES, JR. (Fox). Star, Earl Foxe. A Van Bibber picture but not as good as the preceding ones. David W. Strayer, Mt. Joy Theatre, Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania.

PIE EYED. (F. B. O.) Star, Stan Laurel. Boys, this is a real good comedy and, so far, the best of this series of comedies. Print new. Big city draw. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SUNDOWN LIMITED. (Pathe-Our Gang). This "Our Gang" is a scream. Big doings in town on the night this was shown, so a good many people missed a real comedy. Good tone. Yes for Sunday. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

Serials

RIDDLE RIDER. (Universal). I have been running pictures in this burg for over ten years. At first I had quite a number of serials, but the "Clutching Hand" and that kind of stuff was enough to scare the gizzard out of a kid and so I stopped running them. Recently I started "The Riddle Rider." It is clean, interesting and has the children and some of the older people quite enthused over it. It is holding up well. Have just run episode twelve. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

Short Subjects

CASTLE COLOR FILMS. (Greater Features). A good one-reeler. All in natural colors. Packed with action and human interest. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

FOX NEWS. (No. 92). A good short subject that will always fill in on any program. Print new. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

PACEMAKERS. (F. B. O.). Stars, Vaughn, O'Hara. The best two-reel series on the market. Buy this series to make 'em laugh. Each and every one has been a winner with me. Prints new. Great appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

Independents

BRINGING HOME THE BACON. (Weiss Bros.). Star, Buffalo Bill, Jr. Very good little comedy western which pleased all who saw it. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,050. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Gallup, New Mexico.

FATAL MISTAKE. Stars, Eva Novak, Wm. Fairbanks. This is, as the title says, a mistake; and if you will run enough like it, it will probably be fatal. I looked very carefully but failed to find the fatal mistake, unless it was the producers' when they made it. Tone, none. Appeal, zero. No for Sunday. As special—help! Draw small town class, town 300. Admisslon 10-35. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

FLASH OF LIGHTNING. (State Right). Star, Leo Maloney. I think this is about the punkest Leo Maloney picture I have ever shown. A few more like this and it will be good-night for Leo. Not much appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw from small town, 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

GIRLS MEN FORGET. Star, Mare Prevost. Good little picture, but no B. O. draft. Everybody forgot it. Fair tone, good appeal. No for Sunday. Draw farmer and small town class, town 800. Welty & Son, Midway Theatre (500 seats), Hill City, Kansas.

MAN FROM LOST MOUNTAIN. (Arrow). Star, Ben Wilson. A western which should please; but they did not spend much money when made this, although it is a fair story. Print new. Good tone. Fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Admission ten cents. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

MIDNIGHT EXPRESS. (Columbia). Star, Elaine Hammerstein. Railroad melodrama that held the attention from start to finish. Several patrons voiced their praise and it's the sort of picture that makes an exhibitor stand out in the lobby after the show and ask the patrons passing out, "How did you like it?" Wonderful direction and the action pleased the regular western fans. This is the kind of picture the little town showman should book. Get it boys. Fair tone, appeal 100 per cent. Maybe Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

NOTCH NUMBER ONE. (State Right). Star, Ben Wilson. This is a fairly good western program picture, nothing more. If your patrons like westerns, this will get by as such. No as special. Draw from industrial town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

PASSION PLAY (Passion Play Co., Friedburg Players). This is the new Passion Play. It is a worthy production that gave satisfaction. With good exploitation should go over anywhere. Admission was 25-50 on it. Good tone. Appeal ninety per cent. Yes for Sunday and as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission on this as above. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

SPEED SPOOK. (C. C. Burr). Star, Johnny Hines. This picture held their interest from start to finish. Everybody liked Johnny. This picture had lots of snappy action and that was that our audiences wanted. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Appeal ninety per cent. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

TOMBOY. (Chadwick). (6,000 feet). Stars. Garon, Rawlinson. A good melodrama with enough comedy to keep them in good humor. A light program picture that will please. Good tone. Appeal 70 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. Wm. T. Meeks, Siliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

SELLING the PICTURE to the PUBLIC

EDITED BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Edgar Hart Reports on Several Stunts Then Hits the Rattler for the West

BY the time this gets into print Edgar Hart will be out on the Pacific coast, for he has obtained a leave of absence to go west and visit Mrs. Hart and assure himself that his home in San Diego is still on the lot.

Before he left he put over the Colonial theatre, Portsmouth, N. H., to a good start for the fall season, and with the patrons back into the theatre-going habit, he can leave the house for a month with a clear conscience.

Lucky Devil Cost $2.50

For The Lucky Devil he used the wrecked automobile idea, borrowing a car from a local junk dealer. The truckage to and from the house cost $2.50, which was the only expense, barring a little water color paint with which to letter the car.

A special police permit was necessary to allow the parking of the car in front of the house, but it was an easy matter to obtain a special parking zone for three days, and the police even loaned him red lanterns for night signals.

With the 13 cut from the lithos for a tag, and a number of humorous legends, the car was a fine business getter, being parked right in front of the entrance. It was the special delight of the small boys, one youngster deciding that the reason the car had no tires was that it had been run so fast they were stripped off.

Had a Forgotten Man

On The Street of Forgotten Men his expenditure was the hire of a street man and a ten cent pair of goggles from a local store, the plain glass being changed to green with lamp dip. The man carried a broomstick for a cane and was instructed to hammer on the sidewalk as he apparently felt his way along. He carried a suitcase lettered: "I am blind. Take me to The Street of Forgotten Men, Colonial theatre."

Keeping the man on the street brought the crowd into the house and he did a nice business on this unusual attraction.

Rugged Waters Were Free

For Rugged Water he borrowed a demonstration washing machine from the power company; one of those with a glass side, to permit the workings of the machine to be observed.

This was set in front of the house and framed with a display board. Back of the board a strong light shone directly into the tank. The tank was half filled with water, generously blued to suggest sea water, and on this floated a toy schooner, anchored to a weight at the bottom of the tub. The water was well soaped, to make foam, and the glass was rubbed with glycerine to keep it clear. A few celluloid fish helped along the idea.

The slogan was: "To launder your disposition. Come in and wash away your troubles in Rugged Water." A special appeal was made on the fact that the picture was made on nearby Cape Cod.

Mounted The Beggar

Beggar on Horseback was advertised by a mounted perambulator. He was given a good horse, in contrast with his shabby clothing, patched with every color of the spectrum. He carried a suit case and this and the oil cloth blanket carried pasters from the lithographs.

Had a Pinto Pony

For Wild Horse Mesa he used a pinto, ridden by a cowboy, and Wild, Wild Susan was caged in a golden cage, with a straw pallet and bread and water for a diet. No wonder she was wild. The use of a girl in the stunt made this stand out.

This is a fine record for two weeks, but Edgar knows that if he gets them coming early in September he can hold them through the winter. It is overcoming the Summer inertia that counts, and he seems to have done that.

He will be back in about a month, full of new ideas and with fresh pep. Stick around and we'll tell you all about it.

Spotting an Usher

Ollie Brownlee, of the Capitol Theatre. Oklahoma City, dressed his three ushers in period costumes for Not So Long Ago, spotting the one on duty in the foyer with a baby spot; which was appropriate enough, for the girls are all young and pretty. The girl in the foyer was visible from the street.

The costumes were loaned by a nearby gift shoppe, (don't forget that extra letter,) and cost only a slide and a small lobby card.

Movie Ball for Coast of Folly

Taking a suggestion from the picture itself, C. T. Perrin, of the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Col., sold a lot of extra seats for The Coast of Folly with a movie ball at a local dance palace.

He put up $50 for prizes for the best impersonation of Gloria Swanson in any character she ever played, which made for variety in costuming. He also defrayed the cost of advertising the event, though most hall managers will be glad to do the advertising in return for the prize money and the suggestion.

In the play there is a costume ball with characters from many screen features, and it will be more interesting if a greater latitude is allowed in the selection of a role, and still it would keep to the story.

This can be worked into a big stunt, with merchant cooperation on the prizes, which will not only cut the cost but add to the number of those interested in putting over the idea.

It might help to offer a special prize for the best assumption of old age without the use of make up, to stress Miss Swanson's achievement in this direction.

Smaller Spread Out

George E. Brown, of the Palace Theatre, Memphis, discarded his usual 24-sheets on Night Life in New York in favor of 50 six-sheets. They spread out better and got more attention. That doesn't mean, though, that he is off 24-sheets for keeps—just for a change.

A Universal Release

A PRIZE PONY BALLYHOOED THE FIGHTING RANGER

Used in the lobby of the Crystal Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., the pony which was the prize in a vote contest on The Fighting Ranger blocked the street and the police had to be called to open traffic lanes for the pedestrians.

Greater Movies Was Real Birthday Help

Because the Greater Movie Season fell upon the Birthday week of the Criterion Theatre, Enid, Okla., Charles E. Sasseen stood the town on end. He got the merchants interested in a local carnival the previous week, and that paved the way to the use of a side street, running off the main drag, for a Carnival of Paris.

Since the local merchants were stocking the booths, the usual opposition to a strect carnival was absent. Instead there was a huge enthusiasm for the even that put it over with a whirl.

A drug company set up a soda fountain and the Y. M. C. A. profitably ran a candy counter. There were stands for the sale of merchandise of the sort that appeals to the holiday crowd, and other booths were taken for the display of less portable merchandise. It was a fair and exposition with the local getting all the profits.

Sasseen's own booth was an Information Counter where the fans could register their Paramount preferences, and a couple of the Greater Forty booklets were on show and were being looked over all the time. The idea of greater movies was thoroughly put over.

As a result the following week broke the record day by day from the best Monday business in the history of the house to the best Saturday and best week at regular prices.

Boxed Dope on Forgotten Men

Most "dope" stunts are worked with capsules, but D. Roscoe Faunce used small pasteboard boxes, printed on all six faces with the simple word "Dope." These were about two inches square and half an inch high, all one piece with tuck ends.

Inside a slip about four inches square announced that Percy Marmont, Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton would give the inside dope on The Street of Forgotten Men at the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., on the stated dates.

Some 2,000 boxes were given out and the remainder of the 4,000 run were folded so that no printing showed, and handed out on the streets. The stunt was not cheap, but it was effective enough to justify the price in the light of the box office returns.

A United Artists Release

A CUTOUT THAT HELPED TO A TEN DAY STANDOUT

Playing The Gold Rush at the Strand Theatre, Far Rockaway, H. C. Thomas staked out a claim for a Chaplin cutout on a vacant lot across from the theatre. That's the claim notice to the right of the cutout. Work it on any good lot.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

Charlie Chaplin in "The Gold Rush" was somewhat longer than the average feature used at this theatre, and, therefore, the stage numbers had to be cut down. Consequently there was only one stage presentation, this being in the nature of a prologue built upon scenes from the picture. In addition there was the usual mark Strand Topical Review, which was preceded at each deluxe performance by a short orchestral prelude by the orchestra of thirty-five pieces.

The prelude, the review and the prologue took up 16 minutes, while the feature picture was 1 hour and 32 minutes. This made a show of 1 hour and 48 minutes, about 12 minutes less than the ordinary performance here, but this time was used to good advantage, as it was possible to get in an extra show on the day. On Saturday, the opening day, doors were opened at ten o'clock to permit the overflow crowds to see the picture. The final show at night during the whole run was put on at 10:46.

The orchestral prelude, 2 minutes long, was "Pomp and Circumstance." The lights were: light pink Mestrum of 160 amperes on the musicians from the dome; foots and borders of the large stage in blue; 2 pink arch spots and 2 green arch spots were thrown on the pleats of the purple-spangled curtains which were closed across the production stage. Light green open box lamps in the transparent windows at either side of the large stage.

Following the Topical Review came the prologue. This set, made up by P. Dodd Ackermann, represented the Monte Carlo Dance Hall on New Year's Eve, as shown in the Chaplin picture. There was no detail overlooked, everything being there including the bar, the tables, balcony, stairway, the hanging oil-lamps and even the Happy New Year greeting card around the banjo clock which hung in the center of the balcony. The old grand piano which adorned the stage of the Monte Carlo was placed on a platform to the left and figured prominently in the prologue. The scene opened with the characters all dancing as one of the prospectors played the piano. Then came some business in which figured the professional ivory tickler, showing him strumming lazily on the keys until some of the dancehall characters throw him silver dollars. At the clinking of the coins the pianist came to life and whaled away on the musicbox, turning out some popular tunes that were all the rage during the gold rush days. It was during this that one of the characters as Charlie Chaplin came on and then came some more business taken from the picture, mainly how Chaplin sneaked a drink or two off the bar without paying for them. One of the characters, a tenor, sang "Kathleen" and then came a dance for the Ensemble. The number closed with a second chorus of "Kathleen," with Chaplin standing center stage under a spot which gradually dimmed as a scrim was closed over the production stage and the picture started. All lighting for this prologue was from the stage and included ambers, light pinks and white spots and open box lamps.

The lobby display was a cutout showing a man leaning against a lamp post and looking after a young girl who had just passed him. The lamp was provided with green glass and a 100 watt bulb that showed up even in the daytime.

The side displays were translucent windows, back of which were cutouts. On one side was shown a man choking another while opposite a man and woman were seen in a shadowy embrace.

The picture gained the approval of the Better Films Committee, which sent out 400 letters of appreciation to prominent persons.

Added a Shoe

Using only a banner with a flat in front of the box office, Pat Argust, of the Rialto Theatre, Colorado Springs, got a strong suggestion of cold weather without messing his lobby with cotton batting when he came to play The Gold Rush.

The banner showed Chaplin in a snow storm with huge drifts, and the display was surmounted by a profile shoe of the sort the comedian has made familiar. It was a touch that helped to make business better—and at advanced prices.

Now is the time the hustling manager makes his plans for his Christmas exploitation. Get busy.

Miniature Show for A Slave of Fashion

E. R. Rogers made a prologue, "Fashions of the Ages," his big bid on A Slave of Fashion when he played this at the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn. Starting with Eve, he made a quick jump to about fifty years ago and then came more slowly down the ages. The first time Eve was shown reaching for the apple, and then the scrim drop was faded to permit the models to work in front. At the close the scene faded back to Eden and showed Eve grasping the apple, leading up to the first subtitle, "Clothes—Eve started it in the garden of Eden," the main title being cut out to permit the merger.

To further the clothes idea, Mr. Rogers made a lobby miniature with a number of cutouts of Norma Shearer in different costumes on a revolving stage, as shown in the cut. In the centre was another cutout standing at the top of a circular flight. Vases filled with painted greenery masked the sides of the arch. This was displayed in the lobby ten days in advance, and sold the title to satisfactory business. Both the display and the prologue setting were done by Mr. Rogers, who is more than merely clever with his brush.

If you copy the idea remember that the more slowly the platform revolves, the better the effect. Gear down. This is not a merry-go-round.

Took a Full Page on an Opposition

When the Palace Theatre, Cleveland, switched to a picture policy, back in July, it opened with The Iron Horse, then fresh from its New York run.

The opposition was Gilda Gray and her husband-manager, Gil Boag, evidently realized that he was up against something, for he took a full-page advertisement in a vaudeville paper to remark that: "Gilda Grey appreciates the tribute of the Keith-Albee Circuit in inaugurating a new policy at their Palace Theatre in recognition of her opposition at the State."

It might have helped more had he used the Cleveland papers, but help was not particularly needed in the face of turnaway business.

Had Them Guessing

George J. Schade, of Sandusky, recently spread the report that he was about to be indicted for an infraction of the Volstead Act, then offered the published explanation that the only reason he could imagine was that he had Ponjola at the Schade Theatre recently.

Not many caught on at first, but they asked until they discovered that "Ponjola" was Boer for "rum." It's a little deep, but it gets a laugh.

The Devil Drove

Getting hold of one of those fixed up Ford cars that tries to masquerade as a racer without deceiving anybody, Frank J. Miller sent it around town with a chauffeur in a red devil's dress to advertise the fact that The Lucky Devil was at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Radiator Cutout Again to Fore

Perhaps you remember the time when no Harold Lloyd picture was considered to have been properly exploited unless a huge cutout head of the comedian, mounted on the auto radiator, was perambulated through town.

Then someone discovered the laughing record, and the big head was forgotten until the other day when G. A. Rea dug it out for Raymond Griffith in Paths to Paradise at the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ga.

The head of the comedian was mounted on the radiator and the silk hat was put on the back of the car, the hat being home made from compo-board, and lettered with star and title.

The stunt was so old that it was new again, and everyone laughed and figured that it must be a funny play. The cutouts later were used in the lobby display.

A new angle was a classified ad reading: "Wanted—To rent a silk hat for Raymond Griffith, the high hat comedian, to wear in Paths to Paradise. Address Grand Theatre, Sunday, Monday or Tuesday."

A number of replies were received, indicating that the high hat has not yet gone completely into the discard.

Nobody wears them any more. Why not a silk hat matinee when a single hat, of any vintage, will admit the entire family? If any hats come in you can use them for lobby display. If you get none, you at least get a laugh.

Clocks Told Moment

Oscar White used a clock lobby on His Supreme Moment, with the clock's time to go off at ten-minute intervals. The centrepiece was a huge heart with a clock dial and small alarm clocks hung at 3, 6, 9 and 12.

As the clocks were hung in various parts of the lobby and no one knew where to look for the next alarm, the display attracted unusual attention at the Liberty Theatre, Greenwood, S. C.

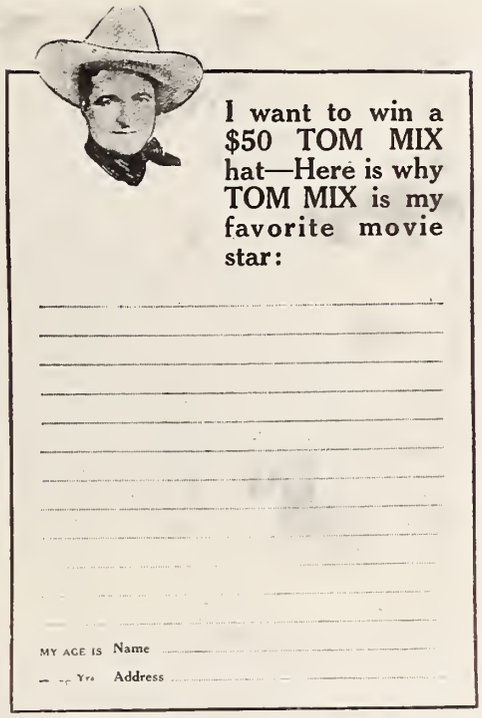
Classed a Contest According to Ages

Tom Mix hats have been useful in getting window displays, but the Kings and Rivoli Theatres, St. Louis, which play the same attraction day and date, used the Stetsons as prizes in an essay contest to put over The Lucky Horeshoe.

A card large enough to contain the necessary fifty words was distributed with copy as shown in the accompanying cut. The writer had to tell in fifty words why Mix was a favored star, and the best reply in each of five classes was awarded a $50 hat.

The classes as scaled were 1-6, 7-10, 11-15, 16-20 and 21-60 years. We don't know what a child under six would do with a sombrero, unless it made a tent of it, and we don't believe that the opinion of a six-year-old would be of particular value. It would seem that the age class might be improved, but the idea is distinctly good—and you can get sombreros from about $20 up.

Where possible, it would be better to lay off this scheme to the newspaper.



Five genuine $50 Mix Stetson hats will be given away. Will YOU win one?

AN ESSAY CONTEST THAT MADE BUSINESS FOR TOM MIX

The Kings and Rivoli Theatres, St. Louis, offered five hats for the best reasons why Tom Mix was the writer's favorite star, the reply being limited to 50 words and the contest being divided into five age classes to give all a chance.

A Combination

W. G. Bishop, Metro-Goldwynner, pinch hitter for the regular publicity man of Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, framed a new angle on the sand stunt for Never the Twain Shall Meet.

Usually it's just sand from the Sahara or the South Seas or whatever the locale of the picture, but Bishop added the jealousy stunt, originated by a New York City exhibitor, plus an old Hallowe'en superstition.

Each envelope contained about an ounce of sand and a slip of pink paper. It was printed in red with: "Warning. Magic Sand from the South Sea Isles. Open with care."

On the pink slip were these directions: "Magic sand from the South Sea Isles. Follow directions carefully. Dampen this paper and place on a mirror. Allow it to remain there for three days. At the end of the third day remove paper from mirror, throw a small portion of the sand over your left shoulder, look in the mirror and you will see the one who loves you."

In the original form, if your husband or sweetheart was untrue, the paper fell off.

Swapped Favors

While Black Cyclone was running at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., Frank J. Miller noted that the newspaper was plugging a song with the same title as a novel it was running serially. He put it on for a musical number with a slide telling what it was, and the newspaper announced each day that you could her the song and see a darned good picture at the same time by patronizing the Modjeska.

Made the Comics

Out in Omaha Rex got mention in a comic strip in the Daily News just as Black Cyclone broke loose. It's very indirect advertising, but it helps because it so clearly is not intended to be an advertisement. It's just a recognition of Rex as a movie star.

Real Night Life

Several of the Poli theatres, through New England, have cleaned up on Night Life in New York with an offer to let some fortunate contestant see the real night life in New York.

In New Haven, for instance, the winner of the contest was given two round trip tickets to New York, parlor car seats, two tickets for a Broadway show, room and bath for one night at a good hotel and a visit to the Paramount Studio in Long Island City. A new hat, dress and shoes were provided for the trip.

Sounds costly, but the only cost was for the transportation. Even the hotel bill was covered by advertising.

It's a fine stunt within a radius of one hundred miles. If you can't use it on this title, it will form an ideal prize for any contest with any large city as the objective, but of course it works best on Night Life in New York.

Bluebeard Lobby

Charles E. Sasseen, of the Criterion Theattre, Enid, Okla., made his lobby display on The Lucky Devil from old material that cost only the time spent in cutting it out. He went over his old posters and cut out a lot of heads of Richard Dix from old titles, mounted them on cardboard and strung them across the lobby with the announcement of the new play.

It looked like the den of a lady Bluebeard, but it brought them in.

Oats in envelopes were served the guests at all business club luncheons at Oklahoma City, printed up: "Wild Oats for a Wild Horse in Wild Morse Mesa. Criterion, next Sunday. See the pre-view Saturday night."

The rest of the 2,000 envelopes Pat McGee provided were put out at soda fountains and lunch places.

Reverse Circle A Strong Effect

impression is unusually good and the names and title stand out very nicely. The Universal seems to be a little too strongly inclined to reverse in its press cuts, but this one comes through and makes an excellent display though the sales talk above the circle is partly lost through being set in bold face. With so much black to conteract, a light Roman would have been better. This will reduce down considerably, but you will be able to notice how "Siege" has been spaced out to fill the top line on the left. This is a capital device for gaining side without increasing height, but when carried too far, as in the present case, the letters get so widely separated that they lose touch with each other, and the letters are not read at a glance. If you are interested you can pick them up to get the title, but to space more than half the height is to carry the letters too far apart. It would have been better to have indented the word so that the letters could run closer, taking up the white space at the left as is done with the start of a paragraph. Probably the printer did the best he could, but it isn't very good.

Nice Layout is Simply Achieved

Milt Crandall of the Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh, Pa., gets some excellent effects in his cross-page space for his houses, using three sections of which we reproduce the central section from a recent display. The ends are good, but Milt has done particularly well for Lightnin' in this space, which is four inches deep and about seven wide; since he does not have to go by column measurement. He uses a cut for the title, but all of the rest is straight type work and he tells the high points and still has some white space. He does not try to tell all about the play. He knows that most people know as much as he does about Lightnin'. He just recalls old Bill Jones, knowing that this will work for him. To mention Bill is to recall the play. Contrasted with some of the Pittsburgh spaces before Milt drifted into town is to realize what he has done, not only for his own string but for the town in general, for it needed only one man to set the pace. The other houses have followed; not always with Milt's success, but along the same general lines, though every now and then they drop back to hand lettering that is made all the worse because of the poor printing for which the Pittsburgh newspapers are noted. Milt is getting through with R. & C. but he will leave his impress upon the town for a long time to come.

to pull them in with advertising. There are too many summer parks, with the shore close at hand, and it pays to slide along in the hot weather, but the house produced a very good space for Greater Movie Season with Lightnin' as the attraction. This is 80 lines, or nearly six inches, by three, and told in type, it puts the idea of the New York hit over, with just enough cut to get out of the ordinary and not so much as to be wasteful. The cut serves to break the cross-line effect, which helps, for the printer has worked along the easiest lines, with no particular regard for selection of faces. But it is a good space for Newark, and indicates that the Terminal is going to work along sound courses this winter.

There is as good a bank just below the title and these lines should coax the reluctant quarters from the hard boiled lover of excitement. It promises well and looks as though it might keep its promise. Unless you have a well-known play-title, it pays to spend real time and thought over a selling line that says something about what you have to sell and not just "something."

is the unusually striking attractor cut, and the Aldine has wisely given it enough white space to let the black silhouette effect stand out. This seems to be a home made sketch, and if it really is locally produced, the art standard in Pittsburgh has gone up considerably of late. It would seem that the idea in using the reverse panel was to hold the title to the attractor, letting the title rise superior to the boxes carrying the other program items. Well printed, it has precisely that effect. You immediately associate the figure with A Slave of Fashion and get the idea that the picture must be as snappy as Norma Shearer in the sketch. This is an unusually happy effort.

MAKING A PANEL CUT OUT OF A STRAIGHT STILL

Gets Art Effect From Stock Still

There's a clever little wrinkle from Ralph Ruffner in the cross page nines for The Little French Girl at the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C. This cut was made from a stock still without any art work. He simply sent the still to the engraver with instructions to rout out and he gets a striking panel at the smallest cost. It dominates the space and the placement makes it easy to go from the cut to the title. This is a nice example of playing up the title. Nothing in the space is permitted to detract from this, and yet four of the players get individual mention, the director comes in for a boost and the smaller features are well displayed including Felix, "the cartoon kitty," which sounds more attractive than "Felix the cat." It is just one of those characteristic touches that give individuality to all of the Ruffner spaces. In his present berth he cannot give rein to the eccentric phrases that used to mark his work in the States. His clientele is too conservative, and he plays for his patrons rather than newspaper mention, but he is too effervescent to be entirely conventional, and almost every advertisement carries some trick of phrase that possesses a real sales value. Apparently Ruff has established a miniature stock company, which explains the cut of his soloist. The name appears on most of his announcements. He is following Eddie Hyman in a realization that the old favorites have a drag that is not possessed by visiting stars, though he realizes, too, the value of the visiting novelty. He works both, but plays up the home talent, knowing that these are established in favor.

Combines Three Cuts To Get Nice Layout

Here is an attractive three tens on Charley's Aunt framed by Vogel Gettier, of the Majestic Theatre, Grand Island, Neb., on the funny comedy. The display is cohesive. It does not in the least suggest a patchwork, and yet it is made up with three stock cuts, held together with nicely joined rule work. Perhaps it would have looked as well without rules, but the rule work serves to hold it together, and we think it is better with these in. The only place where piecing is suggested is the flat top of the curtain over on the right, and not one reader in five thousand will notice this. There is a good bank of sales talk, well written in the proper vein and not trying to tell too much, but there is enough white space to keep the display open and pleasant to the eye. Mr. Gettier has worked out a good space without trying to fill it too full,

News, Comments of the Week and Guide to New Material

WHO'S WHO IN PRESENTATIONS NO. 2

JERRY DeROSA, technical director of the Colony Theatre, New York City, was born in New York. He entered the theatrical business after graduating from high school, his advent being marked as that of a "fifer" in a military act. Possessing an excellent voice, he was soon recognized by musical directors as a valuable acquisition and was given parts in various musical comedy productions.

After he had laid the foundation for his career in the stock game he played several seasons in vaudeville. Finally, the big opportunity came and he joined the staff of the New York Hippodrome. It was under the tutelage of Arthur Voegtlin, famous creator of the Hippodrome spectacles, that he was introduced into the mysteries of the technical phases of the show business. He studied scenic and lighting effects, their construction and application, and for five years made the opportunity count for things.

War broke out and for four years DeRosa served in the New York battalion of the Naval Militia. When the Peace Conference was on in Paris, he was an aide to Admiral Benson, and this connection gave him the chance to see Europe and its theatres. Whenever he was out of Paris on official duty, he made his play moments work moments. After he returned to the United States he joined the B. S. Moss Enterprises and has served in various capacities with the organization during his affiliation with it.

Mr. DeRosa, who is also a brother of Eugene DeRosa, noted New York architect, is a young man of much promise, a conscientious and indefatigable worker. His various scenic and lighting treatments in connection with the Colony presentations have achieved much recognition for their originality and extreme artistry.

Mr. DeRosa has developed some new ideas in mechanical and lighting effects which have formed important units in some of the novel presentations.

CADMAN TO WRITE SCORE

CHARLES WAKEFIELD CADMAN, one of America's foremost composers, has been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky, to write the score to be used in connection with the showing of "Vanishing Men," (Paramount) Zane Grey's epic of the American Indian. Mr. Cadman will compose a theme song, "Little Wild Rose" and dedicated to Lois Wilson, the heroine of the screen story.

THE QUESTION OF REVUES

THE question asked today is will musical comedy in a tabloid version or will miniature revues find a popular demand with motion picture theatre audiences, and drive the standard form of presentations from the stages? This question is one which is causing the leaders to pause and listen. With money being reaped at the box office of several legitimate houses playing spectacular revues, especially those glorifying the "form divine," this extraordinary business has prompted certain producers to inject the same idea into certain of their numbers. Naturally the innovation of dancers and artists in extremely abbreviated costumes, together with certain characters posing practically in the nude has jolted the motion picture audiences and made itself felt at the box office. However, such an attitude is one which is not stable. It is a temporary appeal which will act as a boomerang to the producer. There is a difference in introducing artistry compared with nudity and such appearances are limited in the territory. Only three or four sections of the country would permit the display of the female form in the manner recently observed in certain theatres. There is a danger of mistaking one's apparent artistry for that of gross vulgarity. The gasps from the audiences do not necessarily indicate admiration: this has mislead many.

F-P PROJECT

A REPORT now current on Broadway that John Murray Anderson has been engaged by Famous Players to produce the various productions in the Broadway theatres of that organization. There has been an apparent program agreed upon to specialize in the larger musical productions and this may be another step to achieve results. Mr. Anderson is a well known musical comedy and revue director, having produced certain versions of the Greenwich Village Follies, Music Box Revue, etc.

PERSONALITIES

WE regret that HOWARD W. McCOY, managing director of the Colony Theatre is leaving Broadway for a larger field of endeavor in the South. Mr. McCoy has been one of the champions of a genuine presentation program and his sincere attitude which has been reflected in his attention to the details of presentation development has won for him such admiration. Among some of the items we have found in our mail we learn that IRVING EASTMAN, who, in association with his brother, Nat Eastman, are art directors of the Colony Theatre, is returning from Mexico City where he has been guest art director for the Russian Grand Opera Company, playing a limited engagement in that city. That HUSTON RAY, who is billed as America's Favorite Concert Pianist, is appearing in various motion picture theatres, presenting a twin piano recital with a reproducing piano. Mr. Ray is one of the few sure fire box office attractions in the presentation houses. That Miss FAY LAMPHIER, who was selected as "Miss America" by the judges at the Atlantic City beauty tournament, made a personal appearance at the Rialto Theatre, New York City, for one night during the week's engagement of the six bathing beauties appearing on the bill with Olive Ann Alcorn. That IRVIN TALBOT, formerly musical director of the Rivoli Theatre under Hugo Riesenfeld, is serving in a similar capacity at the new Mosque Theatre, Newark, N. J.

THE STOCK COMPANY

INTERESTING experiments are being conducted to ascertain the advisability of maintaining a regular company of artists to appear each week in a stage feature. If the company is well chosen, the artists versatile, the idea will succeed even as the old stock company made good.

"SCRAP BOOK SUGGESTIONS"
A Group of Scenic Innovations for Moving Picture World Presentations
Devised by Colby Harriman

WE are digressing from the usual presentation routine this week and offering six suggestions to form ideal backgrounds for certain song and dance features.

The small set is one which is gaining in popularity. This is due not only to the artistic simplicity which is a marked characteristic, but because they are usually not expensive to construct and paint, permitting a variety of sets for numbers on a single bill.

These suggestions have been selected at random from our scrap and note book, which we have consistently kept and found it to be ready in rendering assistance in eleventh hour suggestions, or for special production ideas. There are so many things which can be entered into the scrap book, running the gamut from scenic ideas to routine notations, and it should be an integral part of a producer's workshop.

General details appertaining to each suggestion are included under the title heading of each plate. The lighting treatments are also generalized as they depend chiefly on the subject matter.

1. "South Sea Garden"

May be used as a frame for a song number. Two trellises constructed of bamboo (fish-pole), using the large sized poles. Each trellis section should be set on an angle with about a five-foot opening at center. Large green leaves in vine formation can be entwined in the trellis work. A coral wall or a set piece painted to represent stones covered with moss can be used to extend across up stage. A tab sky drop to back and a dark drapery of contrasting material in front. Potted plants or foliage to dress the foreground in front of the trellis.

The lighting treatment should contrast the area back of the trellis with the foreground. Green on the leaves, with orange amber dimmed down. Blue on sky and canary and amber in back of trellis.

2. "The Temple Muse"

A setting for a Grecian dance specialty, for one or two people. A large column placed left, the top of the capital of the column not visible. A two-step unit extends across the opening at back. The fold of a light colored fabric hangs from center and caught about one-third of the way on the right side. Blue sky tab drop for backing. A few stars may be hung right center on the drop.

COLONY THEATRE
New York City

Featured Picture: "The Freshman" (Pathe) (Week of September 20)

Music

The Colony Melody Masters present "Jolly Fellows" (Suppe) as the overture selection. E. Chas. Eggett conducts the orchestra. Dr. Edward Kilenyi has prepared a most excellent score for the featured picture. It reflects much thought and is syncopated with many of the comedy scenes of the picture, eliciting much laughter.

The Prologue

We have seen prologues depicting College Days and while there is a similarity between what we have seen and the current offering here there is one thing certain; for a display of real college spirit, a super-abundance of pep and an excellent routine, the Colony prologue need offer no alibis. The prologue is entitled "Campus Capers," the setting representing a section of Tate College and its campus. A fantastically designed and constructed tower is placed center with a balcony opening at the top with flowers hung over the balustrade. At the base of the tower is an oval archway with a cutout design in fantastic formations. Over the doorway or arch is a college motif suggesting a book, football, with the ever-present spectacles. Three steps lead from the archway of the tower to the stage and are bordered with angled balustrades. Two flats painted to match the tower and bearing window designs adjoin the tower right and left and carry off stage. The setting is painted in an uneven brick formation. There is a flat at right with arched opening. A 1-ft. platform fills the opening. This is covered with black material. The jazz band is grouped on the platform up right center. Two narrow bay windows right and left of the stage. center, and at left center a large fountain is set amid a foliage bank. The fountain is about six feet high, a gold top mounted on a bundle of small columns, the base of the fountain masked with foliage placed around it. The fountain is practical. Grass mats are placed up stage and around the fountain and black plush legs are hung in one at left and right to mast. There is a profusion of foliage and set trees in the setting. Canary spots from the borders flood the foreground with blue back of the archway center and blue borders and strips toning the sky cyclorama. A green spot from right highlights the set trees at left. Amber bunch at right is back of the opening of the flat at right. Blue and amber foots are used with a canary flood and pink and blue spots on the characters. The action features Jack Broderick and Betty Flesen, two of the cleverest dancers we have been privileged to see in many weeks. They are accompanied by Hill's Blue Devils Orchestra and Seamon Krevoff as the young freshman does an excellent dance specialty. The large ensemble is augmented by the University of So. California Trojan Five who sing various college songs. The routine was arranged by Howard W. McCoy and the prologue was staged by Harry Shaw, who has really achieved results with these peppy youngsters, and the technical work under the supervision of Jerry De Rosa.

CAPITOL THEATRE
New York City

Featured Picture "The Circle" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) (Week Sept. 20)

Overture

The overture played by the Capitol Grand Orchestra with David Mendoza conducting is the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," by Liszt. A violin cadenza written by David Mendoza was played by Joseph Fuchs, first violin.

Divertissements
Doris Niles

An attractive Persian Sword Dance is presented by Miss Niles with "Dance of the Amazon" music (Laidow) as the theme. An unusual fabric combination is introduced representing a large tree. The drapery is hung in two and the folds brought down in various sweeping formations, the parts of the drapery pinned over its surface to give the effect of the top of a large tree. The pink is formed with the two lower streamers in the drapery. Miss Niles appears through the center opening of the draperies forming the trunk. A balustrade extends across the stage and down right. A white marble garden bench is placed on an oblique upon which a red plush drapery is spread. Sky backing is used. The backing is toned blue at center blending into a soft green at the sides. A crescent moon is visible at right center of the drop, the folds of the curtain forming the tree are toned a rose and green from the sides. A green flood with an orange amber spot on the dancer complete the lighting treatment.

Mlle. Gambarelli

The Prima Ballerina presents "Scherzo" from "La Source" (Delibes), clad in a white ballet costume. The dancer is discovered on a draped dais which is constructed in the formation of a large nest and which is covered with silver metallic cloth. Two large circular cushions are placed right and left of the dais to dress. The black plush is used as a background. Amber floods the foreground, with an amber from left and a light green blue from right shafter upon the dais at center. A pink spot is used on the artist.

Caroline Andrews

This popular songstress of the Capitol renders the "Waltz Song" from "Romeo and Juliet" (Gounod). An attractive painted set representing the portico of a castle, the singer appearing in a white Juliet costume. Cut drop hung in two, representing two large stone columns with supporting arches, at the top of which foliage is visible. Back of this drop is placed a large flowering set piece surmounted by two poplar trees cut out and at right center a small garden archway with entwining vines is visible through the right arch of the cut drop. A black plush leg is hung at right of the set in front of the cut drop and is caught in a sweeping fold with an orange colored cord. The sky drop is toned rose at the base, merging into a canary. A long boxed bench covered with silver cloth is placed left center. The setting is lighted to emphasize the various colors in the pigment.

"Kol Nidre"

This seasonal number of the Hebrew faith was given an effective rendition by William Robyn and Douglas Stanbury, assisted by the Capitol singers. The Bruch composition was given a special vocal arrangement by Dr. William Axt. The setting represents the interior of a Jewish place of worship. A large paneled window is placed up center, bearing various Hebraic characters. Over the panel is a circular window which completes the treatment and suggests the Jewish symbol. A suggested altar or covenant table is placed below the window and covered with a light fabric. The eight singers in the number are clad in Hebrew ceremonial robes of black and stand in alignment in one. At right and left center two candelabras are visible, each bearing three lighted candles. The lighting on the set is very subdued, an amber is back of the window up center, red from the right and green from the sides highlight the altar and blue green from right and left in shaft formation tones the singers in the Ensemble.

MARK STRAND THEATRE
New York City

Featured Picture "Don Q, Son of Zorro" (United Artists) (Week of Sept. 20)

The Prologue

Joseph Plunkett has produced a prologue which is in marked contrast to the one presented with the picture during its premiere showing in New York. The prologue is not pretentious in the matter of people, but it is the ideal suggestion for this particular picture, and the setting which Mr. Plunkett has given the prologue is one which equals any of the settings of the picture. This is a very broad statement, but never have we seen so large a set and such attention to detail for a few moments of action and introduction to a picture. The scene represents a section of the courtyard of a patio. Running across back is a section of the dwelling; an archway at right center is backed with an especially designed window, the design in black with Spanish motifs. There is an entrance from left of the archway through the alcove. Over the archway a balcony extends across the top, with a series of small columns and connecting arches. At left a broad stairway with a stone balustrade is placed. This stairway occupies about one-third of the stage space and runs from a point left of center to about a 12-foot platform back of the flood at extreme left, which forms the balance of the set. A foliage cluster and trees are placed extreme right of the set against the wall of the structure, and vines and foliage are used down in front of the wall of the stairway. Three urns with flowers are distributed at the base of the stone balustrade, and at the center and at the top. Spanish shawls are hung over the balustrade on the balcony. The lighting is one which suggests evening. A postern lamp hung left of the archway up right center is lighted with an amber lamp. An amber shaft of light penetrates through the arched opening and back of the window up right center. The set is flooded with green and blues, with a rose border toned down to highlight the tiled top of the set building. A shaft of canary is thrown in to spot the artists who appear on the stairway. The action opens with Mlle. Klemova and Jose Enriques in a premiere presentation of "La Pintura Blanca" by Eliseo Grenet. This dance is done in one. At the finale Everett Clark, tenor, enters through the archway as the male partner of the dance exits left and Clark sings "Moonlight Dreams," a new composition by Mr. Gruenberg, assistant conductor of the Mark Strand Symphony Orchestra. This is a very beautiful number and is given an effective rendition. The two characters are in the center of the staircase when the action finishes as the lights dim down and into the picture.

the column and tipping the edge of the drapery. Blue and red mixed to secure a deep purple for flood. Deep blue on sky.

3. "Old Ballad Memories"

A setting for a song number. A flat, with an arched doorway placed center. The flat painted a gray-buff tone, stippled, to give a stucco effect. A large gray blue drapery with a black line border and fringe being at left of the set. The edge of drapery of the same material at right. Sky tab to back. Two wrought iron candlesticks with large candles back of the lamp, a pocket attached in which incense may be lighted to give smoke effect. Deep rose on flat, a steel blue on draperies, canary and blue blend on edge of archway. Blue sky with steel blue stars.

4. "Lights and Shadows"

A silhouette study suitable for either a singer, who would appear as part of the silhouette, back of the screen or a background for dancers in silhouette working in one. The silhouette effect can be projected with glass plaques from the back or painted on the drop and opaqued. If desired the set can be cut out and silhouetted against a light background. The lighting treatment should be similar to achieve this effect.

5. "Where Romance Lives"

Another song number background suggesting a large garden area. A huge urn mounted on a large pedestal, with a set tree and adjacent foliage pieces visible at center, with dark plush drapery giving the effect that they have been drawn aside to reveal this section. A platform unit with steps leading up and off stage and right back of the urn and pedestal, with a small platform and steps leading on stage, complete the set. The sky backing can be toned a rose, with green and amber highlighting the trees and the foliage pieces.

6. Egyptian Worship Dance

An unusual setting for an Egyptian ceremonial dance. A large framed window practically fills the opening through which the outline of the Sphinx arises out of a purple mist, and against an evening sky. A flaming urn is center in front of the window. The foreground should be subdued in lighting treatment.

"Off the Highway"

Wm. V. Mong Excels in Splendid Dramatic Picture Produced by Hunt Stromberg

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"Off the Highway," a Producers Distributing Corporation production, is a fine picture, with a distinct box office angle. It has a remarkable story and remarkable acting, William V. Mong contributing one of the most striking characterizations we have seen.

No picture can be greater than its plot, and Tom Gallon's novel "Tatterly," is ideal screen material. The plot hinges on a near impossibility but develops plausibly and powerfully. Some of the characters remind you of Dickens' most colorful ones, notably the one played by Mong. That is reminiscent of Scrooge of the "Christmas Carol." But don't get the idea that this is old-fashioned stuff. It is a chapter out of modern life. The theme is regeneration and there is a charming love story.

Tom Forman's direction is splendid. There are a couple of weak spots but they are unimportant. Forman took the wealth of minor incident in the novel and carefully put it on the screen, with the result that he has built up strong characterizations and has kept his artists from empty gesturing. Everything they do reflects their mental make-ups and advances the story. Dorothy Farnum's adaptation undoubtedly preserved these minor details for Forman to use.

William V. Mong is corking. Perhaps Caleb Fry will be considered his finest characterization. He dominates the picture with his vivid delineation of a crabbed old miser who learns how to be human. John Bowers and Marguerite De La Motte supply a charming romance, and Charles Gerard is generally good as the villain, though at times he badly over-acts. Buddy Post, Gino Corrado and Joseph Swickard are excellent in minor roles. Post especially is very good in the comedy scenes.

The picture opens perfectly, scenes of foggy London streets and two or three clever subtitles suggesting exactly the mood of what is to follow. Then, too, the scenes of an artist's studio are wholly realistic. There's nothing stilted about them. The acting is human and the backgrounds are true while colorful. The paint brush duel between Bowers and Post is staged in very effective fashion. It will get a lot of laughs.

"Off the Highway" has all the earmarks of a darned good box office bet.

Directed by Tom Forman.
Length, 7,641 feet.

Story

Caleb Fry, miser, hates Donald Brett, artist and son of the woman he once loved, because he won't enter business and changes his will, leaving his money to Hector Kindon, a cousin. Tatterly, his servant, who closely resembles the miser, dies and Fry is struck with the humorous idea of posing as Tatterly and seeing how people really do regard him. Kindon throws him out and Brett and Ella Tarrant, his sweetheart, take Fry in. They suffer financial setbacks but Fry, now realizing them as worthy and Kindon as unworthy, can't help them because he neglected to leave himself anything in his will. He finally, by trickery, gets a few thousand dollars, plays with it in Wall Street, wins the money back from Kindon and helps those who have proved his real friends. But he does not disclose his identity, preferring to continue posing as Tatterly.

Fox Adaptation of Successful Stage Play Is Rich in Sympathetic Appeal and Heart Interest

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Winchell Smith is an experienced dramatist who has been very successful as the co-author of a number of stage hits of the human-interest melodrama type which depend largely on characterization, human interest and intense play upon the sympathies. Of such a type is "Thank You," which he wrote in collaboration with Tom Cushing and is now being offered on the screen by William Fox.

In the expert hands of Frances Marion, who prepared the scenario, and John Ford, who directed the production, the film version retains the same angles of appeal as the play. While the earlier reels produce the impression that a young spendthrift is the leading character; with the shift of action to a village, a downtrodden, self-sacrificing minister, totally misunderstood and unappreciated by his congregation, takes the center of the stage and the young hero is relegated into the background.

Gradually, by easy stages, the character of this minister is built up, interest in him established, and strong sympathy developed which culminates in intense play upon the heartstrings in the scene where, his pitiful request for a few more dollars' salary being not only denied, but his meagre income cut, he collapses in the church.

There is a lot of good comedy in this picture contributed largely by J. Farrell MacDonald as a reformed drunk who falls from grace. His performance is sure to get a lot of laughs, especially the scene where he paints the spotted cow a solid white. The familiar device of aiding in building up sympathy by establishing antipathy for other characters, this time the congregation, is employed here. They are painted as exceedingly narrow-minded, peanut-brained and selfish.

Mr. Ford certainly definitely establishes his characters; in fact he does so in such detail and emphasizes their traits to such an extent that he slows the story down; also the critical patron will probably feel that the types are overdrawn, for it is hard to believe that there exists such a congregation as this one and the minister is made an ideal of perfection and saintliness and understanding of those he comes in contact with.

After all, while the characters and situations may be overdone from the cold comparison of real life, they do have the effect of building up strong human appeal, and working on the sympathies to a marked degree. The story is absolutely clean and of high moral tone and should be endorsed by the best elements in any community. We think that the average patron will be pleased with "Thank You" and find it good entertainment.

Story

After a series of wild escapades Kenneth Jamieson's millionaire father banishes him with a small allowance to a chicken farm in the slow village of Dedham. On the same day Diane, niece of Reverend David Lee, arrives from Paris with French clothes and Parisian manners. She shocks the town but delights Kenneth. A few days later Ken gets full and goes on a rampage and offends Diane, but David talks to him and he reforms. David is underpaid and has to accept donations from his parishioners. He asks for an increase but instead, as gossips have linked Kenneth and Diane's names, they reduce his salary unless Diane leaves. Mr. Jones, a busybody notifies Jamieson Sr. who goes for Diane roughshod, but she wins him over. David sticks by Diane who stuck by him and disappears. After an all night search he is found in church, having collapsed, and is nursed back to health. Jamieson Sr. gives the townspeople a sound verbal thrashing, calling them hypocrites and pharisees and shames them, pointing out their unjust treatment of the minister. Not long after, David and Jamieson, who were old cronies, are overjoyed at the engagement of Diane and Kenneth.

"Shore Leave"

Strong Emotional Appeal, Good Comedy and Touching Pathos in Barthelmess' Newest Production

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Richard Barthelmess makes his debut in the role of a "gob" aboard one of Uncle Sam's warships in his newest First National production, "Shore Leave," adapted from Hubert Osborne's play produced on the stage by David Belasco.

The star is cast as a sailor who, on shore leave in a small seaport town, picks up an acquaintance with a young dressmaker who has never had a sweetheart. To him it is just one more flirtation and he promptly proceeds to forget her, but to the girl it is the one big thing in her life.

The slight foundation on which the girl bases her hopes, the extreme lengths to which she goes to locate him and find him again when he leaves believing she is rich, and finally her placing in trust her ship and money for the son she eventually hopes to have, reveals a high degree of romantic hope which while touching and dramatic, is far removed from what would usually occur under similar circumstances in everyday life.

While decidedly implausible, the story is one of beautiful faith and the girl's unfaltering belief that the sailor will return and make her his bride is one that plays deep upon the emotions. In this role Dorothy Mackaill gives an excellent performance. The character is one that develops intense sympathy and there is pathos and drama in her plight that at times borders on tragedy. In fact, Miss Mackaill's role is really the central one of the story and dominates it. Richard Barthelmess as the sailor has a rather unusual role for a star, one that does not command sympathy; at the same time it is human while that of the girl is ideal. He gives a very fine performance and contributes not only a good characterization of an easy-going, somewhat hardened sailor, but has considerable effective comedy, in one scene appearing with his face blackened from the coal dust of the engine room. All of the other characters are well handled but of minor importance.

While hardly one of his strongest pictures or one that gives him the dramatic opportunity of some of his others, "Shore Leave" should prove a distinctly entertaining and pleasing production, especially for better class patronage, because of its touching theme, strong emotional appeal and good comedy relief, plus smooth continuity and the fine direction of John S. Robertson.

Smith, a derelict, joins the navy and becomes known as "Bilge Smith." The fleet anchors in a small port. Bilge accidentally becomes acquainted with Connie Martin, village dressmaker who has never had a sweetheart and she takes his love-making seriously. Bilge goes away promising to return. Connie has a ship her father left her, salvaged and makes it into a tea-room. The fleet returns and to get Bilge there, she invites all the Smiths. Bilge does not even remember her at first, but seeing she has fallen for him, makes love and even proposes. When he finds out she owns the ship he leaves saying he won't live off a rich woman. Connie, at New Year's, writes to him saying she is again poor. Believing her in want, Bilge hurries home, and learning she still has the ship believes he has been tricked. Finally she haltingly tells him they will always be poor together as she has put her ship in trust for her first baby provided his last name is Smith.

"The Circle"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Offers Adaptation of Clever and High Class Drawing-Room Stage Comedy

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

A difficult task was faced by Frank Borzage in transfering to the screen for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "The Circle" a stage success by the clever playwright W. Somerset Maugham for here was a play of the drawing room type with very little action, depending largely on the cleverness and witty brilliancy of the lines.

In addition to this, the story is based on a single idea revolving around just one situation. The wife of a titled Englishman elopes with her lover. Thirty years later her son's wife feels the same urge and to find out how the old love has lasted she invites the older couple to the castle. Finally she decided to take the same step but the young and easy going husband rises to the occasion, thrashes the other fellow and then settles back and resumes his rather pointless, pepless and dignified existence.

Mr. Borzage has kept this story on the plane of a high class comedy with the humor arising logically out of the situations, only in one or two instances is there a touch of farce and in one scene just a bit of near-slapstick where the butler while leaning over is hit by a suddenly opened door. Aided by good work on the part of the players and smooth direction, and with considerable aid from the clever subtitles, which appear to be lines from the play, the story proves to be pleasingly amusing. There is nothing boisterous but it did get quite a few laughs from the audience at the Capitol in New York.

The players fit their roles and enter thoroughly into the atmosphere of the story and Borzage has planted his characters admirably by deft, swift touches so that every one of them is unmistakeable and register strongly. It is a well-directed and well-acted picture.

"The Circle" will not appeal to those who demand action, boisterous comedy or punch. In fact the only time it gets out of its easy-going tempo is in one scene where the hero posing as the chauffeur blackens the eyes of his rival. The fact that he immediately reverts to his old self will prove disappointing to many and provides a rather pepless ending. This climax is apparently a concession to the box-office and is not entirely in keeping with the character.

With its high comedy, sophisticated and clever titles and excellent characterizations "The Circle" will probably find its greatest following among high-class patronage and first-run houses, rather than with the masses.

Length, 5,511 feet.

For generations the staid ancestral palace of the Cheneys has been without scandal. In the early nineties, Hugh Porteous, best man at Lady Catherine's wedding to Lord Clive, persuades her to elope with him. Thirty years later, Elizabeth, married to young Lord Arnold, feels the same urge to elope with Lupton, but, anxious to know how the other match turned out, she invites Lady Catherine and Hugh to the castle, believing Lord Clive will remain in London. He returns unexpectedly. His memories of Lady Catherine are shattered when he finds her a corpulent, frivolous, worldly woman, and that Hugh is an old grouch. Elizabeth is disappointed and listens to the dignified and boresome lecture by Arnold. Finding Lady Catherine in Hugh's arms, she reconsiders and does elope with Lupton. After they have gone a few miles the car stops and Arnold, who has been posing as the chauffeur, blackens Lupton's eyes and takes Elizabeth back home as if nothing has happened, and she accepts the situation.

Rin-Tin-Tin's Latest for Warner Builds up to Climax That is Whirlwind of Excitement and Thrills

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

It is a big change from the snow covered Northwest or the rock-bound and rugged sea coast, the scenes of his previous successes, to the atmosphere of the small Kentucky village in which his latest story "Below the Line" is laid, but Rin-Tin-Tin the famous Warner Brothers dog star is equally at home. Like its predecessors, this picture is one that should please all who like animals and enjoy a good melodrama.

An unusual feature of this story is the fact that this brave dog is called upon in the earlier reels to act the part of a coward, his spirit utterly broken down by neglect and brutality, and he does it just as well as the scenes which are in accordance with his own aggressive fighting nature. This dog is certainly a wonderful actor, and it is remarkable to see how he is made to cringe at the sight of a mongrel and uncomplainingly allow a little mutt to bite his tail.

Much of the earlier portion of the film is taken up in planting the atmosphere and this part moves rather slowly. It is quite a while before the melodramatic plot gets under way, but when it does the pace continually quickens, and gets faster and faster until the climax which is a regular whirlwind of action, thrills and suspense.

Of course, Rin-Tin-Tin finally gets back his old fighting spirit. This comes when his beloved master is in trouble. He gnaws the ropes that hold him, throttles the villain, makes way with his half-witted brother in a remarkable scene where after repeated attempts he succeeds in following him up a sloping tree by leaping and laboriously pushing himself up by resting on the twigs.

But the big thrills come when the heroine and hero are chased by a pack of bloodhounds through the swamp and Rin-Tin-Tin coming to their rescue stands guard and snarling and biting holds off the whole pack and finally routs them. Here is action and more action and a whale of a kick that should make the most jaded melodrama fan sit up and take notice.

The human players all give fine performances. Victor Potel is especially good as a half-wit in the scenes where he is crazed by fear but mugs rather too much at times. Charles Conklin contributes some amusing comedy as the boob deputy sheriff.

"Below the Line" is a well constructed and finely directed melodrama. While he does just as remarkable work, the dog star is not called upon to perform such improbable feats as in some of his other pictures, and the plot is much more simple. With its whirlwind climax, we consider it one of his best pictures. We thoroughly enjoyed it and believe that patrons will, too.

Story and adaptation by Charles A. Logue.
Directed by Herman Raymaker.
Length, 6053 feet.

Story

Slasher, a scientifically trained police dog, is shipped to a customer but the crate in which he is enclosed falls off the train and lands in a swamp where he remains for two or three days the victim of the elements, hunger and other animals. He is found by Jamber, who uses brutality, and his spirit is so thoroughly broken that Jamber sells him to Donald for a pittance. In kind hands he regains his strength. During church service Jamber sees a woman decked in jewelry and afterwards attacks her. He then goes to the Cass home for the church's money Donald is keeping and attacks Mrs. Cass. May, Donald's sweetheart, calls Donald and starts across the swamp for help. Slasher, scenting trouble, regains his spirit and, gnawing the rope that holds him, rushes to the house and makes short work of Jamber. Cuckoo, Jamber's half-witted brother, takes Donald's coat and giving the sheriff's bloodhounds the scene starts them after Donald and May in revenge. Slasher goes to their rescue; meeting Cuckoo, he overcomes him and reaches Donald and May as the pack arrives. He fights them off single-handed and when the sheriff's posse arrives the bloodhounds have fled.

"The Primrose Path"

Arrow Offers Melodrama Acted by Well-Known Players Which Should Please the Average Audience

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

It is a story of the path of pleasure that leads to destruction that is unfolded in the Arrow Film Corporation production offered under the appropriate title of "The Primrose Path," the term commonly applied to such a course of living.

Directed by Harry O. Hoyt, and with a cast of well-known players, including Clara Bow, Wallace MacDonald, Tom Santschi and Stuart Holmes, this picture tells the story of a young man who, failing to learn his lesson when drink caused him to permanently injure his younger brother, continued his mad course. Gambling losses led to bad checks; to save himself he aided in diamond smuggling. This eventually led to a fight in which he shot and killed a man, was sentenced to pay the penalty with his life and only saved through belated testimony that he acted in self-defense.

This melodramatic theme has been handled in such a manner that the interest is well sustained. There are some excellent comedy touches behind the scenes of the cabaret where the girl is employed and quite a few of the situations develop good punch. There is an intensely dramatic situation in the court-room where the little lame brother, the only witness to the shooting, is put on the witness stand and the hero confesses his guilt rather than have this boy whom he has wronged go through life feeling that he has sent his own brother to the chair.

Wallace MacDonald gives a good performance as the weak-willed hero who is easily led into temptation, and Clara Bow is effective as his sweetheart. Stuart Holmes and Tom Santschi in villainous roles as a crooked gambler-smuggler and his henchman are well cast, and Templer Saxe does well in a character role. Little Pat Moore is excellent as the lame boy, never once getting out of character, and Lydia Knott handles the heart-interest role of the mother well.

Altogether, "The Primrose Path," which is being offered on the independent market, should find favor with a large proportion of theatre audiences as a good program melodrama.

Story

Bruce Armstrong, weak-willed wealthy chap follows the primrose path of pleasure. In a drunken fit he lamed his little brother but even this did not reform him. Despite the love of Marilyn, a successful dancer, he gambled with her boss Canfield and losing gave bad checks. To save himself from jail he consented to aid in smuggling in diamonds. In a fight over the spoils Snead, a henchman, kills Canfield while Talbot, another henchman takes the diamonds accusing Bruce. Snead attacks Bruce who shoots and kills him. Little Jimmie is the only witness and is placed on the stand, but Bruce confesses rather than have Jimmie feel he has sent him to the chair. Talbot's conscience causes him to return and tell the truth about the diamonds and Snead's character and the district attorney aids in getting a pardon for Bruce on the ground of self-defence. Marilyn, who has stood by Bruce consents to become his wife.

"Bustin' Through"

Jack Hoxie a Vigorous Character in Lively Universal Blue Streak Western

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"Western" audiences will enjoy "Bustin' Through," Universal's latest Blue Streak Western, as thoroughly as the Jack Hoxie features which have preceded it. It tells the conventional western story of romance and crooks endeavoring to steal the cowpuncher's ranch, and embellishes it with a few lively fist fights and clever, fast riding. The chief thrill—and a good one—occurs when Hoxie's lariat snares the wagon in which the heroine is trying to control runaway horses, and stops it in the nick of time on the edge of a precipice.

Hoxie has appeared so often in Universal pictures that little new can now be said about his attractiveness as an entertainer, except that he is a consistent performer and his usual self in "Bustin' Through." Helen Lynch supports him in the role of the heroine and does good work. Alfred Allen also is good in the role of her father, and William Norton Bailey is an effective villain. The shots of the western cattle country are often striking. Hoxie is a picturesque figure on his big white horse.

Story

Jack Savage, rancher, refuses to sell his property to John Merritt, millionaire. He meets Helen Merritt and falls in love with her. Harvey Gregg, Merritt's attorney, learns there is gold on Savage's land and plans to get it himself and double-cross Merritt. Savage exposes Gregg and regains his ranch, which Gregg has won by a legal technicality, by marrying Helen. Merritt is satisfied, because it is all in the family.

THE PEP OF THE PROGRAM

NEWS AND REVIEWS OF SHORT SUBJECTS AND SERIALS

"Moonlight and Noses"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This is the first of a series of Clyde Cook comedies to be produced by Hal Roach for Pathe. It is the finest sort of burlesque and should find a universal, hearty welcome. It offers more laughs per reel than many feature comedies. Cook is an eccentric comedian of the first water and he is ably supported by Fay Wray, Tyler Brooke and Jimmie Finlayson. Stan Laurel directed. The story has to do with a professor who wants a body for experimental purposes. Cook is beguiled into getting it from the cemetery but gets a live man instead. There is no suggestion of sacrilege and nothing gruesome. One great scene is where the "corpse's" legs break through the bag as Cook is carrying him on his back. The "corpse" falls into step with Cook, who keeps turning around and complaining that he hears footsteps. Then there is a bit of the spectacular where Cook, clad in armor, wrestles on a roof with the professor, who is cleverly played by Finlayson. Another bit of fun sure to score a hit is where the professor struggles to operate on Cook, who has put on the armor. People who don't split their sides at this comedy ought to have their sanity tested.—S. S.

"Cupid's Victory"

(Universal—Comedy—Two Reels)

Wanda Wiley, the Century Comedy star, appears as a plain-jane office girl who manages to mess things up generally. The boss tries to kiss her and she wrecks his office; then in seeking to capture a frog she manages to break up nearly everything in the outer office. After hours she meets a sheik and it is love at first sight. Inviting him home she tries to make him jealous by inviting a lot of fellows. He retaliates by luring them to the window disguised as a vamp and pitching them out and then surrounding himself with chorus girls. Wanda then jumps off a building in despair but lands on a flag pole that breaks and sticks in the ground. She next tries driving an auto blindfolded, runs into the hero's car and in the smash both are thrown on a balcony where they make-up and pull the Romeo and Juliet stuff. It is out-and-out rough and tumble knockabout slapstick that while having little plot moves at a good pace. While many of the gags are of a familiar variety, they will amuse the slapstick fans, and the falls and thrill stuff are not only effective but introduce some new stunts.—C. S. S.

"Felix the Cat Trips Through Toyland"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

This Pat Sullivan cartoon shows Felix the cat on a tour of Toyland. He finds that even in Toyland are there villains. A clown steals away the pretty girl who is Felix's escort, but he manages to rescue her. The subject is well drawn and interesting.—S. S.

"By the Sea"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

This Charles Puffy comedy shows Universal's fat comedian in the role of a seaside sheik who is really a hot-dog salesman. Of course there is a pretty girl and a rival and trouble between Puffy and the rival. Finally the girl dives into the ocean and Puffy after her. Lifesavers start hoisting them out with a crane but let them fall back when a vamp attracts them. At last Puffy and the girl drop into a passing speed boat and are saved. The situations are of a familiar sort and not as clever or as numerous as in some of the earlier issues, but this reel should prove of average amusement for the "Puffy" fans.—C. S. S.

"In Deep"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

This Cameo Comedy presents Cliff Bowes, George Davis, Blanche Payson and Helen Foster. The plot is based on a wife's departure on vacation, leaving Hubby to enjoy himself, and on her unexpected return when coincidences indicate Hubby's unfaithfulness. Hubby and male friend go joy-riding and are arrested. Hubby pleads haste to bring a doctor to his sick wife and child. The cop demands to see the ill ones. The friend poses, first as wife, then as doctor. A monkey masquerades as baby. Then a girl friend is pressed into service as wife, just as wifie returns. It is good fun.—S. S.

"A Misfit Sailor"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Billy Dooley and Vera Steadman have the leads in this Christie Comedy, with Eddie Baker figuring largely in the fun. The two men are sailors competing for the attention of a fair maiden, and Baker succeeds in convincing Vera and her friends that Dooley is insane. Whenever he gets "violent" they throw a bucket of water over him. Dooley gets most violent when Baker ornaments a bit of French pastry with shaving paste and Dooley eats it. The subject ends in somewhat spectacular fashion with a chase by cops in autos after Dooley, who is driving a car within a garage and taking the garage along with him. Dooley has a good part and acts quite satisfactorily stupid. Audiences ought to roar at the burlesque.—S. S.

"On the Go"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

Sid Smith, who has the lead in the Fox Imperial Comedy, appears in the role of a mail carrier who after trudging many weary miles over city streets and up and down long stairways, reaches home determined to spend his vacation in sleeping. Wifey, however, has other plans and starts him on a hike to mother's and they then start on a trip to the mountains. Sid, with a canoe, falls out of the auto and has not only to walk but to carry the canoe. Then they make him do all the work. Finally during an awful rain he gets in a bath tub, the only dry place in the house. A flood carried this down a stream and he is rescued at the brink of the falls. The doctor pulls the familiar wheeze and recommends long walks for him. It is an amusing comedy and please the majority.—C. S. S.

"Outings for All"

(Pathe—Sportlight—One Reel)

This Grantland Rice Sportlight shows the endless variety of outings enjoyed by people of all ages and tastes, from the hunter to the city dweller spending a Sunday in the country. There are fine shots of mountain and shore scenery and much human interest stuff in views of swimmers in an outdoor pool at Banff, Canada, and children in the "ole swimming hole," at Danbury, Conn. The subject ought to please theatregoers.—S. S.

"The Lion and the Monkey"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

It's getting increasingly embarrasing, this consistent praising of Paul Terry's Aesop's Fables, but it can't be helped. The latest release is another corker, one of the best of wifie returns. It is good fun and well done. the year, due to Terry's clever gags and some exceptionally fine sketching that shows in the expressions on the faces of the animals. The farmer goes hunting and the animals kid him.—S. S.

"Paint and Powder"

Stromberg's Chadwick Picture Starring Elaine Hammerstein Booked for Eastern Premiere

Chadwick Pictures Corporation announces the premiere booking in the metropolitan territory of "Paint and Powder," the Hunt Stromberg production, personally supervised and directed by Hunt Stromberg, and starring Elaine Hammerstein in the greatest role of her career.

"Paint and Powder" will make its debut in this territory at the U. S. Theatre, Paterson, New Jersey and Pete Adams, genial manager of the U. S. Theatre is making elaborate preparations for a gala presentation of this sterling release.

Chadwick Pictures will co-operate with Mr. Adams in making the engagement one of a colorful hue and will launch an extensive exploitation campaign on their own behalf in the territory which is controlled by Merit-Arrow Productions, 729 Seventh Ave., New York City.

Big Production Continues at Paramount's West Coast Studio

THAT there will be no lull in production at the Famous Players-Lasky Hollywood studio became certain with the announcemet of a new production schedule immediately following one of the biggest production booms in the history of the organization.

The final cutting and editing of eight feature productions, within the past 10 rays, had not been completed when Hector Turnbull, supervising editor at the West Coast studio announced a new production schedule.

James Cruze will commence work this week on "The Mannequin." This is the Fannie Hurst story that won the authoress a $50,000 prize offered by Liberty Magazine.

"The Tattooed Countess," will furnish Pola Negri her next starring vehicle under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair.

Raymond Griffith is soon to commence work on another starring comedy "Stage Door Johnny," under the direction of Clarence Badger.

With Bebe Daniels starring and Neil Hamilton playing the male lead, William de Mille's next production for Paramount will be "Polly of the Ballet."

After an absence of nearly three years, the Klieg lights will shine soon on Mildred Davis (Mrs. Harold Lloyd) under the direction of Victor Fleming. "The Two Soldiers" will be the picture, and prominent in the cast will be Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

"Hasson" is the title of the next Raoul Walsh production for Paramount, and Irvin Willat will start work next on "The Enchanted Hill."

At the Paramount Hollywood laboratories six feature pictures are in the process of final cutting and editing. These are "The Vanishing American," Pola Negri's starring vehicle, "Flower of Night," Raymond Griffith's "He's a Prince," William de Mille's production "New Brooms," Sidney Olcott's "The Best People," and Irvin Willat's "The Ancient Highway."

"Lord Jim," Joseph Conrads immortal classic of the sea, which Victor Fleming is producing and which features Marmont, Shirley Mason, Noah Beery and Raymond Hatton. "Volcano," directed by William K. Howard and featuring Bebe Daniels, Ricardo Cortez, Wallace Beery, Arthur Edmund Carew and Dale Fuller are nearing the final stages of cutting.

First of Clyde Cook Comedy Series on Pathe List for Oct 4

THE first of a series of Clyde Cook comedies produced by Hal Roach, the second chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West," and a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" lead the Pathe program of short subjects for the week of October 4th, which also includes a Pathe Review, "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables" and two issues of Pathe News.

"Moonlight and Noses" is the mysterious title of Clyde Cook's initial starring vehicle in a new series of two-reelers produced by Hal Roach. Cook is unwittingly beguiled into the task of securing a corpse from the cemetery for a professor who wants the body for experimental purposes. Thus, he starts on a series of escapades beneath the moonlight that result in roars of hilarious laughter. Supporting him are Fay Wray, Tyler Brooke and Jimmie Finlayson, Stan Laurel directed.

"On the show" is the second chapter of the new Patheserial "Wild West" produced on the 101 Ranch in Oklahoma with the Miller Brothers' Wild West Show supporting the stars, Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson. This episode presents the various child characters introduced in the opening chapter as grown-ups, and the circus lot and big top provide most of the background for these two-reels. Those portraying main characters in this chapter are Eddie Phillips, Virginia Warwick, Milla Davenport, Gus Seville, George Burton and Ed Burns. Robert F. Hill directed from a scenario by J. F. Natteford.

"Outings for All" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release which presents a practically endless variety of outings participated by all ages in city, country, mountain and seaside. H. L. Hawkinson, the producer, thus shows the typical American on the road to recreation on his vacation days. This reel has appeal for every theatregoer.

Pathe Review No. 40 features a prominent Broadway star, Ann Pennington, in one of the three subjects comprising the reel. Miss Pennington appears in a dancing novelty made by Alvin V. Knechtel's "Process camera" which presents the former Follies star "Charlestoning" in multiple action. Other subjects in this issue of the Pathe Review are: "A Gem of the Jura," Pathecolor scenes of Salina-les-Bains, a favorite vacation resort, and "The Rock of Ages," revealing scenes of mining in the world's greatest quarries at Barre, Vermont.

"The Lion and the Monkey" is the new release of the Aesop's Film Fables" series, and the program is completed by "Topics of the Day" and two issues of the timely interest reel, Pathe News.

Sidney Olcott, Paramount director, excels in directing mob scenes. The picture shows him set for the filming of a scene in "The Best People," in which more than four hundred "extras" participated.

Dear Mr. Brady:

You will by now have received the daily statements of box office receipts for the showing of Black Cyclone here last week and will understand why we are so glad that a showing of this unusual feature was arranged in this theatre.

Your claims in regard to Black Cyclone are more than justified. The attendance grew steadily during the week thus proving that our patrons are not merely interested in the picture but found a refreshing change from the usual run of pictures.

It was particularly pleasing to us to find that the footage of Black Cyclone was such that we were able to present a well diversified program which included the Harry Langdon comedy (The Sea Squawk), two acts and a novelty film. Our only wish is that we might have more frequent opportunities to present pictures of this kind.

With best personal regards, I am

Very truly yours,

"Gulliver's Travels" to Be Universal Super Jewel Film

UNIVERSAL announces that a big Super Jewel production will be made of the famous book, "Gulliver's Travels," written by Jonathan Swift in 1726. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has cabled from Europe to start production. It will be a combination of gigantic sets, unheard of casts and trick photography of the most elaborate kind.

"Gulliver's Travels" is composed of four different sections. It is not yet known whether Universal will embrace all four sections in its masterpiece. These section include (1) Gulliver's visit to Lilliputia, where the inhabitants are but a few inches in height; (2) his visit to Brobdingnag, where he is thrown with giants; (3) his experiences in Laputa, an island city and fortress that floats in the air, and (4) his trip to Houyhnhnm, the realm of the intelligent horses.

Swift wrote these stories as satire of the most mordant kind. In the Lilliputian sequence he parodied the various countries of Europe. In the Brobdingnagian sequence he reduced mankind to its natural insignificance. In the Laputa sequence he ridicules philosophers. In the Houyhnhnm sequence he showed up the animal nature of human beings.

Despite their satirical vein, these four stories are marvelous adventure stories which not only appeal to grown-ups but to youngsters of all ages. The marvels which happen are realistic fairy stories, and Gulliver becomes a super-adventurer.

No idea of the cost of such a production can yet be made, but indications point to the dwarfing of such costly pictures as "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and "The Phantom of the Opera." It will be the biggest picture ever attempted by Universal.

Warners Buy "White Flannels"

The Warners have bought the screen rights to "White Flannels," from the pen of the noted short story writer, Lucian Cary. This will appear in the 1926-27 schedule. It was published in June in the Saturday Evening Post.

New Roosevelt Feature

Advices from the West Coast to Louis Weiss indicate that Lester F. Scott, Jr., has completed work on the fourth picture in the series of Eight Five Reel Rough Riding Romances.

The picture is now being cut and edited and it is expected that it will be on its way to the East in the coming week.

The cast includes, beside the featured star, such well known Western players as Jean Arthur, Charles Colby, Lee Meehan, Frederick Lee, Lew O'Connor, Lawrence Underwood, Raye Hampton, George Marion.

The picture was directed by Fred Bain. The continuity was adapted by Betty Burbridge from the story by Barr Cross.

Publics Reaction to Films Is Discussed by Sebastian

WHAT is plot? What of the audience preview? Who is the best critic of the motion picture? How are the present productions meeting the more cultivated demands of what may be termed the trained audience? Has the audience itself progressed at a faster pace than the producer? Is the present era of the motion picture still shackled to the past? What is the future of screen entertainment?

A. H. Sebastian, who is about to produce "Fifth Avenue," Arthur Stringer's epic story of New York, for release through Producers Distributing Corporation, presents some interesting and keenly analytical views on the general subject of production, and discusses a number of angles which have an important bearing on the quality of our film entertainment.

"In the final analysis," says Mr. Sebastian, "it is seen that a plot is simply a skeleton framework on which a fiction story is based, but in the planning of the story itself, or of a dramatic exposition of the story, it is imperative that a problem must be presented, and that the completed story must also include its solution. Stripped of all the accompanying wealth of incident, these two attributes are essenial, and any narrative which omits the two cardinal points will invariably fail to enlist the sympathy of an audience.

"It must be realized that there are no set principles which can be followed in the unfolding of a story—no established values which will do more than ape the mechanics of past successes.

A 'good picture' is a picture that is a success, and no man may tell why some certain production turns out to be, unexpectedly, perhaps, an especially appealing one. It is enough that a certain story will play with unusual power on the emotions of the average audience, and will furnish them with an unusual quality of entertainment or food for thought."

"There can be no saying that 'this will please an audience,' or 'this will not.' The audience is sometimes a mystery, but its judgment is supreme.

"This illustrates the value of the audience preview, which furnishes to those who have been concerned with the production of a motion picture an accurate idea of the effect of each situation on the theatre-going public. Competent critics—even those who have had no hand in the making of the picture itself—often fail to sense the effect of a story or situation on an average body of people just as a single member of the audience might also fail in the same respect. But the mass psychology is unfailing. It cannot be explained—it is based on the unconscious reaction of many minds—but its accuracy is unquestioned."

"His Buddy's Wife" Good Picture for Armistice Week, Says Wolfe

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS' feature production, "His Buddy's Wife," with its dramatic post-war theme, is meeting with the whole-hearted approval of exhibitors throughout the country as a timely photoplay to be shown during Armistice Week, beginning November 8.

Credit for this idea of showing "His Buddy's Wife" for Armistice Week goes to Nat Wolfe of the Orpheum Circuit, who has booked the picture to run that week in his State Lake Theatre in Chicago. Elaborate plans have already been formulated by Mr. Wolfe for an extensive advertising and publicity campaign on the tie-up of the film with Armistice Week.

"His Buddy's Wife" is scheduled for release the first of October, and is an adaptation from the popular T. Howard Kelly story, published in Smart Set magazine. Glenn Hunter and Edna Murphy appear in the leading roles of the production with Douglas Gilmore, Flora Finch and Marcia Harris in the support. Tom Terris directed.

Glenn Hunter plays the role of a doughboy who has returned from the war to carry out a promise made to his buddy as he lay wounded on the battlefield. In spite of himself, he falls in love with "His Buddy's Wife." Then, when the buddy he supposed dead returns the plot becomes more and more involved. The story proceeds swiftly to an intensely dramatic finish.

"His Buddy's Wife" is one of the first group of eight Associated Exhibitors' pictures for the new season.

"His Majesty, Bunker Bean"

Rollicking Warner Bros. Comedy Featuring Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore

The first print of "His Majesty Bunker Bean" to reach New York arrived early this week. The officials and home office executives of Warner Bros. then had a pre-view, within the result that they are predicting one of the biggest laugh successes of years in this rollicking Matt Moore-Dorothy Devore comedy.

"Bunker Bean" is from the successful play by Lee Wilson Dodd, founded on Harry Leon Wilson's novel. The story is one admirably adapted to Matt Moore's peculiar type of genius. Timid, yet afire to conquer the world, an inconspicuous clerk is transformed into a confident, overbearing person by two fake clairvoyants who convinced the gullible boy that he is the reincarnation of an ancient Egyptian king. Blinded by this illusion, Bunker Bean becomes the pivot of a continuous stream of absurdly funny incidents and an intriguing romance.

"The Fighting Edge"

Warner Bros. Picture Will Co-Feature Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller

"The Fighting Edge," on which Warner Bros. have started production work, will be the first picture co-featuring Kenneth Harlan and Patsy Ruth Miller.

It is understood to be the plan of the Warners to make a team of these two, and the combination is destined, it is believed, to become as popular as that of Marie Prevost and Monte Blue, and Irene Rich and Huntly Gordon.

A special series of stories for their use is now being considered by Jack Warner and Bennie Zeidman, in charge of production at the Warner studios.

"The Fighting Edge" is from William McLeod Raine's popular novel, adapted for the screen by E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Jack Wagner.

The complete cast for "The Fighting Edge" is: Kenneth Harlan, Patsy Ruth Miller, Gayne Whitman, Charles Conklin, Pat Hartigan, Eugene Palette and Lew Harvey.

King Vidor Begins "LaBoheme"

Actual shooting of "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish, has been started at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios under the direction of King Vidor.

The first scenes are those taking place in the Latin Quarter of Paris, the poorest section of Montmartre, for which elaborate sets authentically reproducing the Bohemian atmosphere of this section of Paris have been constructed. Big things are expected of this film by executives of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

John Gilbert will play opposite the star in this big production, and has been cast as Rodolphe. Renee Adoree appears as the vivacious Musetta, and Roy D'Arcy and Karl Dane also have roles in this picture.

The most recent addition to the cast is Edward Everett Horton, who has just been signed to play the role of Colline.

Director Robert Z. Leonard rehearsing Pauline Starke in a scene in "A Little Bit of Broadway," in which Lilyan Tashman gets all wet. Charles Ray is featured in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production with Miss Starke and Miss Tashman.

Edmund Lowe Wins Role in Glyn's "The Only Thing"

EDMUND LOWE has been chosen to play the leading male role in Elinor Glyn's production of "The Only Thing."

This ends the extended search which Madame Glyn has been making to find the ideal American to depict the role of Van Courtland in her coming picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Tests have been made of dozens of leading men, with Lowe winning out by being Madame Glyn's exact idea of the ideal American.

"I feel he is one of the greatest heroes I have ever created," says Madame Glyn. "Edmund Lowe suggests strong American manhood. He is charming and handsome and is the living personification of the man in my story."

"The Only Thing" is an original story written by Madame Glyn directly for the screen. It will mark her venture into a new field for she is to direct the production. She has also written the continuity.

Now that the leading man has been selected the balance of the cast will be engaged and production will start within the next two weeks.

Lowe has been borrowed from the Fox Film Company, where he is under contract.

Weiss Brothers Have Nine Features Ready for Release

WITH the arrival in New York this week of Action Galore, Weiss Brothers Artclass Pictures have nine releases belonging to the 1925-26 program ready for release.

These nine are as follows: In the series of Five Reel Rough Riding Romances, featuring Buddy Roosevelt, they have "Reckless Courage," "The Galloping Jinx," "Action Galore." There are five more of these to come.

In the Buffalo Bill, Jr., series of eight 5-reel Thundrebolt Thrillers "Quicker 'NLightnin," "The Desert Demon" and "The Saddle Cyclone."

In the Wally Wales series of eight Five Reel Acrobatic Stunt Thrillers there are two ready, namely "Tearin' Loose" and "The Hurricane Horseman."

The first of the eight Western gems featuring Leo Maloney with Bullet, the Wonder Dog, and Senator, the Human Horse, "Win, Lose Or Draw" and which Weiss Brothers are distributing under the Clarion Photoplays trademark is also ready.

The fourth Buddy Roosevelt feature is ready to start and the third Wally Wales feature will be completed this week.

Leo Maloney is making active preparations to start the second of his series this week while stories have been completed on four more and preliminary work done on the following two.

With the two production schedules going along as they are, Louis Weiss expects that his whole years' product will be in his office by the end of November.

Editing "Some Pun'kins"

"Some Pun'kins," the first of the Charles Ray series for the Chadwick Pictures Corporation, is now ready for release. Editing on this production has just been completed and officials of the Chadwick organization are convinced that it is one of the best rural comedies ever turned out by this popular young star.

Pathe Has Reissue Rights To Four Chaplin Pictures

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has become a Pathe comedian. Under the terms of a contract just closed between Elmer R pearson, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Mr. Chaplin, Pathe has paid $500,000 for the privilege of bringing back to the screen the famous comedian in "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside."

The payment of $500,000 for the re-issue rights to these four pictures marks a notable transaction in the financial history of the motion picture business, the amount paid by Pathe for the re-issue rights being equivalent to the purchase price paid by First National for the original issue of these comedies together with four others under its famous $1,000,000 contract with Charlie Chaplin in 1917.

The four comedies just acquired by Pathe represent a classic group in the notable career of Mr. Chaplin on the screen. Many consider "Shoulder Arms" the greatest comedy ever made by the star. The other three subjects are equally remembered for their high laugh-power.

"It is not at all necessary to indulge in a long dissertation upon Charlie Chaplin and his magic drawing power at the box-office," said Mr. Pearson in discussing the contract. "Past and present results amply attest volumes as to the merits of these exceptional comedy subjects. We are positively sure that nowhere can the exhibitor secure more box-office certainty than in these Chaplin re-issues.

"Chaplin's professional and business career is probably the most remarkable of any man alive today. His pictures have undoubtedly played to over 500,000 bookings, and I don't believe anybody ever heard of any booking that was not a success. His pictures have undoubtedly played to eight to ten billion admissions and I don't suppose anybody ever heard a customer kick about the entertainment. Several exchange systems have distributed his pictures and they have all made expectations."

Praise Red Seal Output

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal, is in receipt of a letter from Finkelstein and Ruben, Minneapolis, praising the entire Red Seal output. "As a whole," says the letter, "your material is fine, while your Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes and Out-of-the-Inkwell subjects are marvelous. The entire Red Seal product has been booked for the F. and R. Theatrical Enterprises.

"The Footloose Widow"

Having filmed the successful serial story, "His Jazz Bride," Warner Bros. have bought the screen rights to "The Footloose Widow," by Beatrice Burton, and will make it into a picture on their next season's schedule.

West Coast Theatres Get Buster Brown Comedies

ANOTHER big theatre circuit has signed up for the presentation of the Buster Brown-Century Comedies, it is reported by H. M. Herbel, sales manager for Century. West Coast Theatres, Inc., one of the largest circuits on the Pacific Coast, has completed arrangements with D. S. Mitchell, Universal exchange manager in Los Angeles, for showing the Buster Brown Comedies in all of the big West Coast theatres in and around Los Angeles.

The Buster Brown Comedies are a new venture by the Century Film Corporation. Julius and Abe Stern, officials of the comedy producing company, obtained full screen rights from R. F. Outcault, the noted cartoonist, for the reproduction of his famous newspaper comic strip character, Buster Brown. The Century comedies are not cartoon comedies, however, but are being made with regular sceen players.

Little Arthur Trimble is playing the role of Buster and Pete, the dog, is Tige. Doreen Turner is Mary Jane.

The first two comedies of the series of twelve Buster Browns to be put out by Century during the coming twelve months have been pre-released in various key centers and are meeting with extraordinary success, Herbel reports. Contracts recently were signed for their showing by the Southern Enterprise houses in the South, and by the Ascher Brothers' houses in the Chicago territory.

New Cast for "How to Train a Wife"

Associated Exhibitors announce this week a change in the cast previously named for the Lewis H. Moomaw feature picture "How To Train a Wife," which is now in production on the Pacific Coast. The new cast for the Moomaw production offers the names of Virginia Valli and Eugene O'Brien, with an unusually strong supporting staff of players including Jean Hersholt, George Nichols, Boris Karloff, Bryant Washburn, and Cissy Fitzgerald.

Fox Borrows Warner Star

Warner Bros., through a special arrangement, have agreed to lend Matt Moore to the Fox Film Corporation, to play the leading role in the screen version of "The First Year." The part calls for the whimsical sort of performance Moore knows so well how to put over and the Fox organization selected him as the one player who fits it perfectly.

Beth Brown Made Editor

Beth Brown has been appointed editor-in-chief of the Out-of-the-Inkwell Studio and Red Seal productions, according to an announcement by Max Fleischer and E. M. Fadman. Miss Brown will assist Mr. Fleischer in writing scenarios and editing and titling the entire Inkwell product for Red Seal release.

Ten Releases, One Gold Bond, On F. B. O. List for October

THE increased activity on the F. B. O. lot in Hollywood during the entire summer, resulted in an unusually heavy program for the month of October. The distributing company boasts no less than 10 releases on its chart for the coming month, four of which are feature productions and the remaining six short subjects.

"The Keeper of the Bees," a Gold Bond picture, heads the imposing list of features. "The Keeper of the Bees" was one of the novels written by Gene Stratton-Porter before her tragic death in California last summer. The story ran serially in McCall's Magazine, and was published in book form early in September. James Leo Meehan, Mrs. Porter's son-in-law, transferred the story to the screen. The cast is headed by Robert Frazer in the title role, with Gene Stratton, Clara Bow, Alyce Mills, Martha Mattox and Josef Swickard in support. "The Keeper of the Bees" is F. B. O.'s most imposing contribution to the 1925-26 season, inasmuch as it is estimated that the story will have been read by over 10,000,000 persons before it reaches the screen. "The Keeper of the Bees" will be distributed on October 18th.

The sixth Thomson production, tentatively titled "All Around the Frying Pan," based on the well known magazine story by Frank Richardson Pierce, will also be distributed on October 18th. The famous Alturas Rodeo, a cowboy round-up of national reputation in Northern California, was filmed in its entirety by the Thomson troupe for the production. Fred and his horse Silver King were an integral part of the actual rodeo.

The next Texas Ranger production starring Bob Custer, as yet untitled, will also be distributed on October 18th. This is the first Independent Pictures Corporation production under Custer's new contract with the distributing company.

Maurice B. ("Lefty") Flynn, under the direction of Harry Garson, will complete "Heads Up," a comedy melodrama laid in South America, in time for release on October 25th. The story comes from the pen of A. E. Barranger.

The short subjects are headed by "Three Wise Goofs," the second Standard Fat Men Comedy, in which "Fatty" Karr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross, the three fattest men on the screen, are featured. "Three Wise Goofs" comes from the Joe Rock Studios, and will be distributed on October 4th.

The same day will see the distribution of a one-reel novelty from the Bray Studios, as yet untitled, featuring Dinky Doodle. Walter Lantz, the famous cartoonist, acts in conjunction with the cartoon characters he creates.

"Or What Have You?," the third episode of "The Adventures of Mazie," starring Alberta Vaughn, will be released on October 11th. "The Adventures of Mazie" come from the pen of Nell Martin and originally appeared in Top Notch Magazine. Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke support Miss Vaughn, while Ralph Ceder is directing.

A Blue Ribbon comedy, as yet untitled, starring Alice Ardell, Joe Rock's latest Paris importation, will be shown to exhibitors on October 18th.

Books Warners' Product

The Temple Theatre is to be the Toledo home of Warner Bros.' Classics of the Screen during the coming season. In an announcement of his plans, Jack O'Connell.

New Buddy Roosevelt Feature

Word from Lester Scott, Jr., of Action Pictures, Inc., to Louis Weiss, announcing the cast and the start of production on "Thundering Through," the fourth in the series of eight five reel Rough Riding Romances, featuring Buddy Roosevelt.

With the featured star are a number of well known Western players. They are in part, Jean Arthur, Charles Colby, Lee Meehan, Frederick Lee, Lew O'Connor, Lawrence Underwood, Raye Hampton and George Marion.

The picture will be directed by Fred Bain from the continuity by Betty Burbridge, which was adapted from Barr Cross' story.

Beauty Pageant Winner Has Paramount Contract

FAY LAMPHIER, winner of the 1925 Beauty Pageant at Atlantic City, will be one of the most famous beauties in America within a year, it was predicted by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. A week ago she was practically unknown, merely one of the entrants in the annual beauty contest at the famous seashore resort. On September 12 the judges of the beauty contest awarded her the coveted "Miss America" as the most beautiful girl in the United States. Now fame and fortune await her in a movie career that is assured by a long term contract for her appearance in Paramount pictures beginning with "The American Venus," in which she will have the title role.

Jesse L. Lasky in a statement following the signing of the contract said that it would be only a year before Fay Lamphier was known to the public as well as are Betty Bronson and Esther Ralston, who only a year ago were unknown.

Mr. Lasky's enthusiasm for Fay Lamphier led him to say:

"She will be seen on the screen as Miss Alabama in competition with Miss Centerville, played by the beautiful Esther Ralston. Associated with them in the playing of a dramatic story by Townsend Martin will be a cast consisting of Larry Gray, who is playing opposite Gloria Swanson in 'Stage Struck'; Raymond Hatton, featured in many a celluloid drama; Ford Sterling, who was a mild sensation in 'The Trouble With Wives'; Kenneth MacKenna, seen recently in 'The Crowded Hour'; Olive Anne Alcorn, who will be seen as Miss Greentown, and Louise Brooks of the Ziegfeld Follies, who will appear as Miss Bayport.

"In every city where a Paramount exchange is located a reproduction of the American Venus trophy will be awarded in a local competition of beautiful girls, to be known as the American Venus of Chicago, the American Venus of Omaha and so on."

Camera Work to Start on a New Chadwick Picture

CHADWICK'S newly acquired and re-equipped Hollywood studios are alive with action, I. E. Chadwick having recently gone out from the East to press the button setting in motion his extensive plan of production for the coming year.

"The Court of Luxemberg" has just gone into preparation with an all star cast, George Walsh playing the title role. This will be one of the lavish and spectacular productions of the year, tinged with a spicy European atmosphere.

The scenario is taken from the entertaining book of the same name by Franz Lehar, the celebrated Viennese author and writer of musical comedies and close personal friend of Arthur Gregor, who collaborated with John Netteford in writing the screen version of the book.

"The Court of Luxemburg" will be one more triumph added to the Chadwick list this year, the others being "The Wizard of Oz," "American Pluck," "Blue Blood," "Paint and Powder," "The Unchastened Woman," "The Perfect Clown," "Some Punkins," "Sweet Adeline," and "The Prince of Broadway."

"The Prince of Broadway" just received at Chadwick's New York office for an early release is literally a knockout. It brings before the screen as actors some of the best known prize fighters in America and is consequently a picture full of punches from such fighters as Jim Jeffries, Frank Genaro, Billy Papke, Tommy Ryan, Ad Wolgast and others familiar to ring fans.

"LIKE FATHER LIKE DAUGHTER"

Otis Harlan and his talented daughter, Marian, leading lady of "Shoes," the first O. Henry film to be made by Fox. Both draw pay checks from the William Fox studios, where they are popular members of the Hollywood artists' colony. Papa Harlan has important comedy roles in "Lightnin'" and "Thunder Mountain."

New York Cities Like "The Coming of Amos"

UPON its New York premiere at the Colony Theatre last week, Cecil B. De Mille's presentation of Rod La Rocque in the Paul Sloane production, "The Coming of Amos," registered a 100 per cent. hit with the newspaper critics.

Without a dissenting voice the New York City press lauded the production as an excellent piece of entertainment and predicted a great success for the offering. Rod La Rocque as the star received unstinted praise, while the director, supporting cast, scenarist, editors and the title writer all came in for a generous share of the critics' laudation.

The general tenor is contained in the following excerpts:

"'The Coming of Amos' has the earmarks of being a box office wow. It is raving melo-drama, wild carnivals and hectic action."—N. Y. Daily Mirror.

"'The Coming of Amos,' we are sure, will mean the bounding of the fans to the box office of the Colony."—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

"Mr. La Rocque is capital as Amos. This is an unusually jolly picture, with capable acting by all the cast. It is beautifully photographed."—N. Y. Times.

"Direction—careful. Sets—splendiferous. Acting—fine. Effect—just swell."—N. Y. Daily News.

"It is full of carnivals, gorgeous settings and Continental sophistication. The net result is a picture which will afford entertainment for most movie fans."—N. Y. World.

F. B. O. Productions to Be Strong in "Sales Points"

NO F. B. O. production on the gigantic sixty-four unit program of that organization will be without its definite "sales points." The "sales point," so called, is today one of the most vital factors in the manufacture of entertainment for the screen, in the opinion of J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O., now visiting the west coast studios for a period of six weeks.

While the "sales point" is more or less of a mystery to the average theatregoer, it is none the less a very vital segment in the backbone of the entire motion picture industry. Minus the "sales point" the business would wither away like fallen leaves drifting on the autumn winds, states the executive.

"Every motion picture made must be sold twice," commented Mr. Schnitzer by way of explanation. "First it must be sold to the exhibitors; then the exhibitor must sell it intensively to his public. Few pictures sell themselves. That is why the average production must have its sales points—which may be likened to a handle of which the salesman or advertising expert may take hold."

F. B. O. is concentrating its attention more than ever on sales points. "Drusilla with a Million," already recognized as a box office hit, has the best of all sales points, the proof of which has already been established by definite performance in many of the nation's largest theatres. Its warmth of human interest, its dramatic content, its superlative charm and showmanly development all combine to make it saleable. Then, too, it enjoyed a week of record-making business at the great Capitol Theatre in New York—a most effective "sales point."

Beautiful Rayart Press Book

Dorothy Cleveland Produces De Luxe Publication on "The Cyclone Cavalier"

"Dot" Cleveland, author of the press books for Rayart Pictures and director of advertising and publicity for that firm, has issued a press book de luxe on "The Cyclone Cavalier" which should prove a money-making aid to every exhibitor who takes advantage of the ideas therein set forth.

In size 11 by 14, in regulation book form, this press sheet on "The Cyclone Cavalier," the new Harry J. Brown comedy-drama produced by Harry J. Brown for Rayart release and starring Reed Howes, offers sixteen pages of practical, workable ideas, set forth in snappy, up-to-the-minute phraseology.

A page of "prepared ads"—2-1 column and 2-2 column, drawn by Harold Lund, are unusually compelling in drawing and make-up. A two column cartoon drawn by Rayart's cartoonist, Jimmy Ferrick, offers highlights of the production in a style especially designed for appeal to the editor of motion picture newspaper pages.

A two column cut made from the press book cover drawn by Mr. Lund makes an excellent suggestion for a mailing card or for the cover of the exhibitor's theatre program. A special four-color panel by Kraus suggested for lobby frames shows Reed Howes in four distinctive poses. An original two column cartoon shows Harry Brown, producer of the Reed Howes pictures, surrounded by the different stages in the eventful career which led to his making pictures.

There are three pages of current reviews of the sort, that the exhibitor should find no difficulty in finding space for in the publicity pages of his local papers.

In addition there are peppy catch lines, gingerly paragraphs for programs and arresting teaser ads guaranteed to arouse interest in the picture.

A welcome and refreshing novelty is introduced in the art borders which decorate half a dozen of the pages.

Raoul Walsh, producer of "The Wanderer" for Paramount, with one of the lambs born during the picture's production. Featured players in the cast of "The Wanderer" are Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Wallace Beery, Tyrone Power, Kathlyn Williams and Greta Nissen.

Dorothy Revier's Cast

Tom Ricketts has been added to the cast of Dorothy Revier's next Waldorf production, which Columbia Pictures is to release, according to Vice President Harry Cohn. Antonio Gaudia has been selected to direct this feature which is an adaptation of a story by Harold Shumate.

Schuessler Succeeds Datig

Fred Schuessler has been appointed casting director at Universal City to succeed Fred Datig, who resigned last week, according to an announcement from the big Universal studio plant.

Schuessler has been in the employ of Universal for three years as assistant to Datig, and is regarded as one of the most capable casting directors in Hollywood.

Gaylord Lloyd to Resume Acting

Unable to resist the lure of the Kliegs, Gaylord Lloyd, brother of Harold, is retiring as casting director of the Lloyd Corporation, according to an announcement by production manager John L. Murphy, and will resume his screen career immediately. Gaylord is to remain with his brother's company, and will specialize in character work, in which he gained repute prior to his accepting the berth as casting director of Lloyd Corporation two years ago.

Nora Ely, it is announced, will succeed Mr. Lloyd in the corporation's casting department.

Lars Hansen Signs With M-G-M

Lars Hansen, one of the most popular motion picture stars of Sweden and continental Europe, has been signed on a long term contract by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, according to an announcement by Louis B. Mayer, head of the organization

Hansen sails from Stockholm on September 4 on the liner Drottingholm. The new star, a discovery of Mayer's, has been connected with the Svenska Film Industre of Stockholm, and has appeared in some of its largest features.

Prominent Newspaper Editors To Collaborate on "U" Film

TEN members of the National Editorial Association will write a ten episode chapter play for Universal according to announcement of Carl Laemmle, president of the company.

The offer was made at the recent convention at Richmond, Va., at which time representatives of Mr. Laemmle outlined the plan to the delegates.

Five thousand dollars will be paid for the story. From the synopses submitted for consideration the ten best will be chosen. The one best will be used and the writers of the other nine will be asked to outline in detail the action of one of the chapters of the movie serial. Each of the ten winners will receive $500 for his synopsis.

The writing of the continuity or scene by scene detail will be done by Universal's scenario staff.

The brief synopsis to be submitted in the contest must be of not more than 500 words. Concerning the type of story there is but one requisite—it must move about an airplane mystery with sky marauders having their part. The picture must be exciting and have plenty of thrills suitable for a serial.

After the original choice has been made the ten who write the episodes have no restraint on words. Every action and every detail must be outlined fully.

Six months will be given to prepare the story and the picture will be produced next year. As the 1926 National Editorial Association convention is at Los Angeles an opportunity will be given the editors to see their story being filmed and they will also be given an opportunity to appear in it.

The contest is now open. The first synopses are to be in the hands of the contest managers by December 1, 1925. The ten winners will be announced January 1, 1926. The ten winners will be given from then until April 1 to write their detailed episodes.

Fox's "Wages For Wives" Cast Has Many Prominent Players

JUST when it was believed the peak of exceptional casts had been reached in the William Fox productions for the new season, along comes the announcement of the players Frank Borzage has selected for "Wages for Wives," with an even greater aggregation of distinguished actors and actresses of the screen. Production on this latest of the Fox Supreme Attractions for 1925-26 has just started at the West Coast Studios. "Wages for Wives" is based on the John Golden stage success, "Chicken Feed," by Guy Bolton.

Fresh from his success in directing "Lazybones," Mr. Borzage is confidently expected to produce another masterpiece.

The cast he has selected includes many of the topnotchers of filmdom. Because of her beauty and histrionic ability, Jacqueline Logan has been given the role of Neil Bailey, the heroine. Creighton Hale, an actor of splendid reputation, will portray the role of Danny Kester, the leading male part.

Earle Foxe, star of the Van Bibber series of Comedies, has been borrowed for this production for the role of Hughie Logan. His sterling performances in the adaptations of the Richard Harding Davis stories presages excellent support in this interesting comedy drama.

One of the screen's most accomplished character actresses, Zasu Pitts, has been given the role of Luella Logan, which she can be depended upon to make effective in the shadings of humor and pathos.

Another beauty in the supporting company, and a star of several productions, is the charming Margaret Livingston, who appears in one of the leading roles in "Havoc." Others in the supporting company are David Butler, also in "Havoc," Dan Mason, Claude Gillingwater, Margaret Seddon and Tom Ricketts.

"A Little Bit of Broadway"

Robert Z. Leonard has returned to the Culver City studios with the cast of "A Little Bit of Broadway" from a ranch in Southern California, where exteriors have been made for this new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production. Charles Ray and Pauline Starke are featured with Lilyan Tashman in this Richard Connell story.

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA

The distinguished director, has just been signed by A. H. Sebastian to direct "Fifth Avenue," first of this season's Belasco productions to be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

"THE FRESHMAN," Harold Lloyd's new Pathe feature comedy opened its New York run at the B. S. Moss Colony Theatre on Broadway, Sunday September 20th, with a running schedule calling for ten showings a day to meet popular demand.

The Moss management has surrounded the Lloyd feature with an elaborate prologue entitled "Campus Capers," produced under the personal supervision of George Choos and featuring Jack Broderick and Betty Felsen, Hill's Blue Devils Orchestra, Seamon Krevoff. Five members of the "University of Southern California Trojans" —Clark, Eaton, Scott, Shutts and Magee— who appear in the Lloyd picture in the scenes staged at the University, and the famous Colony Ensemble. This merry musical melange was staged by Harry Shaw. Lighting effects are by J. De Rosa, Scenic art is by Nat Eastman, costumes were provided by Textile Mills, Hilton Company and Tams. Jack Glogan arranged the music.

In keeping the character of the picture the opening overture is "Jolly Fellows" by Suppe, rendered by the Colony Melody Masters, with Dr. Edward Kilenyi and E. Chas. Egget as associate directors. John Priest is at the Colony Grand Organ Console.

The ten showings of "The Freshman" were scheduled as follows: Opening show in the morning at 10:35, 11:50 A. M., 1:05 P. M., 2:50, 4:35, 5:50, 7:05, 8:50, 10:35, with the last nightly showing at 11:50 P. M. The prologue is given four times daily at 2:30, 4:15, 8:30 and at 10:15 P. M.

The lobby was decked with extensive displays of paintings of Lloyd in character as "The Freshman" and punch scenes from the Pathe picture. As a ballyhoo, a sightseeing bus was employed. Three large cutouts were perched on the roof and colorful streamers rung along the sides. With a full crew of "college boys," garbed as Lloyd appears in the campus scenes of the picture, cheering through megaphones and waving Harold Lloyd flags, the bus was driven practically all over the city.

A special painted sign of twenty-four sheet size was placed high on the front of the Colony some time previous to the opening of the picture, and an extensive poster campaign was worked out with good displays in the most advantageous locations throughout the city and vicinity. Extensive advertising was carried in the daily newspapers.

"The Freshman" is playing an indefinite run at the Colony and is expected to continue for some time at this Moss theatre.

Coincidently with the New York premiere of "The Freshman" theatres throughout the country opened with the same Lloyd attraction as September 20 was the official national release date determined upon by the Harold Lloyd Corporation and Pathe, the distributor of Lloyd's greatest success.

Picks Prominent Players

Larry Semon Names Cast of Well-known Screen Folk Who Will Support Him in "Stop, Look and Listen," His First Pathe Feature Comedy

Larry Semon announces a list of prominent screen players who will compose his supporting cast in "Stop, Look and Listen," his first Pathe feature picture now in the making. Dorothy Dwan is cast as leading lady and others engaged include Mary Carr, Lionel Belmore, "Babe" Hardy, William Gillespie, Curtis McHenry, Frederick Kovert, B. F. Blinn, Joseph Swickard, and Bull Montana.

Dorothy Dwan as leading lady opposite the famous comedian has already been announced. Mary Carr is one of the best known screen mothers and is always remembered for her classic mother role delineation in "Over the Hill." Lionel Belmore is a popular character actor often seen in feature casts. Joseph Swickard is another character actor of reputation. He will essay the role of an old actor in "Stop, Look and Listen." Bull Montana has supported many leading stars in features and always stands out by his own individual style of portrayal. "Babe" Hardy is a clever comedian who has appeared in series of his own as well as in prominent supporting roles.

New Lubitsch and Chaplin Get Underway at Warners

WORK on "Lady Windermere's Fan," the Oscar Wilde classic which is to be Ernst Lubitsch's next production for Warner Bros., was started this week at the Warner West Coast Studios. The principal roles are taken by Irene Rich, Ronald Colman (by arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn), May McAvoy, Edward Martindel, Bert Lytell, Helen Dunbar and Carrie Daumery. The scenario was by Julien Josephson.

Uncommon interest attaches to the production of this drama, partly because of the world wide popularity which Wilde's masterpiece has enjoyed on the stage through many years, and partly because of the insistent refusal of the executors of the Wilde estate for a long time to permit a picturization. It was only when assured that this work would be in the hands of Ernst Lubitsch that they yielded to importunities and grante that they yielded to importunities and granted the screen rights to Warner Bros.

During the last week Charles ("Chuck") Reisner, whose popularity as an actor is rivalled by his success as a director, started work on the production of Syd Chaplin's new picture, "Nightie Night Nurse," at the Warner studios.

Other advices from the west coast are to the effect that Julien Josephson is writing the scenario and Louis Milestone has been selected to direct Gilette Burgess' "The Cave Man," Matt Moore's next picture for the Warners.

"The Night Cry" will be the next starring vehicle for Rin-Tin-Tin, the celebrated Warner wonder dog. Both story and scenario are by Phil Klein and Edward Meagher, and the tale is said to be one that offers "Rinty" unusual opportunities. The director is yet to be assigned.

Big Warner Bookings

John H. Young, Warner Bros., branch manager in Detroit, has recently closed 100 per cent contracts for the showing of Warner product during 1925-26 with a number of important theatres in Michigan.

Among the exhibitors booking the full output of this company are Lew and Ben Cohen, for their Colonial Theatre, Detroit; Lester Matt, Flint; Glenn Cross, Battle Creek; George Wilbur, Pontiac, and the owners of the Butterfield theatres in Lansing, Port Huron and Grand Rapids.

Thalberg Working on Big Production Program for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER announce an unusual program of big productions to be made under the supervision of Irving G. Thalberg. This enlarged Fall schedule is now being laid out by Mr. Thalberg and will be one of the most pretentious producing activities ever launched at the Culver City plant.

This definite announcement was made by Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, just previous to his departure for the East.

One of the first pictures to go into production under the supervision of Mr. Thalberg will be the next Marion Davies Cosmopolitan vehicle. This, it is announced by Thalberg, will be "Beverly of Graustark," the famous George Barr McCutcheon story. By courtesy of Joseph M. Schenck the production will be made under the direction of Syd Franklin.

Another Thalberg unit soon to start work will be Lon Chaney in "The Mocking Bird," an original story by Tod Browning to be directed by Browning. The script, being prepared by Waldemar Young, is now nearing completion. The Chaney-Browning combination, so successful in "The Unholy Three," a picture that is now creating an admirable record the country over, is expected to result in another big triumph.

Upon completion of "La Boheme," Thalberg announces that King Vidor will direct an elaborate picturization of "Bardelys the Magnificent," by Rafael Sabatini, author of "Scaramouche" and "The Sea Hawk." This will be done in color and will star John Gilbert.

Another big M-G-M production soon to be produced by Thalberg will be "The Temptress," by Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen." This will be a Cosmopolitan production.

Among the pictures now being produced for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by the young executive is "Ben Hur," for which the chariot race scenes will be staged next week under the direction of Fred Niblo. Ten thousand extras will be used in these scenes. Other pictures now in production include Lillian Gish in "La Boheme," Marshall Neilan's "The Great Love," and "The Merry Widow," starring Mae Murray and John Gilbert.

Among the recent pictures which have been produced under Thalberg's executive eye have been a great number of prominent Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hits. These include "The Unholy Three," Lon Chaney's great success, "The Midshipman," Ramon Novarro's initial starring vehicle for M-G-M with many scenes made in co-operation with the United States Navy Department, Monta Bell's "Lights of Old Broadway," starring Marion Davies, and Victor Seastrom's "The Tower of Lies," starring Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney. The unusual success of these pictures forecasts what may be expected in the way of real box-office productions to be produced under the supervision of Irving G. Thalberg.

"Life's Greatest Thrills" Astonishes Speed Pilots

TWO score of famous men, whose names are household words throughout the world and whose every hour is filled with thrills, composed a private audience in the Enlisted Men's Club at Mitchell Field, Long Island, that witnessed a showing of International Newsreel's sensational motion picture, "Life's Greatest Thrills." The men, all of them aviators and most of them speed pilots, had been invited to see the picture by Lieut. John A. Bockhorst, International Newsreel's intrepid aviator cameraman. The showing was made possible by Lieut.-Col. Benjamin D. Foulois, commanding officer at Mitchel Field and the pioneer pilot of the U. S. Army Air Service.

During the course of the showing of the pictures the daredevils of the air sat spellbound as thrill after thrill was revealed to them. From time to time there were exclamations of astonishment, particularly at the remarkable automobile and airplane scenes that are a part of this sensational picture.

At the conclusion of the showing, Lieut.-Col. Foulois said:

"'Life's Greatest Thrills' has caught the real thrill aflying and also given us a new idea of the important part played by newsreel photographers in recording the important events for posterity. International Newsreel is certainly to be congratulated for their enterprise in giving this picture to the public."

Lieut. A. J. Williams, who on last Friday broke the world's speed record when he flew 302 miles in an hour, the greatest speed at which any human being ever traveled, declared:

"They didn't misname that picture when they called it 'Life's Greatest Thrills.' Believe me, it's the greatest picture I've seen."

Lieut. Cyrus Bettis, pursuit pilot from Selfridge Field, Detroit, and winner of last year's Mitchel Trophy Race, xeclaimed:

"By golly, that's great! I'd like to see it all over again."

"There's more real excitement in 'Life's Greatest Thrills' than the average man sees in a lifetime. I know it must be as interesting to the general public as it is to the pilots who have figured in many events similar to those shown. It has certainly given me a great kick."

At the conclusion of the showing, which was to officers only, Lieut.-Col. Foulois made a special request that another showing be arranged so that all of the enlisted men at Mitchel Field would be afforded an opportunity of seeing the picture. The request, of course, was complied with by International Newsreel, and the enlisted men were equally enthusiastic as were the officers.

Bern Cutting "Flower of Night"

Pola Negri's latest Paramount production, "Flower of Night," is in the process of cutting and editing under the supervision of Paul Bern, director.

Willis Goldbeck, who adapted the story for the screen from the original by Joseph Hergesheimer, is titling the picture.

Speeding Comedy Pictures

Rock Busy on Four Productions for F. B. O. Release

Joe Rock, the comedy producer who is centering all his activities in the making of Blue Ribbon and Standard Comedies for F. B. O. is busily at work on four productions at the present time.

In the cutting room is the third Standard Comedy, titled "A Ton of Fun in a Beauty Parlor" in which appear "Kewpie" Ross, "Tiny" Alexander and "Fatty" Karr which Jimmy Davis has recently finished directing.

Also in the cutting room is the second Blue Ribbon comedy titled "Salute" in which appears Alice Ardell, the screen commediene "find" together with Lee Moran, famous comedian.

At Universal City, Rock is actually shooting the production featuring his three heavyweight comedians, "Tiny" Alexander, "Kewpie" Rose and "Fatty" Karr in a comedy of golf which will be titled "A Ton of Fun—on the Links." Jimmy Davis is directing this third Standard Comedy.

Walter Lantz of the Bray Studios has completed the scenario of the second of the "Unnatural History" comedies with cartoon combination, titled "How the Bear Got His Short Tail."

The exerior scenes for this picture will be made at the Bray managerie located at Buck Hill Falls and the two baby bears, Toto and Titi, will appear in this comedy together with Walter Lantz and little Charley Walters, the featured comedians.

This subject will be released by F. B. O. early in October.

"Tumbleweeds" Cast

William S. Hart Announces Players in His First United Artists Production

With production well past the meridian, William S. Hart announces the full cast of "Tumbleweeds," his first production for United Artists Corporation release, a film version of Hal G. Evart's popular novel of the same name, dealing with the opening to homestead of the Cherokee Land Strip.

William S. Hart has the role of Don Carver, and is supported by Barbara Bedford as Molly Lassiter. Others in the cast are Lucien Littlefield, J. Gordon Russell, Richard R. Neill, Jack Murphy, Lillian Leighton, Gertrude Claire, George Marion, Capt. T. E. Duncan, James Gordon, Fred Gamble, Turner Savage and Monte Collins.

Beautiful Cuban in "Mare Nostrum"

Rosita Ramirez, Cuban beauty and granddaughter of General Calixto Garcia, to whom was delivered the famous "Message to Garcia," described by Elbert Hubbard, makes her motion picture debut in Rex Ingram's production of "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea) for Metro-Goldwyn.

Miss Ramirez was born in Havana, Cuba. Her father, General Calixto Garcia Enamorado, is in the Cuban diplomatic service and Mr. Ingram met them when he was in Cuba several years ago filming "Where the Pavement Ends." At that time he noted the girl's striking beauty and told her father that when she was a few years older he would like to give her a trial in one of his pictures.

While in Paris preparing for the filming of "Mare Nostrum," Mr. Ingram was surprised to meet the General and his daughter on the Grand Boulevard. They had been in Europe for some time, as General Enamorado is now Consul General Inspector of Cuba for Europe. Mr. Ingram took a test of the young Cuban beauty and it was so successful that he cast her for the role of Pepita in "Mare Nostrum," which is being filmed abroad. Miss Ramirez is 16 years old, has dark hair and dark eyes and is five feet two inches in height. She speaks, reads and writes Spanish, English, French and German. She is an expert swimmer and horsewomen.

Educational Adds Stage

Another new stage is being erected at the Educational Studio, Los Angeles, where the Lupino Lane, Hamilton, Mermaid, Tuxedo, Juvenile and Cameo Comedies are being made for release through Educational Film Exchange, Inc.

The new stage, which will have floor space of 80x100 feet, is something unique in Los Angeles studios as it will occupy the second floor of the building. The first floor will be used as a scene dock.

Rodner Reports Success

Harold Rodner, who distributes Columbia's intimate one reelers of celebrated and interesting screen personages, Screen Snapshots, throughout the New York metropolitan district, reports that the past season was his best, but that the way his contracts are being signed on the sixth series, now ready for release, he hopes to attain about twice as many bookings in his territory as he heretofore made.

"Rocky Moon" for P. D. C.

"Rocky Moon" has been purchased by Metropolitan Pictures, Inc., and will soon reach the screen via Producers Distributing Corporation. This novel by Barrett Willoughby will take the spectator to Alaska with its ruggedness and grandeur. It will be filmed in part at the Hollywood studio, and in the natural locale called for in the story.

Dorothy Cumming, striking society type, who played principal roles in "The Manicure Girl" with Bebe Daniels, "The Coast of Folly" with Gloria Swanson and "Invisible Wounds," all-star First National, is now appearing as the Queen in "A Kiss for Cinderella," a Famous Players picture featuring Betty Bronson.

Joe Merrick "Lion-ized"

Joe Merrick, manager of the Los Angeles Educational Film Exchange, paused between closing contracts for Educational Pictures for Greater Movie Season long enough to drop in at the new Educational Studio last week to give the producing forces the glad hand.

And there Joe got the thrill of his life. He stepped into a set on which Stephen Roberts was directing Al St. John and Virginia Vance in a new Mermaid Comedy. Joe felt something rub against his knee, and then he bounced back ten feet. The "something" was a heavyweight lion. They say it was three minutes before Joe could get under way again and sell the brute the idea that 1925-26 is going to be the biggest season Educational has ever had.

Lon Chaney's Next

Announcement was made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials on the Coast recently that Lon Chaney's next starring vehicle would be "The Mocking Bird," an original story by Tod Browning, who will direct the production.

It was Browning who made such a signal success of Lon Chaney's latest production, "The Unholy Three," a picture that has been unusually successful wherever presented and hailed by the critics as one of the few really great pictures of all time.

The story of "The Mocking Bird" deals with the Limehouse district of London and has an underworld plot with a strong love theme. Tod Browning seems to have an uncanny faculty for producing underworld stories, his latest, "The Mystic," which played the Capitol, New York, last week, being along these lines.

"Seven Sinners" a Hit in Pasadena

"Seven Sinners," one of the offerings in the Warner Forty of the 1925-26 schedule, scored a triumph in a preview in California a few days ago, and big things are being predicted for it. Following is an extract from a letter received by Jack L. Warner, in charge of production, from Tom F. McDonald, of the West Coast-Langley Theatre Circuit, in Los Angeles, and forwarded to New York:

"'Seven Sinners,' previewed at our theatre last night, is one of the real hits of the year. Director Lewis Milstone has taken a crook story with a real moral and interwoven some of the most amusing and humorous incidents imaginable. All the characters are splendid, particularly Marie Prevost, Clive Brook, Claude Gillingwater, 'Hienie' Conklin, and the young man who played the cook.

"'Settings are very good, photography excellent, particular attention has been paid to detail, and, on the whole, the production is well worth while and should go over big. The large crowd in attendance last night was extremely well pleased with the picture, the laughter and applause of our patrons proving beyond the question of a doubt that the picture is a hit.'"

Supervises All Fox Comedies

George E. Marshall, who for the past several months has been director-in-chief of the Van Bibber, Helen and Warren, and O. Henry comedies, has had his domain extended to include all Fox two reel feature comedies. This brings within Mr. Marshall's scope, the popular "Imperials."

Under this new arrangement Mr. Marshall supervises comedies made by Directors Ben Stoloff and Lew Seiler.

Mr. Marshall is directly responsible for the selecting of directors, players and seeing that scripts and stories are properly handled.

Signed by Schulberg

Charles Clary and Joseph Girard have been signed by B. P. Schulberg to augment the cast of Gasnier's new production, "The Other Woman's Story" which will be released in the fall as a Preferred Picture. Alice Calhoun and Robert Frazer are playing the leading roles with other supporting parts interpreted by Helen Lee Worthing, Mahlon Hamilton, Riza Royce, David Torrence, Gertrude Short and Joan Standing.

Starts "His Jazz Bride"

Marie Prevost has just started "His Jazz Bride," her third starring picture this year, at Warner Bros. western studio. This story by Beatrice Burton has appeared serially in several hundred newspapers over the country and created considerable talk. Its big advance advertising should prove a wonderful asset while the title, and Miss Prevost as its star, makes it a sure-fire box office attraction.

Seven New Supreme Attractions Listed by Fox for Next Season

ADDITIONS to Fox Film Corporation's 1925-26 list of Supreme Attractions are contained in a statement just issued. Included are the titles of seven hitherto unannounced productions Fox has added to the list of Supreme Attraction releases for the season. These are "Dangers of a Great City," "The Road to Glory," "Daybreak," "Separate Rooms," "Manhood," "The Golden Butterfly" and "Palace of Pleasure."

This makes nine new Supreme Attractions that Fox has added to his release schedule since the original announcement at the beginning of the current season. The others are "The Ancient Mariner," adapted from Samuel Taylor Coleridge's great lyric poem, and "Streets of Sin," an original story by H. H. Van Loan, selection of which was announced earlier.

Other news of the Fox program for the season contained in the new announcement which has not been divulged heretofore, has to do with the selection of two new Tom Mix starring vehicles and some title changes.

The new Mix pictures decided on since the annual announcement are "My Own Pal" and "Tony Runs Wild." This brings the number of vehicles selected for Mix to date up to six and leaves only one hole to be filled to complete his 1925-26 series. Tom has already completed three pictures and is now engaged in filming the fourth. The completed ones are "The Lucky Horseshoe," "The Everlasting Whisper," and one which, as yet, is untitled. The Mix film now in production is "The Best Bad Man."

"Thoroughbred" has been changed to "The Golden Strain," and "Part Time Wives" will be released under the title "Married Cheats."

"The Golden Strain" is Peter B. Kyne's first contribution to the Fox program under a contract which gives the Fox company the sole right to picturize Kyne stories for a period covered in the agreement. George O'Brien will have the leading role.

"Married Cheats" is an adaptation of Bessie Beatty's Good Housekeeping Magazine story, "Part Time Marriage." It is the type of story richest in audience appeal, the kind exhibitors and their patrons both love.

"Streets of Sin" is an original story written by H. H. Van Loan especially for Fox.

The preparation of the scenario of "The Ancient Mariner," was assigned to Bradley King. Direction of the fantasy sequence has just been completed by Henry Otto. Paul Panzer has the title role in "The Ancient Mariner."

"Dangers of a Great City" is an adaptation of the stirring old melodrama by Alfred Kennedy which thrilled an earlier generation.

"My Own Pal" and "Tony Runs Wild," the two new Mix starring vehicles included in the announcement, as the titles suggest, will be typical Mix pictures with Tony playing important parts.

Start "Three Faces East"

Production Indicates Range of Variety in De Mille Offerings

Production work on "Three Faces East" has been started at the De Mille Studio under the direction of Rupert Julian with Robert Ames, Jetta Goudal, Henry B. Walthall, Clive Brook and Edythe Champan in the featured roles.

This production, the fourth to be made at the De Mille studio, is entirely different in motif and motion from its predecessors, and its theme is illustrative of the variety of entertainment now coming from De Mille through Producers Distributing Corporation.

"Three Faces East" needs no introduction to those showmen who recall this play by Anthony Paul Kelly as one of the biggest box office successes the New York stage has ever had.

Rupert Julian will direct the production and also play the part of the "Kaiser."

Paramount Signs Alice Joyce

Alice Joyce was signed to a long-term contract with Paramount, according to an announcement made by that corporation. Miss Joyce's first role under her new contract will be in "Mannequin", James Cruze's next picture which is an adaptation of Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize winning story.

Helen and Warren Films Get Wide Newspaper Publicity

THE nation-wide publicity given to the Helen and Warren two-reel comedy series produced as a part of the Fox short subject features is graphically shown in a review of the newspapers from one end of the country to the other which are running the Mabel Herbert Urner stories in serial form. There are more than seventy newspapers in the most thickly populated centers that use the stories as one of their magazine page features. The combined circulation of these newspapers is 5,582,048.

In addition to the regular stories in these publications, the Fox company keeps the columns of these newspapers filled with photographs and news stories of the photoplays produced from the stories.

The largest single unit of this tremendous circulation is Capper's Weekly of Topeka, which has a circulation of 733,011 for its western edition and 351,634 for the eastern edition. Other large circulations for the Helen and Warren series of short subjects are the Philadelphia Bulletin, 516,609; Boston Post, 351,527; Detroit News, 283,285; Los Angeles Times, 176,154; Baltimore American, 108,929; Chicago News, 392,731; Des Moines Register, 120,908; St. Paul Pioneer Press, 140,657; Buffalo Courier, 117,673; Cleveland News-Leader, 179,156; Pittsburgh Commercial Telegraph, 103,630; Fort Worth Telegram, 102,190; Portland Oregonian, 134,504; San Francisco Bulletin, 60,143; Brooklyn Eagle, 77,839; Birmingham News, 86,185; Montreal Standard, 83,000; Washington Post, 69,655, and New Orleans Item, 91,462.

Warners Expect to Complete "Sea Beast" in Next 3 Weeks

"THE SEA BEAST," the first of John Barrymore's big specials on this season's Warner Bros. schedule, will be finished in about three weeks, according to present indications. Immediately upon its completion the star will start work on Don Juan which is now shaping itself in the capable hands of Bess Meredyth assisted by Maude Fulton.

If Millard Webb, who is directing "The Sea Beast," were consulted, he would probably say that the date on which Mr. Barrymore transfers his attentions from the whaling tale to the story of Lord Byron's love adventures is largely dependent upon the great actor's ability to emerge from the present production siege alive. No list of casualties in the picture making season would be complete that did not include his name. Scratches, bruises and contusions in quantities that would seem natural to a football player have been received, until observers have begun to wonder how he has managed to escape sprains, fractures and other more serious injuries.

And all the time Mr. Barrymore appears more genuinely happy than he had been for a long time before. He clambers up the rigging of sailing vessels and leaps from decks to wharves and back again with the ease and nonchalance of an office man doing his Daily Dozen—and gets a lot more fun out of the exercise.

The star is proud, too, of his wounds. He exhibits them with as much pride as a soldier might display his service stripes or medals. Mr. Barrymore, it will be remembered, having tired of the more refined type of picture demanded that the Warners give him something with real "he-stuff," and he welcomes the injuries as evidence that in "The Sea Beast" he is getting it.

New Standard Comedy

The title of the third of the Standard Comedies which Joe Rock is producing for F. B. O. release and which features that trio of heavyweight comedians, "Fatty" Karr, "Tiny" Alexander and "Kewpie" Ross, will be titled "A Ton of Fun in a Beauty Parlor."

"Broken Hearts," First Jaffe Art Film Finished; Features Lila Lee

THE recently-organized Jaffe Art Film Corporation, has announced that its first production "Broken Hearts" is now completed. It is a story of immigrant life, based on the stage play of the same name. Featured in the title role is Lila Lee.

In commenting on his first film, Louis N. Jaffe, president of the Jaffe Art Film Corporation, said:

"The man on the sidelines is always at hand with his comment on what could and what should be done. There was a day when I sat in front of the screen in movie houses, and muttered under my breath that this was good and that bad; that scene could be improved; this picture would be eliminated. There was one thing that struck me quite unfavorably in those early days: the frequent exaggeration and misrepresentation that characterized films of life other than that of native Americans.

Colorful Backgrounds

"Immigrant life in America is packed with so much material for the films; there are so many situations of power and grip, excellently adapted for movie exploitation, and yet so real and everyday, that it seemed rather short-sighted to invent and distort. As soon as the opportunity came to me, I decided upon a picture of immigrant life, which I could supervise and inject my own ideas into. This film, called "Broken Hearts" is one of the most realistic portrayals of immigrant life that has ever come to my attention. There is the pathos, the romance, the comedy relief—and all those elements which are contained in everyday life, but which it takes the clever story-teller to put in appealing book form, and the talented movie director to put in intriguing screen form."

It is also Mr. Jaffe's idea that every good movie should be based on a good story, be directed by a man specially fitted for the type of work, and have a notable star in the cast. Accordingly, he selected Maurice Schwartz to direct "Broken Hearts." Schwartz has achieved a wide reputation in Europe. Mr. Jaffe first made Schwartz's acquaintance while travelling through Europe last year. At that time, Schwartz was directing "Wolves" which was received with such enthusiastic acclaim upon its arrival in America.

LOUIS N. JAFFE

New Production Supervisors

Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced the appointment of two additional supervisors of production at the Paramount Long Island studio, making five in all. The new appointees are Julian Johnson, former title editor, who has long been connected with Eastern studio production, and Townsend Martin. The latter has to his credit the adaptation for several of the recent Bebe Daniels and Frank Tuttle productions. Martin also was co-adaptor with Willis Goldbeck of Sir James M. Barie's "A Kiss for Cinderella," which Herbert Brenon has just completed with Betty Bronson. All of the production supervisors are under the direction of William Le Baron, editor-in-chief.

F. B. O. Launches Second Half of Big Program for Next Season

THE second half of F. B. O.'s $5,000,000 program was launched this week, according to advices from the F. B. O. Studios in Hollywood.

"The Midnight Flyer," a railroad melodrama laid in the mountainous regions of West Virginia, was put into production this week when Tom Forman took a company to Big Bear for exterior scenes. The cast includes Cullen Landis, Dorothy Devore, Charles Mailes, Claire McDowell, Frankie Darro, Barbara Tennant, Elmo Billings, Buddy Post and others. The story is by Arthur Guy Empey, adapted by J. Grubb Alexander. "The Midnight Flyer" will be one of F. B. O.'s most pretentious Gold Bond specials, of which there will be twelve this season.

A second Gold Bond will be launched late this month when work is started on "Flaming Waters," a melodrama of the oil industry. It is an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon, adapted by Fred Myton, and will be produced for F. B. O. by Associated Arts Corporation.

Writers are at work also on the continuity of "When His Love Grew Cold," the first of the Laura Jean Libbey specials, which F. B. O. will produce on an elaborate scale. Filming will begin in two weeks.

Fred Thomson is at work on location with Silver King and a big company shooting exteriors for the Frank Pierce story, "All around the Frying Pan." A feature of the production, Thomson's twelfth for F. B. O., will be the Alturas Roundup, in which Fred and Silver King took part several weeks ago. Dave Kirkland wrote the continuity and will direct the prodution, replacing Del Andrews, who goes to another F. B. O. unit.

Maurice Flynn is at work on "Between Men," in which he will portray the sort of buoyant character in which he is rapidly establishing himself in the front rank of screen favorites. Harry Garson will both produce and direct.

Evelyn Brent has returned from a month's vacation in New York to read stories as possible vehicles in the future. Dick Talmadge is preparing to launch his ninth comedy action melodrama for F. B. O. and Tom Tyler is again being fitted with a made-to-order story as his second vehicle. Bob Suster, under the auspices of Goldburg Productions, is completing "The Man of Nerve."

F. B. O.'s two-reel comedy headed by Alberta Vaughn is at work on the fourth episode of the "Adventures of Mazie" series which Ralph Cedor is directing.

General Manager B. P. Fineman and his staff is at work assembling an imposing array of stories for future productions. Announcement of several will be made in the early future.

Lloyd's Latest Breaks Record

"The Freshman" Held Over for Second Week at Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo

"The Freshman," Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe picture, continues to break records and win extended runs throughout the country. This box-office attraction has just been held over for a second week at Shea's Hippodrome in Buffalo, thus winning the distinction of the first picture to play this house for more than a week's run in over two years.

Upon opening in San Diego, Cal., "The Freshman" started out with a marvelous box-office record as is attested to by the following wire sent by Branch Manager Wessling to the Pathe Home Office:

"Freshman opened Saturday San Diego. Looks like another record."

All along the line "The Freshman" in its pre-release runs has hit high box-office records and smashed them. Now upon its national release—September 20—in hundreds of theatres, a landslide of box-office records are expected to be hung up by this big fun-film.

Wellman Succeeds DeSano

B. P. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, this week announced the signing of William A. Wellman to his dirccttorial staff, replacing Marcel De Sano, who was recently released from his contract owing to ill health. Wellman's first Preferred production will be a screen version of Wallace Irwin's novel "Lew Tyler's Wives," originally assigned to DeSano after his conspicuous success with "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work."

"Wedding Song" Completed

"The Wedding Song," Leatrice Joy's second starring vehicle and the fourth production to be completed at the Cecil De Mille Studio, was moved into the cutting room this week by Director Alan Hale.

"The Wedding Song" is an adaptation of the Ethel Watts Mumford novel dealing with the machinations of a band of clever crooks.

Louis Mayer in East for Conference on Big Production Program of M-G-M

LOUIS B. MAYER, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is now in the East for important conferences with Marcus Loew, Nicholas M. Schenck, Major Edward Bowes and other M-G-M officials relative to a stupendous production program that will soon go into effect.

Other conferences will have to do with the public presentations of two of the super-productions of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Ben Hur", Fred Niblo's big spectacular feature, and "The Big Parade", Laurence Stalling's original story which is said to be one of the outstanding productions of the year, made under the direction of King Vidor.

According to Mr. Mayer's announcements his organization will embark on the most ambitious producing program in the history of the Culver City studios. Preparations are already under way to house activities of a record number of producing units at the M-G-M studios during the coming winter under the supervision of Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf and Hunt Stromberg. Each of these studio executives will have under direction a larger number of units than at any time in the past and it was because of the greatly enlarged production program contemplated that Mr. Mayer recently signed Hunt Stromberg as one of his associates.

In speaking of production plans for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Mr. Mayer said, "Under our enlarged program of production we are to launch most ambitious activities on my return to the coast. Plans now being discussed with Mr. Loew, Mr. Schenck, Major Bowes and other officials here in the East involve the greatest producing schedule in the history of our studios."

Before returning to the West Mr. Mayer will attend the annual convention of the International Order of Fire Chiefs to be held in Louisville, Kentucky. During his visit to the convention plans will be perfected for the production of the big fire prevention film to be filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in cooperation with the Fire Chiefs, and which, according to such well known authorities as Chief Scott of the Los Angeles Fire Department and State Fire Marshal Jay W. Stevens, will "save thousands and thousands of lives, especially women and children and invalids, as well as millions of dollars in property annually."

It is expected that the production of the fire prevention picture will be in the personal charge of Hunt Stromberg. It will have distinct entertainment value as well as the ability to smash home its lesson. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will donate a large proportion of the proceeds of the picture to several fire department benefit funds in all parts of the country.

Pete Smith, director of publicity at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City, accompanies Mr. Mayer to New York.

Bachmann Plans Early Release of Preferred's "Plastic Age"

AN alteration in the release schedule of B. P. Schulberg Productions has been arranged by J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution, to allow for the immediate delivery to exhibitors of "The Plastic Age," Percy Marks' widely discussed best-seller which is foremost in importance among the stories to be filmed this fall on the Schulberg lot.

The release date now set for "The Plastic Age" is September 29 instead of November 6 as was first announced. Mr. Bachmann explains that this change was made in response to requests from exhibitors who previewed the production on the coast, asserting that they wished immediate playdates.

"The Plastic Age" is said to be unique among "youth" stories for the screen. Its entire background is an American college—although not a single professor or classroom is shown, the emphasis being laid upon the social side which so influences the development of the modern boy and girl. Wesley Ruggles directed the production with a cast headed by Clara Bow, Donald Keith, Mary Alden, Henry B. Walthall and Gilbert Roland.

At Work on New Film

Clara Bow began work this week as feminine lead to Tom Mix in the Fox production, "The Best Bad Man." Immediately after its completion she will return to the B. P. Schulberg lot where featured roles in two new Preferred Pictures await her.

Endorses Preferred Picture

Dr. Frank Crane, Famous Journalist, Praises Schulberg's "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work"

Dr. Frank Crane, nationally known journalist, essay writer and publisher of Current Opinion Magazine, has added words of praise to the scores of critical endorsements that have acclaimed B. P. Schulberg's Preferred Picture, "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," exceptional entertainment.

After viewing this production which Marcel De Sano directed with Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite De La Motte, Henry B. Walthall and Lilyan Tashman in the leads, Dr. Crane wrote "I enjoyed the presentation of 'The Girl Who Wouldn't Work' very much. I think the story is very real and entertaining."

Dr. Crane's opinion on current affairs of interest is eagerly followed by readers of numerous newspapers in every section of the country which print his editorials. His public aggregates many millions of persons.

How to Use This Chart

First—Bookings! Get accurate footage and look up date review appeared in Moving Picture World. Then you can decide if the picture will suit your audience.

Second—Play Date! When you set your play date, consult this Chart to set the picture on a date that will not conflict with preceding and following pictures; avoid a sequence of similar type of story; space out your specials.

Third—Laying Out Program! This chart shows star and kind of story as well as accurate length; you can lay out a balanced program easily, avoid over- and under-length programs.

Fourth—Exploitation! Through this chart find the review in Moving Picture World; this will give a good synopsis, the all-important cast and fine line on exploitation possibilities as well as the things you'll want to soft-pedal.

Always! Turn to this Chart when you want accurate information in simple form and easy to get at a glance. AND—

$1 for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Picure World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

PROJECTION

EDITED BY F. H. RICHARDSON

Arctic Projectionist-Exhibitor

Recently Earl Rossman, member American Projection Society and producer of "Kivalina of the Ice Lands," a Pathe release, addressed the American Projection Society, describing his experiences in the land of the Midnight Sun.

The talk was followed by a showing of the picture he both directed and "shot," up where, if the natives desire to read the evening paper (carved on sheets of ice) they have to turn on the Aurora Borealis; where a real swell boquet is composed of snowballs stuck on lollypop sticks—try and get the sticks—while a bungalow consists of a few slabs of nice warm snow set on edge, the cracks plastered in with more snow, while the roof is just more snowflakes in mass formation.

Part of his task was to induce the natives to be his actors. Not knowing what it was all about, however, they extended a thumb horizontally, four fingers vertically and waved the latter flippantly in the atmosphere. However, Rossman had, it seems, carted a Delco set and a portable projector (some stunt, if you ask me, since it meant carrying that weight more than a thousand miles by dog power) along with him. He set the outfit up, made a screen of a snow bank (don't know whether he bordered it with dead black or dark gray) and projected some African scenes he had taken along, just to show friend eskimo what "movies" were like.

So if Rossman is willing to hold a bible in either hand, lay one on top of his head and swear a mighty swear to that Delco-projector stunt, I guess we will have to hand him the palm (NOT in the form of a fan) as the furtherest north projectionist-exhibitor on record up to this time. For mind you all this was done at and near an Eskimo village called Tavic, a number of very cold miles one way or the other from Point Barrow, the latter being the very northernmost tip of our non-tropical possession, Alaska.

Rossman says that the night he gave his show (admission one walrus tooth for inferior seats—a splinter of wood for the best ones) was a "fairly warm one, twenty eight degrees or so above zero." He also says he "learned to eat raw whale skin, which looks like a section from an automobile tire and tastes like sour cocoanut." He assures us that he really don't especially like whale blubber, but that he poked a lot of it down into his interior arrangements just the same. Rossman avers, I am told, that the street paving in Tavic is very poor, the sidewalks wretched and that there are just no street signs at all.

On one occasion, designing to "shoot" (photographically) a flock of walrus, he "set up" on an ice floe, but the corner he was on broke away from the main mass, started a battle with other ice cakes in the swirling tides, and but for the opportune discovery of his plight by natives, he would have taken a short, but very cold route to the hereafter, in which event "Kivalina of the Ice Lands" would have remained right there in the aforesaid icelands forever, and at least one day, instead of moving south and permitting Broadway to rubber at her charms.

Well, anyhow, we congratulate Rossman. The successful filming of a production under such terrific handicaps is an achievement to be proud of. I, for one, don't envy him the delicacies he enjoyed—whale skin, blubber, etcetra—one bit. Anyone who pulls such a stunt certainly deserves the best in the land, and if you think whale skin and blubber are not just that, go up there and try to take some of it away from a husky Eskimo gentleman, or even from an Eskimo flapper. Just try it once. That's all!

Oh yes, and by the way when you chaps get this Pathe production give it the very best showing you can. It was made by an American Projection Society man—a practical projectionist himself. Put it over BIG.

Better Projection Pays

Bluebook School

Question No. 378—Practical question proposed by the editor: What will be the brilliancy, in foot candles, of a screen surface at one fifty feet and at one hundred feet, if its brilliancy at twenty five feet is two foot candles, viewing angle to remain constant? Guess that'll hold you for a minute!

Question No. 379—Describe the pilot wire in a cartridge fuse. What is it for?

Question No. 380—Describe the difference in cartridge fuses for different voltages. By this we mean to ask what the general points of difference are.

Question No. 381—What is a "plug" fuse. Describe it. May they be used for any amperage?

Question No. 382—May plug fuses be used for any sort of service?

Globe, Arizona

R. A. Hooker, Projectionist, Globe, Arizona, recently submitted a scheme for cue sheet making which places the cue a certain distance from the last sub-title, concerning which I remarked that a scene might be five hundred feet long, and such a plan would therefore be a bit indefinite as to distance. He now explains further, as follows:

True, a scene may, as you say, be 500 feet long, but then it also might be five feet long, and I find that an average of ten scenes between the last sub-title and the end of the reel will give you about two minutes in which to start the arc of the other projector, and make the change-over. (Evidently there is something here that I don't understand. "Ten scenes"—why, man, there often is not that many in a thousand feet of film. Also "He Who Laughs Last" has no sub-titles at all.—Ed.)

Another thing, I use a reel with a flat steel hub flange. I often take the action at the exact place I wish to change-over and then when the film in the upper magazine unwinds until I can see the other side of the hub flange it is time to start the arc on the other projector, then when the action comes I change. Try it or have some one else try it and I think you will agree it works perfectly.

Twice lately I have seen cue sheets on reel bands. Looks like a pretty good stunt, but it should be written in pencil so that in event of change the cue can be altered.

Suggestion of Value

I want to say to the chaps who use 2,000 foot reels that if they will use or make a cue sheet just as though they were going to use thousand foot reels, and then, on the last run, watch for the single reel cue and, opening the magazine door, slip a scrap of paper into the film roll at that point, when it comes to cutting the reels apart there will be no trouble about finding the right place. However, as you say, there are a lot of men too lazy to do even that.

Splices and Dye

One thing more and I'm done. I have had no small amount of grief caused by men making splices without scraping off the dye. They used to put the dye on top of the emulsion, but present practice is to put it on the other side, and unless it be scraped off the splice won't hold for long.

I don't quite get you in that last. Dye, so far as I know, is color absorbed by the photographic emulsion. If you mean that dye is placed on the back, or celluloid side of the film, why that is, I think, impossible. Finished celluloid film cannot possibly absorb dye, which is a water color. I have had hundreds of samples of dyed film pass through my hands in the past year, and if there really has been any process by which dye is affixed to the celluloid side of a film, then I have failed to note that fact, though I have seen film in which the color or tint was incorporated in the celluloid itself during manufacture.

Your cue-the-last-action and watch-the-reel-hub really amounts to making a regular cue sheet and using the reel hub for a light-up signal, which is, of course, quite alright.

George Eastman Tells of His Work in Creating a System of Film Photography

Last week I published a portion of the paper prepared and read by the editor of this department at the last meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It was a letter from Thomas A. Edison, setting forth his activities in connection with inventions and experiments in the early days of the motion picture industry. It is the first and only detailed statement Mr. Edison has ever prepared covering his connection with the industry in its early days.

I also succeeded in inducing Mr. George Eastman to make a similar statement, which I present to you herewith.

NOTICE

You will be able to secure these statements, together with that of Thomas Armat and others, together with photographs of all the models of Powers and Edison projectors; also photographs of the Selig, the Lubin, Pink's Vanisope, and other early projector mechanisms, and many other intensely interesting early things, in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers transactions. The transaction containing them is not yet printed, but it is hoped it will appear in the No. 22, which should be off the press very soon. Should they be unable to get it into that one, it will be in the No. 23. I strongly advise all motion picture projectionists to get their order for a copy in early, as the demand will undoubtedly exhaust the supply very quickly. Address Mr. J. A. Summers, Secretary, Fifth and Sussex Streets, Harrison, New Jersey. I am not sure as to the price, but I believe it is one dollar. Ask for the transactions containing Mr. Richardson's paper: "What Happened in the Beginning."

Mr. Eastman was reluctant to prepare a statement, but finally consented. Here it is. Mr. Eastman requires no introduction from either myself or any one else. To him the motion picture industry and the whole world owes a very great deal.

Dear Mr. Richardson:—In reply to your letter of March 2nd, addressed to our Mr. Blair, asking for a statement in regard to my connection with motion picture film, to be made a part of the records of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, I am. writing this letter.

I have read Mr. Edison's statement of January 24th and am in full accord with the reference which he makes to me.

About the year 1883 or 1884, in connection with William H. Walker, I engaged in an effort to create a system of film photography. Mr. Walker was a skilled mechanic and had had some experience in manufacturing cameras. I was engaged in the manufacture of dry plates and had had experience in the making and handling of photographic emulsions, as well as some mechanical experience.

On looking over the ground we found that there were three things necessary to be accomplished:

1st—To find a suitable flexible support to take the place of glass.

2nd—To devise a method of applying emulsion to it, and 3rd—To create a practical mechanism for exposing the sensitive flexible support in the camera.

Walker and I worked together on the mechanical problems, while I tried to work out the photographic and chemical side of the enterprise. The broad idea, of course, was not new. An exposing mechanism, called a "roll holder," for sensitized paper had been made as early as 1854, the year that I was born. Warnerke, in about 1875, made a roll holder and a film, the latter consisting of paper coated with collodion emulsion. The image was stripped direct from the paper after exposure and development. His attempt to create a system of film photography was a failure and the field had been practically abandoned at the time Walker and I began. We soon worked out a practical roll holder. A machine for coating paper in bands 8 or 10 feet in length, for the carbon process, was in existence. We devised a machine for coating paper continuously. I invented a film, known as "Eastman Stripping Film"; filed an application for patent on March 7, 1884, and the patent was issued October 14, 1884. This completed a practical system of film photography. A company, The Eastman Dry Plate and Film Company, was formed and the enterprise started in 1885. It was successful from the start but the use of the film was hampered by the necessity of sending it to the company for development because the development and finishing of the negatives was too complicated for the amateur, or even the dealer, to accomplish. The film consisted of a strip of paper first coated with soluble gelatine and afterwards with the sensitive emulsion. After the film had been exposed in the roll holder it was developed and then squeezed down on to a glass plate which had previously been coated with a thin solution of rubber. This held it in a rigid position while the paper was dissolved off by hot water, leaving a very thin image on the glass plate. This had to be re-enforced by a sheet of moistened gelatine. When dry the re-enforced image could then be pulled off from the glass plate. This produced a negative which was very similar to the film of the present day. There were other objections to this process beside the complications. For instance: The time required to dry the gelatine sheet used for the backing; and the fact that the image sometimes was affected by the grain of the paper offsetting. It was quite obvious that what was needed to make a perfect substitute for the glass plate process was a substance which had the properties of glass except its rigidity and fragility. Transparent celluloid had already been used as a substitute for glass in making single negatives but no way was known of producing it in sheets thin enough and long enough to use in a roll holder. After we got started with the stripping film I made many experiments to produce long sheets of transparent material, using cellulose nitrate (soluble cotton), which is the chief constituent of celluloid. I used the only solvents known in photography at that time, namely grain alcohol and ether. A mixture of these solvents would only dissolve about 10 per cent of its weight of the cellulose nitrate and this solution, when coated on glass, gave too thin a film to be of any use. I tried building up a thicker film by using successive coatings of this solution (known as "collodion") and rubber but I could not get a thick enough film to be practical. In the meantime, failing to succeed in producing this ideal support, I began to experiment in replacing the sheets of gelatine used for backing the stripping film with a varnish to overcome the objection of the slow drying. One day a young assistant whom I had assigned to this job came to me with a bottle of varnish and a glass plate bearing a stripping film negative which had been varnished and partially stripped from the plate. He said he had found just what we were looking for. I asked him what the varnish was composed of and he said: "Wood

Seating Inspection Day in your Theatre

The APPRAISAL
A PLAY IN FIVE ACTS

ACT ONE

DO not leave the appraisal of the seating equipment and arrangement of your theatre to guesswork or hearsay. It is too important. Get the cold facts for yourself by actual experience and personal observation. With hundreds of other theatre owners and managers throughout the country, make Thursday, October fifteenth, your personal inspection day of the seating of your theatre.

ACT TWO

ACT FIVE

AFTER having made your visit of inspection to your theatre, make careful appraisal of the comfort, beauty, dependable strength and durability of the seating. Does it meet your ideas of comfort and beauty viewed entirely from the point of view of a total stranger visiting your theatre? If in any way deficient, write our Theatre Seating Engineering Department for suggestions and counsel. No obligations involved or implied. It will be a paying investment.

alcohol and soluble cotton." It was very thick, like separated honey. I saw at once that it was the solution which I had been looking for to make film base and immediately began to devise apparatus for producing film by drying the "varnish" on the long strips of plate glass. We at once fitted up a small factory with tables 100 feet long, having glass tops of the longest sheets of plate glass we could find, with the joints cemented together, and began to make the first practical transparent film in rolls that was ever put on the market. This was in August, 1889.

While we were engaged in fitting up this factory I received a call from a representative of Mr. Edison's who told me of Mr. Edison's experiments in motion pictures and how necessary it was for him to have some of this film. The idea of making pictures to depict objects in motion was entirely new to me but of course I was much interested in the project and did my best to furnish him film as near to his specifications regarding fineness of grain and thickness as possible. As far as I know the film we furnished him then, and from time to time later, was satisfactory. In the years during which the motion picture industry has been developing we have made many improvements in the way of fineness of grain, photographic quality, and uniformity, but the film made today is substantially the same as the first film furnished Mr. Edison.

So far as I can recollect all the experimental film that was furnished Mr. Edison was negative film. Special film for printing positives was not made until about 1895.

The new film was a success for amateur purposes from the moment it was offered to the public. The use of film has superseded glass plates for amateur use for many years past; and of late years has been replacing them for all professional uses as well.

The support, instead of being made on glass tables as at first, is now cast on the surface of great nickel plated wheels which run continuously night and day, week in and week out. One of these wheels, of which we have upwards of fifty, produces 25 times as much as the whole of our first factory. The base is turned over to the sensitizing department in rolls 41 inches wide and 2,000 feet long and is so accurately made that it does not vary over one-four thousandth of an inch in thickness. Of course only a part of this product is for motion pictures.

Yours very truly,
GEO. EASTMAN.

Sensible Criticism

George Bernard Shaw, the noted—not notorious, but NOTED—Englishman, in an interview concerning his observations of the United States of America and Canadian America, made this very sensible criticism:

We soon shall have to sit for ten minutes at the beginning of every reel to be told who developed it, who fixed it, who dried it, who provided the celluloid, who sold the chemicals and who cut the author's hair.

Mr. Shaw meant this to a certain extent facetiously, but he nevertheless hit uncomfortably close to the truth. Those who have their names and titles blazoned forth that all who will—may—MUST—read, each and every one holds that THEIR work is one of the essential things without excellence in which the photoplay would not and could not possibly be as successful as it is. At any rate, they place a high value on their work—which is exactly as it should be, for the man who places small value upon HIS work usually produces work which has darned small value.

However, on that basis we might also include most all of those Mr. Shaw has named, for the simple reason that without high grade work on their part all the rest of it must inevitably suffer. Of what use the high grade work of the high grade cinematographer if the men in the developing room fall down? Incidentally, on that basis the designer of scenery and its builder has just claim to have HIS name on the screen, and the maker of the high grade camera and projector should be thus favored as well, because it was HIS work that made it all possible. And so we might go on through a long, long line, without in any way stretching our imagination, to prove that poor work on the part of any one of them would mar the results.

As matters now are I have myself, as a paying theatre patron, often and often been bored stiff, and really irritated by being compelled to sit through goodness only knows how many feet of film which was nothing else on earth but just a plain ADVERTISEMENT for a lot of Toms, Dicks and Harrys in whom I, as a paying theatre patron, had no manner of interest. I had paid good money to be amused, and I was most emphatically NOT amused by being compelled to sit there and read a seemingly interminable list of names and titles which meant absolutely nothing on earth to me. I did not remember any one of them for two minutes (ten seconds would be nearer to it), nor does any one else, because I have tested the matter by asking people what some of the names were, almost immediately.

They usually remembered the names of the stars, and perhaps their immediate supports, though probably that was NOT because of the title; also often they would remember the name of the Director, which might or might not be because of the fact that his name appeared, but let us assume that it was. I have yet to find a single theatre patron who remembered the name of the Cinematographer or Title Maker, or any one of the rest other than those above named.

My view of the matter is that nothing ought to be permitted on the screen except that in which the audience may be presumed to be at least to some extent interested. I believe audiences are interested in the names of the leading actors and their immediate supports, and possibly in the Director. I believe the name of the Projectionist ought to appear, not so much because of the fact that the audience is interested in knowing it—though since he is right there with them they well might be—as for the reason that his work would be still to be done when his name appeared, and it is just a plain one-and-one-makes-two problem that he will be inclined to be considerably more careful to put on high grade work if he knows the audience of home folks knows he is responsible for what appears.

I of course do not blame the Cinematographer, the darkroom men, the Title Makers, etc., for trying to force their names into the spotlight. After all, it is but natural that they should. I, however, most emphatically do object, as a theatre patron, to the producer permitting them to do it, very well knowing that the theatre audience is merely annoyed by being COMPELLED to sit through a long string of titles they don't care one single (deleted by censor) about.

Better Projection Pays

P. A. McGuire, of the Nicholas Power Company, all by his lonely lonesome, inaugurated a "Better Projection Pays" campaign more than a year ago. This department was thoroughly in accord with the action, and has given it some support, though I now think not as much as it should have.

For, after all, the "pays" end of the slogan is the one thing above all things which will arouse the interest of the man-behind-the gun, the exhibitor, upon whose interest and action we must perforce depend for the highest realization of all that better projection means.

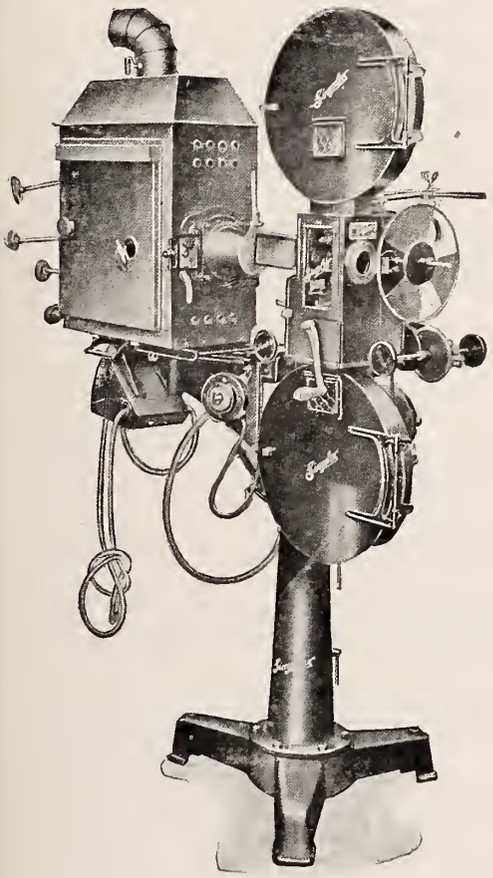
In a letter now before me McGuire proposes to go further, and to take action looking toward binding together the various forces, other than the exhibitor, interested in better projection, with the hope that in the end the exhibitor himself will join, which will in large measure win the battle.

I said "battle"! which is precisely what I meant, and I might remark, in passing, that this department has, for fifteen years, waged a BATTLE for better projection, and has tried to make the exhibitor and the projectionist see that it would be financially profitable.

McGuire says, in his letter, that I have mostly attacked the problem from the viewpoint of improving the technical and practical knowledge of the projectionist—which is pretty close to true, if trying to instil a pride for his work in the projectionist be added. He is kind enough to say that I have secured real, tangible results in return for my labors.

He now asks that I join in the attempt to bring about concerted action by all those many ones who have vital interest, through trade reasons or otherwise, in better projection, to the end that all agencies work together to bring the exhibitor into an understanding and friendly agreement that better projection DOES pay, in real dollars and cents, even though it may call for a somewhat greater initial outlay for equipment, for repairs, and even, possibly, for projectionist's remuneration.

Chosen for one of New York's "Smartest" Theatres



UNDER the personal management of Gloria Gould, the Embassy Theatre draws its patronage from the elite of New York City.

Quality is the keynote of this exclusive theatre. In selecting the furnishings Miss Gould chose for class, distinction—superiority.

The matter of selecting projection equipment was placed in the hands of experts. For, as the management expressed it, what could be more essential in this theatre than perfect picture presentation?

Naturally Simplex projectors were unanimously chosen.

Bluebook School—Answers 348 to 352

Well, Dobson, Bennewitz, Gray and the rest of you lazy bones, wake up! The torrid weather can no longer offer valid excuse. You've hadda good, long rest. Now its about time to get busy, don't you think?

Question No. 348—Practical question submitted by George L. Erdman, St. Joseph, Missouri: If the orchestra leader insists on the musicians being permitted to have fifty watt Mazdas, and the manager lets him get away with it, what is the best method of reducing the bad effect as much as possible?

W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia; G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois; Roy Saxon, Lufkin, Texas; S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama; Allan R. Gengenbeck, New Orleans, Louisiana and Ray Guaegy, Paducah, Kentucky all made at least a fair stab at this one. I shall first of all publish the answer of brother Budge, because he was himself, until comparatively recently, "down front" in the orchestra. He says:

I am able to give my own experience regarding this matter, covering a period of about twenty-five years, during which time I played in the orchestra. It is a troublesome question, which is always coming up in the orchestra. Only about (Get this, you machine operators), twenty per cent. of those practising the musical PROFESSION (Capitals mine. You will note the musician always refers to his business as a profession, though it is a cold blooded fact that the knowledge necessary to play most musical instruments is not one tenth that necessary to motion picture projection.—Ed.) are musicians. The other eighty per cent. are instrumentalists (Projectionists and machine operators.—Ed.)

Those practicing the musical profession started by adopting the proper name at the beginning, which same is used by all, even though many are far below the line. Instrumentalists may be classed with machine operators. THEY ARE ALWAYS LOOKING FOR AN ALIBI TO COVER UP THEIR DEFICIENCIES, and the "poor-light-on-the-music is their one big, dependable stand-by. In small towns they are, as a rule, able to get away with it, but in the larger cities it no longer "goes."

In my own experience as a musician (I am a graduate of the Institute of Musical Art) I have never found it necessary to use a 50 watt lamp in my music stand. Let us examine into the matter and see just what a bright light will do.

Most music paper is more or less polished, which means that much of the light incident upon it will be reflected, and not diffused. How can any man expect to have a clear view of a director standing in comparative darkness, when he has a bright reflected light glaring into his yes? The thing cannot be done, hence the man who uses such a light is not doing justice to himself. If the director would himself only stop and reason the matter out, he would see that too much light is harmful, rather than beneficial to results—provided he has brains. (Brother Budge seems to doubt that SOME directors have brains to which the editor utters a fervent A-a-a-a-men.

However, among the full eighty per cent. of instrumentalists, brains are not so plentiful, and mind you I am NOT now discussing music, but those who play it. To me music is something very nearly sacred, and the real musician I deeply admire. The instrumentalist, however—well, I have very little use for him.

About the highest wattage I ever myself used in a stand was 25 and almost always the lamp was dipped in blue coloring. If the light box is in proper condition, so that the music will be evenly distributed over the music page, then a ten watt lamp is all that is necessary. In New York City that is all they will permit you to use when the performance is in the dark and no amount of kicking will get you lamps of higher wattage. (That may be theoretically true, brother Budge, but all the same I have myself nearly had my eyes bored out by orchestra lights in New York City and they were no ten-watters either. However, it is not only the AMOUNT of light, but also its shielding from the eyes of the audience that counts.—Ed.)

I can now see why we only allowed ten watt lamps, and even when I played in the Hippodrome the ten watter was dipped in blue.

I was in the orchestra which played St. Joseph, Missouri, when the Birth of a Nation was there. We had a curtain across the whole orchestra pit, which came up as high as the stage apron? This curtain was hung on pipe rods which could be raised. Also the entire stage was in a shadow box. The covering extended out over the stage apron, and hung down into the orchestra pit.

And with all that we only had ten watt lamps, and the music was difficult, but we played it all right. Once when Southern and Marlowe played Macbeth, the whole orchestra pit was covered with fake foliage, so that not a particle of light from the orchestra lights reached any part of the house.

Boil all this down and what do we get. Why simply this: Try and explain to the orchestra leader and manager that instead of being good a 50 watt lamp is very bad because the powerful light reflected from the music will make it difficult for the musicians to see the leader clearly. It will therefore hinder, rather than help in the correct rendition of the music. Examine the light box and see that the light is evenly distributed over the music sheet. If a 25 watt lamp is insisted upon, then dip it in blue. Place the music desks in such way that no light from them can reach either the eyes of the audience, or the screen.

Don't try to argue with the instrumentalist. They are helpless, because they are incapable of understanding; also mostly they care ONLY for themselves, and what they conceive to be their side of any matter under discussion. I speak from experience, and that is the reason I am now projecting pictures instead of sounds.

I have published the reply of brother Budge, not because I believe him to have provided an answer which altogether solves the matter, but because it comes from a musician, who himself has an understanding of both sides of the orchestra light evil and controversy. The answer is interesting, and in some ways very enlightening.

Lufkin says:

The one best bet in reducing the bad effect of high wattage lamps in the orchestra pit is to convince the orchestra leader and the manager that they really ARE an evil, from the audiences' viewpoint—that they are detrimental to projection results.

A very effective method of doing this is to persuade the manager and orchestra leader to view a special showing of some picture in the forenoon, with no audience present. Have the assistant projectionist project the subject you may choose to show them. The regular projectionist (yourself) can locate himself in the orchestra plt, and just when some real interesting or exciting action shows up, turn on all those fifty watters at once. It is dollars to doughnuts they will YELL to turn them off, and—you have your argument ready made, and in its most effective form. Both the manager and the orchestra leader have seen an example of "before taking" and "after taking." If that won't convince them, then they are certainly hard boiled. Also I might remark that there are quite some few music stands available which help to reduce the evil of orchestra lights.

Hanover says:

The question asks how to reduce the damage done because fifty watt lamps are used. Fifty watt lamps would be just a plain outrage, and I would not project where a manager permitted my work to be ruined by such an idiotic performance. While the question does not ask it, I will remark that a properly placed ten watt globe is ample and abundant illumination for any orchestra music stand, and in my opinion no musician ought to be permitted to use a lamp of higher candle power.

And now to answer the question. The evil of such lights could be partially controlled and neutralized by a method you, Mr. Editor, described in this department two or three years ago. It has, I note, been adopted in some theatres, and unless I am in error such stands are now available through supply men. The method was to build the box part—part which contains the music—of the stand very deep. I think you suggested ten inches, and to paint the interior a dead, non-gloss black. Such a stand will prevent the light from reaching both the eyes of most of the audience and the screen, if the stand be placed sidewise to the audience. But this cannot always be done, especially where there is a large orchestra. Some of the stands must, in many cases, face the screen, therefore will reflect light upon its surface and in highly objectionable quantity if such a high power lamp as 50 watt be used. It is, however, possible, in most cases, to place artistically arranged drapes back of these musicians, high enough to prevent the light from reaching the screen, always provided the same be not too close to the orchestra. If the orchestra is right under the screen, which latter is either not on a stage, or on a very shallow one, then I know of nothing that will prevent the light from reaching the screen.

Recapitulating, I think the deep, music box, its interior walls dead black, with the stands very carefully placed is the best that can be done, so long as such lamps are permitted. I would, however, suggest that the head of the theatre manager who permits fifty watt lamps to be used in the orchestra pit ought to be examined. I don't blame the musician so much.

Question No. 349—What is a "field rheostat" on a generator, what is it for and how does it operate?

All the before named answered this one correctly. Thoreau and Clark say:

A "field rheostat" is, as its name implies, an adjustable rheostat connected in series with the enerator field coils. In all cases, except series wound generators, it is in series with the shunt windings.

The field rheostat is for the purpose of limiting and controlling the flow of current through the field windings, which it does by adding to or subtracting from the resistance of the circuit.

Since in most, if not all cases, generators used in theatres are self exciting, it is not necessary to discuss the action of externally excited generators. The field windings of a generator are for the purpose of strengthening the field magnets, thus increasing the magnetic flux density of the field in which the armature operates. Up to the capacity of the iron to receive magnetic flux—the point of saturation—the more current which passes through the field winding the more dense will be the magnetic field, hence the greater the possibilities for power production of the machine.

If we, by means of the field rheostat, insert resistance in the field coils circuit sufficient to limit the current flow to a low value, then the magnetic field will be comparatively weak. If we permit more current to flow through the field coils by eliminating

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

At Kodak Park every known precaution is exercised to make sure that every foot of Eastman Positive Film actually will reproduce tone for tone, all the detail of the negative.

Eastman experts safeguard for the screen the photographic quality your audiences are entitled to see there—and expect.

Look for the identification "Eastman" "Kodak" in black letters in the margin of prints you screen.

some of the resistance by means of the field rheostat, then the magnetic field will be strengthened and that is how the old thing works.

Very good, Gentlemen. You will observe that I have changed your wording considerably, but not, I think, your thought.

Question No. 350—What is the purpose of insulation, and what class of substances do we call "insulating materials?" Name some of them.

Cooley says:

The purpose of insulation, insofar as refers to electrical conductors, is to confine the current, or electrical impulses, or E. M. F. to the conductors, and keep it traveling in the path provided by them. Put in another way, insulation is for the purpose of preventing the positive charge of electricity from escaping to negative until it has first performed the work it was intended it should accomplish.

As has been explained in previous articles, positive electricity seeks to escape to negative, and so return to the negative terminal of the same generator from whence it emanated. Metal conductors are used to convey the current, and these must be covered with or supported by a material having a sufficiently high resistance that the E. M. F. of the current will not penetrate it, whereupon the current, seeking the path of least resistance, will follow the conductor to the point where, in performing work, it is permitted to reach the negative side.

Insulation is the medium which makes it possible to convey electric current from one point to another with a minimum of risk and loss.

The class of substance referred to as "insulating material" is substances which offer high resistance to the passage of the electric current. Some of them are glass, porcelain, rubber, slate, marble and dry asbestos.

Question No. 351—Of exactly what does rubber covered (R. C.) insulation consist?

Guaegy says:

Rubber covered (R. C.) insulation consists of a layer of pure rubber, or rubber composition on a wire, over which has been placed one or more coverings of braided cotton which have been impregnated with a preservative, fireproof compound. (You omitted the important item that it must be a tinned wire.—Ed.)

Cooley says:

R. C. insulation consists of a coating of pure rubber, or a rubber compound, applied to the conductor. Over this is placed one or more layers of cotton braid, saturated with a fireproof or slow burning solution. In some cases the braid is saturated with a water proof solution, and in some cases both solutions are used. It all depends upon where the wire is designed to be used. (See note under Guaegy's answer. Ditto.—Ed.)

Question No. 352—Under what condition is coating copper wire with tin necessary, and why is it done?

Budge says:

This question should have been a part of the previous one, as the tinning of copper wire is a vital matter when it is to be rubber covered. It is to prevent the corroding of the copper, which will take place if rubber be in direct contact with it. This is due to the sulphur which is present in all rubber compounds and sulphur attacks copper readily. Sulphur does not affect tin. The tin also makes soldering more easy.

Sometimes little items like this are purposely left out of a question to see if you are "on the job" enough to catch them.—Ed.

I might add that Thoreau and Clark supplied a very complete list of insulating materials in connection with their excellent reply to question No. 350. They named rubber, glass, porcelain, slate, marble, asbestos, fibre, silk and cotton, resin, wool, bakelite, hard rubber, mica, air, paraffin wax, shellac, ebonite sealing wax and oils.

Ye Gods!

From a New York City daily paper I clipped this gem of nomenclature:

More than 150 patrons of the Rochelle Motion Picture Theatre, in New Rochelle, made their way to the street last night, when a film caught fire in the operator's booth. Frank Connell, the piano player, continued to perform until all the patrons got out.

The only person injured was Albert Odell, of No. 3269 Third avenue, Manhattan, the operator. When the film caught fire as the result of having jammed in the magazine of the projection machine he attempted to extinguish the flames with his hands.

You will observe that a "film caught fire in the operator's booth." The "piano player"—why not piano operator? He, the piano operator or player, would DEMAND the title "Musician." Only the operator was injured. What operator? The theatre operator? Ticket machine operator? No, this "operator" is or was the man who put the show on.

Jammed in Magazine!

The film caught fire because it jammed in the magazine, which jargon we possibly may analyze by assuming that the take-up stopped working, or something of that sort. BUT the question for the officials to look into is WHERE WAS THE PROJECTIONIST, AND WHAT WAS HE DOING THAT HE DID NOT KNOW THAT SO SERIOUS A FAULT HAD OCCURRED UNTIL THE FILM CAUGHT FIRE????

It is just plain common sense that if he is competent and was beside his projector, WHERE HE BELONGED, no fire would have occurred, because he would have known instantly, by the sound, that something was wrong, and would have been quite able to avoid any possibility of a serious blaze, or probably any blaze at all? But you may take it from me that if any official investigation is made it probably will confine itself strictly to almost totally unimportant things. It will probably not pin the management and projectionist down and find out exactly why the fire was allowed to get going at all, and why it was permitted to assume such proportions. Officials probably will NOT ask of the projectionist: "Exactly where you and what were you doing when the blaze started?" They may NOT ask: "If you were beside the projector how does it come that you did not instantly know of the trouble and take the steps necessary to prevent the blaze? Or if he were away from the projector, ask the management: "Why was this man permitted away from his post of duty while celluloid was passing through the terrific heat of the spot with an audience in the theatre?"

No, taking past experience for our guide, no question of real importance will be asked. The authorities will examine the projector, look wise and make the usual report, and that will be that.

Oh, M'Gosh!

In a letter from a well-up man in New York City this paragraph occurs:

When we hear of Local Union 306 even contemplating instruction for their members, and that the Paramount is establishing schools for Managers—well, we feel that certainly progress hath really begun to progress!

'Um! I wonder just what the writer of the letter had in his mind when he made that crack! Well, anyhow even the Producer has beat the union to it, but I guess 306 is coming along alright anyhow.

And, by the way, that Manager's school is excellent—or at least the idea is. It is to be hoped that the embryonic "Managers" will be taught, among other things, that while a bassically good production may be the keystone of the arch, which latter is composed of appropriate music, comfortable seats, polite attendants, good ventilation, etc., etc., still, unless the arch which supports he keystone, or the keystone which supports the arch—take your choice—is supported by high grade projection, then the whole dad blamed works will either tumble down, or will wobble badly and continuously.

Also it might possibly not be a bad stunt to teach the projectionists of the theatres owned or controlled by Paramount that even if they put on a good picture (The one most important item, of course), but put it on inefficiently, or with enormous waste in equipment and electric power (which is all too often the case, even in large, high grade theatres), then their work is "not so good," and their methods and knowledge stands in urgent need of repair.

It also might be well to rub the noses of the would-be managers in the FACT that a projectionist cannot possibly put really high grade results on the screen with badly worn equipment, or equipment which came out of the motion picture ark—a bit of information all together too many managers and exhibitors seem not to possess.

Peerless Makes Good

Projectionist C. O. Henning, Pastime Theatre, Iowa City, Iowa, says:

Dear Friend Richardson: Was pleased to see the article on the Peerless Arc in this issue of the World. Brother Munn did not give them undue praise. We have used them here for more than six months, and the performance and condition of the lamps is as good as the day they were installed. In other words, they "stand the gaff" and produce results.

I say this by way of comparison. We wrecked a pair of another type of reflecting arcs in four months. They worked under precisely the same condition. By "wrecked" I mean that every part of the lamp was badly worn and out of line in that time.

I am willing to stand sponsor for the statement that the Peerless produces results superior to that of a 75 ampere ordinary arc taking current through an approved type of generator. They draw 18 amperes at 55 volts from a 20 ampere Transverter, at a saving of the difference between forty dollars ($40.00) per month average power bill for six months, as against a seventeen dollar ($17.00) per month bill for six months—average—and a ten per cent saving in carbon consumption through a similar period.

The screen is flush with a wall of the house, with only a curtain for light protection, and the auditorium is very light, with battleship gray backed seats which reflect considerable light themselves. We have a 78 foot projection distance, a twelve foot picture and the lens is fifteen feet above screen center.

POWERLITE REFLECTOR LAMP

Powerlite Reflector Lamp using approximately 20 amperes actually delivers more light and of a better quality than the ordinary arc lamp using 75 to 80 amperes direct current. This means that an immediate saving is effected of 75% in current consumption alone in addition to the superior results obtained upon the screen. A house using 75 ampere arcs (ignoring entirely the fact that two of them are burnt for a portion of the day and taking only one into consideration) paying for current at the rate of 5c per kilowatt and running ten hours a day for one year, by using POWERLITE REFLECTOR LAMP WILL EFFECT A SAVING OF OVER $1,000 IN CURRENT.

A large saving is also effected in carbons as the ordinary D. C. arc using from 70 to 80 amperes requires 7/8 x 12 positive carbons and 7/16 x 6 negative carbons. At least two negative carbons will be used for each positive carbon consumed. Using 1,000 positive carbons per year at $161.00 per thousand and 2,000 negative carbons at $72.00 per thousand, the amount paid for carbons during the year would be approximately $305.00. As against this 1,000 sets of carbons for the reflecting arc will cost at the most $85 and only one negative is necessary for each positive consumed. Figuring that only 1,000 sets of carbons are used per year (and this estimate is fairly conservative) THE CARBON SAVING WITH POWERLITE WOULD BE $220.00—A SAVING OF APPROXIMATELY 70%.

Control apparatus is very neat and compact and is attached inside the lamphouse, thus eliminating the necessity for extra shafts, gears and control handles. Constructed so that perfect control of the arc is secured and carbons fed intermittently and automatically upon an infinitesimal rise of voltage brought about by the burning of the carbons. Control apparatus is thoroughly protected and it is impossible for the current to reach the motor until the arc is struck regardless of whether the line switch is open or closed. This permits the control motor to be wound for proper arc voltage and to operate positively at full voltage as soon as it is brought into the circuit. The control mechanism forms part of the lamp itself and only the necessary controls project from the rear of the lamphouse.

The method of inserting carbons will be found a real convenience to the projectionist. It is merely necessary to press a lever, insert carbons into the carbon holders FROM THE SIDE and release the lever. The carbons are then locked into position ready for operation without the use of tools. Vertical adjustment of the negative carbon and lateral adjustment of the positive carbon have been provided for in a manner which will be found very satisfactory to the projectionist and Powerlite also permits an exceptionally long carbon trim. An improved friction device allows the arc to be struck and fed without unlocking it from the motor feed system.

Special attention has been given to the design and construction of the mirror which has been made according to our own specifications. Improved insulated mirror supports and latch allow the mirror to be readily removed for cleaning.

A radical departure and a great improvement in lamphouse construction has been made in Powerlite by having the door slide quickly and easily into the top of the lamphouse. This action is similar to that of the door in a sectional bookcase and leaves the interior clear and accessible for the projectionists' manipulation. The lamp slides easily into or out of the lamphouse and this will be found extremely convenient when cleaning or making replacements.

Powerlite lamphouse is of ample capacity and this is extremely important, as the reflector lamp requires a certain minimum space in order to secure the most efficient results. Stereopticon attachment may be easily swung into position for projecting slides, operating in a manner similar to that of the ordinary arc lamp. Entire lamphouse is finished in black crystallized lacquer and makes a very attractive appearance.

Powerlite can be attached in about five minu tes to Power's, Simplex or Motiograph and no lining-up or similar adjustments are required

Two Reel Comedies

A year ago we advised you to keep your eyes on Charley Chase.

We told you that the way he was coming the sky was the only limit to his future.

What has happened? During the past year he has appeared in an uninterrupted succession of really big comedies, with not one poor or just fair one in the lot. Each one has delivered a really startling number of laughs; each has been gilt-edged in production quality.

Have these latest rib-rockers screened for you, if you are out to get the best in two reel comedies.

Keep your eye on Charley Chase!

Charley Chase means extra money at the box office, IF you let 'em know he's on your bill.

sensational FOX successes!

JOHN FORD—mention his name and you think of "The Iron Horse," one of the greatest pictures of all time. He has also produced "Lightnin'" and "Thank You"—John Golden plays—"Kentucky Pride" and "The Fighting Heart."

REGINALD BARKER, master director of outdoor pictures, has produced a screen triumph for Fox, based on James Oliver Curwood's "When the Door Opened." Now he's preparing to film "The Johnstown Flood," a dynamic American epic.

JOHN GRIFFITH WRAY has made A. E. W. Mason's novel, "The Winding Stair," into a photoplay that breathes the romance of Morocco and the dash of the French Foreign Legion. It strengthens Wray's well earned reputation for producing artistic box office successes.

J. G. BLYSTONE has added to the pleasure of millions of Tom Mix fans with "The Lucky Horseshoe," which followed the Blystone-Mix production, "Dick Turpin." Now they are filming a popular Max Brand novel, "The Best Bad Man."

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER has made "Thunder Mountain," based on "Howdy Folks," a real drama of love in the hills of hate. "The Wheel" has all the punch of the stage play. Both are Golden successes, with proved audience appeal.

FRANK BORZAGE has done some of the best work of his distinguished career in filming "Lazybones," Owen Davis' gripping stage drama. Borzage will also direct "Wages for Wives" and "The First Year," John Golden plays. All three have proved their box office pull.

ROWLAND V. LEE has made "Havoc" into a powerful film. In "As No Man Has Loved" he has caught the adventure and romance of Hale's story, "The Man Without a Country." He packed all the thrills of Conrad's "Nostromo" into "The Silver Treasure," a colorful South American romance.

HARRY MILLARDE has made the screen version of Channing Pollock's play, "The Fool," with the same intelligent sympathy that he put into world-renowned "Over the Hill," one of the greatest money-makers the screen has known.

EMMETT FLYNN'S name recalls "The Connecticut Yankee." Now he's made another masterpiece, "East Lynne." It's better than the original melodrama, which has always drawn patronage for three generations. The picture will pack them in.

HENRY OTTO is celebrated for his skill in bringing fantasy to the screen. In "The Ancient Mariner" he gives his imagination free play, and it promises to beat his former greatest achievements.

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

Fewer Gestures—More Punches

DOWN by the Battery, in front of the New York Customs House you can see another battery—of sandwich men. They stand in a row, five or six of them, advertising to the overseas traveler, each one advertising a different photograph studio. Fore and aft they ALL carry the legend "NEAREST Passport Photo Studio."

And no matter where you meet them in the downtown district, no matter how far they may stray from their employers' reservation, THEIR photographic base is ALWAYS the NEAREST to you. Einstein, to whom all distance is relative could justify this ballyhoo violation of all natural laws. But this particular patient on the operating table needs a doctor other than an Einstein.

Some day the fates may shuffle the cards and deal me a couple of sandwich pasteboards wherein to slip my wearied carcass. When that day comes, and should fate decree that I cry photographic wares around Battery Park, I hope I shall have left enough courage to rear up on my hind legs and fight for a little individuality in the signs that I shall carry down my front and abaft my spine.

I can hear the argument even now. My prospective employer will point out to me that all of my competitors claim to be the NEAREST to the customer. "We've got to get the business while it's floating around," he'll say. "A fellow wants a quick photo quick. He doesn't want to walk a mile for it. Take that 'NEAREST' sign and take the nearest exit."

Chroniclers may not be able to write: "P. S.—He got the sandwich board changed." But under pain of starvation, when the mantle of a sandwich Elijah falls upon me, I'll not lend my frame to any perambulating pages that tote a GESTURE. The only gospel I want to preach, even as a derelict, is one that packs a PUNCH.

Today, not a sandwich mantle, but an editorial toga drapes my frame. The readers of MOVING PICTURE WORLD, among whom I am happy already to count a number of friends may wonder how I will invest that garment; what will be the "new editorial policy;" how numerous and how unique the planks in the platform. If a portable slogan is needed, something to paste in the fedora for future reference it is this:—Fewer gestures—more punches, for ourselves and FOR THE INDUSTRY AT LARGE.

This is a fast moving, hard hitting business. And not even its theatrical background can excuse any man in it who expects to get as much out of a pretty gesture as a solid punch.

The director who makes a winner doesn't do it because he sits up at night thinking of new monograms for his megaphone or new gimcracks for his directorial camp chair.

The executives who plan and execute successful publicity, advertising and exploitation drives don't do it because they fancy themselves a lot of temperamental footlight artists.

The exhibitor who keeps his house fresh and inviting, and who keeps on keeping his neighborhood or town beating a path to his box-office window doesn't do it because he has before him a picture of himself as a silver-tongued orator spellbinding an exhibitor convention.

The old song "There's a Broken Heart for Every Light on Broadway" has been re-written into "For Every Light on Broadway There Is a Broken Hope of the Man Who Tried to Be a Movie Magnate—with Gestures."

The men in the picture business today, in whatever branch of the industry who have pushed back the frontiers of success have done it because they PACKED THE PUNCH, NOT THE GESTURE. Look them over, and you'll agree.

Let's not make a spark that will crackle along Broadway and die out west of the Hudson. Let's not raise a whoop in Ashtabula, O., just to make it heard on Broadway.

SOLID SOCKS AT SUCCESS—that's our story. It is our aim to live that story to its utmost.

Back in 1907 the late James P. Chalmers rose up when the industry was forming and fumbling in the dark, turned on the switch of MOVING PICTURE WORLD and flooded this business with light.

It is an inspiration, gentlemen, to know that you work with the oldest paper in the youngest industry. It is refreshing to work under the enduring influence of the vision that created MOVING PICTURE WORLD.

When we can step up the light that James P. Chalmers turned on; when we can stimulate you and through you your business; when, week in and week out we can keep you in fighting trim; when we can help you close the fingers of BOTH hands for two-fisted, man-sized punches at prosperity, THEN we will count our job well done and not until then.

That goes.

Making It Plain

An utterly unfounded statement has been published in a local trade service, which, in the interest of truth I must correct. I want to make it plain that the resignation of Mr. Robert E. Welsh had absolutely no connection with any of his editorial stands during the time he was employed by this company.

Street Widening Hits 4 Large Theatres in Detroit

When the Detroit common council decided last week to widen Michigan avenue, one of the main thoroughfares of the Motor City, four thriving neighborhood theatres were vitally affected. This action will mean the elimination of three houses situated on the street, while a fourth will be forced to undergo costly changes in its front and enlargement of the rear. The widening process is to begin shortly after the first of the new year.

The front part of the Crystal Theatre building must be torn away, which will destroy its present lobby and take part of the auditorium. The owners of the theatre, however, have ground in the rear to enlarge, which will mean the rebuilding of the entire house.

The front part of the Kramer Theatre building must be razed to make way for the widening, but this will not affect the present aditorium, although it will decrease the size of the lobby and eliminate several stores which are housed in the same building.

Martin Brothers' Eagle Theatre and W. A. London's Ritz Theatre will be destroyed entirely, due to the fact that their lots are not deep enough to make rebuilding possible and the widening will take off so much of their fronts that there would not be sufficient room left for an auditorium and lobby.

Already two new projects have been announced in the district now served by the latter theatre, while the Crystal owners are planning to build a new theatre further out Michigan avenue.

CHANGES IN FOX'S BUFFALO OFFICE

There have been several changes in the Buffalo Fox exchange. Bill Rowell is now a sales representative instead of branch manager. Charlie Johnston has resigned and has accepted a position with the Freedom Film Corporation as a salesman. O. R. Rieffel, former manager of the Albany office and recently Rochester representative has also resigned from the Buffalo sales force.

A. M. P. A. Names Committees

Arrangements are already under way for the next Naked Truth Dinner, by the A. M. P. A., tentatively set for Saturday, February 7, 1926, at the Astor Hotel.

Appointments to the various committees of the organization were made public at the meeting. They consist of advisory council—Jerome Beatty, Arthur Brilant, John Flinn, Paul Gulick, C. L. Yearsley, Lon Young and A. M. Botsford; membership—P. A. Parsons, chairman; Paul Gulick and Julian M. Coloman; finance—G. Allvine, C. Einfeld, A. Rittenberg, W. Barrell and E. O. Brooks; publicity—W. E. Mulligan, Edward Klein, E. F. Finney and Dave Weschner; entertainment—Harry Reichenbach, Russell Holman, Tom Wilcy, Bert Adler, Irving Green, Herman W. Fisher, Jack Kopstein, Nat Rothstein and the board of directors, the advisory council and the past presidents; guests—V. M. Shapiro, W. F. Eberhardt and H. W. Fisher; art—Vincent Trotta, chairman; Harry Lewis, Keroly Gross, Hal Phyffe and C. L. Yearsley; auditing—Sam Palmer, chairman; H. C. Bate and Hal Rowe; A. M. P. A. Bulletin—W. E. Mulligan, managing editor; Edward McNamee, business manager; National Chancellor of U. S. Chamber of Commerce, John Flinn.

$1,000,000 Conn. Deal

A deal involving a million dollars was completed in New Britain when the Contaras Brothers conveyed a half-interest in their three theatres in that city to Israel J. and Bernard E. Hoffman, of Ansonia and New Haven, respectively, in return for a half-interest in a theatre and office building to be erected in New Britain. The Contaras Brothers own several theatres in Connecticut and the Hoffman brothers likewise are interested in the operation of a number of theatres. The new theatre building in New Britain is to cost approximately $800,000.

Industry "Speechless" in Tribute to Sir Jury

Approximately 150 high executives in filmdom and banking circles testified the esteem in which they hold Sir William Jury at a dinner tendered him by the English interests of which he has represented for many years, at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel on the night of September 30.

Major Edward Bowes, as toastmaster, announced that the affair would be "speechless." Nevertheless, before the evening had terminated the guests had listened to laudations of Sir Jury by Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Will Hays, Joseph Schenck ,"Bob" Ruben, Dr. Gianani, Sam Spring and Louis B. Mayer.

Gold fountain pens were distributed as favors. Members of Major Bowe's Capitol Theatre family and Broadway stars furnished the entertainment, which was under the able supervision of Nils Grantlund.

Sir William deservedly takes back with him an evening of fine character.

Skouras Enterprises Sued By Orchestra Leader

Herbert Berger, leader of a jazz orchestra now playing in a St. Louis hotel, filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court on September 26, asking $25,000 damages from Skouras Brothers Enterprises, Inc., for alleged breach of contract.

His petition alleges that he had a contract for his orchestra to play at the Grand Central Theatre for 12 weeks commencing on June 13 at $1,300 a week, but that it was taken off after but two weeks.

Spyros Skouras, president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises, denied that the company had entered into any such contract, stating that Berger and his orchestra had been paid in full for services rendered and that nothing further is due them.

Flinn, Dept. of Justice Agent, Sect. of Cleveland Film Board

LOUIS H. FLINN, for eight years a Department of Justice Agent, resigned his position with the government three weeks ago, to accept the post of chief investigator in the home office, New York, of the Film Boards of Trade.

Flinn's first job in his new capacity is as secretary of the Film Board of Trade in Detroit. He stepped immediately into that post just a few days ago when, during a visit by C. C. Pettijohn, counsel for the home office, Howard Christman, who for three years was the Cleveland secretary, suddenly relinquished his job.

Flinn, Moving Picture World hears, is only holding down the secretary's job temporarily with a view of grooming Mrs. Georgia Moffett for the post.

Charges of unfairness had been numerous, causing a deadlock between exhibitors and officials of the Cleveland Board, prior to Pettijohn's visit and the resultant changes, this publication gleans.

With the changes the horizon has cleared and things are again running smoothly in the Cleveland territory.—T. W.

Many New Theatres Having Fall Openings in Chicago

LUBLINER & TRINZ and Balaban & Katz will build a $1,500,000 theater at Cicero and Belmont, Chicago, according to announcement by attorneys for Lubliner & Trinz. Fronting 175 feet on Cicero avenue 250 feet north of Belmont, the theater building will be 180 feet deep.

The Ascher circuit will soon open the new Terminal theatre at Spaulding and Lawrence avenue that has been under construction for some time past. The new house will be devoted to pictures exclusively for a time, but can be utilized for stage shows as well. A fine orchestra will be a feature of the Terminal theatre and other features that will interest the patron. The house will seat 2500 and is being equipped with the latest and best theatre furniture. Edward Nikoden, a veteran manager of the Ascher circuit will be managing director of the new house.

The Goodman theatre on Michigan Boulevard has been finished and will be opened on October 22 according to word from the management. Thomas Wood Stevens is the managing director of the new theatre.

Lubliner & Trinz circuit according to publicity manager Kramer has 26 houses in the circuit, 19 in operation now and seven new theatres building. Two houses, the Harding and State theatres will be ready for early fall opening. The lease on the Orchestra Hall theatre for this season is up next week and the house will go back to the Chicago Orchestra management.

Hill and Havercamp circuit have started the erection of another theatre to be located at the northwest corner of Fullerton and Greenview avenue on the northwest side of the city. The new theatre will be 3 stories in height and will be of fireproof construction with the latest and best equipment. The exterior will be faced with terra cotta brick and the house will seat 1400.

Alger and Ramsey circuit have added the Rialto theatre at Bloomington Hills to their chain of houses. They now have theatres at LaSalle, Rantoul, Fairbury, Urbana and Paxton all in this state. Plans for further expansion of the circuit are reported as under way.

More than a half million persons were reported to have seen the fourth annual fur show given at the Balaban and Katz theatres last month by the Associated Fur Industries of the city.

E. B. Lewis who has been manager of the Rialto theatre at Aurora. Ill, has been named as general manager of the Great States Theatres, Inc. Aurora houses, namely the Rialto, the Fox and the Strand theatres. He succeeds J. J. Rubens who has been named as general manager and vice president of the Great States Theatres, Inc., with headquarters at 162 North State street.

Bikos Brothers have bought a site for a new movie theatre in Gary at 15th and Broadway and plans are being drawn for a fine de luxe moving picture theatre for that hustling steel city.

Lawrence Stern president of Balaban and Katz Corporation has organized a bond sales company under the name of the Lawrence Stern & Co. with a capital stock of $125,000 and offices at 231 South LaSalle street.

DISSOLVE OHIO COMPANY

Indications of discontent with the manner in which the affairs of the Ohio Amusement Co., Cleveland, Ohio, have been conducted are found in the filing of a suit in common pleas court for the dissolution of the company. Three stockholders, David L. Schumann, Meyer Fine and Abe Kramer, all of Cleveland, have brought action. They charge conflicting interests of various stockholders have rendered impossible the proper central operation of the string of eleven theatres under the company's control. The three stockholders ask the appointment of a special master and that they be retained in advisory capacities.

Connecticut Tax Law Is Big Subject of Michigan Session

H. M. Richey, general manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, declares on the eve of the annual session at Grand Rapids on Oct. 6 and 7, that the Connecticut tax situation is to be thoroughly rehearsed on the convention floor.

"The Connecticut law has already attracted nation-wide interest," said Richey in a statement to exhibitors, "and those who sit idly by and only read of what happens out there without thinking of the possibilities of its application to their own sections may get caught holding the bag.

"It is to foreign exhibitors against such a contingency that we want to go over the Connecticut matter thoroughly and awaken every member to the danger of such a situation. The old story about the ounce of prevention is going to be our cue in this case."

Arbitration is another matter that will occupy much attention on the convention floor next Tuesday and Wednesday and in addition there are a number of matters to be taken up that concern Michigan exhibitors and their relations with the producers.

Principal speakers at the convention will be Judge Alfred J. Murphy of the Wayne County Circuit Court; Lieutenant Governor George Welsh; Martin Quigley of the Exhibitors Herald; John M. Lovett, president of the Michigan Manufacturers Association, and Arthur J. Vandenberg, editor and publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald.

SMALLEY CLOSES LENGTHY DEAL

After dickering for three years, William Smalley, of Cooperstown, owner of a dozen motion picture theatres in this part of New York, has now acquired a strip of land in the village of Stamford, and will erect an 800-seat house next spring, that will be modeled after Smalley's houses in Sidney and Cooperstown. As soon as the new theatre has been completed, Smalley will close the one he is now operating in Stamford, and which has many disadvantages through its location on the second floor.

Incorporations

Hays Organization Announces Completion of New Uniform Exhibition Film Contract

Contains "Lot of Concessions"—Aims for "More Friendly and Better Working Methods Between Exhibitor and Distributor"—Say Hays' Lawyers —Report Arbitration Practically Same

By Tom Waller

A FORM of contract, the sole object of which in the words of Gabriel Hess counsel for the Hays organization, is for "more friendly and better working methods between the exhibitor and the distributor," is completed and only awaits the last minute approval of a few before it will be presented to the film industry through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

Moving Picture World, in an exclusive interview secured today, September 30, with Attorneys Hess and C. C. Pettijohn, learns that rough drafts of this contract already are in the hands of distributors and leaders of what Hess describes as "representative exhibitors."

The new contract, hailed as the Uniform Exhibition Contract, contains much new material and revisals of clauses in the contractual form now in use, the attorneys declared.

It contains a "lot of concessions," according to Pettijohn and is "a fine mutual contract—one that I don't think they can find anything wrong with," according to Hess.

The document, work on which was commenced by a continuing committee, comprised of exhibitor representatives, distributors and their counsel and members of the Hays organization in the M. P. P. D. A. headquarters last May, has already been approved 100 per cent by distributors and their counsel, Hess makes known.

Copies of this contract during the past few days have been submitted for the decisions of Charles O'Reilly, chairman of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of Greater New York, R. Biechele, president of the M. P. T. O. of Kansas and Missouri and M. J. O'Toole, ex-president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. These exhibitor leaders were among those representing theatre owners who sat in the continuing committee meetings and made many recommendations, most of which were incorporated in this new contract, according to Hess.

It is mainly upon the verdict of these men that announcement of the contract and its details to the industry is awaiting.

The fact that the contract is the work of the continuing committee and that such committee is described as including all interests of the industry will make this document subject to any changes at future times which this committee may deem advisable, we were given to understand.

Although the Hays attorneys refuse to discuss the details in the new form of contract and the manner in which it differentiates from the present form, the World understands that the present system of arbitration remains practically unchanged.

Another point in the new formula which all sides, particularly exhibitors according to the informants, will find highly satisfactory is the clause relating to play dates.

Amend Lobby Law

Following a controversy of several months over proposed changes in the ordinance governing the crowding of theatre lobbies, the various interests involved reached an agreement at a hearing held recently by the Building Committee of the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco. It was decided to allow the old ordinance to stand, with an amendment providing for a fine of $500 for permitting the crowding of theatre lobbies. This action was taken following a discussion of the subject before the board of governors of the Civic League of Improvement Clubs and Associations which voted to oppose the proposed ordinance as being too drastic.

REORGANIZE WINNIPEG MANAGERS

An important organization of managers in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been effected by H. M. Thomas, Winnipeg, western division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto. L. Charles Straw has been appointed manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in succession to H. A. Bishop and the latter has been made assistant to Mr. Thomas in the general supervision of theatres. E. A. Retallick of Winnipeg has been appointed house manager of the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, over which Mr. Thomas has general personal direction.

Music Tax Opposed by Iowa and Nebraska Men in Convention

IN spite of the unusually inclement weather forty exhibitors from Nebraska and Iowa attended the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association of Nebraska and Western Iowa, held at the Hotel Loyal, at Omaha, September 22 and 23.

A resolution was adopted opposing the so-called music tax exacted under the copyright law by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and an effort will be made to have that section of the copyright law repealed.

Another resolution was adopted setting in motion the machinery to seek to get the exchanges to be more accurate in affixing the right amount of postage to parcels containing reels, as the allegation was made that some exchanges used an arbitrary method of arriving at the postage and thus ran up a needless expense on the exhibitors.

C. E. Williams, Omaha, was re-elected president; H. F. Kennedy, Broken Bow, was re-elected vice-president; Miss Esther Andersen was elected secretary, and George H. McArdle, Omaha, was re-elected treasurer.

Following is a list of those in attendance: Max Drefke, Empress Theatre, Cherokee, Ia.; J. Douglas, Strand Theatre, Pierce, Nebr.; Marie Douglas, Pierce, Nebr.; Geo. O. Monroe, Omaha; Morris Cohn, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Ben Harding, Council Bluffs, Ia.; Chas. Nepodal, Omaha; G. H. Dennis, Weeping Water, Nebr.; Elmer Gailey, Wayne, Nebr.; Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Peterson, Genoa, Nebr.; H. A. Larson, Oakland, Nebr.; Dudley C. Scott, Le Mars, Ia.; R. W. Small, Wymore, Nebr.; Jas. Schoonover, Aurora, Nebr.; F. M. Honey, Lincoln, Nebr.; R. H. Robinson, Blair, Nebr.; R. E. Falkinburg, Lexington, Nebr.; Jack Rousek, Schuyler, Nebr.; Oscar Gross, Verdigree, Nebr.; J. M. Reynolds, Elwood, Nebr.; Lee F. Cowger, Coin, Ia.; William H. Creal, Omaha; Geo. H. McArdle, Omaha; C. E. Byars, Valley, Nebr.; Jos. Jicha, Milligan, Nebr.; Harry Sheman, Sioux City, Ia.; W. C. Whiting, Whiting, Ia.; Ralph Kissinger, Omaha; W. A. Bowker, Onowa, Ia.; Floyd Wolfe, Lynch, Nebr.; Frank Trullinger, Clarks, Nebr.; G. W. Morgan, Gothenburg, Nebr.; Walter H. Creal, Omaha; E. L. Davies, Laurel, Nebr.; C. J. Kremar, Stanton, Nebr.; C. J. Latta, Shenandoah, Ia.; Chas. Prokop, Wahoo, Nebr.; A. Burrus, Crete, Nebr.; Mr. Brown, Neola, Ia.

Exonerate Bradley

The case against James Bradley, union motion picture operator of Kansas City, charged with assaulting E. J. Lime, head of the non-union projection school sponsored by the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, was dismissed in a justice court in Independence, Mo., this week, Lime failing to appear in court.

B. & K.'s Relations with First National Unaffected by Merger

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY officials said that other than the details concerning their affiliation with the Balaban and Katz Circuit as published in Moving Picture World last week there were no further details yet ready for publication on the merger.

Of particular significance, however, is an announcement coming earlier in the week from First National that that company's affiliation with Balaban and Katz is effected in no adverse way by the merger. The statement reads:

"Balaban and Katz's recent theatre deal with Famous Players will in no way alter its long standing affiliation with First National Pictures. This fact was emphasized in a telegram sent by Sam Katz yesterday to all First National's original franchise holders. Mr. Katz's wire reads:

"Knowing your interest in the negotiations between Balaban and Katz and Famous Players, I want to advise you that our board of directors today ratified our deal with Famous Players. The first and most important thing is that the status of Balaban and Katz remains unchanged. Balaban and Katz remain the original franchise holder of First National and intend to contribute in the future as they have in the past to the continued development and success of First National. The success of First National is an integral part of your business and ours and our efforts will be directed to maintain the important position First National now holds in the industry.

(Signed) SAM KATZ."

A dispatch to the World from Chicago states:

Announcement by Leo Spitz of Hall and Spitz, attorneys for Lubliner & Trinz, that the recently formed theatrical combine of Balaban & Katz and Lubliner & Trinz Theatres, Inc., will start construction at once on a $1,500,000 moving picture theatre, to seat 2,500 persons, at Cicero and Belmont Avenues, points to the huge building program the company is actually engaged in Chicago.

When it is realized the buildings that are now under construction within the next few months, represent a cost of more than $19,000,000, the public can obtain a new conception of the vast activities of Chicago's largest theatrical circuit. It is obvious that so extensive an operation in the building field constitutes one of the biggest chapters in the progress of Chicago, not to be compared unfavorably with great civic enterprises, as not only one part of the city, but the north, south and west sides will be improved. For, there can be no doubt motion picture theatres increase realty values in every community and give the city its finest temples of architecture.

The World's Detroit correspondent advises:

In a statement issued last week, George W. Trendle, general manager of the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, Mich., stated that any deal between Famous Players-Lasky and the Balaban and Katz enterprises would in no way affect the Detroit situation.

Big West Coast Deal

The Bear State Theatres Corporation, a $2,000,000 corporation, has been organized in Los Angeles to take over the T. and D., Jr., Circuit. Those back of it are West Coast Theatres of Northern California, Inc., Mike Nafy and Nasser Brothers. West Coast owns one-half of the interest and Nafy and Nasser the other half. At least 250 theatres will be controlled by West Coast and its allies through this expansion. West Coast now operates 111 theatres and is building seventeen others. The building plans involve over $8,000,000.

Bear State Theatres Corporation will not have complete control of T. and D., but it will hold a majority interest. The T. and D. holdings include about thirty theatres and probably will be increased to seventy-five, all in Northern California towns. Their building program involves five new houses. Possibly, later on, Nafy's seven theatres and the eight owned by Nasser Brothers will be acquired by Bear State. This latter company also is about to invade the Colorado field, it is said.

O'Toole Now Major in U. S. Reserves

M. J. O'Toole of New York and of Scranton, Pa., associated with the Comerford Amusement Company in different theatrical enterprises, with headquarters at 1600 Broadway, has been appointed Major in the Reserve Corps of the United States Army.

This appointment was made at the direction of President Coolidge and is in recognition of Mr. O'Toole's services for the Army through the motion picture theatre screens while he was president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and chairman of the public service department of that organization, as well as for editorial and public service rendered to different divisions of governmental activities during the World War.

O'Toole will serve as required in the office of Secretary of War at Washington and in General Summerall's Second Army Corps Area, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York.

KNAPPEN SUCCEDS SCHMUCK

Pathe announces the following changes in branch manager personnel just effective; H. L. Knappen has been appointed branch manager at New Orleans succeeding P. A. Schmuck who has been transferred to the Charlotte branch; while E. E. Heller, formerly Charlotte branch manager has been appointed special district serial representative.

Laemmle Returning to U. S. After Epochal Trip Abroad

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, is returning to the United States after the most consequential trip taken by him in a number of years. He has been in Europe all summer, visiting the important film centers of that continent and furthering Universal's interests there and elsewhere.

He sailed from Cherbourg last week aboard the Berengaria and is due in New York late this week. With him is his secretary, Harry H. Zehner, and his two children, Carl Laemmle, Jr., and Miss Rosabelle Laemmle.

One of the most important events of Laemmle's stay in Europe was the holding of a Universal Sales Convention in Berlin. This was the first Universal convention ever held in Europe, and it was attended by Universal office managers from France, Czechoslovakia Italy, Spain, Holland and Sweden, in addition to the German representatives present.

This convention was similar in scope to sales conventions held in the United States. The visiting managers reported the current conditions in their territories and previewed coming Universal films. They reported that recent Universal Jewels, the pictures of the spring release schedule, have been exceptional box-office successes throughout the European field. It was the consensus of opinion that "The Phantom of the Opera" will be even greater than "The Hunchback" for European audiences. Up until now "The Hunchback" has been the biggest American success recorded on the other side.

Laemmle was the guest of honor at two important banquets in Europe. The first was held in the Hotel Pupp, Prague, Czechoslovakia, and was given in his honor by the exhibitors of Prague. The second was given in Berlin by the film writers and critics of that city. Both dinners were marked by enthusiasm and amity. In each case the Universal president was hailed for the excellence of Universal's product and assured that Universal pictures had won for themselves a warm spot in the hearts of the continental film fans.

During his stay in Berlin, Laemmle was the guest of the Ufa organization on a tour through the big Ufa studio plant at Neubabelsberg, on the outskirts of the German metropolis.

Shortly before he returned to America, the Universal chief acquired the rights to an important invention recently developed in Germany. It is a method of trick photography said to be very simple and very effective. The discovery of this invention led directly to the recent decision by Laemmle to make "Gulliver's Travels" as a big super-picture. The making of this story requires unheard-of camera stunts and almost impossible sets. In fact, the great story never has been made because it has been deemed impossible to make at a figure within the widest limits of reason.

The new German invention solves the great technical problems of "Gulliver's Travels," and at slight expense, it is said. As soon as Laemmle saw this device, he realized that he could make the famous Jonathan Swift satire and romance, a desire he long had cherished. Right to the invention were acquired forthwith.

The great camera problems of "Gulliver's Travels" include showing Gulliver in a land of little people, only a few inches tall, another sequence showing him in a land of giants, and other sequences.

M. P. T. O. A. Will Endorse Hays Contract If Found to Be Equitable, Says Seider

But Exhibitor Arbitration Chief Cites "Buried Clause Secretly Appended to Present Contract" as "Intentional Fraud" to "Hoodwink" Owners —Incorporates Charge in Letter to Hays

By Tom Waller

"IF the contract they are preparing is fair and equitable we will be the first to endorse it," commented Joseph M. Seider on the report that the Hays organization is soon to present to the industry a formula as told on another page of this issue of Moving Picture World.

But in the same breath the chairman of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America's committee on arbitration and contract, who recently presented to the film world a contract form of his own, termed as "despicable propaganda" and "intentional fraud" what he described to be a "hidden clause secretly appended to the uniform contract now in use."

"The Hays organization expected sales resistance because of the campaign of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners for a fair contract. To overcome this it is my opinion they inserted this clause," Seider told Moving Picture World.

The chairman of the arbitration and contract committee said that the clause was buried in such a way as to be wholly inconspicuous unless the exhibitor carefully read over a contract form with which, in most cases, he would believe was entirely an "old story" and one which he had read until he had almost memorized it.

Seider showed the writer two filled in contracts. Both were made out in August of this year and were two of over fifty cases in which he claimed his investigation had proven the exhibitors were unaware of the so-called new clause. This clause reads:

This contract and each and every term and condition hereof except number of pictures, rental price and play date herein specified shall be deemed amended, modified, added to and or abrogated by the terms and conditions of the proposed new Uniform Exhibition Contract, if and when finally adopted and approved by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., in so far as the terms and conditions of such new Uniform Exhibition Contract shall or may be in consistent with or additional to the terms and conditions hereof, and the provisions, terms and conditions of such new Uniform Exhibition Contract when so adopted and approved shall be deemed to be incorporated herewith to form a part hereof and to be binding upon the parties hereunder.

Seider today, September 30, announced that he has written to Will Hays about this clause. The text of this letter appears in full later in this story.

When the World questioned him about the clause and when it first made its appearance in contracts he stated:

"They employed much secrecy in the inserting of this clause. In not one of over fifty cases I have investigated has the distributor told the exhibitor that he inserted a new clause.

"The purpose is obvious. Where the exhibitor would object to the contract and insist upon a fair contract or the contract composed by us the distributor would be in a position to point out that it was the purpose of this clause to provide for the new contract in the event our proposed contract would be accepted by the Hays organization thereby giving the inference that it would be accepted."

At this point Seider declared the clause apparently was inserted to "hoodwink the exhibitor into believing it was the contract proposed by the M. P. T. O. that was the new form referred to."

"They have however kept the door open through the ambiguity of the clause," he continued, "so as to positively not recognize our proposed contract and to substitute any contract of their own.

"The clause is so constructed that at first glance, particularly to the layman, it gives the impression that it is intended for the benefit of the exhibitor. The opposite, however, is the case.

"Under the terms of the clause the exhibitor obligates himself to accept any contract in any form that the distributor wishes to force upon him, even to the extent of so ridiculous and confiscating a provision as the demand for a deposit of any sum of money without limitation.

"Nothing short of a fraud has been practised on the exhibitor in this case."

Seider's letter to Will Hays is as follows:

Hon. Will H. Hays, President.
Motion Pictnre Prodncers and Distributors of America, Inc.
469 Fifth Avenue,
New York City.

Dear General Hays:

You, no doubt, are aware of the fact that the members of your organization, without advice to their customers, have added a clause to the exhibition contracts that they enter into with theatre owners as follows:

"This contract and each and every term and condition hereof, except the matter set forth in the Schedule, shall be deemed amended, modified, added to and, or abrogated by the terms and conditions of the proposed new uniform exhibition contract if and when finally adopted and approved by Motion Picture Prodncers and Distribntors of America, Inc., insofar as the terms and conditions of such new uniform exhibition contract shall or may be inconsistent with or additional to the terms and conditions hereof, and the provisions, terms and conditions of such new uniform contract, when so adopted and approved, shall be deemed to be incorporated herewith, to form a part hereof and to be binding upon the parties hereto."

We can call it nothing but fraud when a distributor adds a clause to a contract that contains in bold faced type the words, "UNIFORM EXHIBITION CONTRACT," thereby leading his customer to believe that the contract that he is signing is the so-called Uniform Contract without change from the form that you have promnlgated.

The clause is so drawn that it would give the impression upon a first reading that the proposed new uniform exhibiton contract referred to is the form of contract proposed by us and it is only after a careful reading that it becomes apparent that it refers to a contract that yonr organization is obviously preparing.

We have no objection to your organization ignoring our proposed form and instead preparing one from your own viewpoint. On the contrary, we will welcome a contract drawn by you that is fair to both sides.

We must, however, protest, on behalf of our membership, against this newly added clause.

Through this clause an exhibitor agrees in advance to accept a contract, the terms of which are unknown to him. Your members require of the exhibitors to sign a check in blank for your organization to fill in the amount and the payee.

We have tried very hard, but in vain, to find a reason for this action other than an effort by your organization to overcome sales resistance because of the demand of the theatre owners for a fair contract to forestall the acceptance of our proposed contract by the Independent Motion Picture Association of America and to provide against a possible decision adverse to the form of contract now in use by your members.

In the event a decision is rendered, holding the present contract inequitable, we assume it is the intention of your members to substitute a new form for the present one and this clause makes it possible for you to do so. You purpose, thereby to make valid the present contracts, which we claim are invalid because they lack mutuality.

We can characterize this procedure in no other way than unethical, unjust and strategy.

Sincerely yours,
Joseph M. Seider,
Chairman, Contract & Arbitratiou Committee, MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS OF AMERICA.

Pettijohn's Reply

When questioned about what Joseph M. Seider calls the "buried clause secretly appended to the uniform contract," C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office, said that it clearly conveys its message.

"It is our contract, of course, that the clause refers to. The clause was put in by some companies in anticipation of changes. We do not know anything about Seider's contract. We have not read it. We are interested in our own contract. This contract is practically completed. We have already prepared rough drafts of it and have submitted it to some of the distributors and exhibitors for consideration by their attorneys."

BIG THEATRE FOR SEATTLE

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., as president of Washington State Theatres, Inc., a subsidiary of the Motion Picture Capital Corporation, has announced definite plans for the immediate construction of a big down town moving picture theatre on the site of the old Hippodrome, Seattle, Wash.

"American Film Finest," Says Canadian on Return from Europe

N. L. NATHANSON, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Limited, Toronto, has some very important views regarding the International aspects of the moving picture business since he returned from a lengthy visit in Great Britain and on the Continent. These views were forthcoming a few days ago in a recent interview.

Referring to a statement by Lord Newton that "American films in England are trash or worse," Mr. Nathanson declared:

"Partly inspired by the British producers but not altogether wrong and in no way different from the case here. We get poor pictures here—and we get most of the best. The best American film is the finest in the world. The poorest is no worse than the poorest of any other country; technically not quite so bad. What Lord Newton meant I suppose was that any nation has a right to make its own bad pictures and to sell them to itself."

"How are British facilities for production?" he was asked.

"Not so good as they should be. The industry needs organization. In fact, it needs a subsidy."

"Protection against American films?" the interviewer suggested.

"I don't say that. Till producers over there can turn out more good pictures judged from every angle, using the stage talent of which they have no end, as freely as the American producer does—well, of course, doesn't it after all come down to money, most of which is paid in salaries? And what British company can pay salaries such as stars get in Hollywood and New York? Why, there isn't a firm in Britain that could afford to spend half a million dollars on a picture unless they were sure of getting it all back from the market. American film companies can do it and take a chance because they have such an enormous home market before they touch a five-reel film for export."

"How do British exhibitors compare with American?"

"No comparison. We in Canada are decades ahead of the British exhibitor in showmanship. Even a fine film isn't given a decent setting over there. The British exhibitor does not understand the game of building up a show. Yes, I hope to bring over some good British films here. I'd like to have more of them to balance up the American. But the prospects now are not rosy. A great deal will have to be done to buck up the industry."

"After a vacation have you any fresh ideas about American film production?"

"Yes, I think too many pictures are produced without enough regard for the story, the drama, the life. Personally, I believe in building up picture interest, theatre interest, show interest. You cannot do that with hokum pictures or promiscuous sex film and slam-bang music. The claim of the moving picture must be established in its fidelity to life and its inter-relation to good music. That's why the Hippodrome (Toronto) spends more on music than on pictures. And it is time States producers paid more attention to subjects from other countries. There's a big life in Canada, for instance, that the film only touches now and again. That life ought to be featured, not only for this market and Britain, but for the American home life. The country is a link between the rest of the Empire and the United States. Moving pictures should be a part of the link. Not merely propaganda, but life. Let these people understand one another better and come together."

After a brief discussion of the legitimate stage, the interviewer asked: "So you do not evidently agree with those who say that the screen is strangling the drama?" Nathanson replied:

"Obviously not. Why, you can't kill drama. It's as old as the human imagination. The screen is only a juvenile to the stage. And the stage cannot hurt the screen either. Each helps the other, so long as the best in each is busy at the game. Mind you, the screen has killed off cheap melodrama for good and it has given the knockout to the high priced, machine-made stage comedy and a few other things. But it cannot kill drama and it would be a bad day for the screen if it could—because the motion picture has to depend for its future big development on people who know how to write for the stage and people who know how to act on it."

Federal Inquiry

Several Indianans who lost large sums of money in the Consolidated Realty and Theatre Corporation deal a few years ago, investments which totaled millions, have been subpoenaed to appear before the United States federal grand jury at Chicago, which is investigating charges that officials of the concern had used the mails in a scheme to defraud. The company operated a number of motion picture theatres in several Indiana cities.

9,577,243 Feet of Film Exported by U. S. in August

Preliminary figures just issued by the Department of Commerce show that exports of motion picture films, sensitized but not exposed, from the United States to all countries reached, in August 1925, a total of 9,577,243 linear feet valued at $175,816. This is nearly 13,000,000 linear feet under the unprecedented total of 22,000,000 linear feet of raw film exported in July 1925, but it tops by slightly over 3,000,000 feet the amount of raw film exported in August 1924.

Exports of negatives for August 1925 amounted to 1,760,117 linear feet, valued at $260,475 as against 671,765 linear feet valued at $106,559 in July and 1,188,238 feet valued at $244,339 in August 1924.

Exports of positives also showed a slight increase for August 1925 over the two previous periods, the figures reading, 20,368,923 linear feet valued at $572,782 for August 1925, as against 17,589,866 linear feet valued at $552,633 in July and 19,636,791 linear feet valued at $685,140 in August 1924.

Personals

John H. Kunsky, Detroit showman, left last week for an extended trip through Europe, accompanied by several friends. He will be gone about two months.

W. S. Butterfield and Edward C. Beatty, of the Bijou Theatrical Enterprises, Michigan, returned last week after spending two weeks in the northern part of the state duck hunting.

A. J. Kleist, head of the Kleist Enterprises at Pontiac, Mich., has returned from an extensive motor trip through Northern Michigan. While in Marquette for a week he was the guest of "Doc" Gallup, Marquette chain theatre operator.

A. W. Smith, Jr., assistant to E. A. Eschmann in the distribution department of First National Pictures, left last week on a three week's trip to the company's branch offices in the Mid-West and the Central districts. He will cover most of the territory in the Middle Western states in the interest of First National distribution before he returns to the home office.

Cleve Adams, Central Western Division Manager for Film Booking Offices is in New York for a few days conferring with the home office executives of F. B. O.

Walter Woods, production editor of the James Cruze unit at the Lasky studio, is en route to New York City.

J. Leo Meehan, the son-in-law of Gene Stratton-Porter, director of the famous author's "The Keeper of the Bees" which F. B. O. is distributing, is visting New York with Mrs. Meehan.

E. Bruce Johnson, foreign manager for First National, has sailed for the Continent where he will attend the opening of a number of new exchanges, the results of his work the past year in the augmentation of First National's branches abroad.

J. L. Schnitzer, first vice-president of Film Booking Offices, in charge of production, returned to New York after a five weeks' stay at the Coast studios where with General Manager B. P. Fineman, he lined up an unusually imposing array of material for the coming programs.

Paula Gould, general press representative in the East, came back to her New York desk recently after a busy session with the West Coast publicity staff.

East Coast scenario editor John Brownell has just concluded a five weeks' sojourn at the Coast, and is again busy in New York.

N. J. Exhibitors Hold Directors' Meeting at Asbury

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey recently held a directors' meeting at Asbury Park. Among those present were President Joseph M. Seider, Vice-Presidents Charles Hildinger, Peter Adams and Louis Rosenthal, Secretary Leon Rosenblatt, Treasurer Wiliam Keegan and Directors Sidney E. Samuelson, Benjamin Schindler, I. M. Hirshblond, Jacob Fox, J. J. Unger, Leo Newbury, E. Thornton Kelly, Louis Gold.

The reduction in power rate has been brought to a head and the data that was collected for the past year has been put in shape for presentation to the Public Utility Commission.

A campaign has been inaugurated in the City of Newark, comparing the amusements of that city with other cities of its size, in an effort to get the theatre-going public to patronize the local theatres.

Convention of Pathe Executives and Field Force Enthusiastic, Fruitful

THE convention of district-managers and home-office executives of Pathe Exchange, Inc., held during the past week at the Roosevelt Hotel, New York, was brought to a close on Saturday with a general discussion of ways and means to improve service in the field. Subsequent to the general sessions meetings were conducted at Pathe home office on Monday and Tuesday of this week, at which individual problems in the various districts were taken up and disposed of.

The convention marked the most enthusiastic and fruitful gathering of its kind in the history of Pathe. Harry Scott, general sales manager, who presided at all the sessions, struck the key-note of the convention in his opening address by urging the company's field representatives present to lay their problems and recommendations.

"We desire to base the decisions of this convention on first-hand knowledge of actual conditions in the field," declared Mr. Scott. "What we want are facts, not theories. If old methods and established procedure have outlived their time, we want to know it. This business of ours is constantly going forward in leaps and bounds. We must progress with it or be outdistanced. But we must proceed in accord with actual conditions as found in the field. Hence we want our field representatives to tell us completely and without reservations just what their observations are. We want your recommendations and we want your criticism without fear or favor."

Mr. Scott's invitation to discuss all problem candidly was accepted with enthusiasm by the district managers present. On the basis of subsequent discussions was laid the ground work for lasting and far-reaching results in the matter of Pathe policy and service. Several of those present who have been prominently identified in the past with other organizations declared that the practical results secured and the actual business accomplished at this conference were truly remarkable and surpassed anything they had ever seen in their experience in the industry.

The convention opened Wednesday evening, Sptember 23, and continued daily thereafter, beginning at 9.45 a. m. and adjourning each evening shortly before midnight. All the sessions were given over strictly to business, the only diversions of a social kind being a banquet tendered on Friday evening in honor of the Pathe producers and a theatre party on Saturday evening at which the managers and their wives were entertained.

One of the important phases of Pathe service up for discussion was the recently established staff of field exploitation men who are to work under the supervision of S. Barret McCormick, exploitation manager. The district managers were unanimous in their approval of this plan and hailed the idea so enthusiastically that Pathe officials decided upon an expansion of the original plan.

Plans also were discussed in detail for national advertising of a kind with which exhibitors can tie-up with direct benefit to their box-offices. Recent instances of Pathe's advertising campaigns, tying-up with Pathe-serial contests on "The Ideal American Family" and a beauty contest on "Sunken Silver," were cited as descriptive of the advertising policy which Pathe intends to pursue in the future. In both these instances were enabled to tie-up locally with resultant advantage to their own business.

The matter of Pathe product for the new season was also gone into thoroughly. At the opening of the 1925-26 term Pathe has lined up the most formidable program of feature-length productions and short features of its entire career. In addition to "The Freshman," "Black Cyclone," "Kivalina of the Icelands" and the forthcoming Hal Roach feature release, starring Rex, temporarily titled "The Devil Horse," Pathe has acquired within the past few weeks the distribution of a series of Harry Carey Westerns, a group of comedy-dramas starring Larry Semon, and four of Charlie Chaplin's famous screen successes—"A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside."

Also scheduled for the new season are 104 two-reel comedies from the comedy studios of Hal Roach and Mack Sennett. Four new Patheserials are lined up for release within the next year, starting with "Wild West," released September 27, and

High Sounding Titles All Right But Trailers Actually Sell Seats

By Tom Waller

A HIGH sounding title may draw in a high-brow Broadway crowd that "understands the language" but such means little or nothing—more especially nothing—to fans in the alley section of the city, or some inhabitants in most of the small towns.

This is the reasoning of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Brooklyn. They have decided that the solution is trailers that all classes will understand. Not only that but they want trailers to boost the producer and make his brand of pictures wanted in their respective houses.

A committee of three Brooklyn exhibitors this week went before President Woodhull of the M. P. T. O. A. and laid before him their plan.

After that they paid visits to most all of the big and little independent producer offices in Manhattan, the men, Eugene Zerner, Abe Phillips and Louis Schiffman told Moving Picture World that they were courteously treated but that only about one company, F. B. O., of all the offices they visited promised to aid them and provide trailers for any of the F. B. O. product that may be desired.

President Woodhull's letter to the Independent Motion Picture Association of America gives the action of these Brooklyn exhibitors a national angle. Woodhull seeks to have the independents issue trailers with all of this product, so that not only Brooklyn but the entire country will be relieved of the situation so truly characterized by the Brooklyn M. P. T. O. The letter:

Make It National

"We are presenting for the consideration of the members of your association, a resolution adopted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Brooklyn urging the Independent Producers and Distributors to furnish theatre owners with free trailers on their productions, as in their opinion such a course will result in increased business both for the distributors and the theatre owners.

"They point out the exploitation possibilities of such trailers and the great publicity value.

"We are very pleased to transmit this resolution to you at the request of these theatre owners, and would urge your giving the same your serious consideration at the earliest opportunity. We join in the belief of the Brooklyn theatre owners that such a practise will prove of great benefit and advantage to the producers, distributors and theatre owners."

Formal Request by Commission

In a brief filed with the Federal Trade Commission, its counsel asks for an order directing respondents, who are engaged in production and distribution, to divest themselves of theatre holdings, estimated to be more than $100,000,000. This brief seeks to prove attempted control of the industry by Adolph Zukor and others. It is 280 pages in length and purports to show that Famous Players owns from 40 to 100 per cent. of the various theatre-owning corporations throughout the country. Naturally, it does not take cognizance of the fact that Famous Players has already announced its intention to divorce its theatre interests from production and distribution.

Legislator Will Look Into Music Trusts

Exhibitors in Buffalo and western New York are enthusiastic over the announcement of Representative Clarence MacGregor that he will seek congressional aid to "throttle the music trust." Representative MacGregor, who gave invaluable aid in obtaining the repeal of the admission tax, declares he will seek an investigation of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to determine to what lengths it is going to enforce claims for the use of copyrighted works to which the organization considers itself entitled under what MacGregor considers an unwarranted interpretation of the copyright statutes.

..J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, declares that the repeal of this music tax is second only in importance to the admission tax repeal. It is expected that every exhibitor in this as well as other states will lend support to MacGregor in his fight as every motion picture house in the land is now paying tribute to the music society. "It is unthinkable," declares Mr. MacGregor, "that any person and group can be permitted to continue such a course. It is contrary to the American sense of fairness or decency."

Welsh Joins Associated as Advertising-Publicity Head

OSCAR PRICE'S forecast of wide expansion and renewed vigor for Associated Exhibitors, Inc., control of which he recently acquired, is given another item of proof this week with the news that Robert E. Welsh, until last week editor of Moving Picture World, has been secured for an executive post in the picture organization. Since it became known two weeks ago that Mr. Welsh was about to relinquish the editorial reins there had been considerable speculation as to the connection he had planned. His acquisition by Associated Exhibitors rounds out a home office staff that gives strong promise of the big things planned for that organization.

"Every week must bring its headline," seems to be Oscar Price's motto these days. It is only two weeks ago that announcement was made that he had completed negotiations to assume control of Associated Exhibitors, which will hereafter be divorced from Pathe in every respect by physical distribution. Then last week he crashed into the headlines with the news that Associated's new Board of Directors would include such prominent picture figures as P. A. Powers and Elmer Pearson, while John S. Woody was named for the post of general manager and Jay A. Gove retained as general sales manager.

The current headline means the bringing to Associated of one of the best known figures in the editorial end of the motion picture game. He assumes the duties of director of advertising and publicity and is preparing to organize one of the most complete and efficient departments in the industry. In this respect the new Associated Exhibitors starts entirely from scratch, these departments having in the past been handled through the Pathe organization.

Through his service as managing editor of Motion Picture News for five years and in recent years as editor-in-chief of Moving Picture World, Robert E. Welsh has been known to exhibitors throughout the country for ten years. Though young in years he is a veteran of the picture industry and probably numbers as many exhibitors as personal friends as any other figure in the business.

In making this latest announcement Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., declared: "I could use many hundreds of words in trying to tell exhibitors of our broad plans for advertising and publicity, especially as it concerns that all-important task, helping the theatre to sell the picture to the public, and I would not make it half as plain and emphatic as I do with the simple mention of Mr. Welsh's name. For a decade he has been brought into first hand, intimate contact with theatre men, has listened to their problems and has helped to solve them. His viewpoint is that of the exhibitor and the box office—and that is the sort of executive direction we want for our enlarged advertising and publicity departments."

Kansas City's Theatre District Moving Uptown

Theatre construction in Kansas City appears to have shifted from the southern section of the city to the older district of the city in the northeast section. One new theatre has been completed, another is under course of remodeling and enlarging, a third is under construction, while a fourth is planning to increase its seating capacity. The Vista Theatre has opened under the management of L. J. Lenhart, who also operates the Roanoke Theatre, while the Belmont Theatre, which is under construction, is nearing completion.

First National Makes Franchise Holders Sales Heads

FIRST NATIONAL'S franchise holders are to become sales representatives in their various districts, as well as exhibitors of its products.

This was one of several sweeping alterations in the distribution machinery of that concern, just announced by E. A. Eschmann. It involves the complete abolishment of First National's present system of district managers and the substitution of franchise holders in their places.

Eschmann points out that while they are exhibitors, primarily, the franchise holders are also partners in First National. And he contends that being partners they are as much interested in the sales as they are in their own exhibitions of its products. Therefore, they should throw their strength into the sales as wholeheartedly as they do into their showings.

The franchise holders, First National announces, were by no means backward in agreeing with Mr. Eschmann when he submitted his plan to them at their last meeting in Indianapolis. The suggestion was accepted unanimously and put into action at once. And those who agreed to take on the new labors of district managers insisted upon doing so without compensation.

"In fact, at the close of the meeting all the franchise holders volunteered their cooperation in their respective communities, even to the point of going out into the field and selling the pictures, themselves, if necessary. They also agreed to lend their assistance, whenever and wherever required, in smoothing out such difficulties as may arise in trading between seller and buyer," the statement says.

By virtue of this arrangement, First National's field forces will now operate under twenty-six district managers, instead of seven, as heretofore. Canada will remain under the supervision of a general manager, who will act as district manager, as well. The statement continues:

"Eschmann explained that the change in no way reflected upon the ability of the former district managers. In fact, under his new plan, they will remain with the company, but in the capacity of branch managers.

"In this manner, it is believed that considerably greater strength can be maintained throughout the field. For, while functioning ordinarily in the territory mapped out for them, provision is also made whereby any one or more of the branch managers, as required, can be switched at a moment's notice to any other territory that might show signs of weakening. This continued concentration of an augmented force (which will carry with it a variety of experience) upon the weak links is calculated to bring them out of their lethargy and place the entire distribution machinery on an even basis of 100 per cent. returns.

"A still more direct contact between the field agencies and distribution headquarters is also incorporated into the new arrangement. It is Mr. Eschmann's intention that executives from the personnel of the distribution department will circulate constantly around the cycle of the exchanges so that there will be no loss of direct contact between them and the home office. He holds that this will be one of the vital aims of his organization.

"Since the inception of the present distribution machinery, it has been Mr. Eschmann's consistent policy constantly to increase the responsibilities of the branch managers and he feels that after the two and a half years of training they have received under his regime each branch manager now actually considers First National's branch business as his own. The authority invested in him cements that feeling and brings out the highest type of loyalty to the organization and his keenest efforts to further the interests of First National. Such loyalty and effort also inure to his own best interests.

"By this change in policy Mr. Eschmann is calling to his distribution strength, the brains, acumen and force of the owners and partners of First National, and at the same time bringing about a closer and more direct co-ordination between the home office and the branches, as at least one of his associates in the home office will be making the round of the various branches, when he is not doing so himself. The points visited by himself or his associates will be those where the greatest benefit can be derived by direct contact."

Pathe Meeting

including "The Green Archer,'" by Edgar Wallace; "Janie," a western by Raymond S. Spears, and a thrilling, actional romance built around the United States Coast Guard service. In the short-feature department Pathe continues the distribution of its Grantland Rice "Sportlights," "Stereoscopiks," "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," Pathe Review, Pathe News, "Chronicles of America" and a special "Pilgrimage to Palestine" series of single reelers.

Those who attended the regular convention sessions included: Harry Scott, general sales manager, chairman; Pat Campbeli, feature sales manager; Stanley B. Waite, sales manager of two-reel comedies; E. Oswald Brooks, serial sales manager; W. A. V. Mack, short-feature sales manager; Charles Henschel, eastern district manager; Fred C. Aiken, mid-west district manager; R. S. Schrader, central district manager; Oscar Morgan, southern district manager; Frank Harris, western district manager; L. S. Diamond, manager of sales statistical dept.; S. Barret McCormick, exploitation manager; P. A. Parsons, advertising manager; E. F. Supple, publicity manager; Miss Regge Doran, manager of public relations dept.; Mrs. E. R. Dessez, manager of educational dept.; George Gray, editor of Pathe Sun, and W. C. Smith, controller.

At the banquet in honor of the Pathe producers, held on Friday evening, September 25, at the Hotel Roosevelt, there were present in addition to those already named: E. C. Lynch, chairman of the Board of Directors; Paul Fuller, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.; J. E. Storey, assistant general manager; Hal Roach and W. B. Frank, for the Hal Roach Studios; William R. Fraser and John Ragland, for the Harold Lloyd Corporation; Pete Carroll and John Waldron, for the Mack Sennett Studios; A. Van Beuren and Charles McDonald, for "Aesop's Film Fables" and "Topics of the Day;" Emanuel Cohen, for Pathe News and Pathe Review, and Irving Green for the Yale University Press.

Retain Hayward

According to a most reliable source Colonel William Hayward has been retained as special prosecutor and "czar" by the Independent Motion Picture Association of America. Official announcement of this fact is expected on October 2 when the organization meets in New York.

ROB TWO CALIFORNIA HOUSES

The Senator Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., was the scene of a bold hold-up on the evening of September 20, when two youthful bandits followed two employees from the box office to the theatre office on the mezzanine floor, secured $4,500 in cash at the point of revolvers, and made their escape.

A daring attempt at robbery at the State Theatre, Oakland, Cal., recently resulted in the arrest of Jose Herrera. Approaching the ticket office he asked the cashier, Miss Mae Roche, for a ticket, but suddenly reached through the window, seized $48, and fled. He was captured after a chase of several blocks.

BUTTERFIELD BUYS ANOTHER

Another link was forged in the chain of Butterfield theatres last week when the Dawn Theatre at Hillsdale was sold by Nick Pappas to the Bijou Theatrical Enterprise Company of Detroit, better known as the Butterfield organization. This addition means that the Butterfield circuit now has a total of thirty-seven theatres in operation in Michigan and several new houses under construction.

Fox Heads Realty Unit

What promises to be quite a most novel and unique real estate development on Long Island is foreshadowed in a statement just issued by Deauville Estates, Inc., headed by William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, but which has no connection whatsoever with the motion picture or theatrical interests controlled by Fox and his associates.

Deauville Estates, Inc., recently took title to what for almost three centuries has been known as the Floyd-Jones estate consisting of 557 acres at Massapequa, Nassau County, Long Island. The property has a frontage of 2200 feet on Merrick Road and 9100 feet on Great South Bay. The Floyd-Jones estate had been held in the same family for nearly 300 years.

NIAGARA STRIKE CONTINUES

The strike of musicians, stage hands and operators still is in force in the Strand, Bellevue and Cataract Theatres in Niagara Falls. It promises to continue indefinitely. High officials of the stage hands union were in town last week end but were unable to get together with the theatre interests. They returned to New York. Charley Hayman, president of the company operating the Strand and Cataract, has gone on a two weeks' hunting trip in the wilds of northern Ontario and Herman Lorence of the Bellevue has started on a motor trip through the Adirondacks to New York City.

Production News

A scene in "The King on Main Street," starring Adolphe Menjou, a Monta Bell production for Paramount.

"Iron Horse" Heads October Schedule of Feature Releases from Fox Film Corp.

"THE IRON HORSE," "Thunder Mountain," Tom Mix in "The Everlasting Whisper," George O'Brien in "The Fighting Heart" and "The Winding Stair" comprise the list of supreme attractions and starring vehicles to be released by Fox Film Corporation during October.

Supplementing this line-up of feature box-office attractions are the two-reelers, "Transients in Arcadia," "The Heart Breaker," "A Cloudy Romance" and "All Abroad"; the one-reelers "With Pencil, Brush and Chisel" and "Cuba Steps Out," and the usual twice-a-week issue of the Fox News reel.

"The Iron Horse," which is now released for general distribution after innumerable sensationally successful pre-release runs throughout the country, needs no introduction to exhibitors who read the trade journals. The tales of its triumphs in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cleveland and other places have been making interesting reading for the past year, and as a result exhibitors everywhere are familiar with its unquestioned box-office value.

On October 11 Fox will release the Tom Mix starring vehicle, "The Everlasting Whisper," and the supreme attraction, "Thunder Mountain." The former is an adaptation of Jackson Gregory's story of the same name. J. G. Blystone wielded the megaphone. Tony is seen and the cast of humans includes Alice Calhoun, Robert Cain, George Berrell, Walter James, Virginia Madison and Karl Dane.

"Thunder Mountain" is an adaptation of John Golden's stage success, "Howdy Folks," by Pearl Franklin. It was directed by Victor Schertzinger. Madge Bellamy, Leslie Fenton and Alec B. Francis have the leading roles. The supporting roles are filled by Jay Hunt, Zasu Pitts, Paul Panzer, Otis Harlan, Arthur Houseman, Emily Fitzroy, Dan Mason, Natalie Warfield, Maine Geary and Russell Simpson.

Smiling George O'Brien's starring vehicle, "The Fighting Heart," is scheduled for release October 18. This was directed by John Ford. O'Brien is supported by Billie Dove. The cast includes J. Farrell MacDonald, Victor MacLaglen, James Marcus, Francis Powers, Harvey Clark, Colin Chase, Bert Woodruff, Francis Ford, Lynn Cowan, Diana Miller, Edward Piel, Jack Herrick and Hazel Howell. "The Fighting Heart" is based on Larry Evans' Saturday Evening Post story, "Once to Every Man."

On October 28 comes "The Winding Stair," John Griffith Wray's first directorial effort for Fox. It was adapted from A. E. W. Mason's novel of the same name. The locale is war-torn Morocco. Alma Rubens is the dancer, with Edmund Lowe enacting the part of the French officer. The others are Warner Olandfi Mahlon Hamilton, Emily Fitzroy, Chester Conklin and Frank Leigh.

"A Cloudy Romance" and "With Pencil, Brush and Chisel" head the Fox short subject releases on October 4. The former is a two-reel Imperial Comedy directed by Lew Seiler, with Harold Austin, Hazel Dawn, Harry Dunkinson and Jules Cowles supplying the fun. "With Pencil, Brush and Chisel" is a one-reel Fox Variety which shows Emil Fuchs, America's foremost living artist, at work and play in his marvelous New York studios.

"All Abroad" is the second of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" series, scheduled for release October 11. Hallam Cooley and Kathryn Perry are continued in the title roles.

On October 18 Fox will release three short subjects, the one-reel Variety, "Cuba Steps Out," the two-reel Imperial Comedy, "The Heart Breaker," and the second of the O. Henry two-reelers, "Transients in Arcadia."

"Cuba Steps Out" shows the Pearl of the Antilles at work and play; "The Heart Breaker" is a typical Imperial with laughs from one end to the other, while "Transients in Arcadia" shows the adventures of a little shop girl in "high society."

Cast Complete for "Lord Jim"

All the principal roles have been filled for Joseph Conrad's "Lord Jim," which Victor Fleming is now directing for Paramount.

The featured masculine players are Percy Marmont, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton, Joseph Dowling, George Magrill and Duke Kahanamoku. The leading feminine role is being played by Madeline Hurlock.

Other well-known actors who will take part in "Lord Jim" include Jules Cowles, J. Gunnis Davis and Nick de Ruiz.

The story of "Lord Jim" was adapted by John Russell, an authority on Joseph Conrad's works. The picture will follow the novel closely, according to George Hull, who has just completed the scenario.

Butler in Leading Role

David Butler has been assigned the leading role in the third Royal Picture distributed throughout the world by the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation with the balance of the cast to be announced next week when the picture goes into production.

The picture, an adaptation from "The Taxi Mystery," a story of the same name by Jules Furthman, is one that demands all around versatility and Royal production officials are very well pleased with the signing of Butler.

Production Plans by Ginsberg

By the first of November the Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation plans to have all details for the second half of the year's schedule of Banner Productions and Royal pictures completed. The Banner series in the last half are "The Checkered Flag," a story of the automobile speedway to be directed by John Adolfi, "Whispering Canyon," a story of the lumber forests of the northwest, and "Brooding Eyes," a mystery drama of the underworld.

The second half of the Royal series will be "The Millionaire Policeman," "A Desperate Moment" and "The Phantom Express."

Vignola to Direct "Fifth Avenue"

Robert G. Vignola, veteran director, has been engaged by A. H. Sebastian, general manager of Belasco Productions, Inc., as the director of that company's next big production: "Fifth Avenue," to be released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

"Fifth Avenue" will be a dramatization of Arthur Stringer's story, just accepted for publication by The Saturday Evening Post, that will visualize the mystic romance, adventure, pathos and gaiety of the great metropolitan thoroughfare from which the story takes its title.

Louis B. Mayer, on Trip East, Announces Great Production Program for M.-G.-M.

THE GREATEST FALL PRODUCTION SCHEDULE in the history of motion pictures is just being put into effect at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios at Culver City, according to an announcement made by Louis B. Mayer, head of the organization now conferring with executives in the East.

The usual fall production is to be more than doubled, states Mr. Mayer, while the scenario and production departments have already entered upon a state of intensive activity in preparing to put through the ambitious production schedule mapped out by executives of the organization.

Within the next four months at least twenty feature productions, many of them superspecials, will be sent east either completed orin a state nearing completion.

King Vidor, who has, in "The Big Parade," starring John Gilbert, made what is said to be one of the best productions in the history of the industry, is just beginning his fall productions by directing Lillian Gish's first Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "La Boheme," in which John Gilbert, another M.-G.-M. star, will also appear. Mme. Fred Degresac has scenarized the Henri Murger classic for this production, while Harry Behn has made the adaptation. It is planned to make this picture one of the best films of all times and a notable cast of big artists has been assembled to support the star. Renee Adoree and Karl Dane, who played to make cinema history in "The Big Parade," are members.

"The Big Parade" is based on an original story by Laurence Stallings, adapted to the screen by Harry Behn.

"Four Flaming Days"

Elinor Glyn, who has just completed the supervision of "Four Flaming Days," written by herself and directed by Jack Conway, has been promoted to the directorial ranks and will personally direct her next story, "The Only Thing." While it is her first effort at directing it is the result of her intimate knowledge of that art through supervision of her productions.

Tod Browning has just completed another of his original melodramas of the half-world, which will be made under the title, "The Mocking Bird," and will star Lon Chaney. It is a story of a conflict between London's fashionable West End and the Limehouse district. Waldemar Young is completing the script and filming will begin at an early date.

George Hill has been assigned to direct Rex Beach's "The Barrier," adapted by Harvey Gates, which will be the second Rex Beach story in production this year. The other, "The Auction Block," has not yet been assigned. Hope Loring and Louis Leighton have adapted the latter story to the screen.

"Nocturne"

Leon Abrams, director of Sarah Bernhardt's last motion picture, and author of "The Masked Bride," in which Mae Murray is now starring with Christy Cabanne at the megaphone, has been assigned the much-coveted English novel, "Nocturne," one of the best fiction works of Frank Swinnerton.

Benjamin Christianson recently brought to America on contract by Louis B. Mayer, has completed "The Light Eternal," slated to go into production some time this month. It is a story with an old world locale and will be interpreted by an all-star cast of renowned players. It is Christianson's initial effort in America but his record in Denmark, Sweden and Germany is one of the brightest.

Hobart Henley, one of the M.-G.-M. aces, will this week begin production of "Free Lips," an original story by Carey Wilson, scenarized by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton. Norma Shearer, star of "The Tower of Lies," will be starred in "Free Lips" and Lew Cody will be featured.

One of the most pretentious efforts of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer schedule will be the filming in technicolor of "Bardelys the Magnificent," a romantic and colorful story of medieval France by Raphael Sabatini. Because of his success in directing "The Big Parade" and "La Boheme" this plum has been drawn by King Vidor. For his priceless acting in both productions just named John Gilbert has been assigned the starring role.

Scenarists are now adapting several stories suitable for Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan star who has just completed "Lights of Old Broadway" under the direction of Monta Bell. One of these will be selected for this young star's next vehicle and production will start next month. "Lights of Old Broadway" has been adapted to the screen by Carey Wilson from the stage success "Merry Wives of Gotham," by Laurence Byre.

"Paris"

Paul Bern, who won his directorial spurs with the Paramount organization, will direct "Paris" as his initial M.-G.-M. picture. The story is an original from the pen of Carey Wilson and has been adapted by Jessie Burns. It will be an extravagant production of modern Parisian life with the theatre and stylish clothes as a background. The film will feature the creative work of Erte in both ballets and costuming effects, notable among which will be the famous "pearl ballet."

Edmund Goulding has just completed his script of "Sally, Irene and Mary," based on the successful musical play of Edward Dowling adapted to the screen by Louis Leighton and Hope Loring and direction will begin this week.

Robert Z. Leonard is now directing his first fall picture, "A Little Bit of Broadway," co-starring Charles Ray and Pauline Starke. Upon its completion he will be assigned another vehicle which will in all probability be interpreted by an all-star cast. Richard Connell wrote "A Little Bit of Broadway," while Jessie Burns made the screen adaptation.

Marshall Neilan is completing his last picture under his present contract with the studio, "The Great Love," based on his own original story, and adapted by himself and Benjamin Glazer. Christy Cabanne has been assigned the direction of "Dance Madness," written by S. Jay Kaufman and adapted by Max Marcin, who is now engaged on an original story for fall production.

"The Mysterious Island"

"The Mysterious Island," picture rights of which have just been purchased from the estate of Jules Verne, is to be directed by Jack Conway, who will take a company to the Bahamas. Many of the scenes will be made under water in the harbor of Nassau and vicinity, under the direction of J. E. Williamson. Harvey Gates has scenarized the novel for this production.

"WELCOME TO OUR STUDIO!" Louis B. Mayer (right), head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios at Culver City, greets Col. W. J. McIntosh, United States Comptroller of the Currency and President Coolidge's chief lieutenant in the program of national financial stabilization. The Colonel was in Hollywood recently.

A suitable story for direction by Mauritz Stiller, famous Swedish director who has just arrived to begin work under a M.-G.-M. contract, is now being sought and will be announced at an early date. Greta Garbo, who has also just arrived in America, will be assigned a suitable vehicle sometime this month.

Monta Bell, who made a number of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures this year, including Marion Davies' "Lights of Old Broadway," ZaSu Pitts' "Pretty Ladies" and Norma Shearer's "Lady of the Night," will return from the East very soon in order to help select his next story, the direction of which is included in the fall schedule.

One of the superspecials of the year, to be made under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg, will be a propaganda picture of high entertainment value aimed at the arousing of the nation against the peril of fire. Mr. Mayer has recently concluded an arrangement with the International Order of Fire Chiefs and the Pacific Coast Fire Chief's Association whereby this picture will be made and released by his organization. It will also have the moral backing of the Lions Clubs and the Kiwanis Clubs.

Among the other stories slated for fall production are Vicente Blasco Ibanez' "The Temptress" and an original by Donald Ogden Stewart, who is returning to America from Europe to complete the story.

PRESERVING IRELAND FOR THE IRISH

Here's Maurice Kavanaugh, one of highest of Free State officials now administering the affairs of Erin's Isle (at right), snapped just a few seconds after he had assured (and reassured) Thomas Meighan, our handsome Paramount star, that a whole lot of fellows over there have been preserving Ireland against the day of Tom's arrival. The latter went over, taking Lois Wilson as his leading lady, to make his forthcoming picture under the influence of Irish atmosphere and aspirations.

"Flames" to Be Included in Stromberg Supervised List

PRELIMINARY work on six pictures to be supervised by Hunt Stromberg has been begun at the Culver City studios, announces Louis B. Mayer. The initial picture to go into producton under Stromber's supervision is to be Rex Beach's "The Barrier," which George Hill is to direct from the adaptation now being made by Harvey Gates.

Stromberg will supervise the making of a great feature with a colorful fire menace background in co-operation with the International Order of Fire Chiefs and the Pacific Coast Fire Chiefs' Association. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased C. Gardner Sullivan's original story, "Flames," for this vehicle.

Fire Chief William Scott, of Los Angeles, is to be technical adviser of the production. The story is laid in New York City and has a background that includes a fire underground, one above ground, one in the air and one at sea, which together call for the use of modern fire-fighting equipment including the harbor fire patrol. This background, however, is of secondary importance as the centrol theme of the story is an ardent and romantic love tale.

"Monte Carlo," a new and original story by Carey Wilson, is another Stromberg production scheduled for early production. Special effects and costumes by Erte are among the features announced for this production. Robert Z. Leonard will direct this film from the adaptation made by Alice D. G. Miller.

Archie Mayo has been signed to direct Rupert Hughes' "Money Talks." Hope Loring and Louis Leighton are adapting this work to the screen.

"The Mysterious Island," by Jules Verne, is another big production to be supervised by Stromberg. Harvey Gates has been assigned the task of scenarizing this famous novel.

Two other picturizations upon which production is to start soon under Stromberg's supervision are "Bellamy the Magnificent," the stage success by Roy L. Horniman, and Blasco Ibanez' "The Torrent." The latter work is now being adapted to the screen by Dorothy Farnum.

Gala Night at Warners

Distinguished Audience Attends Premiere of "The Man on the Box"

Warner Bros. were hosts at Warners Theatre, New York, last Friday night at 11:30 o'clock to probably as distinguished an audience as ever assembled for a picture showing. The occasion was the world premiere of Syd Chaplin's new special production, "The Man on the Box," and was the first midnight performance given by the Warners in their new house.

In the large company of guests were Helio Lovo, consul-general from Brazil and J. C. Muniz, deputy Brazilian consul-general; P. R. Rincones, consul-general of Venezuela; William Wallace White, consul-general of Paraguay; Berea Alejanro, acting Spanish consul-general, and the consuls-general of Nicaragua, Colombia and El Salvador; Helen MacKellar, Edith Talliaferro, Pauline Lord, Gloria Gould, Pedro De Cordoba, Arthur Hammerstein, George Jessel, Frank McGlynn, Lee Shubert, Brock Pemberton, Graham McNamee, radio announcer at WEAF; Hugo Riesenfeld, Cari Edouard, Algernon Tassin, Frank Sullivan, "Bugs" Baer, Konrad Bercovici, Karl K. Kitchin, Jack Lawrence, Milt Gross, Representative Sol Brill, Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, John McE. Bowman and Major J. Andrew White.

Praise for "The Circle"

Frank Borzage's "The Circle," at the Capitol Theatre in New York, has won enthusiastic comment from the Manhattan critics, who have lavished particular praise on the cast. Eleanor Boardman, Eugenie Besserer, Malcolm McGregor, Creighton Hale, Alec Francis and George Fawcett have been eulogized by the press for exceptional work in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage success by W. Somerset Maugham.

Selects Ethel Wales

Ethel Wales, who scored so big in "The Covered Wagon" and more recently in "Steppin' Out," a Columbia feature comedy, has been selected by Harry Cohn of Columbia to play with Dorothy Revier in "The Penalty of Jazz," one of the forthcoming Waldorf releases which Columbia will distribute.

H. M. Warner, Back from Coast, Announces 1926-27 Plans

SO far advanced are Warner Bros. with their 1925-26 production schedule that the company is already announcing plans for next season. According to H. M. Warner, who arrived back from Los Angeles yesterday, his company will make forty pictures on the 1926-27 schedule and books and plays are now being bought so that work on next year's output can be prepared with the completion of the current picture program around January 1.

Six Supers Next Year

Mr. Warner said plenty of time will be given to preparation of scripts and selection of directors and next year's program would be headed by six super-specials, all of these being photoplays of the $2.00 class. An idea of the superior character of the 1926-27 production can be gleaned from Mr. Warner's statement that the six biggest pictures would consist of two by Ernst Lubitsch along an entirely different line from his past efforts, two starring John Barrymore and "Syd" Chaplin in two big comedies.

Twenty-five productions of the forty comprising Warner Bros.' 1925-26 schedule already have been completed, although the first official release on the program was less than a month ago. With only fifteen pictures remaining to be made, and twelve underway, the West Coast Studios are placed in a more enviable position than ever in the past, one more favorable probably, than any other company has ever enjoyed.

Despite this unprecedentedly early start, however, there is to be no let-up in studio activities. In fact, so favorably impressed are the studio and production officials with the advantages which an early start gives, that they propose to move forward with renewed energy, in order that the next year's program also may get off to an early start.

Will Keep Crosland

Warner Bros. Sign Director of "Bobbed Hair"; to Work With Barrymore

Alan Crosland, the director, has just been signed to a long term contract by Warner Bros., according to an announcement made by the company's officials in the main offices in New York. He was signed after the completion of "Bobbed Hair," the picturization, soon to be released, of the sensational novel which was the composite work of twenty famous writers.

With the signing of the contract came the additional announcement that Crosland will direct "Don Juan," second of John Barrymore's new specials for Warner Bros., and that production work on this tale of the romantic adventures in Lord Byron's life will start soon. Elaborate perparations are under way for the making of this photoplay on an elaborate scale.

Chaplin Dines Reviewers

Charlie Chaplin presided as host at a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton last week, his guests being the picture reviewers of the New York newspapers, when he discussed freely those of his plans that are sufficiently definite and stated among other things that he will soon begin work on his new picture, "The Dandy," in which the comedy element will be dominant throughout.

M.-G.-M. Borrows Warner Star

Through special arrangements with Warner Brothers, Louis B. Mayer, head of the Culver City studios, has arranged to borrow Willard Louis for the role of Attorney Slodden in "Free Lips," Norma Shearer's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Louis' role in this picture is to be an important one. Hobart Henley is producing this Carey Wilson story with Lew Cody playing opposite Miss Shearer.

Goldwyn Signs MacIntyre

To cope with his augmented production activities, Samuel Goldwyn, independent film producer, has engaged Robert D. MacIntyre as production manager. Mr. MacIntyre, casting director for Goldwyn and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures for the last four years, assumes his new duties with Mr. Goldwyn at once. He will supervise the three production units under Mr. Goldwyn's supervision, viz: George Fitzmaurice productions, Potash and Perlmutter productions and the Henry King productions.

SPLENDID DOG ACTOR IN A FINE PICTURE

Rin-Tin-Tin, Warner Bros.' canine star, is seen to excellent advantage in "Kentucky Hills," a production that is scoring successful presentations throughout the country.

"The Freshman" Shatters All Records Wherever Shown

THAT "The Freshman," Harold Lloyd's new Pathe feature comedy, is a world-beater for breaking box-office records, is attested to by the following telegrams received at the Pathe Home Office.

Manager Gillick of the Pathe Chicago Branch, wired: "Roosevelt broken every record for the house with 'The Freshman.' Picture is doing tremendous business and everyone is talking about it."

J. A. Epperson of the Kansas City Branch, wired: "Opening day of Freshman at Royal Theatre, Kansas City, Missouri, broke every record in history of theatre by number of paid admissions and box office receipts. Royal has played practically every big picture released, in past eight years, so this record proves beyond any question of doubt that Harold Lloyd is biggest box office attraction in show business. Press and public claim 'Freshman' Lloyd's greatest."

Manager Moran of the Pittsburgh Branch, wired: "One hundred per cent. Pathe show —'Freshman,' 'Tee For Two,' and 'Pathe News.' Opened the new Wilmer and Vincent Theatre in Altoona yesterday. It went over with a bang, continual applause." S. C. Jacques, of the Cincinnati Exchange, wired: "The Freshman opened at the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, yesterday and broke all house records for gross receipts and number of admissions. Despite hot weather in afternoon and intermittent showers at night. Would have done even better had not majority of people stayed to see picture twice."

W. W. Anderson, of the Atlanta Office, wired: "The Freshman in spite of heat and the curtailment of electric light throughout the entire city of Atlanta opened up Monday to a very successful business standing them out at all performances and showed much larger increase Tuesday holding out at least eighteen hundred people at nine P. M. last night with little world series opening here today between Crackers and Fort Worth. And the opening of the football season here Saturday with thousands of visitors in our city looks as if 'Freshman' would shatter all records in attendance and box office receipts at Howard Theatre."

Harry Graham, of Chicago, wired: "Freshman opened Danville Sunday and in spite of thermometer being around the hundred mark during the day and rain at night, Sunday, grossed big. Expect picture to exceed Covered Wagon gross."

Saturday records also were smashed at the Victory Theatre, Denver. Sunday exceeded Saturday by 1,646 people.

Marion Davies, Star of "Beverly of Graustark"

MARION DAVIES will begin work shortly on "Beverly of Graustark," her next staring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Sydney Franklin has been engaged to direct the production.

"Beverly of Graustark" is from the pen of George Barr McCutcheon, and, as a sequel to "Graustark," was one of the best sellers of its day. It is a modern story with a mythical kingdom as a setting. This story will be the first of a goup of important productions to be made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the personal supervision of Irving Thalberg.

It was Miss Davies' original intention to make "Buddies" or "Polly Preferred" as her next picture, but Norma Talmadge, who recently achieved a great success in "Graustark," persuaded her to forego plans for the above productions until "Beverly of Graustark" had been completed.

Miss Davies recently finished work on "Lights of Old Broadway," her first starring production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. This photoplay, adapted from Laurence Eyre's play "The Merry Wives of Gotham," will have its world premiere in Los Angeles, October 17th. In this picture Miss Davies plays a dual role.

F. B. O. Has Many Big Pictures in Work; Planning New Program

OCTOBER and November bid fair to be the most active months of the entire year at the F. B. O. Studios. Despite rumors of slackening production the schedule prepared by F. B. O. executives calls for the employment of more players and directors, more writers and more artisans than have ever worked at F. B. O. over a like period of time.

Not only is F. B. O. concentrating attention on the completion of its mammoth sixty-four unit program for the season of 1925-26 but executives are already at work assembling the program for the year to follow.

Late September finds the studio working at full blast. Tom Forman is at work on location with the "Midnight Flyer" company, filming a railroad melodrama by Arthur Guy Empey, the world war hero. It was adapted by J. Grubb Alexander and in the cast are Dorothy Devore, Cullen Landis, Buddy Post, Claire M'Dowell, Frankie Darro and others. It is slated for early winter release.

Casting is under way for "Flaming Waters," a drama of the oil industry based on an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon. This will be produced by Associated Arts Corp., under the supervision of Ludwig Erb for F. B. O. release. Mary Carr, Malcolm M'Gregor and Pauline Garon have already been signed for principal roles and Harmon Weight will direct.

Fred Thomson is on location in the San Fernando Valley, filming ranch scenes for "All Around the Frying Pan," a Frank Richardson Pierce story. David Kirkland wrote the continuity and is directing.

Maurice Flynn is on location filming "Between Men," a comedy melodrama for F. B. O. Spectacular dam break scenes feature the story which is being directed by Harry Garson. Kathlyn Myers and Helen Lynch have important roles in support of the star.

Richard Talmadge is at work on an unsettled story under the direction of Sam Nelson.

Continuity writers are at work on the Laura Jean Libbey stories, "When His Love Grew Cold" and "A Poor Girl's Romance." These productions will be numbered among F. B. O.'s twelve Gold Bond specials for the coming season.

Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s new Western star, is at work on an unnamed vehicle under the direction of Bob De Lacey and Jimmy Gruen.

Alberta Vaughn, Larry Kent and the F. B. O. comedians, Kit Guard and Al Cooke, are working in the fourth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" series while preparations are going forward for the early filming of two other series from the pens of H. C. Witwer and Sam Hellman.

Emory Johnson, having completed his newspaper melodrama, "The Last Edition," starring Ralph Lewis, is at work on the story for his next F. B. O. production. Its theme is being withheld for the time being.

Evelyn Brent will shortly return from a month's vacation in New York to resume work in her popular series of melodrama, in which the little star is achieving wide prominence.

Ulrich with Pro-Dis-Co

Charles Kenmore Ulrich, for many years editor of Paramount Press heets, is now associated with Producers Distributing Corporation in the same capacity. Mr. Ulrich is a veteran newspaperman having been identified with the San Francisco, Chicago and New York press for years before taking up motion picture publicity work.

United Artists Pictures for Iowa State Students

THREE of the greatest film stars in the world will be shown this fall on the screen of Iowa State University through the recent action of the college movie committee. These stars are Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks. Their productions to be shown in the very near future are "Little Annie Rooney," "Don Q," and "The Gold Rush," respectively.

Other United Artists Corporation releases booked by the university committee are D. W. Griffith's "Sally of the Sawdust," Rudolph Valentino in "The Eagle," William S. Hart in "Tumbleweeds," and "Wild Justice," a John W. Considine Jr., production, directed by Chester M. Franklin and featuring Peter the Great, celebrated canine movie star.

The movie committee has arranged for an eight piece orchestra to furnish adequate musical settings for these noted features, and there are up-to-date machines in the projection room. The movie season opened with a revival of D. W. Griffith's "Way Down East," and the booking schedule includes pictures featuring George Arliss in his best films; Charles Ray, Jack Pickford, Richard Barthelmess and Carol Dempster. The programs also include the latest news reels and a fair share of short subjects in the way of comedies and educationals.

WARNER BROS. EXECUTIVES PLANNING A CAMPAIGN

Myer Lesser, director-general of advertising, publicity and exploitation (left), discusses with Samuel E. Morris, general manager of distribution, the details of the campaign for "The Man on the Box," the exceptional success in which Syd Chaplin is starred, now on the screen in the Warner Theatre, New York City.

"The Best People" Finished

On the completion of "The Best People," Sidney Olcott, who produced the picture for Paramount, left Hollywood for a vacation at Big Bear Lake, Cal.

On his return to the studio announcement will be made of his next production.

"The Best People," from the play by David Grey and Avery Hopwood, was adapted by Bernard McConville.

"Rocking Moon" Cast Completed

The casting of "Rocking Moon," the forthcoming George Melford production, has been completed with the engagement of Rockliffe Fellowes, Laska Winters, Luke Cosgrave and Eugene Pallette to support John Bowers and Lilyan Tashman in the featured roles.

"Rocking Moon," one of the biggest book hits this year, was adapted for the screen by Jack Cunningham. It will be presented by Metropolitan Pictures through Producers Distributing Corporation.

To Direct "Million Dollar Handicap"

Scott Sidney has been selected to direct "The Million Dollar Handicap," which will be a Metropolitan production for release by Procers Distributing Corporation.

"The Million Dollar Handicap" will be an adaptation of W. A. Fraser's story "Thoroughbreds." Scott Sidney, in conjunction with F. McGrew Willis, is now working on the continuity script and William Sistrom, general manager of the Metropolitan Pictures, states that filming will begin the latter part of September, with an all star cast.

WILLIAM JAMES CRAFT

The director of the Bob Custer "Westerns" for Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., is demonstrating his ability to freshen up this particular type of picture.

"Off the Highway" Proclaimed At Los Angeles Premiere

THE public and the critics of Los Angeles combined to classify the Producers Distributing Corporation release, "Off the Highway," as a box office and an artistic success recently when the production received its world premiere showing at the Forum Theatre.

When the critics endorse a picture as a technical and an artistic success, it does not always follow that the public supports it at the box office; but "Off the Highway" received the enthusiastic commendation of the press and the appreciation of the public as well.

Especially noticeable, during the engagement of "Off The Highway" at the Forum was the way business increased during the week. Saturday and Sunday, the opening days, drew the usual steady hold-out business, but instead of business dropping down during the week, as is usually the case, the box office revealed a daily increase, with Friday, the closing day, actually registering a slightly larger total than the opening Saturday.

There was not a dissenting note in any of the newspaper criticisms—one and all they hailed "Off the Highway" as a decidedly worthwhile dramatic production saying in part:

"'Off the Highway' is a photoplay abounding in atmosphere and color and possessing a strangely haunting theme. This picture is a notable achievement for many reasons; the first being the work of William V. Mong. This veteran plays a dual role and the double exposures that result are the most remarkable I have ever seen."—The Daily News.

"'Off the Highway' is interesting and unusual. William V. Mong plays the dual role and he gives a fine performance—finished and convincing. Charles Gerrard is unforgettable as the sleek hypocrite. His scene with Mong, where he piously explains his aims in life, is one of the cleverest pieces of acting seen on local screens for a long while."—Los Angeles Times.

"'Off The Highway,' showing this week at the Forum is well named. It is quite out of the beaten path . . . the points of the story have been skillfully brought out . . . William V. Mong plays the dual role splendidly . . . he mimes the patience of the valet and the outbursts of the choleric old gentleman with rare understanding—The Examiner.

"A gripping story totally different from any heretofore seen on the screen. Forman has taken this novel of the queer life of Caleb Fry and made an entertaining study of human nature. The realism of some of the sequences remind one forcibly of some of Poe's immortal hair-raisers."—The Evening Herald.

Finds Heavy Demand for Warner Pictures in West

HEAVY sales and an extraordinary interest on the part of exhibitors throughout the West were reported by Harry Lustig, Western division manager for Warner Bros., on his arrival in Los Angeles last week. It was his first visit to that city since his appointment to his new post and was timed to make possible a conference with Harry M. Warner before the latter's departure for New York.

For several weeks Lustig had been traveling about the territory between Denver and the Pacific Coast. Though finding a heavy demand for all Warner pictures, he reported a special exhibitor interest in dates for John Barrymore in "The Sea Beast," Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box," and Monte Blue in "The Limited Mail."

One theatre each in Portland, Ore., Seattle, Tacoma, Denver, Salt Lake City and Ogden is booked solidly for the entire Warner product and this is true also of many smaller cities in towns in the West and Northwest, Lustig reported. Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and California are all heavily represented in the bookings and the Consolidated Amusement Company of Honolulu has booked the Warner product solidly for the year.

The division manager called attention also to the wide interest shown, notably in many of the smaller communities, in Ernst Lubitsch and his productions. Lubitsch's pictures, with their sophistication and subtlety, apparently carry a universal appeal, regardless of locality.

Lustig found business conditions in Southern California in a particularly healthful condition.

New DeMille Production

After several years devoted exclusively to directing, William De Mille has turned author again and has written the story for his new production for Paramount. Through a change in production plans, this photoplay, tentatively titled "Magpie," will be next on Mr. De Mille's schedule instead of "Polly of the Ballet," which previously had been announced. Bebe Daniels will have the featured lead. The choice for the chief male role has not yet been made.

BETTY BRONSON IS THE "GOLDEN PRINCESS" OF A MINING CAMP

In her current release the screen Peter Pan is called upon to wear hoop skirts and crinolines, and she does it with rare artistry for a young girl. Neil Hamilton has the leading role opposite the dainty star, and a fine cast is added to the charming story. "The Golden Princess" is Miss Bronson's fourth Paramount picture.

Cecil B. De Mille Studio Now at Production Height

THE Cecil B. De Mille studio at Culver City is witnessing the greatest activity in its entire history with the fifth, sixth and seventh pictures on De Mille's 1925-26 schedule now under construction; the De Mille personally directed production, "The Road to Yesterday," being edited and titled; and active preparations being made for the filming of three other productions including the second big De Mille special, "The Volga Boatman."

Cecil B. De Mille has returned from a two weeks' outing on his yacht "Seaward," and has plunged into the cutting and titling of "The Road to Yesterday," and immediately upon the completion of this work he will go into conferences with Jeanie Macpherson on the adaptation of "The Volga Boatman" which she has prepared from the story written especially for De Mille, by Konrad Bercovici.

"The Volga Boatman" as the title implies, is a Russian story, in which the pomp and panoply of the old Russian aristocracy will be pictured in brilliant contrast with the frugal and strenuous life of the hardy, plodding workers in the lower social strata. The author, although thoroughly familiar with the subject, went to Europe last spring, especially to write this story in the actual atmosphere that will be reflected on the screen.

"Three Faces East," the famous romance of the secret service by Anthony Paul Kelly which has to its credit one of the biggest stage runs in the theatrical history of Broadway, New York, is in production under the direction of Rupert Julian, with Jetta Goudal, Robert Ames, Clive Brook and Henry Walthall in the principal roles, while Julian in addition to directing is filling the part of the "Kaiser," the role in which he scored a dramatic triumph in "The Beast of Berlin."

Alan Hale with Rod La Rocque and the company which will support him in Braveheart," his second starring vehicle for Producers Distributing Corporation, is working on the initial scenes of this production. Some exceptionally interesting Indian sequences have already been filmed along the picturesque Russian River in northern California, and later scenes from one of the biggest foot-ball games of the present year will be included in the action.

"Braveheart" is an adaptation by Mary O'Hara from Strongheart the famous stage play of modern Indian and college life by William C. De Mille. Lillian Rich plays opposite La Rocque, while the featured players include: Robert Edeson, Tyrone Power, Jean Acker and Sally Rand.

Paul Sloane is directing "Made for Love" an original story by Garrett Fort. This will be the third Leatrice Joy starring vehicle under the De Mille regime. The story is a satirical modern romance staged in the ancient atmosphere of Egypt, where King Tut and other rulers of long lost kingdoms are being unearthed.

"Don Q" Breaks Record

"Douglas Fairbanks in 'Don Q,' broke all opening day records for the last nine months," reports Roy LaVoise, manager of the Strand Theatre, Huntington, W. Va., after a big box-office engagement for this United Artists Corporation release. "My patrons were very high in their praise," the message reads. "Any exhibitor who has an opportunity to book this picture and does not book it, is missing a real bet as 'Don Q' certainly whips them into line."

Harold Lloyd's Latest Captivates N. Y. Critics

"THE FRESHMAN," Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe picture, enjoying a run at the Colony Theatre, New York City, has received a shower of extravagant praise from the New York newspapers. The following are extracts:

The New York American—"Beg, borrow or steal, but get the price somewhere for a ticket to the Colony Theatre this week to see Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman.' By no means miss getting the best laugh of the year."

The New York Times—"Judging from what happened in the packed theatre in the afternoon, when old folks down to youngsters volleyed their hearty approval of the bespectacled comedian, the only possible hindrance to the physical well being of the throngs was an attack of aching sides."

The Daily Mirror—"Harold Lloyd charged the Colony yesterday and kicked a goal with his latest college football comedy, 'The Freshman'."

The Daily News—"'Your money refunded if you don't laugh.' The Colony would have been perfectly safe in handing out laugh insurance to its audience yesterday—and for all days to come."

The Morning Telegraph—"You'll forget that it is a symbol of bad manners to laugh out loud when you view 'The Freshman' at the Colony. In fact, you'll be lucky to be able to control your laughter at all."

The Herald-Tribune—"It's quite funny enough to suit the most exacting, and, thank heaven, most of its humor is derived from situations and not from throwing things and kicking people about."

The Evening World—"'The Freshman' is Harold Lloyd at a new high level. One gale of laughter after another swept the spectators and then rippled back again in infectious giggles. For hilarity it marks the high point of the season."

The New York Evening Post—"Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, 'The Freshman,' which opened at the Colony yesterday, is a very funny movie, and like all really funny movies, it contains, likewise, a distinct element of pathos."

The Sun—"Laughter, loud, hearty, laughter, filled the Colony yesterday when Harold Lloyd's new comedy, 'The Freshman' — a strikingly humorous slapstick affair which turned academic ways to burlesque account—made its first appearance hereabouts.

The Evening Journal—"'The Freshman' is without a doubt one of the funniest, most spontaneous comedies that ever flickered to a happy fade-out. All of Lloyd's comedies have been excellent, but this one surpasses everything he's done.

NOBODY EVER WANTS THREE THIRTEENS ON HIS AUTO NUMBER PLATE

In his speedy current offering Richard Dix, the Paramount star, has a fast picture in "The Lucky Devil," directorial credit going to Frank Tuttle. Esther Ralston plays opposite the speed demon.

Rosher Contracts With Ufa

Charles Rosher, one of the most capable cameramen, who has been with Mary Pickford continuously for eight years, has signed a contract with Ufa, the noted German film concern. He will go abroad right after the completion of Miss Pickford's "Scraps," now in production.

In Germany Mr. Rosher will be associated with Herr Murnau, famous director who made "The Last Laugh."

"My association with Miss Pickford has been most pleasant, and I am leaving only because of the opportunity for additional experience in foreign fields," said Mr. Rosher.

Miss Pickford said she is most sorry to lose Rosher, as she always had valued his services highly, but did not want to deprive him of any opportunities.

Rosher has photographed fifteen Mary Pickford productions—a record for a cameraman with a single organization. These films include "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," "Rosita," "Little Annie Rooney."

Concerning "Dorothy Vernon" the British reviewers had this to say: "If there were a Nobel prize for photography it should go to Charles Rosher."

Rosher studied technical and artistic photography abroad.

"Nightie Night, Nurse"

"Chuck Reisner Directing Syd Chaplin in New Warner Bros. Comedy

A remarkable list of screen favorities appears in the cast of Warner Bros. "Nightie Night, Nurse," with the line-up yet to be completed. Syd Chaplin started work on this picture only a few days after finishing the production of "The Man On the Box." Patsy Ruth Miller, will play opposite Chaplin. Others in the cast are Gayne Whitman, Pat Hartigan, Edith Yorke, Dave Torrance and Raymond Wells.

Big "Gold Rush" Staged for Chaplin Film in California

A BIG EXPLOITATION STUNT in connection with Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush" has been put over in Los Angeles, where this United Artists Corporation release is now playing an indefinite run at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre in Hollywood, and is past its tenth week. The stunt was put over in a tie-up between the theatre and the Los Angeles Examiner, and arranged after Sid Grauman had a long distance telephone conversation with Charlie Chaplin in New York.

A representative of Chaplin and Grauman made a survey of the territory to be covered by the stunt, and heralded it as the "Gold Rush."

The soles from twenty of Charlie's shoes were spotted along Santa Monica, Washington, San Vicenta, Wilshire and Pico Boulevards, all running through the select Santa Monica bay district to the beach. The Los Angeles Examiner notified the public that finders of these shoe soles could have them redeemed at Grauman's Egyptian Theatre for a pair of the best seats for the "Gold Rush."

This planting of treasure tokens was done daily, with an announcement in the newspaper, while diagrams of the treasure hunt territory were flashed on the screen at the Egyptian in order to give some clews as to treasure location.

In order to make the stunt more thrilling, twenty sacks of treasure, some of them containing as much as $100 in gold, were buried along the beach. These sacks of money were made more difficult to find than the shoe soles, the latter being more or less in the nature of consolations.

"Sally, Irene and Mary"

Sally O'Neill is to have the role of "Mary" in Edmund Goulding's "Sally, Irene and Mary," now in production at the Culver City studios. Constance Bennett, as previously announced, has been assigned the role of "Sally" and Joan Crawford is to appear as "Irene" in this elaborate picturization of the Crawford musical stage success, adapted to the screen for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Louis Leighton and Hope Loring. Other additions to the cast are: Ray Howard, who played the juvenile lead a few years ago in "Courage," and who has been cast as the college boy; Aggie Herrin, who is to play Mrs. O'Brien; Kate Price, who will be the Mrs. Dugan; Henry Kolker who will have the role of Marcus Norton; Edna Mae Cooper, who will appear as Maggie; Gene Miller, cast as the call boy and Voya Georges, cast as Hyra. These additions practically complete the cast, William Haines, Karl Dane, Belva McKay, Doris Cleveland and Douglas Gilmore having been assigned roles some time ago.

Schulberg Seeking New Material; To Lay Out Plans for Next Season

WITH more than half of his current program of twenty Preferred Pictures now finished, B. P. Schulberg has arrived in New York from the coast to confer with J. G. Bachmann, general manager of distribution, regarding the purchase of story material for the 1926-1927 season. He will make a survey of the current Broadway stage productions with a view to securing several for filming as Preferred Pictures and will also negotiate for a number of best-sellers from the lists of current fiction. It is expected that he will remain in the east sufficiently long to array all plans for the coming year and that before his departure he will be ready with an announcement.

The producer brought with him the master-print of the latest Preferred Picture, "The Other Woman's Story," by Peggy Gaddis' novel founded upon a sensational American divorce suit. He stated that this story has proven a successful experiment in a new plot construction which consists of taking the main thread through one courtroom scene and working out the story-proper in fifteen or more retrospective episodes.

"Tearin' Loose," a very fine Western, gives Louis Weiss' new Artclass star just the opportunity Wally has needed to enable him to "go over the top" with the fans who like this type of film.

Record Breaking Program of Productions for F. P.-L.

ALTHOUGH production activities have ceased temporarily at Paramount Long Island studio, where only two companies are now working on the big stages, plans are in preparation at the Lasky studio on the West Coast for a record breaking production schedule.

Charles Eyton, general manager of the West Coast plant, is in receipt of instructions from Jesse L. Lasky, first Vice-President in charge of production, covering the company's producing schedule for the fall and winter months.

Within the next thirty days, seven feature productions will be in the making at the Hollywood studio and the momentum of filming pictures is counted upon to increase from then on.

Pola Negri began work on September 21 on her new starring picture, "The Tattooed Countess," under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair. The story, by Carl Van Vechten, is a best seller.

On the same day James Cruze started filming "Mannequin," an adaptation of Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize contest novel.

Raymond Griffith is also in action on his new starring feature, "Stage Door Johnny."

The same week that the Pola Negri and James Cruze pictures were placed in production, Raoul Walsh called "camera!" on an elaborate film presentation of "Hassan," with a feature cast soon to be announced.

September 28 will see the beginning of "The Enchanted Hill," with Irvin Willat wielding the megaphone on this Peter B. Kyne story.

On October 5, William DeMille will launch production on his own story, "Magpie," with Bebe Daniels in the featured lead.

During the same week Victor Fleming will begin filming "Two Soldiers," which marks the return to the screen of Mildred Davis for the first time since she became Mrs. Harold Lloyd three years ago. The story, by Hugh Wiley, has a war background, and will feature in the cast Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, in addition to Miss Davis.

During October, at least seven companies will be actually shooting at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Hollywood or on location.

Eight pictures have been definitely scheduled for November and December, and preliminary plans are now being made for production activity beginning January 1 that will rival or possibly eclipse the gigantic program of 1925.

The past week at the Eastern plant saw the conclusion of three new productions to be released among the Golden Forty. One of these was Monta Bell's screen version of "The King on Main Street" with Adolphe Menjou, Greta Nissen, Bessie Love and Oscar Shaw.

"Stage Struck"

Gloria Swanson completed her latest starring vehicle, "Stage Struck," under the direction of Allan Dwan, with Lawrence Gray opposite Miss Swanson. An unusual locale was used as background for this picture, the company making a ten days' location stay at New Martinsville, W. Va., where scenes were filmed on board a floating theatre—a ship that plies up and down the Ohio River, stopping at towns not reached by the usual rail routes. Among the supporting players in this comedy were Ford Sterling, Gertrude Astor and Marguerite Evans.

D. W. Griffith has put on celluloid the last scene for "That Royle Girl," his first picture for Paramount, with Carol Dempster, W. C. Fields, Harrison Ford and James Kirkwood in the principal roles. "That Royle Girl" was adapted from Edwin C. Balmer's Cosmopolitan Magazine serial of Chicago's jazz and underworld districts.

The last of the beautiful ballroom scene for Herbert Brenon's "A Kiss for Cinderella," with Betty Bronson and Tom Moore, has been taken down, and the picture is now in the cutting room. Esther Ralston, Henry Vibart and Dorothy Cumming are among the principal players in the supporting cast.

Thomas Meighan is working on the interiors of "Irish Luck," his latest effort, under Victor Heerman's direction, for which the company journeyed to Ireland for authentic locations. Lois Wilson has the chief feminine role.

"Womanhandled"

Two companies of Paramount players are working far from the studio on exteriors. One is the Richard Dix unit, making "Womanhandled," at Houston, Tex., with Gregory La Cava, a newcomer to the ranks of Paramount directors, at the megaphone. They have engaged a large herd of cattle for the filming of a stampede, at the Blakely ranch, 30 miles from Houston. Esther Ralston is the heroine of this companion picture to Gloria Swanson's "Manhandled."

Frank Tuttle, making "The American Venus" from Townsend Martin's original story featuring Miss Ralston, Lawrence Gray, Ford Sterling and Fay Lamphier, the "Miss America" of the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant, has returned from Greenwich, Conn., with a troupe of players for the filming of the interiors.

Herbert Brenon has started on George M. Cohan's stage success, "The Song and Dance Man," with Tom Moore, Bessie Love and Harrison Ford in the featured roles. Others in the cast are Norman Trevor, George Nash and Josephine Drake. The screen version is the result of collaboration between Mr. Brenon and Mr. Cohan, the scenario being written by Paul Schofield.

Another picture which will go into production this month is "Aloma of the South Sea," with Gilda Gray making her official film debut in the New York stage success.

ALBERT SYDNEY HOWSON

The new head of the literary department of Warner Bros. has a wide background of varying experiences in the literary field back of him. Big things are expected during his administration.

M.-G.-M. Ball October 31

The third annual Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Ball scheduled for Saturday evening October 31 at the Hotel Astor promises to be the outstanding event of the theatrical year along Broadway.

Major Edward Bowes and the entire house and technical staff of the Capitol Theatre are at work on numerous novelties to be presented and they will all be on hand the evening of the event to see that it is run to perfection.

Nils Granlund, master of ceremonies, is lining up the talent that will appear and we are assured it will include stars and choruses from every Broadway musical hit, revue and the popular night clubs. Dancing will be enjoyed to the music of several of the best known orchestras in the world. An elaborate banquet will be served.

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who is now in the East, is arranging for the personal appearance of practically all of the M.-G.-M. stars and featured players. In addition all the stars of every other organization in the East at the time will be on hand.

Our next Mayor, "Jimmy" Walker, will be on hand with a contingent of City, State and Federal officials and prominent personages in all branches of the sporting world will be there.

Two Warner Pictures

"The Cave Man" and "The Night Cry" To Go Into Production

Two more pictures on Warner Bros' 1925-26 schedule of forty are about to go into production at the Coast Studios, according to information received at the home offices this week. These are "The Night Cry," in which Rin-Tin-Tin will be starred, and Gilette Burgess' romance, "The Cave Man."

Herman Raymaker has been assigned to direct "The Night Cry" news which will be gladly received by everybody who has seen Rin-Tin-Tin in "Below the Line," just released. Raymaker wielded the megaphone in the production and won the praise of all the critics who have viewed the picture.

Marie Prevost will star with Matt Moore in "The Cave Man," a thrilling story of a wonderful wooer and a wonderful prize. Lewis Milestone, whose most recent picture was "Seven Sinners," in which Miss Prevost had the lead, with Clive Brook playing opposite her, will direct.

Six Features Ready to Start Production at Universal City

WITH six features ready to start production this week, and five pictures now being filmed, Universal City is experiencing one of the busiest periods of its career.

Charles Brabin, having just finished direction of "Stella Maris," will direct an original photoplay, as yet untitled, written by Raymond L. Schrock, general manager, with Mary Philbin as the star.

Svend Gade is collaborating with Charles Whittaker on a screen story based on a Swedish novel, entitled "Wives For Rent," and expects to start work immediately.

Reginald Denny, having finished his starring production, "What Happened To Jones" will start work this week on "Skinner's Dress Suit," and as with his last picture, will have William A. Seiter behind the megaphone.

Henry McRae is lining up the cast to support William Desmond in "String of Steel," a chapter-play chronicling the building of the railroads.

Jack Daugherty will be featured in "The Radio Detective" a chapter-play adapted from Arthur B. Reeve's latest mystery novel.

In addition to these features, the regular schedule comedies, starring Neely Edwards, Charles Puffy, and the "Sweet Sixteen" troupe, headed by Arthur Lake, will be made. Edgar Kennedy is directing the latter series, Richard Smith is directing Edwards, and George Summerville is handling the Puffy company. All the comedy units are under the supervision of Scott Darling, a pioneer in production.

Features now in production are "The Midnight Sun," forthcoming Super-Jewel under Dimitri Buchowotzki's direction; "Two Blocks Away," directed by Harry Pollard; An untitled historical production, directed by Edward Sedgwick with Hoot Gibson as the star, and "The Scrapping Kid" starring Art Acord, made under Clifford Smith's direction.

Louise Dresser in "Fifth Avenue"

Louise Dresser who registered a remarkable impression by the quality of her work in "The Goose Woman," has been engaged by A. H. Sebastian to play an important part in his forthcoming production, "Fifth Avenue." The initial scenes for this production have been made on Fifth Avenue, New York, under Robert G. Vignola's direction, and upon the return of the company to its headquarters at the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood, Miss Dresser will join the cast which already includes Marguerite De La Motte, Allan Forrest, Josephine Norman and Sally Long.

"Wanton Kisses"

Independent Production by J. Ray Friedgen, Written by Louis Allen Brown

Harry Chandlee is cutting the J. Ray Friedgen production, "Wanton Kisses," for the independent market. This six-reel feature has Maurine Powers in the leading role, supported by a strong cast, including Frederick Parke. The picture was made in New York, with Walter Strange at the camera. The story is from the pen of Louis Allen Browne, and is a melodrama, with a college life and sporting angle.

J. Ray Friedgen has produced a number of features for independent use. He will announce his releasing arrangements shortly.

Kerr Returns to "Lot"

Robert Kerr has returned to the William Fox West Coast Studios after an illness.

Greatest U. S. Land Rush Filmed for Hart Picture

THE greatest land rush in the history of government homesteading—that of the famous Cherokee land strip—was duplicated last week in a gigantically staged movie scene for William S. Hart's "Tumbleweeds," his first production for United Artists Corporation release.

The location was on La Aguerro Rancho, California. King Baggot directed the big scene, assisted by Justin H. McClosky and thirty others. There was a camera battery of nineteen machines, and a range of 17,000 acres for all the maneuvres.

There were hundreds of extra players, men, women and children; hundreds of wagons and vehicles of all sorts; hundreds of heads of horses, mules and cattle, with the 1925 model automobile mingling incongruously enough with the nondescript vehicles and old-fashioned high-wheeled bicycles.

There was a big crowd gathered to witness the shooting of the big land rush scene, which was gone through with without an accident of any kind. Those interested declare this "Tumbleweeds" scene easily will rank as one of the greatest of its kind ever incorporated into any motion picture.

Barbara Bedford is the leading woman in "Tumbleweeds," and others in the supporting cast are J. Gordon Russell, Richard R. Neill, Lillian Leighton, Lucien Littlefield, Jack Murphy and Gertrude Claire. The picture is being rushed for early fall release.

Dillon to Direct Dean

Preparations are now under way at the Metropolitan Studios for the first Metropolitan Picture in which Priscilla Dean will star under her new contract.

Several stories of the colorful and fast action type, in which the dynamic star achieved her greatest popularity have been purchased for Miss Dean and William Sistrom has signed Edward Dillon, one of the industry's pioneer directors, to handle the magaphone on the initial feature.

Prediction By Brandt Three Years Ago Now Fulfilled

WHEN Joe Brandt of Columbia Pictures, said three years ago that the public wants melodramas—of a better sort, of course, than those which flourished on the legitimate stage about a quarter century ago—he made a prediction which since has been borne out by the repeated success of screen productions of this type.

"Today," Mr. Brandt explained, "I find after visiting all parts of the country, repeatedly, and conferring with the biggest, as well as some of the smallest of exhibitors, men who play the most important first run pictures, as well as those who handle neighborhood houses, that they all shout for honest-to-goodness melodrama. Of course, such pictures must have really worth-while stories.

"But the present day exhibitor knows his public. In many instances they know the vast majority of their audiences intimately. This is especially true in the smaller cities. These picture-goers are always communicating their impressions and desires directly to the exhibitors. As a result, the showmen learn first handedly just what is liked, and what is not wanted.

"And today the public is sick of that puerile stuff which so often is supposed to be taken for 'smart' society drama. Also, they don't want so much of the sexy stuff and the threadbare triangle situations.

"They want action. And more action, all the time.

"Not without reason did those great producers of melodrama, Al Woods, Charles Blaney and Corse Payton, attract the greatest audience numbers to their box offices by giving them powerful melodramas—crude and ridiculous though they seem to us when weighed by our modern standards of screen play craft, but powerful plays, nevertheless.

"Melodrama always takes a powerful grip on one's imagination, and the producers who have realized this fact have always made big money. From the very start we have borne this fact in mind and the success we achieved with 'More To Be Pitied,' 'Only a Shopgirl,' 'Temptation,' 'Fighting the Flames' and 'The Midnight Express' have proven that this form of entertainment is what the vast majority demands. Many of these pictures were adapted from famous stage successes. Yet the success which these plays have achieved on the screen is unbelievably greater than was accomplished on the stage.

"Polite dramas, and dramas that treat over-much of sex, even when they are brilliantly done, and have excellent stories for plots, never achieve the mark which a fairly good melodrama reaches. And an overdose of sexy and polite society drama only paves the way for melodrama of 'The Bat' and 'The Gorilla' order.

"When we prepared our present season's production schedule we had this angle in mind and worked hard to put it over. 'The Danger Signal,' first of our Columbia series, as well as 'Enemy of Men,' first of our Waldorf series, our fast action Perfection Series, and those pictures which follow, are all carefully constructed along such lines.

"In our forthcoming production for the future seasons, we expect to adhere to this technic. It is essential so long as the public retains its desire for powerful action drama. We have realized this need from the start, and the film fans who have filled the theatres to see Columbia pictures have attested to our judgment."

HIDING THE CANDLES is a novel way of concealing the exact number of years Aileen Pringle admits on her birthday (and if we knew we wouldn't let on, for the stunning Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player in Tod Browning's "The Mystic," will always be somewhere just around twenty-one—if you succumb to her charming make-up).

JOHN BARRYMORE'S LEADING LADY in his forthcoming Warner Bros. production, "The Sea Beast," is Dolores Costello, the beautiful daughter of Maurice Costello, famous as one of the first screen idols among the men. Herewith is the latest photograph of the lovely Dolores.

Completes "The Bad Man"

Walter Lantz, the comedian star of the Bray Studios, has completed actual production of the "straight" shots of the first of the new Dinky Doodle subjects which are being made for F. B. O. The title of the subject is "Dinky Doodle and the Bad Man."

"One of the Bravest" Cast

Reports received from Renaud Hoffman, supervising director for Gotham Productions West Coast units, has notified Sam Sax that casting on "One of the Bravest" is now complete. Ralph Lewis will star.

Artclass Offering New Series of "Shorts" on State Right Market

LOUIS WEISS, managing director of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures is offering a new series of six single reel special short subjects to the state-right market.

The series is entitled "Guess Who" and is exactly what its title would indicate, a guessing contest.

These single reels will each have shots of twenty five big well known stars. These stars will appear on the screen long enough for them to be plainly seen. They will move about and display many of their individual characteristics and it is the part of the audience to mark the order of the star's appearance on a card provided for the purpose. The cards themselves will be given to the partons as they enter the theatre. The names of the twenty five stars will be printed in alphabetical order and in large type on the card so that all the participant in the "Guess Who" contest has to do is to identify the star and mark the stars number on the reel along side of the star's name.

The press sheet gives the exhibitor a great number of possible ways of attracting attention to the plan. A brilliantly designed one sheet is made up for each reel showing the names of the stars who will appear in the reel. That alone with the drawing power of the stars will prove a big number with the public.

Two reels of the series are already in New York for showing. In them is a great array of stars. Among those in the first reel are Wallace Beery, Betty Blythe, Hobart Bosworth, Margaret De La Motte, Percy Marmont, Nazimova, Anna Q. Nilsson, Pat O'Malley, Charles Ray, Alma Rubens, Milton Sills, Alberta Vaughn, Claire Windsor.

Some of the prominent stars in the second reel are Monte Blue, Ruth Clifford, Corinne Griffith, Elaine Hammerstein, Norman Kerry, Cullen Landis, Laura La Plante, Jacqueline Logan, Ben Lyon, Bert Lytell, Dorothy Mackaill, Antonio Moreno, Marie Prevost, Anita Stewart, Lewis Stone.

ALMA RUBENS

The beautiful star of William Fox photoplays does a truly amazing dance in her forthcoming picture, "The Winding Stair." Some of Alma's closest friends will share in the general surprise felt on discovering what a graceful dancer she is.

Alma Rubens a Dancer

When the screen claimed Alma Rubens for its own, the musical and vaudeville stage lost a headline dancer. The photoplay actress has kept this talent a secret in all of her appearances in the films, mainly because the parts in which she has been cast have not made demands on her accomplishment.

It was her role in "The Winding Stair," the William Fox production of A. E. W. Mason's novel of Morocco, that showed Miss Ruben's ability to dance. Her grace and mastery of the technique of the difficult movements of the wild African dance was a revelation to the Hollywood colony of artists. She is now hailed as a rival of Valentino as a dancer.

Tearle in Fourth Tiffany

Tiffany announces that Conway Tearle has been engaged for the principal role in "Morals for Men," suggested by "The Luck Serum," from the pen of Gouverneur Morris. The story has been adapted for the screen by A. P. Younger, who will also supervise the production. "Morals for Men" is the fourth of the Tiffany "Big Twelve" by famous authors.

Pollard Renews "U" Contract

Harry Pollard, one of the screen's leading directors, has signed a new long term contract with Universal, according to Raymond L. Schrock, general manager of Universal City. The contract will assure Pollard's association with the company for a term of several years.

"The Desert's Price"

Buck Jones is in the midst of filming "The Desert's Price," a thrilling western story by William MacLeod Raine, under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke.

Charles Chaplin Congratulates "Syd"

After attending a preview of "The Man On The Box," starring "Syd" Chaplin, which opened at Warners Theatre in New York last Saturday night for a run, Charles Chaplin sent the following telegram to "Syd" in Los Angeles:

"Congratulations, Syd. Saw 'Man On Box' last night and thought it was wonderful. More power to the family. Love. Charles."

The Western Union Telegraph Company enlarged this message on one of its giant blanks, framed several hundred of them and displayed the telegram in the window of all its offices in New York City.

Cast of "The Barrier"

Henry Walthall and Lionel Barrymore have been added to the cast of George Hill's forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "The Barrier," by Rex Beach, announces Hunt Stromberg, assistant studio executive. Walthall will play the role of Jale. Barrymore will have the baleful role of Stark Bennett. As previously announced Norman Kerry is to play Meade Burrell. No leading woman has yet been announced.

Hollywood Studios Rechristened

Coincident with the purchase of the controlling interest in the Hollywood Studios by the Cinema Corporation of America, the name of this big plant has been changed to the Metropolitan Studios. Under the general supervision of Charles and Al. Christie and William Sistrom a most ambitious program of production is being mapped out for the Metropolitan.

Lancaster with M.-G.-M.

John Lancaster has joined the executive forces of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and will occupy a new and important post supervising a number of departments, including the casting department. He will also have charge of the permanent M.-G.-M. stock players. For a number of years Lancaster has headed his own casting organization representing many best known artists.

Lewis in Gotham Film

Sam Sax announces that Ralph Lewis has been signed for the stellar role in "One of the Bravest" which will be released as the seventh Gotham Production for this season to be distributed through the Lumas Film Corporation. "One of the Bravest" is an original story by James J. Tynan the well known West Coast scenarist and has a big city fire department as its background.

Five First National Pictures Listed Among "the Ten Best" at The Eastman

ERIC THACHER CLARKE, managing director of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., has compiled a list of the ten most popular pictures shown at the Eastman, from September 1, 1924 to September 1, this year. Five of the ten are First National pictures. Paramount, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, each have two in Mr. Clarke's list, and Pathe has one. In a supplemental list of four pictures that pressed closely upon "the ten best" are two additional First National pictures, one Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one Pathe.

The "ten best" at the Eastman, based on box-office receipts, were announced by Mr. Clarke in the following order.

ERIC THACHER CLARKE

"Classmates" (First National).

"Abraham Lincoln" (First National).

"Sally" (First National).

"He Who Gets Slapped" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

"A Thief in Paradise" (First National).

Closely following these were:

"The Navigator" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

"The Only Woman" (First National).

"Secrets" (First National).

"Black Cyclone" (Pathe).

HELPING THE OTHER WOMAN

In the B. P. Schulberg Preferred picture, "The Other Woman's Story," Robert Frazer, the distinguished leading man, has one of the principal roles. He goes a long way in helping the other woman tell her story.

Harry Cohn Discusses Present Independent Situation Points

FOR the past few months there have been so many varied statements on the independent picture producing situation that it is interesting to obtain the views of a real producer who has also stood on the sidelines and carefully watched every movement in the industry for at least fifteen years, i. e., Harry Cohn, who with his brother Jack, and Joe Brandt, own and control Columbia Pictures Corporation, who are producing and releasing eighteen pictures this season.

Just before Mr. Harry Cohn, who is vice-president and production head of Columbia, left Hollywood for a visit to New York, he answered a number of questions and also gave some intimate opinions on the progress made by the independent producers, and evidenced his appreciation of the aid and determination of most of the independent theatre owners.

"The independent producers this season," Mr Cohn began, "can point to their greatest accomplishment to the unquestionable fact that they have made a product which is well on a par with those pictures which the big program companies have touted as specials. This statement means that I include all of the independents with Columbia.

"Of course, I am personally proud of the pictures I have made for Columbia this year. But I want to say more than a mere passing word of praise for men like Ben Schulberg, Ike Chadwick, Phil Goldstone, Renaud Hoffman, Hunt Stromberg, Whitman Bennett, Charles Burr, Abe Carlos and a host of other real independent producers who have kept their promises one hundred per cent. to give to the exhibitors a series of pictures that will stand the acid test of hard box-office values."

Explaining what he believes to be the greatest menace to the independent exhibitor today, Mr. Cohn continued: "The indifference on the part of some of the exhibitors to give their whole-hearted support to those deserving independent producers who are, if the proper credit is given to them, the last trench the exhibitor might fall back upon in the war for their final elevation.

"Columbia Pictures is out to keep every last promise which was made to the exhibitor. Sixteen of the pictures finished are evidence of Columbia's determination to keep promises—and the other two are actually in work. This means that Columbia is actually ahead of schedule this season and making good with a real bang.

"We have paid big prices for able directors, strong stories, and stars of real box-office drawing power to prove we have confidence in those exhibitors who have had the guts to stick by us.

"At present we are preparing big plans for next season and those exhibitors who have stuck by us and the independent policy will again be able to stick out their chests and proudly acclaim to the world that they own their own theatres, unfettered by the makers of trade mark stuff."

Fish-Schurman Corp. Fixes Price on Goerz Raw Stock

FERDINAND SCHURMAN, president of the Fish-Schurman Corporation in No. 45 West Forty-fifth Street, New York City, sole distributors of the Goerz motion picture raw stock, announces that when present stocks are exhausted, the price of positive raw stock will be 1.65 c. per foot.

In a circular letter to the trade, the distributors say:

"During the past few years, manufacturers of positive raw stock have rightfully endeavored to reduce the cost of their product, thereby assisting the motion picture industry and putting producers in a position to give satisfactory prints even to the smallest theatres. We believe that the mark has somewhat been overstepped by most of them, inasmuch as the quality of the raw stock has undoubtedly been affected.

"It is the estabiished policy of the Goerz Works to manufacture all their products in the best quality possible, at a fair price. They will not sacrifice quality in favor of a small difference in price. They never did with their world renowned Goerz Lenses, and they will assuredly not so with their Goerz Raw Stock.

"As compensation for the small difference in cost, we offer the best raw stock on the market. As to photographic qualities, it has more gradation, more latitude, better half tones, more detail in the shadows, and it produces more plastic effects. As to mechanical properties, it knows no static; has stronger and more pliable celluloid, therefore longer wearing qualities. This latter fact actually reduces the cost of prints on Goerz raw stock, since fewer prints are required. That, it must be admitted, is simple reasoning."

"Annie Rooney" Breaks Records

All records for attendance were broken at the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, at the opening there recently of Mary Pickford's United Artists Corporation release, "Little Annie Rooney," according to word received at the home office. The house was sold out at two o'clock in the afternoon, and there were long lines of waiting patrons for the rest of the day. "Everybody was delighted with the picture and we heard nothing but favorable comment from those leaving after seeing the performance," said the message.

Get Out Special Christmas Gift Books Even if You Have the Regular Style

JUST because you sell coupon ticket books the year around, don't imagine that you do not need the special Christmas Gift book tickets for sale from after Thanksgiving to the eleventh hour shopping on Christmas Eve. To the contrary, if you regularly issue books of tickets, you particularly need a special form of book for the Christmas holidays. At least some of these books will come into the hands of those who are not book holders, and you may get them into the habit of using the books regularly.

Every year more and more houses swing into the year-round column, finding that the idea is highly profitable, and each year sees a greater number of houses offering special books around Christmas time.

If you do not get these out, you are overlooking one of the best ticket selling schemes ever invented.

Simple and Good

The idea in a nutshell is to offer a book of tickets to be given as a Christmas gift. These books vary in denomination, but they all contain admissions to your theatre, and there is nothing that will please the average person more than free theatre tickets. And the giver need have no fear that a duplicated book will have no appreciation. The small boy who gets three dozen handkerchiefs may feel that Santa has been more generous than thoughtful, but he will welcome the gift of a dozen books from as many donors. He'll be glad to have an entire library.

This is what makes the gift book so appealing to the average gift shopper. It will appeal to all ages. It is certain to be welcome.

Do It Right

But while the contents of the book carry the real value, the appearance must not be overlooked. The giver wants to present something that looks like a gift, and if you get out a presentable cover, you will materially increase the sales.

The cheapest way is to select an attractive Christmas card, of about the proper size, and use this for a cover; printing your tickets of a size to match. Another way is to print up a special envelope for your regular book. Fred Meyers got out a special card to be enclosed with the book, and supplied a special envelope to fit.

Whatever the scheme you adopt, make it breathe the spirit of the season, and be sure to have the "To" and "From" lines. If you can command the services of an expert penman, perhaps you can offer to have recipient's name engrossed upon the card in fancy lettering.

Various Forms

The early books consisted of a series of coupons representing five and ten cent values. This was all right, but today prices are higher, and it is better to have your tickets good for a specified number of admissions, with one ticket for each, but each bearing the proviso that in the event of a specially priced attraction a cash payment must be made equivalent to the difference between the regular house price and the special charge. This also may be used where the holiday prices are raised.

One form of ticket is not unlike the old-fashioned meal ticket, a single card with marginal numbers, each good for one admission. A number is punched out each time the ticket is used. Here the contract may be printed in the centre of the ticket. This works well where the admissions do not exceed ten. Above that the card is apt to show wear and tear.

Prices and Concessions

It is customary to issue tickets on some price concessions. The usual scale is $2.50 for $2, and $6 on a $5 ticket. The two and five dollar tickets are most generally offered. The concessions may be made to match your scale of prices. If you charge a 35-cent admission, make the ticket good for seven admissions instead of six. That works out at $2.45. Seventeen tickets, or $5.80, may be given on the $5 book.

Many houses now sell their tickets at face value, the consideration being the time saved through not having to take a place in line at the box office. Here the ticket is good at the door, and does not have to be exchanged, except in the case of advanced prices. Generally, however, it will be better practice to make some price concession.

If you charge a flat rate you should give unlimited tickets. If you make a concession you can make terms, limiting the life of the ticket to six months.

Don't be afraid of giving something for nothing. Be generous. These tickets will be used up faster than paid admissions, and you will lose nothing in the long run.

Bulk Sales

If you have any industry employing twenty or more, suggest to the business head the use of books for Christmas gifts, offering to put the imprint on the cover. You can find some small printer, or perhaps even a small boy with a hand press who will do this work cheaply. On large orders you can well afford to make an additional price concession.

Drive on these tickets and you'll make some real money as well as build patronage. But start in early to make your arrangements and open your campaign as soon as Thanksgiving has been passed.

Made 'Em Look

If you are tired of the kiss imprint on throwaway cards, copy J. L. Cartwright, of the Lyric Theatre, Jackson, Tenn.

He sent a young man down the street with a distinct impression of a pair of feminine lips on his cheek. Everyone laughed and looked back after him, only to see a card for Kiss Me Again on the back of his coat.

Lipstick accidents are so common that this stunt is a real winner. Try it on any kiss title.

CAMPAIGNING THE TEN COMMANDMENTS AT THE LUCAS THEATRE, SAVANNAH, GA.

J. G. Evans bannered all bridge approaches. On the left is an old rice mill, which has stood for 150 years on the South Carolina shore. On the right is a store on the Georgia bank. From 500 to 1,500 automobiles cross this bridge daily. Other banners from 30 to 40 feet in length were used "downtown" with one across the street in front of the theatre.

Cleaning Up The Pony Express in San Francisco

Tied Pony Express to California Fete

Playing with a local celebration gave the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, a wonderful break on The Pony Express. The picture was put over to so much business that an additional morning show and an extra night show was added to the schedule, and they came close to a standout with a performance starting 10:30 p. m. each evening.

Working with the Imperial staff, Oscar A. Kantner, of the Paramount exploitation, tied in with the Wells-Fargo Bank, surviving unit of the express company once the dominant factors in the West.

The bank not only planted a lot of stories in the financial publications, but they helped Kantner make the grade for extra space in the local papers, and syndicated some stories that covered the country and will help other exhibitors when they come to play the picture.

But best of all they helped to land The Pony Express as part of the California Diamond Jubilee celebration, then current.

They built a reproduction of an old stage station which stood in the lobby of the main banking office for ten days before it was removed to the Civic Centre, and on the parade day a pony express rider dashed from the Embarkadero to the reviewing stand, where he delivered a letter to Vice President Dawes.

In addition to the properties used in the play, which were shipped from Los Angeles, the bank loaned many of its own relics, and with this material Kantner was able to land 30 unusually good windows.

The bank also financed the printing and placing of a thousand street car cards, and built the front for the Imperial, a reproduction of a frontier town in the days of the pony express.

There was a decidedly practical angle to the bank's co-operation as well as the moral effect of the interest of this still powerful institution.

One of the old stage coaches was used for a ballyhoo and transported the stars of the production from the railroad station to their hotel. The stars participated in a first night that beat Gloria Swanson and her husband at five dollars a crack at the Rivoli in New York, and broadcasted a talk about the production.

They even tied the song, Jow Bowers, to the civic celebration. It was played by all the bands, and was one of the "official" numbers. As some 750,000 persons took part in the celebration, it was no wonder that the Imperial had to go to extra shows.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark-Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

HYMAN'S ANNIVERSARY

Owing to the fact that The Gold Rush was held over at the Mark-Strand theatre, Brooklyn, with the same prologue, the usual production hints are omitted from the page this week. This feature will be resumed next week with a description of the program in celebration of the sixth anniversary of the theatre.

In the past six years the Brooklyn Mark Strand, under the immediate direcion of Edward L. Hyman, and the supervision of Moe Mark, has come to occupy a position unique in the theatres of Brooklyn. Not only has it a regular clientele larger than that of any other Brooklyn house, but the weekly broadcasting from WNYC has made the Strand artists known throughout Radioland because of the excellence of the program selections and the abilities of those engaged in the presentations.

In the theatre the stage productions enhance the value of the selections as heard over the radio, and there are thousands of patrons who regularly attend the performances, regardless of the film attraction, in the confident knowledge that the musical program will be to their liking, whatever the merits of the film feature.

The production hints, published regularly in this department have aided managers from coast to coast, and we are sure that these will join us in our felicitations to Mr. Hyman, who is chiefly responsible for these presentations.

Headed Wrong

Charles Morrison, of the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville, used the battered car idea on The Lucky Devil, but he gave it a little extra kick by obtaining police permission to head it the wrong way on the street. That got every motorist's attention before he read the sign which ran: "Turned turtle twice and never a scratch on him. Wasn't he The Lucky Devil?"

Morrison also followed Lem Stewart's tip and tied to the camping departments of the big hardware stores. The two stunts brought the receipts to within $100 of the record, which was made in January with the weather cool and the tourist season on.

THREE OF THE THIRTY WINDOW DISPLAYS ON THE PONY EXPRESS IN SAN FRANCISCO

Cooperation with the Wells-Fargo bank gave the Imperial Theatre a fine chance to play up the old days, for the bank is all that is left of the old Wells-Fargo Express Co., which was to the West what the Hudson's Bay Company is to Canada. They planted stories, loaned relics and helped to officially tie the picture to the California Diamond Jubilee celebration.

The Display Parlor is Good on Any Big Feature

A Fox Release

ADAPTING AN OLD IDEA TO A SOMEWHAT NEW USE

They used to show the pictures inside the store in the old days. This is a simpler adaptation used by the Palace Theatre, Jamestown, N. Y., to get over the bigness of The Iron Horse. It can be worked in any vacant store on any good picture.

Revive an Old Idea for The Iron Horse

Some years ago a number of pictures were put over through the use of some vacant store fitted up as a Bureau of Information on that picture, the origintl use of the idea being to put over an early "Paramount Week.' The last recorded use was about a year ago, when The Hunchback of Notre Dame was "parlored" on Broadway for its New York run.

After a rest, the idea has been revived and adapted by Peterson and Woods, of the Palace Theatre, Jamestown, N. Y., who plastered the window of a vacant store with about five dozen stills for The Iron Horse, the store being not far from the local Four Corners. It was announced as "The Iron Horse Museum," and it held attention all day long and well into the evening.

This is a cheaper form of the scheme, since the use of the interior requires the services of an attendant, who watches the display and passes out literature, but either form is capital for the advertisment of any really important picture, and it always is possible to obtain additional stills from the home office.

The stunt works even better where oil paintings are obtainable. Try it out some time, but wait until you have a picture that will give you the best profit on your investment.

Beggar on Horseback Stunted in Memphis

To get over the dream angle of Beggar on Horseback, Walter League, of the Strand Theatre, Memphis, got a tie-up with a piano store in the shape of a display of sheet music, all of the compositions carrying the word "dream" in the title. You'll be surprised to find such a number of dreams in any reasonably well stocked store, and the idea makes for public interest.

For a popular angle he gave twenty pairs of seats for the best dreams reported. Instead of tying to a newspaper, the offer was made through a wireless station, getting general publicity.

The "Morning-Evening" was distributed to homegoing patrons at all trolley transfer stations, some 2,000 being used, and a hook was made to a chain of candy stores, with fantastic posters.

After using a dream banner in the lobby for two weeks, it was moved over to the lobby of one of the leading hotels, where the odd art work got a showing where a straight poster would not have been admitted.

The lobby looked as though it had been decorated by a lunatic with bright ideas, including an orange tree with electrically lighted fruit.

It all served to sell the patron the right idea, and with the right idea, they enjoyed the picture. The Beggar is precisely what you make it with your advance work. You can flop it, or you can get the town talking. It's entirely up to you.

Pending the installation of a new organ, Guy O. Kenimer, of the Arcade Theatre, Jacksonville, set up the console in the lobby. It not only advertised the new organ in emphatic fashion, but it got a good advertisement for The Lady, the current attraction.

Wrapped a Victim

A ballyhoo heavily bandaged was a good bet for The Lucky Devil at the Galax Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. Rodney Bush put on a bandage wherever a bandage would stick, gave him crutches and fastened a sign to his back reading to the effect that he was a lucky devil to come through the smashing auto wreck at the Galax "all next week"; which was anticipating matters somewhat.

Another good stunt was a postal reading "You will be The Lucky Devil if you meet me at 1919 Second Avenue any day next week." The address was that of the theatre.

The Commandments

One of the chariots used in the making of The Ten Commandments was J. P. Harrison's best bet when the picture came to the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Texas. He selected a charioteer who could drive with one hand and blow a trumpet with the other, gave him an Egyptian costume and sent him around town for several days.

A newspaper permitted the use of its rural mailing list for 4,000 special letters and 15,000 folders were packed out by local wholesale merchants with their fall goods sent to nearby towns.

Make a Self Mailer of Paramount Scrap Books

Novel Advance on Not So Long Ago

Two good stunts were worked by George Cruzon, of the Palace Theatre, Lockport, N. Y., on Not So Long Ago.

The first of these was suggested by the play itself and was worked up with the aid of one of the newspapers. A popular business man was presented as offering to bet that a local high schoolboy could outrun an old automobile, and a 1904 Cadillac was arranged for. Police permission was secured to hold the race on the main street, with the terminus in front of the theatre, and the police cleared the route at noon. The manager of the local Cadillac agency followed his entry in a brand new car and when the old boat stalled just short of the finish line he gave it a bump that shoved it across, a tie with the runner. That added to the fun and materially contributed to the discussion the stunt aroused.

The other idea was called a "song-o-logue." A woman singer represented the old and a man the new songs, standing on either side of the stage. After the introductory slide, there came one reading: "Now let's see which songs you folks like best," and "We will start with a new one. Mr. Costello." The song was sung and the slide flashed: "Now let's listen to one of the old ones. Miss Kinzly." An old song followed, with another slide reading: "That's going good. Here is another new one." At the close of this slide read: "And now another of the melodies of 'Not So Long Ago'." This was the plugger song. Then came: "Now for a closing number. Both will sing your choice." "Vote now by your applause which it shall be." "The New or the Old." "The New?" "The Old?" The applause was so evenly matched that the final slide read: "O. K. The Old Wins. So here it is." The two singers joined in a duet. It's a good plan, however, to have two selections, to meet a possible fluke.

Because a local music store was anxious to plug two new songs, C. T. Perrin got a nice prologue on Rugged Water for the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Col. He let the store supply him a singer and gave the songs a play up in his advertising.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

THIS IS JUST AS GOOD THIS SEASON AS IT WAS LAST YEAR

Metro exploiteers are again using the live model make-up demonstration for drug store displays. Here is the use on A Slave of Fashion when it was showing at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland. Tied to a line of cosmetics it practically never fails.

Mapped it Out

Appealing to local pride got the Chamber of Commerce window in Austin, Texas, for I'll Show You the Town.

A large map was posted with all points of interest marked and with the title used as a slogan. It drew crowds, and made business for the Majestic theatre.

Another stunt was the use of windshield stickers with "Hop in, I'll Show You the Town."

Don't forget that one impolite usher can drive away more business than you can make with a big feature.

Makes Self Mailer Of Screen Scrap Book

Perhaps it has been done before, but it seems to be new. Francis M. Kadow, of Manitowoc, Wis., prints his screen scrap books, supplied by Paramount, so that they require no wrapper.

A little more than two thirds of the back page is left blank for the imprint of the house. Mr. Kadow prints so that the upper third of his space carries the postage paid permit and leaves a blank space for the address. Then the sheet is folded in fours so that the address comes outside, and either clipped or pasted.

It saves money, makes for convenience, and assures that the sheet will not be torn getting it out of its wrapper.

This is an old stunt with house programs, but we do not recall having seen it worked on this accessory, though it is just as simple. If desired the lower half of the sheet can carry the remainder of a weekly program, though Mr. Kadow gives all of the space on The Ten Commandments to that picture for a three-day run.

Eleanor Bathed

One of Frank J. Miller's regular stunts for the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga., is a shadow box which takes the place of a banner across the top of the lobby, and for this he arranges many novel effects.

For Proud Flesh he showed Eleanor Boardman in a bathtub, but as the tub was so far above the heads of the patrons it was perfectly proper. It made for extra business.

A MINIATURE 24-SHEET MADE BY CUTTING A ONE SHEET

A Six Dollar Lobby Front Makes Triple Business

A First National Release

A SIX DOLLAR STUNT THAT TREBLED BUSINESS IN MAINE

George A. Miller, of the Rex Theatre, Norway, Me., writes that this got him three times his usual business for Quo Vadis and adds that the real test of an idea is the box office count-up. He has the right idea. It's the results that count.

Six Dollar Front Triples Receipts

George A. Miller, of the Rex Theatre, Norway, Maine, sends in a picture of his house front with the remark that it cost him six dollars, plus labor.

Norway has a population of about 3,000 factory workers and summer campers. It is not a large town, but it responded to the appeal of exploitation and business on Quo Vadis was about three times the usual summer run.

Mr. Miller writes: "That's what tells the story—when you count up." He backed up his front with ten ones, a three and 500 heralds.

A lot of managers are prone to judge a stunt by its size or appearance rather than by its effect upon business, but the real test is the count-up. If it makes more business, it's a good stunt, no matter what the cost, and the more it makes the better the idea is.

It's simple arithmetic. The dollar that costs you ten cents is cheaper than the dollar that costs you twenty, but if you can buy 300 twenty-cent dollars as against 100 ten-cent dollars, it pays to spend twenty cents for them. Figure it out on this basis and you're safe.

Three Piece Lobby To Sell Wild Susan

D. Roscoe Faunce used a three-piece lobby for Wild, Wild Susan at the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. The centrepiece was a flat of the rear of a car with Bebe Daniels and Rod La Roque looking at motorcycle cops painted on flats against the side walls, one on each side. It carried out the idea of the story nicely, and made for attention. Arranging a motor to give the car a bumpy effect might have helped a little.

For another approach Mr. Faunce got the Western Union to donate 5000 "send" blanks and as many envelopes. The latter were addressed to "B. A. Patron" and the message ran: "We will arrive in Birmingham eleven A. M. Monday, to stay a week. Stop. Wild, Wild Susan is with us. Stop. Meet us at the Strand prepared for a gingery time." This was signed by both players.

Mr. Faunce paid for the printing and for the distribution by four uniformed W. U. messengers, and found the results well worth the cost. It boosted the play over to a nice income.

Old Time Week Got Planck Business

George E. Planck, of the Sedalia theatre, Sedalia, Mo., worked an old reliable when he put on an old time week recently, but he gave it a modern appeal by contrasting an old Mary Pickford picture with Meighan in Old Home Week.

The Pickford was "Friends," an old Universal Imp, in two long reels, and it gave emphasis to the improvement in picture making. One of the house staff worked the old illustrated song, and except for the modern feature the show was all along the old lines.

It was novelty in Sedalia, and it made a nice clean-up for Planck at a very small extra cost.

He used an 11x14 window card headed "Don't long for 'the good old days' and don't miss the old time movie show, presenting in contrast—" That gave the full idea in few words.

He uses the small sized window card because he finds that he can get in easily with these where a larger card requires a lot of argument and he prefers more windows even at the cost of smaller cards.

If you have trouble with your stores, why not try them with a nicely printed smaller card?

A Mysterious Voice

For three days before Her Sister from Paris came to the Capitol theatre, New York, a voice could be heard announcing that "Constance Talmadge is bringing Her Sister from Paris to the Capitol theatre, beginning Sunday."

The voice did not seem to come from anywhere in particular, and it was strong enough to rise above the din of traffic on the theatre section of Broadway.

Very few located the voice in the third story of an office building, for the magnavox horns were inconspicuous, especialy at night, when the stunt was most used. It was cheap and very effective.

Good Throwaway Asked for Wife

Most missing persons and reward circulars fail because they try too hard to connect with the picture. This type of throwaway should be purely teaser and be backed by other material. Walter League got out a clever circular on Lost, a Wife for the Strand Theatre, Memphis. This is how it looks:

The telephone call is that of the theatre, where inquirers were told about it. A classified ad along similar lines was used in the daily papers, with the telephone number, and this helped to get them in.

Girls in a Contest Carried the Banner

Aided by a Universalist, Pop Hartman, Leff and Beglichter, of the Star Theatre, in the Bronx section of New York, staged a bathing beauty contest to put over Fifth Avenue Models, but the contest was worked before the showing of the Universal-Jewel.

It was figured that those who would be attracted by the model appeal would come to the beauty contest and there be fully sold on the feature to follow, so two shows were helped by one stunt.

In furtherance of this idea each girl who paraded across the stage carried a light card banner selling some feature of Fifth Avenue Models. It took somewhat from the dignity of the contest, but on the other hand it sold more seats, and that was the main object of the contest.

The management had no difficulty in getting a whale of a lot of girls, and there was plenty of show, including some dress models who modeled the late styles for nearby shops.

It's too late in the season now for a bathing beauty contest, but start in early next year. They work in any size house.

Played Television

Telephone hangers in all public telephones in Warren, Ohio, told the user that presently he would be able to see the person at the other end of the wire as is done in "Up the Ladder" at the Opera House.

Twelve tickets were sent the chief operator of the local central explaining about television and asking that the tickets be given some of the girls. It was figured that these would tell others and perhaps gossip over the wire a little.

tained at the theatre for nine months, being withdrawn last July 30. Naturally Mr. Carleton ran up a big string of advertising examples on the picture, but we can make room only for two. Both run about three sixes, and the more striking layout is one which makes a rather unique distribution of the white space. The title is run clear across the space, but the rest of the copy is held to the right hand half of the space. This still gives a nice type display with the added value of the white space attractor playing up the title to the limit. This evidently is for a period well along in the run, for there is no heavy selling argument, but rather a reminder announcement. That lower bank gives the scale of prices, which run from $1.25 to 50 cents on Saturdays and holiday nights, with a dollar top on ordinary nights and holiday matinees and from 75 to 39 cents at the regular matinees. Loges are extra. With the exception of the 30-cent seats all are reserved. Put on with a fine prologue and orchestra accompaniment, the business held up well through the run. The other example is more in the usual style. This ornament was largely used, but with a number of changes, sometimes being worked into a full frame, shown in outline and sometimes only one was used, either at top or bottom.

AN ADVANCE AD

Toward the end of the run the ads were jazzed up a little to drive in the stragglers. White space was more freely used, and the "last" was played up. Stress was given the fact that no other theatre in Sydney would be permitted to show the picture within six months. Beaucaire followed the Commandments and for this an entirely different style was adopted, following the general style of the advertisements used here. The larger cut shows a nice stipple effect with the drawn figures of Miss Daniels and Valentino. The prices were the same as for The Commandments. The smaller cut shows an advance, used two days before the opening, and carrying a line for the current show. This is a three sixes, where the other is a four sixes. It is developed in the same style, with a lined background. Evidently the management is not superstitious, for the engagement opened on a Friday night instead of on Saturday. Here the added features are carried in a set of drop panels below the art work, and much stress is given the stereoscopiks, evidently a new departure for Australia. The art work on Beaucaire is superior to that for the Commandments, but both sets will stand comparison with our best work.

AN ARTISTIC THREE SIXES FOR MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE

Good Display Advertising From Many Places

Newark, N. J., suffers at the hands of the printer. This is the most modern house, but the printer has turned out an advertisement that would not be good in a tank town. There is no suggestion of elegance in this gothic type; nothing to create the impression that both the picture and the house are to be out of the ordinary. The familiar cut of Chaplin gets attention, but there is not much to be gained by getting attention for something that does not give the proper impression. Probably in the mass of other detail incident to the opening the printer was not watched, so he took the easiest way, and made a botch of the job. If you are going to open a house, be particularly particular about your type faces for the opening announcements.

the chief selling appeal, though five six point lines recapitulate the number of persons and animals employed in the production. In this day The Iron Horse needs no very elaborate explanation. Most persons have heard of it and a majority are anxious to see it, so it scarcely is necessary to go into elaborate details as to the story itself. Cutting down the size of the lettering just below the title would have helped considerably to give display, but with the light cut the title is better displayed than it would have been in a heavy black, which would have overbalanced the space. This seems to be a house cut rather than one taken from the plan book, and we think that with such a wealth of melodramatic situations a better picture than the clinch could have been arranged. The chief point of interest lies in the balance preserved between cut and lettering.

Reader Copy Was Splendid Seller

This space on The Sky Raider is rather ancient history now, but it is so good that we are including it as an example of a good style to follow on a picture to which it is desired to give particular emphasis. This was laid out, including the marking of the type faces, by A. S. Rittenberg, of the Fulton Theatre, Jersey City. Copies were sent to the Pathe office, so he did not send one in direct. However the Pathe office lost the copies, and so Mr. Rittenberg is repeating because he feels that the layout will gain interest. That opening "Read this aloud" really means nothing, but somehow it will impress the average reader. He doesn't know just why he should read it aloud, but since he is asked to, it must be something important. It is a trick catchline that works well. The sales copy is emphatic, and yet it does not suggest overbooming, because the general tone of the talk is moderate and "greatest" and "wonderful" seem natural to the chat. To make a special line of the "greatest airplane picture ever made" would have challenged the reader. Occurring in the body of the text, it does not seem to be so extravagant a claim and so it is allowed. It made good business for the Fulton, and the same style can be applied to any picture out of the ordinary. This is a much larger space than the Fulton usually takes; a four thirteens, and the size helps to create the impression of bigness.

Cooked a Cake

Baking a cake in a perambulating kitchen is a new exploit. It was planned by James Roach, of the Farash Amusement Co., Schenectady, for Drusilla With a Million.

The Light and Power Company supplied all of the furnishings for a complete kitchen, and in this perambulating affair a woman mixed up the cake, baked it and passed out sample slices to those who happened to be along when the cake was done.

Large banners credited the Power Company and told that Drusilla was at the Albany theatre. It made for a large volume of business.

what is virtually a four letter title, his artist got an exceptional display for The Fool. There was no getting away from it, and yet there was ample space for the announcement of the musical program which is one of the best sellers. Got the Resorters To Come in to Town

When the Star theatre, Arnold's Park, Ia., put on The Hunchback of Notre Dame for a Summer date, Jack Edwards, of the Universal exploitation, got into town ahead of the picture, and worked a scheme to reverse the usual Summer procedure.

Instead of trying to keep them from the resorts, he got them from the resort places on Lake Okoboji. He got the owners of the steamer which circuits the lake to make a joint price of seventy cents for a ticket to The Hunchback and the trip. Then he advertised in all the hotels through the mail boxes and with posters and fitted the steamer out with a large banner.

There are numerous places around the lake and the people fairly swarmed in with the result that the previous house record was about doubled.

But this also was helped by going to nearby towns and posting them. There are two good feeder towns, one four miles south and the other five miles north, and they contributed their share toward the result.

Little Pictures with the Big Punch

News, Reviews and Exploitation on Short Subjects and Serials

A Department Devoted Exclusively to the Pictures, Short in Footage But Long in Drawing Power

"A Cloudy Romance"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

Here is a snappy little comedy well acted by a cast including Harold Austin, Connie Dawn, Harry Dunkinson and Jules Cowles. Elopers are arrested for speeding. The judge, the girl's father, wants her to marry another man, so he sends the youth to jail. The latter, on release, impersonates a negro maid to be near her sweetheart, who is about to marry her father's choice. A genuinely colored butler runs off with the supposed maid. When the youth escapes the butler, he finds the wedding of his sweetheart and the other man just beginning. He mounts a steel girder and is hoisted into the room where the ceremony is beginning. The girl is captured, and the minister as well, and the girl and the youth are married in mid-air. As this synopsis shows, the subject has a thrill ending. Whatever trick stuff there was to protect the players' lives in the making of these scenes isn't at all apparent. They are real thrillers.—S. S.

"The Sky Tribe"

(Fox—Magazine—One Reel)

Pueblo Indians are shown in their native haunts in this subject. You see their fantastic villages amid the vast plains and painted deserts of the Southwest, and the men and women at work at basket weaving and pottery. Ancient religious rites also are shown. It is a picture of beauty and rare educational value. It ought to please every audience.—S. S.

"Just Cowboys"

(Universal—Western—Two Reels)

While the locale of this picture is in the ranch country, and the featured players are cowboys, and it is offered under the Mustang brand, it is more of a comedy than a straight western. Two familiar but frequently unidentified players, Ben Corbett and Peewee Holmes are featured as two thick-witted ranch hands who are fired for incompetency. They rescue a child in distress and find it to be a dummy used by a movie cast. Both boys fall in love with the leading woman and meet with various adventures in seeking her favor, including having their only trousers accidentally burned up and swiping others. A jail sentence and having to substitute for a wheel and hold-up the end of a buggy in which the other hero is riding with the girl are among the adventures. They finally break up a hold-up scene and rescue a lot of stage money which they receive as a reward. The situations are far-fetched and overdrawn and are only mildly amusing.—C. S. S.

"Hello!"

"HELLO," the very first word, spoken into the telephone when Alexander Graham Bell's invention was given its first public test, is short and implies much that may remain unsaid. Thomas A. Edison, the other night, was dragged to the microphone at a telegrapher's banquet to make a radio speech. He merely said "Hello!" a most significant oration in the light of what that word meant to the world. It is a big little word.

Big things can be done in a quiet way. Little pictures can be made, and are being made, to fill a big place in public entertainment.

This department will grow in every way. It will expand with the increasing volume of business done with short subjects. It will broaden out, with the support of every interested branch of this business. It will be made to serve every sincere and progressive move emanating from this important division of the production field.

With this issue, we merely say: "Hello!"

—THE EDITOR.

"Dog Daze"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

Rivalry of two cake-eaters for the hand of a banker's daughter who loses a pet pup and sends them out to hunt for it, is the idea behind the Educational Cameo comedy. Helen Marlowe is the girl and Cliff Bowes and George David are the rivals. Of course the dog manages to get mixed up with traffic and get the boys in various complications with the result that the action moves at good speed and is fairly amusing. Cliff wins out by causing George to dive through a window.—S. S.

"The Hero Wins"

Mouse which he uses as a decoy on a fishing expedition. A shark liberated the mouse who in turn sets free a "beautiful" female rodent from the clutches of the cat. This cartoon testifies further to Terry's remarkable imagination. It provides plenty of mirth and makes quite a hero of the mouse.—T. W.

"Pathe Review No. 40"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

This magazine reel features Ann Pennington, Broadway dancing star, in a novelty made by Alvin V. Knechtel's "process camera." The combinations of figures he obtains in showing Miss Pennington dancing the Charleston are really remarkable. One striking scene is where the star directs a chorus of six, all herself. The chorus consists of miniature figures while the directing star is large. It's great multiple action stuff. Other subjects are "A Gem of the Jura," Pathecolor scenes of Salina-les-Bains, a vacation resort, and "The Rock of Ages."—S. S.

"The Caretaker's Daughter"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

Nearly everyone becomes a caretaker in "The Caretaker's Daughter." Charley Chase and Jim Finlayson became two of the chief caretakers through matters of chance. How they happen to blunder into the activities of one another is highly ludicrous. The comedy should contain laughs for any type af audience. Chase leads off with a bad car and a suspicious wife. A gunman buying the machine at a second hand dealer's shop and Chase's boss inveigling Chase into taking the gunman's wife on a trip to the caretaker's cottage introduce the characters and the action in perfect sequence. Most of the comedy takes place in the cottage. It gets away from the ordinary methods of slapstick. Should appeal to higher class of fans. —T. W.

"Love and Kisses"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

The much-worn theme of matchmaking under clownish circumstances is again utilized in "Love and Kisses." This Mack Sennett two-reeler, although resplendent with all of the tried and true gags, should please less discriminating audiences because it has a good cast of funsters, among whom are Alice Day, Sunshine Hart, Raymond McKee and Jack Cooper. A social climber wishes to preserve family heirlooms by marrying off a son to an heiress and her spinster daughter to a young man of Rolls-Royces. A maid turns out to be the daughter of an oil magnate. One pair are nearly married. Then comes the discovery that the oil field has lost its dome.—T. W.

"Toiling for Rest"

(Fox—Variety—796 Feet)

Under this clever and decidedly appropriate title. Fox is offering a single reel showing how a few men with a train of pack horses spent a vacation in the Canadian Rockies, by taking a journey which includes fording the icy waters of a mountain river, skirting a cataract, climbing a mountain side, ploughing through deep snows and even accomplishing the unheard of feat of taking their horses over the slippery ice surface of a glacier. The film is decidedly entertaining. There is no more beautiful scenery in the world that the section traversed and in addition there is the thrill of adventure in these exploits.—C. S. S.

"Taking Chances"

(Universal—Western—Two Reels)

There is a rather good idea behind this two-reel Universal Western starring Fred Humes and it should prove satisfactory to the average Western fan as there is considerable action of a familar type. Hume, the new star proves to be a good horseman and rides a broncho bareback. He, however, seems the vigorous he-man type of outstanding personality that shines as a western hero. In this story, the star, by winning a wager that he could not ride a ferocious horse is made boss of the ranch for twenty-four hours during which time he stirs things up generally, gets the best of the villain, and marries the girl, whose father proves to be a good sport although he had opposed the match.—C. S. S.

"The Green Eyed Monster"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

Everyone knows that jealousy is the "green-eyed monster" and this single reeler in the series starring Arthur Lake gets its title because this is the weapon Arthur uses effectively to bring Isabelle around, by making violent love to another girl. In addition, Arthur gets in dutch by trying to keep his rival away on the plea she is ill. The rival, Eddie spreads the news, and father and mother rush home and finding it untrue give Arthur "the rush." The situations are of a familiar type and are only mildly amusing—hardly up to the standard of the majority of the series.—C. S. S.

"Felix The Cat on The Farm"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

Pat Sullivan's cartoon cat Felix proves such a pest to its owner by keeping him awake that he is shipped to a farm. Felix, hungry, milks a cow and is booted by the farmer. He lands in a swamp and a drove of mosquitoes follow him. This introduces a novelty, for these voracious insects hold the centre of the stage. They "tap" a cider keg, get all "swelled up" and jazzy and then attack the farmer, rendering him "groggy" too. Just as Felix is about to get his revenge one stings him and he gets hilarious too. Up to the usual standard and should please Felix fans.—C. S. S.

"Who Which"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

The always amusing complications due to mistaken identity furnish the idea on which this Educational-Cameo comedy is based. This time, use is made of the more or less familiar situation of a real burglar being mistaken for a masquerading one at a costume ball. The usual complications develop, including the phoney burglar being arrested and the real one entertained by the guests, followed by a chase through the house with the masquerader getting the worst of it in the general mix-up. The result is fairly entertaining slap-stick with several humorous moments. Phil Dunham, Helen Harlowe and James Hertz are featured—C. S. S.

"The Story Teller"

(Educational—Magazine—One Reel)

An old man tells a boy of his exploits in this Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge. The incidents are tarpon fishing and scenes of Mexico, Scotland, England, the Alps, the Montana Rockies, China and the frozen north. It is an interesting presentation of views of different corners of the world and ought to please audiences with a liking for travelogues. The final scenes are thrillers, showing some wicked spills in an auto race.—S. S.

"The Raid"

(Universal—Western—Two Reels)

Cattle-rustling and romance furnish the basis of this Universal-Mustang featuring Edmund Cobb who appears in the role of a cowboy who, getting a job on the ranch of the girl he loves, succeeds in rescuing her and her father who have been captured by the rustlers. This causes the girl to make her decision between Cobb and another chap who turns out to have a "yellow streak." The action throughout is of a familiar type and it should prove of fair interest for "western" fans.—C. S. S.

"Pathe Review No. 41"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

"Pathe Review No. 41" is one of the most thrilling, interesting and instructive that has ever been issued in this series. The subject "There She Blows" deals with whaling in the Antarctic and should have the average audience up on the edge of its seats. The whaling vessel, partly submerged by the wash of heavy seas, the proximity of massive icebergs and the final capturing of the giant whale make this review a subject truly worth while. "Lively but Refined" shows how rubber is refined and rolled and cut into elastic bands and bouncing balls. "The City of Half-and-Half" includes Pathecolor views of Ronda, Spain.—T. W.

"The Smoke Eater"

(Winkler—Cartoon—One Reel)

The comical cartoon character, Krazy Kat, gets in bad with a farmer by stealing his chickens and eggs and is kicked so hard that he lands on a cannibal island. Krazy proves a hero by rescuing a dusky belle from a burning hut and hopes to win the praise of the chief. It develops however, that the chief was the one who set the place on fire and our hero finds himself catapulted back to more familiar surroundings. There is an average amount of humor in this cartoon together with a lot of highly imaginative and clever impossibilities which will amuse the average fan.—C. S. S.

"Solid Ivory"

(Pathe—Comedy—One Reel)

Earl Mohan and Billy Engle, as prize fighter and manager, respectively, tour about in a broken down car of obsolete make before they arrive at a fight. Mohan, pitted against a French pugilist of the kissing bug variety, stages an amusing bit of fistic buffoonery.—T. W.

THE CHAPLIN VOGUE is so strong these days (as on all other days), Pathe Exchanges, Inc., gladden the showman's heart with the announcement that "A Dog's Life," seen five years ago, will be resubmitted to the public. Here we see Charlie, Edna Purviance and the player carrying the title.

TRADE MARK

Million for the the screen the First Four Pictures made under his Eight Picture Contract

Four triumphant successes, "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside," which include some of the greatest pictures this amazing screen personality has ever made!

Never before have pictures for re-presentation brought such a price. Only Chaplin productions could have done it.

These Chaplin pictures are always first runs. As box office attractions today they are in a class by themselves.

The first, "A Dog's Life," will be released Nov. 22.

For the first time in the business, rights for re-presentation of pictures have cost as much as on original release ----They are Charlie Chaplins of course

When, a number of years ago, First National made a million dollar contract with Charlie Chaplin for eight two-reel pictures, the price was considered very high.

Since that time it has been amply demonstrated that the price, far from being excessive, made that contract one of the very best buys any distributor has ever made.

Every one of those pictures was good. Among them are some of the outstanding successes of the business.

Chaplin's screen career is absolutely unique. His pictures have undoubtedly played over 500,000 bookings, yet who ever heard of a booking that wasn't a success?

All of his pictures have made money for everyone. There is probably not one exhibitor in the many thousands all over the world but what has money he wouldn't have if he hadn't played Chaplin.

PATHE HAS JUST PAID HALF A MILLION DOLLARS FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF BRINGING BACK TO THE SCREEN THE FIRST FOUR CHARLIE CHAPLIN PICTURES MADE UNDER HIS FAMOUS MILLION DOLLAR CONTRACT WITH FIRST NATIONAL FOR EIGHT PICTURES

AND—

THE PRICE PAID IS THE SAME PRICE THAT WAS PAID FOR THEM ON ORIGINAL ISSUE.

"A Dog's Life" will be released on Nov. 22nd. "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside" will follow.

In all honesty I do not know where so much box-office value can be secured, dollar for dollar and foot for foot.

If there is any box-office certainty in any product, it is in these pictures. Like diamonds their value has grown with time. They are PROVEN product, the best that can be bought.

To be able to offer pictures so certain to make money for exhibitors is a privilege indeed.

We are confident that exhibitors will be as eager to welcome them as we were to get them.

What Leading Short Subject Specialists Say

MOVING PICTURE WORLD has received many letters and statements from the leading experts in the Short Subject field commending it on its plans for increased selling and exhibition power behind these little features. A number of these statements will appear in full in subsequent issues of this paper. The following highlights have been taken from these sources and clearly indicate the ever-growing sentiment of the public toward the short features, as reflected through the box-office window:

"It can be stated without fear of contradiction that our comedy studios are turning out in two-reel lengths what are, truly, features in every sense of that term—features in casts, in direction, in production effects, in lighting and photography. And with the added advantage of compressing the entertainment into briefer length and thus making possible greater program variety."

ELMER R. PEARSON,
Vice President and General Manager,
Pathe Exchange, Inc.

"Try to run your house on features alone, and in one week you can close up shop and throw the key in the lake. I can name you a dozen short subjects, right now, that are issued regularly, that can absolutely outdraw the biggest features. F. B. O. has been, and is today, putting out a series of short subjects that are unparalleled in the field. They fill a definite niche... They are as 'sure fire' in their ability to draw patronage regularly as the biggest and best of the features. How many theatre owners boost these gems of showmanship?"

NAT G. ROTHSTEIN,
Director of Publicity, Advertising and Exploitation,
Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.

"The Short Subject is a feature picture in every sense despite its short length if it offers the quality of entertainment and box-office appeal. Showmen in all parts of the country have been demonstrating for months that a good Short Subject properly presented and forcefully exploited is just as much a feature of entertainment and just as much a money-maker as any long picture could be. With the help of your new Department and with the consistent co-operation of the whole trade press, the exhibitor's neglect of the opportunity to make extra profit through proper exploitation of the whole program should and will become only a bad memory."

E. W. HAMMONS,
President, Educational Film Exchange, Inc.

"The Fox Film Corporation has turned the spotlight on the Short Subject, and the effort has fully justified the conviction that the public held a warm spot in their consciousness for the material in these comedies and picturized educational features. If there is one quality that can be made to stand out prominently in the stories of O. Henry, Richard Harding Davis and Mabel Herbert Urner it is their conciseness. They are acknowledged master of the short story. The short subjects produced by the Fox Company have their own directors, who do nothing else but these films. The sales of the Fox Short Subjects to date are double those at mid-season last year."

FRED C. QUIMBY,
Short Subject Sales Manager,
Fox Film Corporation.

"Universal is definitely in the forefront of the Short Product field this Fall, and is taking the lead in the matter of supplying exhibitors with well-balanced one- and two-reel releases. All along the line, vast improvements have been made in the quality of short product entertainment put out by the Universal studios, and the releases scheduled have been arranged with an eye to the best interests of the theatre owner. The releases are not only suitable for the exhibitor who is supplementing his long features with carefully chosen comedies or other shorts, but the grouping of Universal short product has been made to fit the man who runs all short product programs."

F. J. McCONNELL,
Director, Division of Short Subjects,
Universal Pictures Company.

"The Short Subject is an essential part of motion picture entertainment, and its importance in adding variety and distinction to motion picture theatre programs cannot be over-emphasized."

JACK COHN,
"Screen Snapshots."

"This is the first concrete effort, I am sure, to bring every one concerned into line, to show the exhibitor that the short feature is worthy of consideration."

CHARLES B. MINTZ,
Manager, M. J. Winkler,
Distributors of "Krazy Kat" and "Alice."

"More and more, exhibitors are beginning to realize the fundamental value of Short Subjects; their drawing power and their aid in building up a steady patronage, and their importance to the program."

EDWIN MILES FADMAN,
General Manager,
Red Seal Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Shoman, Let's Hear from YOU!

Fox Studios Start Work on Program of Comedies

FOX FILM CORPORATION has started a most extensive comedy production program, according to an announcement by supervising comedy director-in-chief, George E. Marshall.

Director Albert Ray will start production on a new Helen and Warren production, "Hold Everything," with Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley again playing "Helen and Warren." Supporting Miss Perry and Mr. Cooley will be Sidney Bracey and Frank Rice, with several of the characters yet to be cast. "Hold Everything" is the fourth of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" series to be filmed at the William Fox West Coast Studios.

Director Ben Stoloff has just completed "East Side, West Side" first of a new series of Irish-Jewish comedies with Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy in the leading roles. Mr. Stoloff has already started preparing the script on the second of the series which shortly will go into production.

Beatrice Van is preparing the scenario for the next William Fox-O. Henry comedy, captioned "Cupid A la Carte," which Daniel Keefe will direct. "Cupid la Carte" is the fourth of the O. Henry series to be screened at the West Coast Studios.

Robert Kerr has commenced production on a Fox Imperial Comedy, "The Brain Storm," with Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett in the two principal roles.

Director Lou Seiler is preparing a script on an Imperial Comedy as yet untitled which deals with the efforts of a movie struck girl getting into the pictures.

Tom Buckingham recently added to the Fox comedy directorial staff, is also preparing an Imperial Comedy, shortly to go into production.

Boosts Short Subjects

The Milwaukee Theatre Plays Them Up On Front Page of Program

In line with the wide-awake policy of building up the short subject to its deserved place as an attraction, the Milwaukee Theatre, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, devotes the entire front cover of its four page program to an intimate chat with its patrons on "The Spice of the Program" which, in the case of the issue in question, includes the Hodge-Podge, Kinograms, Felix the Cat cartoons and the feature-comedians of the Educational Pictures list.

"When you select an evening's entertainment, you want to see a whole show, with comedy and novelty as well as a good feature" is one of the highlights of the argument boosting the short subjects.

"Dog's Life" from Pathe

To Be First of Charlie Chaplin's Revived Under Half Million Dollar Contract

Pathe announces that "A Dog's Life" will be the first of the Charlie Chaplin comedies to be brought back to the screen under the terms of the notable half million dollar contract between the famous comedian and the distributing concern. November 22 has been set as the release date for this fun-film. Edna Purviance is in "A Dog's Life" and Albert Austin is another one of the funmakers.

Pathe will provide exhibitors with a complete line of accessories on the Chaplin series.

Lupino Lane Makes Debut With Educational in 2-Reel Comedy

LUPINO LANE, famous English comedian, master of pantomime and former Follies star, makes his debut as an Educational Pictures comedy star in one of the most elaborate two-reel laugh subjects ever produced, "Maid in Morocco." The picture has just been completed under the direction of Charles Lamont and the first print reached New York only a few days ago, but shipment of prints to all Educational Exchanges is being rushed so that "Maid in Morocco" will be available to first run theatres early this month.

Lane's first picture in his series of six Lupino Lane Comedies took the Educational home office executives by storm. For several days reports had been reaching the New York headquarters of the remarkable reception given "Maid in Morocco" at previews in Los Angeles. But even these failed to take the edge off the outburst of enthusiasm throughout the whole Educational home office staff over the lavishness of the production as well as over Lane's great comedy work in it.

"Jack White, in charge of production at the Educational Studio, announced at the beginning of the production year that the studio's policy was to be 'every comedy a feature,'" said Mr. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, in discussing Lane's first appearance on the Educational program. "He certainly has lived up to this slogan—with room to spare—in the first Lane comedy. This new star is famous all over the world for his ability. We expect much from him. But he has exceeded our expectations. Before his first series of six pictures is completed I am confident Lupino Lane will be acknowledged one of the greatest comedy stars on the screen, by both exhibitors and public.

"As to the quality of production, no comedy ever distributed by Educational, or by any other company, has surpassed 'Maid in Morocco.'"

Lane is now at work on the second picture of the series which will be titled "Time Flies."

Clift to Direct Big Film

Dennison Clift, author, dramatist and motion picture director, who recently returned from England where he directed a series of eleven productions for Ideal Films, Ltd., has signed a contract with A. H. Sebastian to direct a big production for release through Producers Distributing Corporation under the title of "The City of Play."

"The City of Play" is an original story by Mr. Clift, on the theme of mass amusement in its most heterogeneous and cosmopolitan phases.

TO BE A TRANSIENT IN SOMEBODY'S ARCADIA IS ONE THING, but to be a transient in O. Henry's Arcadia, as Director Daniel Keefe has screened this charming short story for William Fox, and with lovely Marion Harlan to be found in this Elysium, is quite another thing. We almost envy Marion's leading man in "Transients in Arcadia." This is one of a series of two-reel O. Henry stories on the Fox program of shorts.

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

Sennett and Roach Two Reelers Top Pathe List for October 11

TWO-REEL comedies from the Mack Sennett and Hal Roach studios head the Pathe short subject entertainment program for the week of October 11. The Sennett two-reeler is "Over There-Abouts" with an all-star cast including Billy Bevan and the Roach two-reel subject is "The Caretaker's Daughter" with Charley Chase. Other releases of the week are "Solid Ivory," a single reel Roach comedy; the third chapter of "Wild West," current Patheserial; Pathe Review; "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News.

"The Caretaker's Daughter," a two-reel Charley Chase comedy gives the rapidly rising comedian a most amusing vehicle with a real plot and plenty of action. "Over There-Abouts" is a Mack Sennett comedy with an all-star cast of well-known comedians. As the title indicates this is a comedy of war times, with Billy Bevan.

"Solid Ivory" is a Hal Roach one-reel fun-film with atmosphere of the prize-ring with the popular pair of Roach jesters, Earl Mohan and Billy Engle. "The Outlaw Elephant" is the title of the third chapter of the current Patheserial "Wild West" made on the 101 Ranch with the famous Miller Brothers' Wild West Show. Pathe Review No. 41 presents three subjects of interest: "The City of Half-and-Half," Ronda, Spain, shown in Pathecolor; "Lively But Refined," the manufacture of rubber bands and rubber balls; and "There She Blows!" scenes of whaling in the Antarctic.

"The Hero Wins" is the latest animated cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series, and the schedule for October 11 is completed by "Topics of the Day" and two topical issues of Pathe News.

700 Exhibitors Sign for Red Seal

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal Pictures Corporation, announces that with a sales campaign only three weeks old, more than seven hundred exhibitors have already been signed up to play Red Seal pictures for 1925-26. Of these more than 100 have contracted to play the entire output.

Books Fox Short Subjects

The Izaak Walton League of America, with 2,000 clubs throughout the country, has contracted for Fox News, Fox Vanities and the various brands of comedies produced by Fox Film Corporation. Each of the club's will exhibit Fox subjects during the coming season. The showings will be restricted to members. That the Izaak Walton Disciples find amusement in other things than fishing is proved by this extensive contract.

Screening of the famous Richard Harding Davis Van Bibber stories will be resumed early in December at Fox Film Corporation's West Coast Studios, with Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert continuing in the leading roles, according to George E. Marshall, Fox comedy supervisor.

"All at Sea" New Fox Comedy

"All at Sea," another Imperial Comedy, has just been finished by Fox Film Corporation. Sid Smith, who plays the leading part, has a role that furnishes opportunities for a full display of his bubbling humor. With Judy King, the leading lady, as a co-conspirator, this funny pair have hatched a comedy that is irresistible in its appeal to the risibilities.

October Educationals Include Dooley, Hamilton, Lane Films

WITH two of Educational's comedy stars, Lloyd Hamilton and Lupino Lane getting under way with their new series the October schedule of releases is the most notable in several months. In all, five two-reel and five one-reel comedies, as well as the customary twice-a-week releases of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, will be issued during the current month.

"The Movies" is the first of this season's Hamilton Comedies, and will be released on October 4. The well known English comedian, Lupino Lane, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "Isn't Life Wonderful?" has injected his distinctive screen personality into "Maid in Morocco," the first of Educational's 1925-26 series of six releases which will star him. It will be released October 11.

Educational's October 4th releases will also introduce a new Christie comedian, Billy Dooley in "A Misfit Sailor." The role is similar to the part in which he built up such an enviable reputation in vaudeville circuits.

Coincidentally with the first Lane two-reel subject on October 11 there will be released a one-reel Cameo Comedy, "Dog Daze." The first of the new season's two-reel Juvenile Comedy "Baby Be Good," appears on October 18, introducing two of the screen's most skillful child comedians, Bonnie Barrett and "Big Boy" (Malcolm Sebastian). Felix, the cat, "On the Job" and "Knickerknacks of Knowledge," a Lyman H. oHwe's Hodge-Podge, both one-reel offerings complete this week's schedule.

A Mermaid Comedy, "Spot Light," the two-reel release for the final week of October, features Lige Conley in a most enjoyable satire on "back stage" life. Another Cameo one-reeler, "Scrambled Eggs," completes the comedy schedule for October 25.

Critic Hails "Our Gang"

Praises Pathe's Famous Series of Comedies Highly in Comments

"Our Gang" and other two-reel comedy series made by Hal Roach and released by Pathe are being played in the houses of the Keith-Albee vaudeville circuit. In Rochester, recently, the critic of the Democrat and Herald had the following to say about the "Our Gang" offering.

"Not the least important offering on Keith's bill is the supplementary screen offering, an 'Our Gang' number, entitled 'Your Own Backyard.' It is announced that a number of the 'Our Gang' comedies are to be shown in Keith houses this season. Their inclusion in any theater program is a wise move, for statistics prove that they are the most popular short-reel screen comedies of the day."

ONE OF THE MASTER FEATURES AMONG CURRENT "SHORTS"—Standing in a class by itself is the "once-a-month" tribute from the tiny stars of Hal Roach's "Our Gang" comedies. Here we see Allen Clayton Hoskins (center), the featured member of the gang in this particular offering. Better known as "Farina," Master Hoskins is given the rare opportunity to sport a "swell outfit." The picture is called "Your Own Back Yard" and is a Pathe release.

Press Book Indexed

Pathe's "Wild West" Exploitation Handy to Find

Pathe has followed up its fine pressbook on "The Freshman" with another of exceptional quality and carrying an unusual index feature that is certain to make a hit with showmen. The new book, supervised by S. Barret McCormick, director of exploitation for Pathe, covers "Wild West," the Patheserial starring Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson.

The "Wild West" press book is approximately 14 inches deep and 21 inches wide. The front cover page, however, is only 15 inches wide. Other pages are graduated to the full width of the book, with index lines which cover each department. These are so arranged that they can all be seen at one time and turned to immediately without thumbing over any pages. The first index is Posters, then comes The 101 Ranch, Stories of players, Exploitation, Accessories, Publicity Ads., and The Scope of Pathe Serials.

Kathryn McGuire With Fox

Miss Kathryn McGuire has the leading role in "Failure," another of the William Fox O. Henry two-reelers. "Tillie Jones," the role portrayed by Miss McGuire, is a young woman stenographer whose chief aim in life is to let some other person do her office work.

"All at Sea"

Director Lew Seiler has started production on his latest William Fox Imperial comdey, "All at Sea," with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles.

Kinograms Editor Back From Europe With Many Contracts

BRINGING with him long term contracts for news reel pictures and cameraman service from some of the biggest news reel producing firms in Great Britain and Continental Europe, Forrest Izard, managing editor of Kinograms, released by Educational, has returned from an extended trip abroad.

During his absence the cables were kept humming between Mr. Izard and E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, while negotiations were being completed for Kinograms' foreign expansion. While Mr. Izard had been given carte blanche he at all times kept in touch with the home office with what he had accomplished.

Mr. Izard's trip has resulted in Kinograms being served with a most complete foreign service. First a contract was signed with the foremost "Gazette" producers of the British Isles whereby their product and staff of cameramen, numbering twenty operators, are available for Kinograms. This includes service from England proper, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and nearby islands such as the Isle of Man, Isle of Wight, etc.

For Continental Europe Mr. Izard first established a main office or clearing house in Paris which serves as a main shipping point for all news reel negative from Europe (except England), Turkey, Asia Minor, Africa, Arabia and India. Points in the Orient such as China and Japan will continue to ship across the Pacific. The Paris Office consists of a manager, Louis Dansee, and a staff of cameramen who cover Belgium, Austria and Switzerland as well as France.

Another most important affiliation was made in Germany with one of that country's leading news reel producers whereby Kinograms is assured of full and prompt service of all news events, and special news features from Germany, Holland and Russia. Another contact was made in Stockholm giving Kinograms full service in Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark.

Mr. Izard then journeyed to Rome, where a staff was organized to cover fully Italy and Greece. Special staff representatives were also secured in Spain, Portugal and Malta.

This, Mr. Izard believes, places Kinograms in an enviable position in the news reel field and guarantees to exhibitors a service covering all possible points of news interest in the countries named. Arrangements were also made whereby, in case of some extraordinary happening requiring additional cameramen, operators will be enabled to jump from one country to another to give the necessary assistance.

Other foreign points are being built up as rapidly as possible. Contacts already in existence include Japan, China, South and Central America, Mexico and Australia. A complete Canadian staff has always been a complement of the Kinograms' domestic staff.

EVERYTHING IS RIDICULOUSLY ROSY in "On the Go," the William Fox Imperial Comedy, as we can see.

Chaplin Reissues

What are probably the most valuable reissue rights in motion pictures have been obtained by Pathe Exchange, Inc., through Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager, by signing an agreement with Charlie Chaplin which means that four of Chaplin's best comedies are again to entertain thousands throughout the country.

Pathe paid $500,000 for these reissue rights, so certain is the company that they constitute some of the most valuable pieces of motion picture property in the history of the industry. Together with four others, these four pictures were made for First National under the famous $1,000,000 contract of 1917.

The reissues are "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure," and "Sunnyside.' "Shoulder Arms" is considered by many Chaplin's greatest comedy; by others, next in appeal to "The Kid."

Proposed Change in Name of Short Subject Called Aimless

REAMS of paper have been used in an aimless effort to prove the need for a new name for short subjects, according to an official of the Short Subject Division of Fox Film Corporation.

Questioning the necessity for such agitation, this official points out that exhibitors are fully alive to the difference in quality of short subjects. It is not necessary, or even advisable, to change the words "short subjects" to impress them with the improved value of that class of film, this executive contends.

As an example he offers the enthusiasm which has greeted the Van Bibber and Imperial comedies because of what they have come to mean at the box-office. The O. Henry pictures and the "Helen and Warren" series are receiving the some welcome, he continues, because the exhibitors know the popularity of the authors and the stories. These, he points out, are referred to by their individual names and do not suffer because the exhibitor might think of them as short subjects. The short films that do suffer, he asserts, are those of poor quality, whose sole merit is low price.

"Will the changing of the class name change the quality of this type of film?" asks the Fox Film representative of the short reel department. He assures us that his organization is glad to foster anything that will give the short subject its well earned place in the sun; that will bring extra dollars at the box-office through adequate advertising of the short screen offering. But he doubts strongly whether that end will be attained by lost motion in creating a new name for the short product.

Beers Goes to Warner

Warner Bros. announced last week the appointment of Fred C. Beers as casting director at the West Coast studios. Beers was casting director for Metro and Famous Players-Lasky, successively, going from the latter organization to Warner Bros.

Sennett Studios Busy

The summer months saw no slackening in production activity at the Mack Sennett studios, where comedies are made for Pathe, and the season just starting finds the famous comedy lot busier than ever.

Eddie Cline is again wielding the megaphone for Sennett, having finished the direction of Jackie Coogan's new picture. Cline is directing Alice Day in a yachting comedy with a large cast of Sennett's funsters, including Danny O'Shea, Eugenia Gilbert, Joe Young, Marion McDonald, Sunshine Hart and Mary Ann Jackson.

Ralph Graves is in the midst of a new comedy having to do with the adventures of a traffic cop. Lloyd Bacon is directing him, with Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach playing important parts.

Universal Starts New Desmond And Dougherty Chapter Plays

TWO big serial picture plays were put into production at Universal City. They are "Strings of Steel," starring William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick, directed by Henry McRae, and "The Radio Detective," starring Jack Daugherty with William Crinley directing.

"Strings of Steel" is built around the development of the telephone, the action taking place just after Alexander Graham Bell had invented the telephone. "Strings of Steel" was written by Philip Dutton Hurn and Oscar Lund. Supporting Desmond are Albert J. Smith and George Ovey.

"The Radio Detective" is from the novel by Arthur B. Reeve. Radio, college life and the Boy Scouts all play a prominent part in the picture. Margaret Quimby is cast in the feminine lead with Jack Mower playing the "heavy." Florence Allen, Chicago beauty contest winner, plays the feminine "heavy." Others in the cast are John T. Prince, Sammy Gervon, Wallace Baldwin and Howard Enstedt.

Big Educational Bookings

Each week Educational's sales-forces have been adding one or more of the large circuits throughout the country to the list of those who have signed up for the use of Educational Pictures during the 1925-26 season.

Among those with whom agreements have been closed last week, are the West Coast chain and its subsidiaries, comprising seventy-three theatres, located in all the larger towns of southern California. This group are booked to run 100 per cent of the entire Educational two-reel comedy output with twenty-six one-reel Felix the Cat Animated Cartoons.

Fleischer Signs New Contract

Max Fleischer, the famous film cartoonist, signed a new contract with Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal Pictures, whereby the latter will distribute the entire film output of the Fleischer Studios, including the "Out-of-the-Inkwell" Cartoons, the "Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes," the "Marvels of Motion" and "Film Facts" series, for an additional three years.

Short Subject Exchange

Maynard Schwartz, for four years manager of the Educational Exchange in Chicago, has resigned to open his own distribution offices in Chicago and Indianapolis. The new Exchange is to be called "Short Subject Exchange," and has opened temporary offices at 806 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago. They will start off with the Rayart-Herbert Rawlinson serial "The Flame Fighter" as their leader.

How San Francisco Plays the Comedies

Evidently San Francisco managers have come to appreciate the pull of the comedy picture. The Granada Theatre, one of the leading houses, gave Harry Langdon an even break with the dramatic offering on a recent campaign, with the comedy getting in on the newspaper as well as the billboard advertising.

RINGING THIS SHORT SUBJECT BELL—The San Francisco Granada believes there are more rings to the exhibition circus than the feature ring.

The illustration shows the three sheets used, but the 24-sheets carry the same proportion, with the stage show in the centre and the comedy on the right getting even space with Welcome Home. Each was in a circular space to carry out the slogan "Better than a three-ring circus."

The Granada plays up the comedy whenever it is considered that the name or the title will exercise an appeal.

Buckingham with Fox

George E. Marshall, Fox Film Corporation comedy supervisor, announces that Tom Buckingham has returned to the directorial staff of the Fox comedy unit. For a number of years Mr. Buckingham directed Fox comedies.

Mr. Buckingham is now busily engaged preparing a new Imperial comedy which shortly is to go into production.

Latest "Helen and Warren"

"Hold Everybody," is the latest "Helen and Warren"' comedy started at the Fox West Coast Sutdios. Directed by Albert Ray under George Marshall's supervision, this humorous sketch of married life promises to be more of a mirth provoker than its predecessors. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley continue as the leads and are supported by Grace Diamond, Sidney Bracy and CHAPLIN COMEDIES—2 reelers. The Rink: About the best of the series. The Floorwalker: Another fair Chaplin. None of these Chaplins are anything to write home about. They can be bought right and will do for an extra attraction. The kids like them because they are so old they are new. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

CHAPLIN COMEDIES—2 reelers. The Vagabond. This is not so good. East Street: Very good; kids go wild over it. Immigrant. A fair Chaplin, rather vulgar in spots. Pawnshop: This went over good. One A. M.: Fair; as Charlie is the only actor in it, it gets monotonous. Conoat Projection Service (Avard J. Sloat), Troy, New York.

DON COYOTE. (Universal). Reginald Denny. A very interesting short. I find that my people look forward to Denny's "Leather Pusher" series. I show them once a week and all have been very good so far. Tone O. K. Yes for Sunday. Draw farm and merchant class, town 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (450 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

FOR LAND'S SAKE. (Educational). Really a mirthquake. One of the funniest moving slapsticks we ever used. A comedy like this will make the crowd forget the worst feature. Tone O.K. Yes for Sunday. Draw rural class, town 175. Admission 10-25. D. B. Rankin, Co-Operative Theatre (200 seats), Idana, Kansas.

FERDINAND AND ISABELLE. (Universal-Hysterical History). Not so good. The first I had was William Tell. I thought it fine; but "Omar" and this one rather silly. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

GOAT GETTERS. (Educational). Here's a kid comedy that's a wow! This one is as good as as Pathe's "Our Gang." Print fair. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

HEEBIE JEEBIES. (F. B. O.) Star, Jimmy Aubrey. This is the best Aubrey comedy I ever ran and it was sure a hit. I think Aubrey is putting out better stuff than he used to make. Farmers and merchants town of 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

HIGH SOCIETY. (Pathe-Our Gang). All "Gang" comedies are good and very popular here, in fact, more so than any other comedies. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

HIS HIGH HORSE. (Educational). Star, Lee Moran. Oh, gee! Oh, Gosh! Another knockout for Mermaids. Roars, giggles, chuckles, shrieks, and everything greeted this one. It's a good one. Good tone and appeal. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

INTO THE NET. (Pathe). Star, Jack Mulhall. A fine serial. Good tone. Yes for Sunday. Town 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

LOVEMANIA. (Educational). Star, Al St. John. Hot puppies! This one hit the spot. It is one continuous roar of laughter all the way through. As the nut Al St. John was excellent. Tone, good, appeal good. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

LOW BRIDGE. (Universal). Star, Buddy Messinger. Two-reel comedy—nothing extra in this one, as the laughs are few and far between. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

MASKED MARVEL. (Winkler-Reg'lar Kids.) This two reel comedy is much better than the rest of this series, but it did not draw a laugh as there was nothing funny about it. Print new. Very poor audience appeal. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

NEVER FEAR. (Educational). Star, Cliff Bowes. I don't believe there was one gag in this that deserved a good laugh. A very poor effort under the Cameo trademark. Good print, and that's all. Tone good. Appeal punk. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. Carl A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

NOBODY WORKS BUT FATHER. (Fox). Fine comedy. Lots of auto racing that made the fans straighten their spines. With this on the program you can advertise a one hundred per cent. comedy. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

OUCH! (Pathe-Stereoskopiks). One of the most novel tricks since the advent of motion pictures but doubtful if worth the price asked here. Draw farm and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

OUR GANG COMEDIES. (Pathe). These are the best comedies we have ever played. J. M. Blanchard, Lone Rock, Iowa.

PEST OF THE STORM COUNTRY. (Educational). Star, Louise Fazenda. A typical Jack Mhite Mermaid. None better. Tone O. K. Great appeal. Yes for Sunday. Draw village and rural classes, town 400. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

REALM OF SPORT. (Educational). Rather interesting for adults but not for the children. It usually has a little comedy in it at places. Reel was not in good shape. Tone, okay, appeal, fair. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

RED PEPPER. (Educational). Star, Al St. John. If this doesn't make them laugh they should be sent to the nearest specialist and examined for the grumps. Oh, boy! How they did laugh and laugh, and then laugh some more. Yes as to tone and for Sunday. Appeal—yep. Draw small town class, town 300. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

RIDDLE RIDER. (Universal). Star, William Desmond. I am on the tenth episode of this serial and it is a good one. Plenty thrills and action. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (450 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

TIRE TROUBLE (Pathe—Our Gang). This made a big hit. (See report of Blow Your Own Horn, F. B. O., of which this is a part placed here in justice to producer—Ed.). Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

UP ON THE FARM. (Fox). (2 reels). This is a humdinger of a two-reel comedy. Yes as to appeal and tone and for Sunday. Draw small town class, town 300. Admisison 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

Sale of Foreign Rights

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal Pictures Corporation, announces the successful negotiation of a contract made with Arthur Loew, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn, just before the latter sailed for Europe, on the famous "Out-of-the-Inkwell" series. With Red Seal operating its own exchanges in this country and Pathe controlling the distribution rights in Great Britain, this virtually gives the "Inkwell" product representation all over the civilized world.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

Albany to See Big Stars of Screen

If C. H. Buckley, of the Leland Theatre in Albany can arrange matters, he will have two or three personal appearances on the part of big stars in connection with the showing of certain big pictures during the fall and winter months. Mr. Buckley has rolled up his sleeves and plunged into the business, working anywhere from fourteen to eighteen hours a day, but putting over all three theatres in an admirable way.

What's Abe Stone of the Arbor Hill Theatre doing these days? Let him speak for himself. Raking in the nickels for next summer, that's all.

Whenever Mr. and Mrs. John Moran, who run the picture theatre in Coxsackie, come to town to do a bit of buying along Film Row, they generally journey over to Proctor's Grand to see the vaudeville. After one sees pictures day in and day out for twelve months in the year, a change does come in rather nice.

Frank Pelon, who runs the theatre at Indian Lake, had more thrills one day last week than from any picture ever thrown on his screen. Mr. Pelon was on his way from North Creek to Indian Lake, speeding up a new Studebaker car, when it caught fire. Mr. Pelon, however, was fortunate in that the road was sandy and he was able to extinguish the blaze.

Walter Hays, one of the king bees in the Strand chain of houses, dropped into town last week and was closeted a good part of the day at the Mark Strand Theatre with Uly S. Hill. The Regent Theatre, which was lately acquired by Mr. Hays and his group and which is several blocks from the Mark Strand, reopened Thursday night, completely redecorated and renovated, with the price remaining at 15 cents.

Short personals from the territory include the fact that W. W. Farley of Albany, owner of theatres in Schenectady, Catskill and Yonkers, was in Binghamton during the week; William Tweedy of Mechanicville was also along Film Row; Al Bothner, back in Mohawk, is preparing to book amateur acts within the next three weeks over the Smalley circuit.

While Florida is attracting a whole lot of the exhibitors these days, W. W. Mase of Prattsville has decided to try out California. Mr. Hunt will run his house during the winter. William Sherry, known to many exhibitors hereabouts, is in Florida and so are Art Richardson of Schroon Lake and Jimmy Sper of Albany and Buffalo.

It has been decided to reopen the Barcli Theatre in Schenectady, which is one of the Farley chain of houses in that city. The theatre has been closed for many months. Orchestras have been installed at both the State and Strand Theatres in that city.

Now that the canning season is over, Louis Scott of Cazenovia will be able to devote more time to the affairs of the theatre which he runs in the well known lakeside village. Perched on top of a load of canned corn on the way to the storehouse, Mr. Scott was more inclined to discuss the canning situation last week than he was to talk pictures.

Louis Saperstein, who was associated for some time with Jake Rosenthal, is the new manager of the Palace Theatre in Troy, the shift occurring last Sunday night. Mr. Saperstein is a brother of the manager of Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany.

Jake Golden of the Griswold in Troy, knowing the city's fondness for prize fights, did a land office business the fore part of the week with the Shade-Walker pictures. The theatre will observe its anniversary during the week of October 11, and Jake has a number of stunts up his sleeve. The Charleston dance contests each Monday night are drawing capacity houses.

Cliff Lewis of the Strand in Syracuse works in his shirtsleeves. Perhaps that's the reason he is doing such excellent work. Even when Cliff was with the Shirley houses in Schenectady, he was known as a sixteen-a-day man.

Miami was to Ben Apple, a well-known exhibitor of Troy, a veritable turkish bath, for when Ben returned last week from Florida he was minus thirty pounds. But Ben still weighs something over 220 pounds, so the thirty isn't being missed much. Mr. Apple is credited with having made $2,000 in one deal, and is planning to return to Florida later.

According to reports along Film Row, Mike Freedman of Schenectady is planning to shortly reopen the Rialto in that city and operate it along with the Woodlawn. Mr. Freedman is now buying spot bookings.

Two old-time exhibitors in Troy are now at odds, Harry Hall and Frank N. Barhydt, the latter now residing in St. Petersburg. Mr. Hall claims that Mr. Barhydt owes $3,800 rent on property in the Collar City, and the case will probably be threshed out in the courts.

When White Eagle, a part Indian, put on a lasso exhibition at the Rose Theatre in Troy on amateur night, Jake Rosenthal, owner of the house, sweated blood for a few minutes as the performer threatened to put the screen out of business. Mr. Rosenthal is having lots of fun these days booking amateurs and working in conjunction with E. F. Walsh of the Albany Theatre in Schenectady, the two houses swapping acts.

When fifty seats consigned for the Bradley Theatre in Fort Edward arrived in broken condition, Lew Fischer, reopening the house, decided to have both an informal and a formal opening. And so the house opened informally last week, but the formal opening a little later will bring "The Iron Horse" for two days as the feature attraction. Prices will be boosted to 50 cents for the picture. The theatre seats 500 and will run five nights a week. There is no sign of the iron mines in Port Henry reopening, and while Mr. Fischer's house there is running five nights a week, he often wonders where the patrons get the money. Mr. Fischer's house in Chatham is now open and running on a regular schedule with a 30 cent admission.

"Pop" Linton of Utica has started to rebuild his theatre in that city. Ben Young, who is building a new house in Ilion, expects to open on December 1 and will use "The Ten Commandments" for the occasion.

George Loomis, who runs the theatre bearing his name in Frankfort, and who also holds an executive position with the Remington Arms Company, expects to be along Film Row within the next two weeks. He is also looking forward to the opening of the hunting season.

Robbers' Trick Fails

When in doubt, call a cop.

That's the maxim of Otto Zehnder, caretaker of the Aubert Theatre, Easton Avenue at Aubert Avenue, St. Louis, And his hunch undoubtedly saved the theatre's receipts from robbers a few nights ago.

The robbers tried a new stunt. Zehnder had gone home and was pounding his ear on the pillow when his landlady informed him that a woman had phoned that her boy was locked in the theatre.

Enroute to the theatre Zehnder detected two men following him. He became suspicious. When he encountered a policeman, he had the cop accompany him to the theatre. The men disappeared. There was no boy in the theatre.

ERTE MAKES 'EM AND LILYAN WEARS 'EM

Gowns is all Erte has time to make these days out at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City, Cal. And Miss Tashman looks like several million dollars in this creation, done for the Robert Z. Leonard production, "A Little Bit of Broadway."

Livingston Takes Over Baltimore Theatre

Bernard Livingston, who controls the Clover Theatre on the block, has taken over the New Gem Theatre in Northeast Baltimore. James Hartlove was former owner of this house.

John Guttermuth of the Essex Auditorium, has broken ground for a new house which when completed will seat about 800. The new house will be named the Elecktra.

Maine Town Loses Theatre

Powers' Theatre in Caribou, Me., was damaged badly by fire recently. The townsfolk thus have been deprived of screen fare until repairs have been completed, as Powers' is the only theatre in Caribou.

Control of the Acme Amusement Company has been acquired by Wilfred Duffy and Howard Duffy of Old Orchard and Leon P. Gorman, who is manager of the Maine Theatres in Kennebunk and Vinalhaven.

Ben Fitzer Gets Kenmore, N. Y., Theatre

It is reported that Ben Fitzer of Syracuse, N. Y., has closed for the lease of the new theatre being built in Kenmore, N. Y., and which will be ready for the public early in the new year. It is understood the Shea Amusement Company was negotiated with for the lease of the house, but considered the rental too high.

Negotiations are said to be under way by Al Sherry and Ben Levine for the lease of the Main-Central market building, at 640 Main street which they plan to remodel into a 1,700-seat vaudeville and picture house.

George Biehler, the genial Hamburg, N. Y., film magnate, expects to have his new theatre ready soon after the first of the year for the entertainment of the villagers.

It is reported that Buffalo theatre interests have leased the old Browning-King site on Main street, opposite Shea's Hippodrome, on which they will build a house and lease to someone.

Mayor William J. MacFarlane won out in the primaries in Canandiagua, N. Y., the other day over his opponent by a bare plurality of 28 votes. Mayor Bill is also interested in the exhibitor end of the business. He was one of the officers of the old Associated Theatres, Inc., which was headed by Harold P. Dygert.

Charlie Bowe, manager of the Frontier, a Buffalo community house, has received a letter from Mayor Frank X. Schwab congratulating him on his recent marriage. Other local celebrities are doing the same thing.

C. H. Smith, manager of the Shattuck Opera House in Hornell, N. Y., has taken over the Peerless Theatre in the same Southern Tier town. The Peerless formerly was operated by Mrs. Grace Flint.

The Strand Theatre, operated by Bill Dillon in Ithaca, N. Y., is offering vaudeville the last half of the week. Pictures are being shown the first half. Bill has booked all the big features for the Cornell town house.

The Cataract Theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y., has inaugurated a policy of double feature bills, changing the programs Sunday and Thursdays. Eddie Weinberg is managing this house for the Cataract Amusement Company, which is headed by A. C. Hayman.

Fred Schweppe will open the remodeled Amusu Theatre in Elmira soon under the name of the Capitol. A $30,000 organ has been installed in the house, which will offer pictures. The capacity is now 1,000.

Mass. Showmen Return To Old Policy

It was twelve years ago when the Goldstein Brothers of Springfield, Mass., introduced at their Broadway Theatre what has come to be a higher type of film entertainment. There was a large orchestra and elaborate special stage settings for each show. Then as time went on the policy was changed until it became vaudeville and pictures. For this fall and winter season Messsrs. Goldstein, however, have returned to the policy of which they are pioneers. Vaudeville has been eliminated. First National and Metro-Goldwyn features are being given a full week showing. A new organ has been installed. There is an orchestra of fifteen musicians under the direction of Maxim Maurice, who also is in charge of the production of prologues. Harold Hovel is organist. The Broadway has been repainted, redecorated and new hangings and other fixtures installed.

William P. Gray, head of the Famous Players theatres in New England, temporarily is in charge of the Fenway Theatre in Boston, the film company's key house for New England. Laurence (Buddy) Stuart, former manager of the Fenway, has been promoted to a position in the New York office of Famous Players.

Charles E. Cook, former manager of the Colonial Theatre in Lawrence, believes good luck can chase bad luck. Suffering a nervous breakdown from over-work, Mr. Cook was obliged to enter a sanatorium for treatment. That's the bad luck chapter of this tale. Then he had three two-dollar bills. He compared these with the numbers of notes given in a Boston newspaper's contest, and finding that he had one of the "lucky" bills he won a prize of $50.

Arthur F. Kendall, conductor of the orchestra at Abraham Goodside's Strand Theatre in Portland, Me., temporarily is in charge of the orchestra at Mr. Goodside's Capitol Theatre in Springfield.

Mrs. John E. Locatelli died September 13 at her home in Somerville. She was the mother of Albert J. Locatelli, head of the Locatelli chain of New England theatres.

New Winnipeg Outlet

The Bijou Theatre has become one of the recognized first run theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba. Announcement is made by Manager Levy that the Bijou will be the "outlet" in the Manitoba Capital for all releases of the Film Booking Offices and will specialize in independent bookings. Recently Universal Films acquired the leases of three important Winnipeg theatres, the Lyceum, Starland and College, appointing Charles A. Meade general manager of the group, a specialty to be made of Universal attractions. Famous Players have two large theatres in Winnipeg, the Capitol and the Metropolitan.

"The Gold Rush" started its last week at the Regent Theatre, Toronto, which is under the management of D. C. Brown, on September 26, this being the seventh consecutive week of its presentation at the Regent as the Canadian first run of the feature. Its second Canadian showing was at the Capitol Theatre, London, the manager of which is Tommy Logan. It was next presented at the Savoy Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, under the direction of Manager H. E. Wilton, and at the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, by Manager Harry Dahn.

Gilbert Named in Hartford

Francis G. Gilbert has been appointed associate manager of Parsons' Theatre in Hartford, Conn.

Louis Sagal, a Poli theatres' executive, recently entertained the members of the New Haven Medical Association, at his farm in Branford. Mr. Sagal is host to the association similarly every year.

Manager Weinstock of the Grand Theatre in Hartford is making a big success of this house with a picture policy and he just celebrated the anniversary of taking over the theatre.

Among the many live-wire Poli managers is Bill Fitzgerald, who is in charge of Poli's New Hyperion Theatre in New Haven. When it comes to putting over a show, whether it be films, vaudeville or legitimate attractions, Bill is the boy who can do it right.

Another Rochester House

Work on the construction of a new $2,000,000 theatre by the Keith-Albee interests will begin in Rochester, N. Y., next June. This company now operates the Temple Theatre in Kodak Town. The site of the new house has not been announced, although it has been rumored for some time that the company has been negotiating for the purchase of the Gordon Theatre site in Clinton avenue north about two blocks from Main street east, presumably with the idea of erecting the new theatre on this property. With the building of the new theatre, it is not proposed to abandon the Temple. The property on which this house stands has been leased for a comparatively long term of years.

South Carolina Theatre Lost in Fire

The Star Theatre, York, S. C., was destroyed by fire Friday night of last week. J. G. Wray, owner and manager, believes that the fire originated in an adjoining building. It was a total loss, without insurance, but Mr. Wray was able to save the film which he was running at the theatre that day.

Rain Aids Realism in Washington House

L. W. Harris put over a nice bit of "realism" at his house in Ephrata, Wash., last week. During the county fair he played "Racing Luck." A terrific rainstorm and cloudburst drove everyone to shelter. Crowds jammed Mr. Harris' house. The roof was old and a bit leaky, and presently there was a discouraging drip in many places. Nothing daunted, Harris turned on his thunder and lightning effects, and amid suitable music, thunder and lightning and the thrilling scenes of "Racing Luck" the crowd soon became oblivious to the rain and had a wonderful time. They thought it was all part of the "fireworks" and complimented Mr. Harris on his splendid presentation. Mr. Harris had to put a tent over his projectors to keep 'em dry!

Mr. Hurst of the Vining Theatre, Ashland, Oregon, is completely remodeling his theatre. New carpets, drapes and furnishings will be placed and many changes made. "The Tower of Lies"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

A High-Class Production Directed by Victor Seastrom with Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"The Tower of Lies" is a beautiful production with a flash of poignant drama at its end. Fiction readers with an appreciation for the truly fine will find this Victor Seastrom picture a faithful and artistic adaptation of Selma Lagerlof's prize-winning novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia." They will go to see the picture and thoroughly enjoy it and the followers of Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer will be drawn to the theatre by the "pull" of these stars' names.

Seastrom, one of our best directors, has made this famous novel one of the classics of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer schedule. The acting always is of a high order, with all the players more than fulfilling expectations, and some of the rural backgrounds, with figures silhouetted against the horizon, are almost idyllic in their beauty.

lars to prevent eviction. The girl goes to the city to work, followed by the new landlord, and the money arrives on time. She is not heard from further and the old man becomes a gentle lunatic, playing at emperor and his court with the neighborhood children. The girl returns with the badge of shame on her, the neighborhood drives her away. She is leaving on the boat when the landlord, her tormentor, falls into the paddle wheels and the old man, seeking vainly to follow, runs off the end of the pier and drowns. She returns and marries the farmer boy.

While beautifully done, it must be admitted that the story—for screen purposes—is slight at the beginning. There is much character delineation, or change in character, little plot and not much incident. Symbolism is cleverly used. The action speeds up when the girl returns home shamed, and suddenly accumulated force of the bits of human interest that have gone before makes itself felt. Drama of the most poignant sort develops, and pathos that is real and gripping. Things suddenly begin to happen. The picture ends in a whirlwind of effectiveness.

Chaney and Miss Shearer especially are splendid. Claire McDowell scores as the mother. The others, as said before, more than fulfill expectations. Chaney isn't grotesque but he manages a striking make-up just the same; Miss Shearer has a role unlike those given her before.

"The Tower of Lies" is a high-class production. The so-called intelligensia will be enthusiastic about it. Just what will be the reaction of the average audience to the first half of the picture, before the tremendous drams begins to transpire, is a matter of conjecture, with the thought prevailing that they will be restless. But if they wait for the drama, it will grip them, young and old, shop girl and sophisticate, as few pictures can.

"What Fools Men"—First National

Lewis Stone Is Featured, David Torrence, Shirley Mason, Barbara Bedford in Cast

Under the cryptic title, "What Fools Men," First National is offering an adaptation of Henry Kitchell Webster's novel, "John Greer and His Daughter," with a box-office cast headed by Lewis Stone.

The theme of the picture concerns the problems confronted by a man who has lived away from his wife and is suddenly called upon to look after the welfare of his grown daughter that he did not know even existed. Father and daughter both have forceful natures and there are frequent clashes. The situation is complicated by the fact that the father turns down the wife of a capitalist who is backing his inventions, incurs her scorn and this leads to her plotting through her husband to bring about his downfall. The daughter works out her own salvation by marrying the chauffeur who turns out to be an excellent husband and they finally, with the aid of a faithful girl secretary brings about the father's rescue from failure.

The significance of the film title appears to be rather far-fetched, but refers to the inability of the father to tell the real from the sham in dealing with his fellow-men. The story becomes somewhat involved at times and certain of the situations are more conveniently designed for dramatic effect than convincing. At the same time there is throughout, in the dealings of the characters with each other, that continual clash of wills and temperament that makes for drama.

The excellent acting of the principals, especially Lewis Stone, makes their problems seem real and holds you interested in watching their solution, despite a lack of definite purpose in the story and a conventional ending showing the regeneration of the father. In a word, it is the fine work of the players, rather than the story itself that holds you.

As a head-strong young woman who while flouting her father's domination yields to the rather unwelcome but more subtle influence of the female secretary, Shirley Mason, gives an excellent performance. Barbara Bedford in a rather unusual type of role for her, that of a sedate, clever business woman of the world with plenty of poise, is well cast. David Torrence shows to advantage as a capitalist. Tom Wilson as the colored butler, a type of role in which he can always be counted on for comedy, does not disappoint Hugh Allen, a little known player, makes a decidedly fine impression in the role of the chauffeur. He is handsome, a good actor, has a fine personality and is the type that should appeal especially to the younger female patrons. seems destined for big things on the screen. Watch him.

George Archainbaud has given this story good direction, playing up to good advantage its strongest points.

"The Man on the Box"—Warner Brothers

With Syd Chaplin as Star McGrath Novel Proves a Regular Whirlwind of Laughter

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Both as a novel and a play Harold McGrath's story, "The Man On the Box," achieved widespread popularity and the film version indicates that its choice as the vehicle to introduce Syd Chaplin as a Warner Brothers star was a happy one.

Certain changes have been made in the story and situations and as it reaches the screen it is an uproarous farce comedy. The representative of a foreign power seeks to secure plans drawn by an inventor who is jealous of a young man who is financing him. The foreigner has his henchman hide in the inventor's bedroom and the young man, Bob, comes to her rescue. The inventor misunderstands, Bob escape, swipes a cab and picks up a pretty girl as his fare. Her father offers him a job as groom, which he accepts. The girl learns his identity and kids him by making him a butler. He bungles things up and disguises as a French maid to watch the spy. After various complications he gets the plans, exposes the spy and wins the girl.

Under the direction of Charles Reisner, who has assisted in the production of some of the best pictures made by Charlie Chaplin, Syd's famous brother, everything has been concentrated on playing up to the utmost the comedy opportunities offered by the story, even the mystery and melodramatic angles have all been given a humorous twist. The rseult is an exceedingly fast-moving, hilarious comedy.

So fast do the laughs come that you are apt to start a new one before finishing with the old one. There is not a dull moment in this picture.

Just picture Syd Chaplin in pajamas mixed up with a spy and chased by a jealous husband and a bunch of cops, then as a cab driver, a chauffeur, a butler and finally impersonating a dainty French maid. Recall his remarkable gift of pantomime which he uses in hiding his identity, consider the chances for flirtations with the male contingent, the jealousy of the other women, and the almost unlimited possibilities for comedy complications. Realize that every possibility has been used to the utmost and that every scene has been crammed with gags, falls, stunts, etc., including farce, burlesque, slapstick, straight-comedy impersonations and pantomime and you get an idea of what this film offers. Not all of the laughs are spontaneous, in fact, some are obviously prepared for and built up, but they get over just the same, and as shown in his previous pictures, Syd has the happy faculty in many of his stunts of making you feel that they are not studied but extemporaneous.

We don't believe we have ever seen a picture in which there is more stuff designed to amuse than in this one, and we believe that the vast majority of spectators will vote it a wow and a regular whirlwind of laughter.

There is so much good stuff contributed by Syd that it is hard to pick out the best, but certainly his imitation of a goldfish is a riot. Syd is really almost the whole picture but his support is excellent throughout "The Man On the Box" looks like a rattling good tonic for any box-office.

"The Calgary Stampede"—Universal

A Crackerjack Picture—Hoot Gibson's Best Chock Full of Thrills, Excitement and Fun

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Hoot Gibson's newest Universal-Jewel production, "The Calgary Stampede,"' should provide crackerjack entertainment for western fans, this star's wide circle of admirers and in fact everyone who likes a good stirring "up-and-at-'em"' picture with pep, punch, thrills and action.

This is a typical western with all of the snap of the best examples of this class and at the same time it has the vigor of the Northwest Mounted Police Stories. This is accomplished by having the action take place on a ranch in Western Canada, which seems just like our own ranches, except that horses instead of cows are the centre of interest. The "Mounted" figure in the story as the hero is unjustly accused of shooting a man.

Hoot appears as a champion cow puncher in search of adventure. He falls in love with a French-Canadian girl against the wish of her father who is killed and Hoot accused. He escapes and posing as a boob hides on a ranch. The "Mounted" trail him but he throws them off the track. Finally in the annual stampede at Calgary, a glorified rodeo, his employer's crack rider is injured. Hoot, daring all, enters the Roman race and wins. An Indian girl who has been jilted by the real murderer exposes him, vindicating Hoot and paving the way for him to win the girl of his choice.

This picture starts off with good human interest stuff and then gets under way with a bang. In the first reel is a situation that has a big enough kick for the big climax, in fact a similar situation has been so used in other pictures, that is a stampede of a there are a lot of breath-taking moments in big herd of buffalo. There are also striking shots of hundreds of elk.

Right away it swings into the melodramatic sequences. The murder of the father, the chase of the murderer and accusation of Hoot and his escape and finely handled and arouse a high pitch of interest. There is some of the snappicst and best photographed scenes of fast riding ever seen on the screen in these sequences.

The fast tempo is slowed down a bit in the scenes where Hoot is posing as a boob on the ranch, but there is excellent suspense in the efforts of the mounted police to identify him as the murderer and considerable humor in the way he succeeds in fooling them.

Exceptionally interesting are the scenes of the Calgary Stampede which furnish the climax. This is an annual event like a Western rodeo, but with a greater variety of events. These scenes are the real thing, and the broncho busting, steer-riding and other events. Besides there are exciting wagon races that will give the fans new thrills. But the big punch comes when Hoot wins the Roman race. This star's fans will shout with delight when they see him going like a streak of lightning standing erect riding two horses with one foot on each. No faking or doubling here. Oh, boy, Hoot certainly is there with the horsemanship.

Scarcely less exciting is the chase which follows ending with a fall in which a light wagon rolls over and over down a steep incline and the villain tumbles with it, with Hoot and two "Mounted" almost at his heels.

Of course you know how it is going to turn out, but the suspense as to how Hoot will elude the police and when he will throw off his disguise, keeps up a high pitch of interest just the same.

Hoot is his own likeable self at his best. Virginia Brown Faire gives a good performance as the girl, but has little to do. Philo McCullough scores as the persistent "Mounted" Charles Sellon is excellent as the ranch owner. Jim Corey is good as the villain.

And don't forget that this picture was actually filmed in the real location of the story, the Canadian Rockies, in the midst of some of the fiest scenery in the world, which means that many of the backgrounds are of marvelous natural beauty.

"The Calgary Stampede" looks like a real box-office winner, for it should appeal to everyone who likes excitement, thrills and adventure; and it is not too long, just six snappy reels.

Snappy and Likeable New Star, Tom Tyler, Makes Debut in Fast, Actionful Western

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

More than ordinary interest for the picture patron is attached to the F. B. O. production "Let's Go, Gallagher," because of the fact that it serves to inroduce an entirely new "Western" star in the person of Tom Tyler. He proves to be a well-built young fellow of pleasing personality, a regular he-man who is an athlete, a good scrapper and a fine rider. In fact he possesses all of the requirements of this type of role and can hold his own with the majority and outdistance many of his rivals in this field. We feel sure that the fans will like him.

The story makes no attempt to deviate from the accustomed lines of action which has proved their popularity with audiences. A wandering cowboy is attracted to a girl ranch owner and gets a job. He incurs the enmity of the foreman who is a rustler, and has made away with so much of the stock that the heroine is unable to meet the mortgage. The hero after a series of adventures finds some of the stolen cattle saves the ranch from foreclosure, brands the villain as a rustler and wins the girl.

All of the familiar situations have been introduced and additional comedy and human interest built up in the character of a little orphan and a rheumatic old hand who takes mud baths. There is a fight in a restaurant with the breaking of the stairway the holding at bay of the gang and dash of the hero for liberty which is broken by his rescue of the little chap on a runaway hand-car just as a train approaches. Then comes the rescue of the girl from a runaway, the kidnapping of the girl, her fight with the kidnapper and more fights between the gang members and the hero, and the final saving of the ranch by the hero arriving in the nick of time. About the only thing out of the routine is the prominence of the role of the little chap who does almost as much to save the various situations as the hero.

So much material has been worked into the story that there is something doing every minute with no let down. There is action from start to finish. This picture should please the Western fans who have demonstrated that they don't care for familiarity of the situations provided there is plenty of action, good fights and hard riding, and a likeable star. "Let's Go, Gallagher" fills this bill to a "T."

Barbara Star is attractive and satisfactory as the girl, and little Frankie Darro is excellent as the kid.

"The Knockout"—First National

Milton Sills Scores in Virile Melodrama of Lumber Country and Prizefight Arena

Reviewed by Tom Waller

A melodrama, with the fistic arena and lumber camp as locales, is this First National vehicle for Milton Sills, entitled "The Knockout." The continuity is superbly handled, thus the story realizes an ever mounting suspense which crystallizes into a well merited climax of melodramatic greatness.

The star appears in the role of a boxer who goes to a lumber camp to recover from an injury. He has an encounter with the villainous boss of a rival company and defeats him. Falling in love with a girl who is trying to save her property from Sill's scheming boss, Sills enters the boxing arena and turns over his winnings as well as his heart and hand to the girl and helps her win her fight.

As a terror of the seas and a New York cop, Sills gained particular prominence as an essayer of red-blooded roles. Now, as the light heavyweight champion scrapper of the world, he avails himself of the opportunity to present the two-fisted man. There are three ring battles in "The Knockout" and two of them are as good as some of the best professional exhibitions this reviewer has seen.

The scenes of the wooded country with huskies at their work and play are long to be remembered. A fight between the champion and the hustler of a rival lumber company starts in the woods, continues onto a trestle, into a raging mountain stream and then back to the mainland where the massive bruiser of the north is finally sent to slumberland by the prowess of the smaller man.

Love seeps into the story after the first few feet. From then on the "champ" has two things in mind—to get the girl and play fair with her company, even though it is the bitter rival of his employe.

One of the big punch scenes, where the suspense is especially high, is that of a log jam. Sills, descending over the mass of piled logs with a keg of dynamite with which to blow them loose, will have the average picturegoer sitting on the edge of his seat. Whether in coal region or society center, "The Knockout" should register big at the box office. The role essayed by Sills is one that should have just that appeal, since the boxer mingles with the best of society and yet at the same time can handle the roughest of roughnecks.

"Tessie"—Arrow Film Corporation

May McAvoy and Box-Office Cast in Amusing Comedy Adapted from Story by Sewell Ford

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With May McAvoy as the star, Arrow Film Corporation is offering "Tessie," a Dallas Fitzgerald production, based on Sewell Ford's amusing story of a bright and clever girl clerk employed at a hotel cigar counter who always had a ready answer for the male flirts who tried to make dates with her.

The story deals with Tessie's love for an automobile mechanic who became a salesman and then threw her over for a wealthy woman. To get even with him she accepted the attentions of the wealthy woman's easy-going son who suddenly developed pep and eloped with Tessie after licking the former suitor, who lost out all the way round.

There are a number of bright and amusing situations, especially in the early part of the film, and an exceedingly humorous lot of subtitles, many of which are based on lines from the book. The interest begins to drop somewhat towards the middle with the development along familiar lines, but the story is brought to a satisfactory ending following a certain amount of suspense as to whether Tessie will marry the mechanic or the rich chap.

May McAvoy is dainty and alluring in the title role and Lee Moran is effective as the blustering, bluffing salesman, while Bobby Agnew gives a good performance as the rich chap. Myrtle Steadman is excellent in the minor role of the rich widow.

This picture would stand cutting, which would speed it up more, but there is enough good comedy to keep the average patronage amused and pleased.

"The Plastic Age"—B. P. Schulberg

College Story With Clara Bow and Donald Keith Provides Excellent Entertainment

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

When he decided to transfer to the screen Percy Marks' novel "The Plastic Age," B. P. Schulberg was faced with the fact that its popularity was at least in part due to its frank handling of the sex questions facing youth. He believed however that with the necessary changes for screen purposes there still remained good picture material.

The result justifies Mr. Schulberg's judgment, for here is a very interesting picture of college days that we believe the majority of picture theatre patrons will consider good entertainment. A lad who is not only the champion runner in a prep school but also a good student, and who neither smokes, drinks or feels the allurement of the other sex, goes to college determined to make good. Meeting the college belle, a member of the fast set, he succumbs to her fascination, goes in for the gay life and makes a poor showing in the big race. Then comes the uphill fight in which the girl aids him by throwing him over. She too learns her lesson, quiets down and at graduation time there comes an understanding.

This bare outline does not do justice to the story for the picture is filled with situations and details that show a keen understanding of the psychology of the college boy and an appreciation of his problems. The result is an excellent picture of life on the campus.

Neither the characters or the situations are overdrawn or improbable. It is a page from life that is filled with sincerity and carries conviction. The atmosphere on the campus and dormitory, the hazing, the college ball and various student activities are all handled with a realistic touch. Wesley Ruggles has made an excellent job in directing this picture.

The entire cast seems imbued with the buoyant, enthusiastic college spirit. Clara Bow is excellent as the snappy, jazzy and alluring college favorite who beneath her veneer of gayety proves true blue. Donald Keith's performance as the hero will surprise even his admirers. He is an excellent type for the role.

While the changes that have been made in the story may disappoint some who read the novel, they have resulted in a picture that should prove a good box office attraction.

"Thunder Mountain"—Fox Film Corporation

Stirring Drama of Illiterate Folk Has Fine Comedy Relief and Superb Characterizaton

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

As real rural drama the William Fox production, "Thunder Mountain," ranks high. This feature possesses a forceful story, strong characters, a picturesque background, clever acting and excellent construction. It moves smoothly throughout and awakens an increasing interest.

Thunder Mountain is the home of an illiterate folk. They live in ignorance and poverty, only a moneylender having any "book larnin'." Sam Martin, befriended by the preacher, leaves for an education and returns determined to help his people. The moneylender refuses his plea for funds to build a school. Azalea, a circus queen, deserts, is pursued by Morgan, her boss, and is rescued by Sam when he attacks her. She dances for the moneylender to help Sam gain money, but scandalizes the neighborhood. The moneylender is murdered and the men prepare to hang Sam. Dynamite has been sunk into the mountain, the preacher ignites it and the gang flies, thinking it an act of God. Sam builds his school and marries Azalea.

Leslie Fenton is the ideal type for the role he plays. He is boyish, eager and hot-headed. Madge Bellamy gives one of her best performances as Azalea. She will astound fans by doing a lot of circus acrobatics, plainly without the aid of a double. Alec B. Francis is great as the preached and Emily Fitzroy and Dan Mason as Ma and Pa McBirney. Otis Harlan has a good comedy part; in fact, the picture teems with excellent comedy relief. Zasu Pitts again performs in a way to earn her recognition as one of the outstanding artists of the screen.

"Thunder Mountain is great drama with loads of the finest sort of character relief. The story is at all times gripping and the final scenes wonderfully effective. The suspense is not only maintained but increased as the story builds to a smashing climax.

This feature ought to go great in any theatre.

New Harold Bell Wright Novel With Western Locale Makes Thoroughly Entertaining Film

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

The story has for its hero a young man who inherits a ranch which is heavily mortgaged. The holder of the mortgage, Holdbrook, insists he will foreclose and it develops that he is mixed up with a smuggling gang who desire it to cloak their illicit operations. The hero, Morgan, has a young protege Larry, who, lured by adventure, has joined the gang. Larry's sister Nora, fresh from Ireland, arrives and Morgan keeps the truth from her, even refraining from going after the gang for her sake. Holbrook tells Nora the truth and she goes to her brother. Morgan, who is in love with her, follows and with his men capture the gang and rescue Nora. Larry is put on probation.

There is a lot of good Western stuff in this picture, especially a scene where taunted with cowardice, the hero lets himself down over a high cliff, lassoes a guard and single-handed brings back a score of horses that have been stolen from him. There is plenty of good riding and the rescue scene following with the flight of some of the gang to the mountains and their capture are all up to the best western standards. A particularly effective scene is where the hero unarmed climbs the rocks to bring back Larry, who has threatened to shoot. At the same time, Mr. Wright as usual has injected a lot of human interest and incidents that play up the good in his fellow men.

All of the featured players are well-cast and they have been given good support. Warner Baxter makes a good impression as the hero. Bessie Love is excellent and furnishes good comedy as the Irish girl.

Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

THAT DEVIL QUEMADO. (4,720 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Very good picture, on the Douglas Fairbanks order. Crowd seemed to like it. Tone, okay. Sunday, no; special, no. Appeal 80 per cent. Small town class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

THAT MAN JACK. Star, Bob Custer. This boy woke up in this one and he does some real riding. If he keeps it up he may make a star after all. Yes as to tone. Appeal 70 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (6,913 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Fred Thomson pictures drew extra business and pleased a great many people. "Thundering Hoofs" was no exception. Special, no. Good appeal. Agricultural class, town of 1,500. Admission 10-30. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

TRIGGER FINGERS. (5 reels). Star, Bob Custer. Most westerns while they have plenty of action, the story lacks pep; but this one has lots of pep in the story. There is also plenty of action. The audience enjoyed this picture. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre, Jamaica, New York.

WHITE FANG. (5,600 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). This is a very good show and takes well with the audience. Strongheart is a wonderful dog and sure pleased the kids. Good tone; appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. J. M. Blanchard, Lone Rock, Iowa.

First National

BOY OF MINE. (7 reels). Star, Ben Alexander. A picture that pleased immensely. Not a big special but it has a wonderful audience appeal. Tone, good. Special, no. Appeal, splendid. Agricultural class, town of 1,500. Admission 10-30. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

CLASSMATES. (6,982 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Very good picture. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farmer-merchant class, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

CLASSMATES. (6,982 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Neither drew well nor gave very good satisfaction. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, not much. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

FINE CLOTHES. (6,971 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. Just another good picture that did not draw as are too many from this company here. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday, yes; special, no. Draw all classes, town 3,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

FRIVOLOUS SAL. (7,305 feet). Star, Mae Busch. A one hundred per cent outdoor drama that pleased them all. Contains everything a picture should have. Had a songster sing "Frivolous Sal" with this one as this title has no drawing power here. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

HUNTRESS. (6,236 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. This is a fine program picture of a different western type and went over fine. The audience was well pleased and had lots of good comments on it. Had opposition, so didn't make very much on it. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

IF I MARRY AGAIN. (7,401 feet). Star, Doris Kenyon. Even though this one is a bit draggy at the beginning, it keeps you interested throughout. Don't be afraid of this one as the story, direction and acting are fine. Good tone; appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star cast. Very unusual. I liked it. Haven't been able to find anyone else very enthusiastic, which perhaps accounted for its failure here. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, yes. Appeal hard to tell. Small town of 1,000. Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,507 feet). Stars, Milton Sills, Alla Nazimova. Business not so good on this one; however, the story and continuity were not bad. Cannot account for the business done unless it was the weather, which was cloudy and threatening. Fair tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed classes, town 2,900. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

MARRIAGE CHEAT. Thos. Ince production. Pretty fair offering from First National. Business held up to the usual amount for Saturday night, which surprised me somewhat, owing to the title; however, the paper was good. A South Sea Island story and shipwreck, which was very good. Fair tone, good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw mixed class, town of 2,900. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

MIGHTY LAK A ROSE. (8,026 feet). Star, Dorothy MacKaill. Received wonderful comments on this one. It makes you feel proud to play a picture of this nature. Play it by all means—if you haven't—even though it's old. Edwin Carewe certainly makes good ones. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Sunday and special, yes. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

ONE WAY STREET. (5,600 feet). Star, Ben

Lyon. Fair entertainment of the kind we could get along without. Not bad. Just not good. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, none. Small town class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

ONE YEAR TO LIVE. (6,064 feet). Star, Aileen Pringle. Bosh. Good thing we don't see a lot of these before we play them. Sunday, no; special, no. Appeal, none. Small town class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

SECRETS. (8,345 feet). Star, Norma Talmadge. A pleasing picture that might well have been shortened by two or three thousand feet. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday, hardly a special. Nelson & Ottem, Rex Theatre (140 seats), Osnabrook, North Dakota.

SILENT WATCHER. (7,576 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. Trailer helped draw on this one. Story somewhat draggy at times but it pleased the majority just the same. Colored scenes are good. Good tone. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

SOUL FIRE. (8,262 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. As good as Barthelmess ever made; acting of Dick and Bessie Love fine. Rather a deep picture but all will like it. Barthelmess always a good bet. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,210. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star, Blanche Sweet. Very good drama of this dizzy age. Good for a change if you have been playing a lot of society dramas. Go after this one and make some money, as it has a good moral. Trailer also very good. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (7,500 feet). Star, Blanche Sweet. A dandy good picture and was enjoyed by everyone who saw it. First National has been giving me good pictures and good prints, which we appreciate very much. Fine tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw general class, town 600. Admission 10-25 and 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

WHY MEN LEAVE HOME. (8 reels). Star, Lewis Stone. A wonderful picture. Everyone who saw it was pleased. Plenty of favorable comments. Another good First National picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes; special, yes. Appeal, 90 per cent. Town of 1,405. A. Keuss, Community Theatre (500 seats), New Athens, Illinois.

Fox

CYCLONE RIDER. (6,672 feet). Star cast. A good action picture, with plenty of thrills. Automobile race was wonderful. You don't have to be afraid to boost this picture. Good for William Fox. Sunday and special, yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. Town of 1,405. A. Keuss, Community Theatre (500 seats), New Athens, Illinois.

DEADWOOD COACH. Star, Tom Mix. As usual Tom brought them out on a very hot night and pleased the majority. Print fair. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DESERT OUTLAW. Star, Buck Jones. Very good western picture which will please the average action fans. Tone, good. Special, no. Appeal, fair. General class, town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

DICK TURPIN. (5,224 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Fair. Tom goes better in real western pictures. No as special. Draw farmer class, town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (255 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

GREAT DIAMOND MYSTERY. (6,056 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. A fair picture but star does not draw well with me. This picture has some action and a few amusing scenes. Print good; poor appeal here. No for Sunday or as special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

WHO WOULD EXCHANGE HIS WIFE

If she chanced to be the lovely Eleanor Boardman, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer featured player in Hobart Henley's production, "Exchange of Wives"? Here we see Eleanor at her prettiest—as a bride.

HEARTS AND SPURS. (5 reels). Star, Buck Jones. A mighty good western drama and satisfies all the western fans. Yes as to tone. Appeal 75 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

HEARTS OF OAK. (5,326 feet). Star cast. Just an ordinary program picture. Fair tone. Sunday, yes; special, no. Draw farmer class, town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre, Moundridge, Kansas.

LADIES TO BOARD. (6,112 feet). Star, Tom Mix. This picture pleased the large per cent of my audience, having a combination of action and comedy. It pleased nearly all, which is something very rare. Tone, good. Special, no. Good appeal. General class, town 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

LAST MAN ON EARTH. (6,889 feet). Star, Earle Foxe. This picture is different than the rest. It sure is a one hundred per cent picture. Do not be afraid to book and boost as it will please them all. Sunday, no; special, yes. Appeal, good. Town of 1,405. A. Keuss, Community Theatre (500 seats), New Athens, Illinois.

LAST OF THE DUANES. (6,842 feet). Star, Tom Mix. A mighty fine western and Zane Grey story. Yes as to tone and for Sunday. Appeal 75 per cent. No for special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage Oklahoma.

MAN WHO CAME BACK. (8,272 feet). Star, George O'Brien. Who said Fox can make specials? Didn't make expenses here—stung again. Under circumstances overcharged. Fair tone. No for Sunday. George J. Kamm, Grand Theatre (800 seats), Ephrata, Pennsylvania.

SHE WOLVES. (5,783 feet). Star, Alma Rubens. Played to three days' fair business. Is an ordinary program show. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre, Easton, Pennsylvania.

WARRENS OF VIRGINIA. (6,000 feet). Star, Wilfred Lytell. Civil War play that I thought very good. The production is especially remarkable for its interesting "atmosphere" and by-play. It taught me many little points that I never before knew about those historical years. Tone O. K. Fine appeal. Yes for Sunday and just a special. Draw village and rural class, town 400. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

Metro-Goldwyn

BREAD. (6,726 feet). Star cast with Claire Windsor. Same old complaint—title killed the business. A very good picture and enjoyed by few who saw it. Tone and for Sunday O. K. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

BREAD. (6,726 feet). Star, Mae Busch. Picture pleased the adults but not all the children as it has no action. Tied up with a grocery store and gave free tickets to everyone buying fifty cents' worth of merchandise, including a loaf of bread, as the title has no drawing power, neither has the paper. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

BANDOLERO. (7,000 feet). Star cast. Three days to good business. An entertaining picture with a good climax in a thrilling bull fight. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre, Easton, Pennsylvania.

DENIAL. (4,791 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. This is a very good drama, beginning in '98, the age of horseless carriages, bustles and mutton sleeves. Love is the theme, and a hard-boiled, domineering mother the cause of it all. They all liked this one. Good tone. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, city 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

DIXIE HANDICAP. (6,905 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. Very good horse race story. Make some money by stepping on it, just as Lloyd Hughes and Dixie did. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. Sunday, yes; special, no. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

EXCUSE ME. (5,084 feet). Star cast. A comedy knockout that more than pleased for us and did some extra business. Boost it. It will please them all. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes; special, no. High appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Star, Alice Terry. Great picture that pleased everyone. Step on this one as it is entertainment a hundred per cent. Flood scenes are realistic. Good tone. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

HE WHO GETS SLAPPED. (6,613 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. Great picture, but for some reason or other it did not draw at all. Lost money on it. However, those who saw it enjoyed it tremendously and also asked why I didn't have a full house. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

JANICE MEREDITH. Star, Marion Davies. Wonderful production; pleased them all, from six to sixty. Play this one if you can get it reasonable, as it will draw in new patrons. Tone good. Appeal 100 per cent. Sunday and special, yes. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

RAG MAN. (5,908 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Very good one from Jackie. Played to good matinee but it flopped at night because the thermometer went up. Good tone, appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

RAG MAN. (5,908 feet). Star, Jackie

Coogan. Very good picture: pleased the patrons. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw merchant and farmer class, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SHERLOCK, JR. (4,605 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Sober Buster Keaton in one of his clever, ridiculous comedies. Better than "Three Ages" and this time in the role of an amateur sleuth and after taking a course in a correspondence school he wins a detective's diploma by foiling the villain and marrying the girl—all in a dream. It's a good show, full of gags and novelties. Draw from tourist town, 3,000. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

SHOOTING OF DAN McGREW. (6,318 feet). Star, Barbara LaMarr. A very interesting picture and it pleased the good crowd that came to see it. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Trapp, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

SILENT ACCUSER. (6 reels). Star, Peter the Great (dog). A wonderful dog picture. This picture will please any audience. These are the kind of pictures we like to run. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Appeal, 95 per cent. Town of 1,405. A. Keuss, Community Theatre (500 seats), New Athens, Illinois.

SILENT ACCUSER. (6 reels). Star, Peter the Great (dog). One of the finest dog pictures I've ever seen. How they applauded the almost human dog! Step on this one, or you'll be sorry. I hope "Wild Justice" is as good as this one. Draw family patronage, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

SINNERS IN SILK. (5,700 feet). Star, Adolph Menjou. Good picture, worth seeing. Good story, elaborate sets but not a special. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Farmers, tourists, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SLAVE OF FASHION. (5,906 feet). Star, Norma Shearer. A splendid little picture which pleased all patrons. Shearer is still a little too new to be a big drawing star but is coming, fast. Tone O. K. Very good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, city 100,000. Admission 40-50. Guy A. Kinemer, Arcade Theatre (1,152 seats), Jacksonville, Florida.

THE SNOB. (6,513 feet). Star, John Gilbert. Pretty good picture, but a good surrounding bill is also necessary to put this one over. Gilbert's portrayal of a snob is okay. Picture is too true to please everyone. Good tone, appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, special no. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

WHITE DESERT. (6,464 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. An extra good picture for any house. Snow scenes beautiful and snow slide wonderful. Story matter very slim, however, fits the picture okay. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay, special, yes. Appeal, 90 per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

Paramount

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A picture that pleased my patrons, both old and young, for they all like Richard Dix. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

A SON OF HIS FATHER. (7 reels). All star cast. If you can't pack them in on this one it's not Paramount's fault. Harold Bell Wright's latest novel. Paper very good. Print new. Good tone. Appeal 100 per cent. No for Sunday or special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. (6,874 feet). Star cast. I didn't get to see this one, but my people didn't fail to tell me they thought it "a piece of cheese." They said it was so mixed up and crazy that they couldn't tell what it was all about. I suppose it went over their heads. Anyhow, it didn't draw and it didn't please. Lots of people walked out on it. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre, Graham, Texas.

BIG BROTHER. (7,080 feet). Star, Tom Moore. This pleased very well. Mickey Bennett and Raymond Hatton excellent. Edith Roberts, too, good. Good comedy touches. Good appeal to children as well as grown-ups. Good tone. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

CALL OF THE CANYON. (6,982 feet). Star, Richard Dix. This is a great picture. Zane Grey always pleases. A combination of a jazz and a western picture. Not for a western night, however. Lois Wilson, Marjorie Daw, Ricardo Cortez, Noah Beery in cast. Good tone. Excellent appeal. No for Sunday. Semi-special. Draw farming class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

CITY THAT NEVER SLEEPS. (6,087 feet). Star, Ricardo Cortez. This is a splendid picture and sure did please my audience. Lots of good comedy in the picture, which fact, if known, will draw for any house. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

COMING THRU. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A good picture, deals with mining town; plenty of action and a good story. Will please most any audience Good tone, great appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw from college town, 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

CROWDED HOUR. (6,558 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Good picture, above program schedule. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered town, 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

ENEMY SEX. (7,861 feet). Star Betty Compson. Pretty old, but still O.K. This ought to get by with a good comedy. No as special. Draw all classes, town 3,000. Admission 10-25. D. C. Smith, Lyric Theatre (300 seats), Fordyce, Arkansas.

EMPTY HANDS. (6,976 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Extra good program picture; good story, fine scenery. Peppy acting. Good audience appeal. Tone good. Yes for Sunday. no as special. Draw city and farm class, city 5,000. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Boyd's Hall Theatre (500 seats), Bowdle, South Dakota.

FIGHTING COWARD. (6,501 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. One of the old type, Southern chivalry before the war, when a coward in the family was a disgrace. Very good for Saturday night. Can't go wrong on this. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

FLAMING BARRIERS. (5,821 feet). Stars, Jacqueline Logan, Antonio Moreno. Played this last winter and it gave excellent satisfaction. Good comedy by Walter Hiers. Good, exciting fire scene. A little slow in getting started. Good Saturday night bet. Good tone Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

GUILTY ONE. (5,625 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. Just an ordinary mystery picture; it will get by, and that is about all. No for Saturday. Not much tone. Appeal 70 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HER LOVE STORY. (6,736 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Personally I don't like this kind of picture and don't think it takes well with small town audiences, but the star seemed to bring the crowd, so if Gloria is popular with your crowd, book it, as what brings the money should please the exhibitor. Fair tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special (with regard to above). Dram farmer and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS. (6,650 feet). Star, Jack Holt. Just an ordinary western picture. Nothing special to it. Draw mixed class, town 2,145. Admission 10-25. H. D. Wharton, Pastime Theatre (500 seats), Warren, Arkansas.

LIGHT THAT FAILED. (7,012 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. This did better than I thought it would. Kipling's name drew in a few extra; but a great many liberties were taken with this story. Jacqueline Logan, David Torrence in cast. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,935 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Good race story. Plenty of good comedy and action. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and merchants, widely scattered town, 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Thtatre, Placerville, California.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,935 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Here is the kind of picture my patrons want!—action, comedy, love, pathos; all of it is here. Draw mixed class, town 2,145. Admission 10-25. H. D. Wharton, Pastime Theatre (500 seats), Warren, Arkansas.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A very fine picture, well complimented by the good crowd that saw it. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

MANICURE GIRL. (5,959 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Bebe is getting more popular. The first day's business on this picture was good; but the second was the lowest we have had this year—but we had a tent show for opposition the entire week. Tone O.K. Fair appeal. No as special. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. W. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. A fast-going comedy. Griffith a good comedian. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw from farming class. town 600. Goodrich Brothers, Strand Theatre (225 seats), Callao, Missouri.

NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK. (6,908 feet). Star, Rod LaRoque. Pleased majority. Our fans seem to like Rod LaRoque and all his pictures. Good tone and appeal. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission 25. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats). Belvedere, New Jersey.

NORTH OF 36. (7,908 feet). Star cast includes Holt. A real good western story, pleased everyone. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Manager, Hippodrome Theatre (460 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (6,945 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. Some liked this picture while a good many did not. Present day pictures seem to be what everyone wants now, and not pictures like this one. Good tone. Fair appeal. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission 25. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvedere, New Jersey.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (7 reels). Star, Betty

Bronson. A costume picture with a light plot. Flopped on this one. Print good. Good tone. Appeal 50 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

OLD HOME WEEK. (6,780 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. An extra good picture. Thomas Meighan always pleases our patrons. Brings us extra money, but Paramount takes it (rental) away from us. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

OLD HOME WEEK. (6,780 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Better than "Back Home and Broke." A picture with lots of comedy and pep. Book it—it's good. Good tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farming class, town 600. Goodrich Brothers, Strand Theatre (225 seats), Callao, Missouri.

OLD HOME WEEK. (6,780 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. This is an improvement for Tom. My people liked it much better than any of his recent pictures. It has good humor, suspense, action, love interest, and everything else to make an itneresting picture. The men liked it especially. Business was better than usual. Tone and for Sunday O.K. Good appeal. Special no. Draw all classes, small town, 2,500. Admission 10-30. M. W. Larmour, National Theatre (430 seats), Graham, Texas.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Very good picture dealing with the underworld of Paris. Negri plans the part of the leader of the Apaches and also the wife of the Chief of Police. Fair tone. Appeal 90 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. There was a little too much "Shadow" for my house. Fine acting, support excellent; Adolphe Menjou, Charles de Roche, Vera Reynolds, Huntley Gordon. Tone doubtful. Appeal 70 per cent. No for Sunday, yes as special where Negri pulls. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. Mildred B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

Pathe

BATTLING ORIOLES. (5,600 feet). Star cast. Don't be afraid of this one: it is a knockout comedy-drama, and a crackerjack for the small town exhibitor. Print new. Tone O. K. Great appeal here. Yes for Sunday, hardly as special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

HOT WATER. (6,000 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Not so good; really not in a class with his former releases and the price seems to be higher too—(possibly getting exhibitors ready to knock 'em cold in "The Freshman.") Good tone, appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

BAD LANDS. Star, Harry Carey. While this is a little different from his regular line, is however a good picture as we have a Carey following. Had the pleasure of a good house. Tone and appeal, good. Special, no. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

CHORUS LADY. (6,000 feet). Star, Margaret Livingston. A jam up good picture for any house. Name might have been better for a box office attraction. You can boost this one as it will please. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 90 per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

FRIENDLY ENEMIES. (6,288 feet). Stars, Weber and Fields. From the old stage play and as a picture should please most any audience. Our patrons were well satisfied with this show. Tone, good. Special, no. Fair

Ever have anybody that you trusted and depended on? Sure you did.

Ever have that somebody quit you—cold?

How'd you feel?

Same way as the hosts who count on your dependable tips feel when you don't show up in the tips.

COME BACK! COME ON!

appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

LET WOMEN ALONE. Stars, Pat O'Malley, Wanda Hawley. Cannot give this one much: title bad: business bad. No comments from those who saw it. Cannot see any excuse for making pictures of this kind any more: why do they do it? Tone and appeal none. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed classes, town 2,900. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

LIGHTNING RIDER. (6 reels). Star, Harry Carey. First Carey played and it drew very well. Story is a bit draggy but it pleased almost every one. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

LOVE'S WHIRLPOOL. (6,028 feet). Stars, James Kirkwood. A real picture. Good enough for anybody. Plenty of good acting with good actors. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (160 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

United Artists

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY. Star, Mary Pickford. A little too long but most all praised it for its beauty. Tone and for Sunday O. K. No as special. Draw small town class, town 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

LOVING LIES. (7 reels). Star, Monte Blue. A sea picture, a good story, well acted, with many thrilling moments. The rescue scenes contain wonderful photography: there is action and it is full of pep. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre, Jamaica, New York.

NO MORE WOMEN. Star, Matt Moore. This is an excellent picture with good acting and good photography, a nice, smooth running story that keeps audience interested. A little tame for our locality; however our people liked it. You can't go wrong on this one as it's a good program picture—if you buy it right. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw family class, town 5,000. Admission 10-15-25. Nyman Kessler, Atlantic Theatre (300 seats), Atlantic, Massachusetts.

Universal

BIG TIMBER. (4,650 feet). Star, William Desmond. A very good picture. Very much like the Paramount production "Flaming Barriers," having the forest fire, etc. Some good scenery also. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty-five per cent. Farmers and merchants town of 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

BLINKY. (6 reels). Star, Hoot Gibson. This was the worst thing we had all summer. Poor story and little action. Print terrible; lay off. Tone O.K. but very little appeal. No for Sunday or special Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

DANGEROUS INNOCENCE. (7 reels). Star, Laura La Plante. A story of an unsophisticated young girl who fell in love with the man who loved her mother and after exhibiting her wiles and enticements finally landed him for life. A big program, worth boosting. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town 500,000. Admission 10-20. William T. Meeks, Silliman's Murray Theatre (740 seats), Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

DON DAREDEVIL. Star, Jack Hoxie. This is a real picture. Has a fairly good story and satisfies the western fans. Yes as to appeal and tone, no for Sunday or special. Draw from small town, 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

EXCITEMENT. (5,076 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. A fair little picture that got by all right. Nothing extra; but pleased. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admisison 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service, Troy, New York.

FIGHTING AMERICAN. (5,251 feet). Star, Pat O'Malley. A pleasing program. The few that saw it liked it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special no. Appeal, 80 per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois

I'LL SHOW YOU THE TOWN. (7,400 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. One hundred per cent. comedy that will please anywhere. The first one of these and now I'm anxious to play the series. Boost it strong. Tone and for Sunday O.K. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

RIDIN' PRETTY. Star, William Desmond. A very good western with lots of comedy scenes. Pleased all the action fans. This one is much better than the average Desmond picture. Print good. Tone O. K. Good appeal. No for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

RIDIN' THUNDER. Star, Jack Hoxie. Pretty fair western. Didn't draw any extra business. Hoxie's slipping here. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

SIGN OF THE CACTUS. Star, Jack Hoxie. Just another good western with lots of action and very good for a Saturday attendance. Print in fair condition. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, no. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SPORTING YOUTH. (7 reels). Star, Reginald Denny. This is a crackerjack comedy-drama. From start to finish it kept the audience roaring. Auto races extremely thrilling. This picture pleased everyone. Many favorable comments on it. Appeal 100 per cent. Yes for Sunday and as special. Draw small town and vacationist class, towns around 300. Admission 25. Avard J. Sloat, Conoat Projection Service Troy, New York.

TEASER. (6,800 feet). Star, Laura La-Plante. This show gave satisfaction in every respect. It's a comedy hard to beat. It will please the hard boiled. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay, special, no. Small town class town of 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

TURMOIL. (7 reels). Star cast. I was out of town when we played this but everyone said it was a swell picture and no one made any kicks. Went over big because of its being a Tarkington novel. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers and merchants town of 450. Admission 15-30. William Simon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

WINE. (6,220 feet). Star, Clara Bow. A very good picture of the jazz age. Some of my people didn't like it very well because of its type: however, it will go over well most places. Tone questionable. Appeal 80 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and merchants, town 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (450 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

Vitagraph

BARREE, SON OF KAZAN. (6,803 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. Watch your step on this one; don't be caught napping—this is one of the best pictures I have run for a long time! The dog is great. Advertise HIM strong. Very good tone, great appeal. Yes Sunday and special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10 reels). Star cast includes J. Warren Kerrigan. A masterpiece. It must be handled in a big way. Full of action; the battles at sea are wonderful: the photography is beautiful; many thrills. Any audience will enjoy this picture. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats—Admission 10-15-20). Jamaica, New York.

STEELE OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED. (5,700 feet). Star, Bert Lytell. This is a good Saturday night picture for most small towns and those who cater to good action subjects. Curwood stories go well with us. Tone, good, Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty-five per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

STEELE OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED. (5,700 feet.) Star, Bert Lytell. A fine picture for this type. Bought it right and made a little money. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 3,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

WEST OF ARIZONA. Star, Pete Morrison and all of his have been good. Plenty of action. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (160 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WILDFIRE. (6,550 feet). A fair race horse picture. This is not taken from Zane Grey's novel and several will be disappointed as they expect it to be. Fair tone, good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 3,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

Warner Brothers

MY WIFE AND I. Star, Irene Rich. A very entertaining comedy-drama, but, the same as nearly all Warner pictures, the same cast in nearly every picture. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 3,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

MY WIFE AND I. Irene Rich. Just a fair picture which did about the usual business. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Moderate appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

THREE WOMEN. Star cast. A very brilliantly done comedy that flopped at the box office. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. High appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

You will probably miss the Short Subject reports. You're used to seeing them here.

But, with the enlargement of our Short Subject Department we figured that it would be an even better service to exhibitors to give them all the dope on the Short Subjects in one place—handy, you see, to the news and reviews of these business boosters.

So we've moved all those tips over, fellows, and I'll keep an eye on them in their new spot, so you can depend on the same sincere tips from exhibitors, under the Straight from the Shoulder, Jr., column (on page 493 this week).

Independents

ACROSS THE DEAD LINE. (Arrow). Star, Leo Maloney. This fellow makes good westerns, but the prints are so dark. He puts plenty of action into all his westerns. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (160 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

BATTLIN' BILL. (State Right). Stars, William Mix, Dick Carter. Just a fair western; very cheaply made and shows it in several places. Some action, but not enough. It should go over for one day. Print good. Good tone, fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BLOOD BOND. Star, Leo Maloney. A real good western and compares very well with the rest of this star's offerings. Yes as to tone. Appeal 75 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

DESERT ROSE. (State Right). Star, Big Boy Williams. A fair western story, will please action fans. Print new. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Fair appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DON X. (State Right). Star, Bruce Gordon. This isn't anything and wouldn't buy it at any price. If they give it to you for nothing you are going to be out. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, fair. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (160 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

FIGHT FOR HONOR. (Independent). These are very good program pictures featuring William Fairbanks and if you have a type of audience that like action pictures they will like this series. However, not big pictures to be featured. Appeal 75 per cent. No for specials. Draw from industrial town, 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

GHOST RIDER. (State Right. Star, Pete Morrison. A fairly good western, but not enough comedy in it. Yes as to tone. Appeal 75 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

HORSE SHOE LUCK. (State Right). Star, J. B. Warner. The horse in this picture does some very good work but is not mentioned as he should be. This is about the best the star has done so far. Print new. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

LOOPED FOR LIFE. (State Right). Star, Art Acord. A fair western with a little action and some good acting. Will do for your house if they like westerns. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, and special, no. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (160 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

SPEED SPOOK. (Columbia). Star, Johnny Hines. This picture is a wang. Don't be afraid to run it as it will send them out smiling. This is the kind of picture people are looking for. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. Town of 1,405. A. Keuss, Community Theatre (500 seats), New Athens, Illinois.

THRU THE FLAMES. (Federated). Star, Richard Talmadge. This picture proved to be a big business getter for me on Saturday night, breaking attendance records for this summer for one day. Book it and boost it for it will satisfy Talmadge fans and make your box office happy. Fair tone, good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed classes, town 2,900. Admission 10-25. special 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

WIZARD OF OZ. (Chadwick). Star, Larry Semon. A very good comedy. Yes as to tone and for Sunday. Appeal 70 per cent. No as special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

$1 for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Picture World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

To Film Executives—TIME:

Since we made the offer that you see in the box alongside, we have given out—and cheerfully!—quite a few one dollar bills, to the exhibitors whose letters called our attention to errors in footage and other major matters in this Quick Reference Picture Chart.

And we're willing to pay out more dollars. We consider the co-operation of any exhibitor worth that—and more.

But here's the point:

In ninety per cent. of the cases where we have paid out a dollar it has been on an incorrect footage on one of your pictures!! And—when we checked it up we have found that in all but a single case THESE ERRORS CAME FROM YOUR FAILURE TO NOTIFY US OF FOOTAGE CHANGES AFTER YOU GAVE US FOOTAGE AT TIME OF OUR REVIEW OF THE PICTURE!

Keep us posted, won't you—of any change in footage, of a change of picture title: and tell us the type of story and the footage when you send in release listings.

HELP US SERVE THE EXHIBITOR!

The exhibitor wants exact footages so as to organize his program as a unit.

The New Policy

THIS issue marks the passing of "The First Run Department." This is not a swan song, as the demise is one of advancement. It is a progressive move, a step ahead in trade paper service. The "First Run" is absorbed into a new department for which it is planned that a 100% service will be rendered to the exhibitor in matters pertaining not only to his program, but to the conduct and maintenance of his house as well.

The First Run Department, born out of the idea to encourage a better class of programs, has succeeded, and it has been most gratifying to us to receive such favorable comments the world over for what few suggestions time and space have permitted us to publish in this department. The policy has been to maintain a department which dispensed reliable information and was ever ready to help the exhibitor and producer in the preparation and production of his programs. The crowded files which we have attest to the benefit of this service, and we sincerely thank all of the exhibitors and producers for their cooperation, and for the encouragement they have given us during these last few months. Now it has been deemed advisable to further develop this department along broader lines.

This section will not be devoted exclusively to presentations, reviews of surrounding program and general comment, but will discuss all matters of house equipment, maintenance and operation of theatres will be the added features. It is the purpose of the organization to supply the exhibitor with the latest information on materials and equipment from the front of the house to the back. This is indeed a practical move, and we are confident that it will be welcomed by exhibitors and our great army of readers, as it is the policy of this paper to render a maximum service to the exhibitor.

There will be new features appearing each week in this department, and we cannot be too emphatic when we say we need your help, we want to hear from you regularly as to what you are doing, and we want you to know that we stand ready with open hands to assist you in your problem.

RIESENFELD'S SUNDAY CONCERTS

An important announcement, and one of great interest to every music-lover, is the one just made by Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres, New York City. Dr. Riesenfeld will inaugurate a series of Sunday Morning Popular Concerts to be given at the Rivoli Theatre each week starting Sunday, October 4th. The Rivoli orchestra will be augmented and famous soloists are to be engaged for these special events. Rehearsals are already being conducted and it is the plan of Dr. Riesenfeld that the popular numbers to be featured will have a universal appeal. Those attending the concerts will be invited to remain for the regular Rivoli performance which will start immediately upon the conclusion of the special program.

NEW BALLET MASTER AT CAPITOL

Major Edward Bowes, managing director of the Capitol Theatre, New York City, has announced another addition to his staff of the theatre. Chester Hale has been appointed ballet master to succeed Mlle. Maria Gambarelli, who will thus be enabled to devote herself entirely to her work as prima ballerina. Mr. Hale, who is still in his twenties, has already achieved success as a featured dancer and arranger of ballet numbers in several Broadway musical productions including the Ritz Revue and the Music Box Revues in New York and London. He has just returned from a season at Monte Carlo, where he has been making further study of the ballet with the famous teacher, Cechetti, and the Daghileff Ballet.

CAPITOL CONCERT MASTER

Another addition to the musical staff of the Capitol Theatre, New York City, is in the person of Josef Fuchs, concert master, who succeeds Eugene Ormandy, now acting as associate conductor and assistant to David Mendoza. Fuchs is an American and received his training under Franz Kneisel. Notwithstanding his youth (he is only 25) he has won international recognition in this country and in Europe where he has concertized for several years. He is prominent in musical circles and in demand for symphony orchestra concerts.

WENGER'S BOOK PUBLISHED

Leading bookstores now have the first copies of Carlo de Fornaro's publication devoted to the life and work of John Wenger, Art Director of the Rivoli Theatre, New York City. The unique document contains almost fifty plates, showing many of Mr. Wenger's famous stage settings. Fornaro, in describing Mr. Wenger and his work, says, "Master colorist, creator of pictorial symphonies."

A Moving Picture World Presentation

Detailed information relative to the production of the presentation suggested is printed herewith. Permission is given to any producer or exhibitor to use the Colby Harriman suggestions appearing in this section. Any other information desired to stage the presentation may be secured upon request.

"DIXIE MEMORIES"

A Moving Picture World Presentation

Devised by Colby Harriman

IT IS perhaps safe to say that one can draw more subject matter from the old South for presentation features than from any other locality, as it lends itself ideally to artistic interpretation. It was in the South that the flower of the old English aristocracy bloomed in the New World and the days of Romance found exquisite setting in the beauty of its picturesque environment. Nature has seemed to cooperate with the spirit of Romance and Charm. This was reflected in the spacious homes of the "masters," where the wide verandas, spacious ballrooms, sweeping terraces, resplendent with foliage, caught the spirit which pervaded the country. The South has maintained its provincial characteristics, even to this day. The memories of the yesterdays when the South was in its olden glory still remain as fresh to the native southerner as though he were living in that period. With the wealth of material at our disposal it seemed that a group of southern subjects would be welcomed by producers. It is not our idea to make these cumbersome in their construction, but to carry a certain simplicity of design and treatment to correspond with the action. This subject is one which gives an opportunity to introduce some of the old songs and dances and costumes of that period.

THE ROUTINE

An old "Colonel" accompanied by a sweet gray-haired old lady appear in front of the return at right and gaze at the house painted on the scrim at center. They gaze longingly at the closed and darkened mansion, and in the distance can be heard the lilting of an old southern song. The old couple are gradually enveloped in the darkness as the lights come up back of the scrim suggesting a ballroom, where dances are presented by an ensemble if desired. One or two songs can be introduced and the lights dim as the old couple are introduced for the finale which can be a pretty little bit of pantomime of the old man gallantly kissing the hand of the old lady, and in the slow, rythmic movements they emulate the dance of their younger days, as the lights dim and the curtains slowly close.

GROUND PLAN

As suggested in Plate 3 the setting consists of the following units: a painted scrim is hung in one, two dark plush returns, preferably red, are hung at right and left in front of the painted scrim. A black cyclorama is hung back in three. A large crystal chandelier is suspended from center. This constitutes the important parts of the set.

RIVOLI THEATRE

Featured Picture: (2nd Week) "The Iron Horse" (Fox) (Week Sept. 27).

Overture, "Mignon," by Thomas. Willy Stahl conducting. The presentation entitled "Progress" which is a pretentious version of Riesenfeld's Classical Jazz including three units with stage effects: (a) Covered Wagon Days—the scene shows a group of people around a campfire, the rear of a covered wagon visible at right, a woman dancing as the other characters play instruments. (b) Pony Express Days, a character dressed in a costume of one of the leading actors of the particular picture appears at right and sings "Joe Bowers," and for the balance of the number the curtains are drawn revealing a character in cowboy costume seated on the back of a horse riding on a treadmill. An arched drop at opening. (c) Iron Horse Days, is divided into three units; 1st, the rails, where a group of characters made up to resemble those in the picture are seen working on a railroad effect, the men singing "Working on the Railroad." The 2nd scene is entitled, "Across the Mountains" which is an attractive landscape setting silhouetted, and a small train with the coaches lighted is brought slowly across the back with the block signals flashing red to green. The arrival is very effective with the house and stage dark; a man appears with the red and green lantern, in the distance a tiny headlight of the engine is seen gradually becoming larger and larger giving the effect of the approaching train.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Featured Picture: "The Tower of Lies" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) (Week Sept. 27).

Overture, "Queen of Sheba" (Goldmark) with David Mendoza, conducting. Divertissements, (a) Betsy Ayres, "The Lorelei," Liszt; (b) Mlle. Marie Gambarelli, Prima Ballerina, "Autumn Leaf;" music, "A la bien aimee," Schutt; (c) Rudy Wiedoeft, saxophone virtuoso: 1, "Land of the Sky Blue Water," Cadman; 2, "Llewellyn Waltz," Wiedoeft; 3, "Saxophun," Wiedoeft; 4, "Indian Summer," Victor Herbert. "Home Sweet Home the World Over," J. Bodewalt Lampe; Doris Niles and Capitol Ballet Corps, Desha Podgorska, Virginia Beardsley, Alice Delano, Terry Bauer, Pavla Pavlecek, Clara Burke. A musical fantasy—Illustrating how the composition, "Home Sweet Home" might be interpreted by the following nationalities: Dutch, Spanish, Russian, Italian, Scotch, Hungarian, Chinese, Irish and American.

CAPITOL THEATRE
Chicago

Featured Picture: "California Straight Ahead" (Week Sept. 27).

Overture, "Tutti Frutti," a compilation of popular melodies arranged by Albert E. Short, conductor. "Evening Star" (Tannhauser) Wagner, Herbert Gould, basso. Capitol Theatre presents Arnold Johnson and his jazz band of Golf Enthusiasts. Leo Terry at the organ presenting a laughable solo, "The Restaurant Problem." "California Here I Come," a Prologue to "California Straight Ahead" with Roy Dieterich.

CHICAGO THEATRE

Featured Picture: "The Mystic" (Week Sept. 28).

Overture, "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," by Liszt; piano cadenza by Otto Muencke. "A Sea Fantasy," Willard Andelin singing "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." Albert Hay Malotte at the organ playing, (a) "Polonaise Militaire," (b) "Chopin Up-to-date"; with all due respect to the composer of the famous "Minute Waltz," Mr. Malotte has arranged this composition according to the modern idea of syncopation. "An Evening at Home," featuring Nat Nazarro, Jr. Charlotte Bergh, soprano; Margaret McKee, whistler; Paul Haakon, dancer; Buster Lamont, harmonica soloist.

UPTOWN THEATRE

Featured Picture: "Pretty Ladies" (Week Sept. 28).

"The Beautiful Lady," Miss Esther Nelson, soprano; the beautiful lady, Lymette Corrigan; the maids, Helen Dean, Beulah Troy and Audrey Le Fleur. "Navigating on the Ocean of Joy," with Burt and Lehmann. Kenneth Widenor at the Console playing "A Trip to the Land of Memories." Mr. James Jordan, in lyric recollections of Victor Herbert's immortal "Love Boat"; girls of the Love Boat, Helen Brown, Helen Dean, Lillian Garmisia, Beulah Troy, Helen Khym, Lymette Corrigan, Audrey Le Fleur and Meleida Bierman.

TIVOLI THEATRE
Chicago

Featured Picture: "Never the Twain Shall Meet" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) (Week Sept. 28).

Overture, Faust, by Gounod; H. Leopold Spitalny, conducting.

M. Kharum, Persian pianist, playing "Hungarian Fantasie" (Liszt); Milton Charles at the organ, playing "How's Your Voice."

"A Twilight Romance," George DuFranne, tenor; Miram Klein, soprano; Adolphus & Eastman; specialty dancers, ballet, arranged by Mme. Maximova.

A World Presentation

The design on the painted scrim is suggested in Plate 1. The front or entrance of an old southern home seen in a frame of foliage which bears the motify of the hanging moss. This should be done in light tones to achieve the proper lighting effects mentioned later.

The second scene which is visible when the lights are brought up back of the scrim is shown in Plate 2. The black cyclorama should be hung in heavy folds as far back as possible with the arms extending right and left to a point permitting an entrance and the introduction of side lighting. A large crystal chandelier which is hung from center may be constructed at a very low cost if large capsules are used for the crystals. The red plush returns which mask and carry off in front of the painted scrim in the first scene may have a draw line attached to the bottom of the curtain so that when the lights come up they may be drawn, forming a fold as shown in Plate 2.

LIGHTING TREATMENT

In the first scene the scrim should be flooded a green blue with the characters working in an orange amber spot. When the lights are brought up back of the scrim the spot and the flood are dimmed out. A deep blue should be flooded on the black cyclorama. Spots from the sides should be played upon the crystal chandelier, contrasting it with the dark background. Orange amber from the right with canary and rose from the left should be shot across from entrance to entrance covering the area used by the performers. Two border canary spots may be placed at center directly over the chandelier to cast a spot glow at center.

COSTUMES

Costumes used in this number should be those of the 1860 period, and particular attention is called to the fact that there is a difference between the 1860 and 1850 periods, and it is suggested that producers instruct the costumer to furnish correct plates as this is an item which is often confused. The 1860 costumes are more subdued in design, bordering on severity of detail. In the "Etiquette of Trousseau" the difference is suggested in very rhetorical parlance, namely, for the woman of 1852 it says, "To see a beautiful woman appropriately costumed leaves the eye nothing to seek. Mountains, water-falls, pictures, statues, Rome and Vienna are all insignificant in comparison with her and sink with their death and inanity." All of which goes to prove that the lady has some dress. Then for the character of 1860, it says, "If a city bred lady has consented to share the quiet life of a country resident expensive dresses, ornaments, etc., would be entirely out of place, and would only excite envy and disagreeable remarks in the plain circle she is now to enter." This old book is one which reflects the customs and views of the period, and the thoughts and views of the people were also expressed in their clothes. In 1860 the change was gradually being made from the Victorian to the costumes which lead to those of today.

STAGE SETTINGS

Built, painted and installed. Drapery settings and drapery curtains. Special sets and drops for feature pictures.

Better Projection

Edited by F. H. Richardson

Uneconomical

From a theatre manager down in Maryland comes a letter. I have suppressed the name and location, because I presume his proprietors will be shown the argument I shall present, and they very likely would not care to have the matter given personal publicity. I would ask them to kindly understand that the argument I shall advance is purely argument, and NOT in any sense criticism. I firmly believe they are in error, and shall hope to convince them of that fact. I am publishing the matter because of the fact that they are not the only theatre owners who take a mistaken position in this matter. The letter reads:

An Assistant

The proprietors of the theatre of which I am manager are dissatisfied because of the fact that I provide my projectionist with an assistant to do the rewinding. This I do in order that he, the projectionist, may give his whole, entire attention to projection.

I do not really believe the Maryland laws require this, but I have been an exhibitor for the past eighteen years, or since June 27, 1907, and have always made it my practice to provide some one to assist the projectionist to the extent of rewinding, with the exception of the first two or three years, when we only ran one reel of pictures.

I have told the proprietors that it requires from six to eight minutes to rewind one thousand feet of film, hence if the projectionist does it he must be away from the projector that length of time, whereas the film will fire, should it through accident become stationary over the aperture, in from two to three seconds.

Will you be good enough to set forth your views concerning this matter, as I feel that I am in the right, and am not only protecting the projectionist, but also the theatre property and the theatre patrons.

In Error

I trust your employers will accept it in good part when I say that they are in error, and that you are doing exactly what should be done, from any and every point of view. I ask them to read the argument I shall advance very carefully, and if it does not sound reasonable and right to them, to advise me as to just wherein it fails.

Are the Laws Weak?

I shall remark, in the beginning, that if the Maryland laws do not prohibit a projectionist from rewinding film during the time he is engaged in projection, then the laws are to that extent weak, and in their weakness add very seriously to the fire hazard.

What Happens

In so far as concerns this angle of the matter, here is the situation: As you have said, if the film becomes stationary over the aperture, or in event of a piece of film at a loose splice catching in the aperture opening, tearing away from the film proper and remaining there (a by no means uncommon thing where old films are used), the film will fire in from two to three seconds (With some of the present very powerful light sources and a well concentrated spot I think this might read from ONE to two seconds), and a piece torn away will do the same thing in the same time if on the condenser side of the aperture, but would not fire nearly so quickly if on the other side.

Modern projectors are so constructed that if everything is as it should be, an aperture fire probably will not get beyond the aperture. By this I mean that if because of a splice pulling in two between the intermittent sprocket and aperture (a not at all unknown or even an uncommon thing) or some other accident, such as a bunch of ripped sprocket holes, the film becomes stationary over the aperture, the film will fire in from one to two, or maybe one to three seconds, the time depending slightly upon the condition of the film, and very largely upon the power of the light source, the heat absorbing properties of the condenser and the concentration of the spot, but the fire will probably merely burn out one frame of film and go out.

Very Sweet, BUT—

That would be all very sweet IF it could be absolutely depended upon, but the fly in that particular jug of ointment is that it CANNOT BE ABSOLUTELY DEPENDED UPON, in proof of which we have but to point to the number of instances in which an aperture fire HAS run up the film, and HAS gotten into the upper magazine, and the fact that this was due to some wrong condition in the projecor itself does not alter the fact that it HAS done it. It does, however, prove that the wrong conditions are more or less frequently present, due not to the projector itself, but to the projectionist, or possibly to the management which has failed or refused to supply needed repairs for the projector—also a far from unknown state of affairs.

Unnecessary Danger

That the fire getting away from the aperture is usually due to some wrong condition in the projector itself is true, we all know, BUT those who know also know that regardless of the aforesaid wrong condition, the fire would not have gotten away from the aperture had a competent projectionist, or even a competent machine operator been on the job beside the projector, WHERE HE SHOULD BE EVERY MOMENT THE PROJECTOR IS IN OPERATION.

WITH A COMPETENT PROJECTIONIST, OR EVEN WITH A COMPETENT MACHINE OPERATOR AT HIS STATION BESIDE THE PROJECTOR, THERE IS TO ALL INTENTS AND PURPOSES ABSOLUTELY NO DANGER SET UP BY AN APERTURE FILM FIRE!

WITH THE PROJECTIONIST OR MACHINE OPERATOR AWAY FROM THE PROJECTOR, THERE IS CONSTANT DANGER, AND SUCH DANGER IS TO THE AUDIENCE, TO THE FILMS AND TO THE THEATRE ITSELF, OR AT LAST TO ALL PROPERTY INSIDE THE PROJECTION ROOM.

A Question

Why does the competent projectionist, or even a machine operator stationed beside the projector minimize or entirely eliminate the danger, do you ask? The answer is simple, and is well understood by both machine operators and motion picture projectionists.

The Answer

Normal projection is attended by certain sounds which, with time, become so fixed in the consciousness of the man in charge that he is instantly aware of even the most slight change in the "song of the projector." When projection is proceeding normally there is the constant, unchanging "purr" he is accustomed to, but let something happen which causes the film to cease to pass through, and in so doing either become stationary or not become stationary over the aperture—it may become stationary either over the aperture or not over the aperture, you know—depending upon where it pulls in two.

What Happens?

What happens then? Well, provided the projectionist be not rewinding at top speed, so that the rewinder noise drowns out the sound of the projector? The projectionist

Question No. 383—Practical question proposed by Messrs. Thoreau and Clark, Projectionists Strand Theatre, Vancouver, British Columbia.

If you take charge of a projection room, and find that one of the projectors gives a better screen illumination than the other, though the light sources are the same, how would you proceed to find the reason or reasons for the difference, assuming that tests show no shorts or grounds, and that you have no lens tables or charts?

Question No. 384—What is meant by "boosting a fuse" and is it dangerous?

Question No. 385—Is it practical to refill old fuses?

Question No. 386—Why is it unnecessary to fuse projector arc circuits closely? This question presumes an ordinary arc to be in use.

How would you determine necessary size for fuses for projector arc circuit (ordinary arcs) when using motor generator, rotary converter or mercury arc rectifier?

Bluebook School Answers 353-357

Note: Gray says he has neither lost interest nor anything else, only he is working on color improvements which he uses in his work, and the days are not long enough to permit of his doing what he wants to do to make the best possible showing, and at the same time make really adequate answers to the Bluebook questions, AND his work comes first.

Well, Gray, it is too bad, for your work in the "School" was of real value, but I thoroughly agree with you that one's work comes very much first, and with men who really count it don't come anywhere else. I, too, very often feel like putting a shoe stretcher in some of the days. The times when I howled about working more than eight hours make me laugh. It is nearer eighteen nowadays.

Question No. 353—With increase in what element does it become necessary to increase the insulation resistance?

C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa, Roy Saxon, Lufkin, Texas; W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; Ray Gnaegy, Paducah, Kentucky; T. R. Guimond, Mobile, Alabama; S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; Charles S. Colby, Santa Fe, New Mexico; and G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois all agree on one answer, which Brother Cooley has, I think, put into the best form. He says:

The E. M. F. of a circuit is the component part of the current which overcomes the resistance of the circuit. The greater the E. M. F., or voltage, the greater the power to overcome resistance, therefore as the voltage of a circuit is increased it is also necessary to increase the resistance of the insulation of the circuit conductors, always assuming that the insulation is only sufficient for the original E. M. F.

This holds true of all circuits, outside and inside, the only difference being in the methods ordinarily employed for increasing insulation on outside and inside circuits.

Colby made something of a record for briefness. His answer reads:

"Voltage," which is quite correct, and no ink wasted. However——.

Question No. 354—Explain something about the necessity for variation of character of insulation under varying conditions of service.

All the before named, plus F. H. Moore, Taunton, Massachusetts, and Allen R. Gengenbeck, New Orleans, Louisiana, made fair to middling answers. Doe, I think, put the matter in the best form. He says:

Insulation must not only insulate when it is new, but also perform that important function after extended use, and under varying conditions.

For open work, where the wires are hung high in the open air, and may be spaced some distance apart, they may be merely suspended from or held by insulators made of glass, porcelain or other approved insulating material, placed a convenient distance apart. Under these conditions insulation covering for the wires is not really necessary.

For open work on buildings, exterior or interior, where wires are surrounded by air, but only by a comparatively little of it one or more sides, and where the conductors may be spaced several inches apart, they may be rubber covered for interior and insulated with weatherproof for exterior, and attached to porcelain "knobs" or held by porcelain "cleats."

For all interior wiring of whatsoever character, wires must be rubber covered, except that under certain condition, where the wiring is of the "open" kind, slow burning insulation is required, and under certain other conditions fireproof insulation may be used.

All wires in conduit must be insulated with the type of insulation known as "rubber covered," which for a given thickness is of the highest resistance of any insulation applied to wires.

Weatherproof insulation is permissible on exterior work where there is much moisture. It is designed for exterior use where slow burning or fireproof qualities are not important.

For dry exterior places varnished cloth insulation is approved, the wires to be supported by insulators.

Gnaegy says:

Various types of insulation are used under different conditions of service. Rubber covered depends entirely upon the rubber for its insulation qualities, and since rubber is easily damaged by heat it is readily seen that it is not adapted for use where there are high temperatures. Rubber covered, because of its relatively high insulation powers is the only type of insulation approved for use in conduits. It also is used for interior work.

Out of doors, where there is moisture to contend with, weatherproof insulation is used. This type consists, or should consist of three layers of braid, each layer saturated with a moisture proof compound, so applied to the conductor that all moisture is driven out of the material; also it must have a hard surface. This produces an insulation which has fairly high resistance qualities, and is at the same time to a large extent waterproof. Weatherproof insulation is to be used outside where fireproof qualities are non-essential, but where moisture proof qualities are important.

Slow burning insulation is intended for inside work, where high heat resistance is necessary. When used in warm, dry places it must have a layer of rubber next the metal.

Fire proof insulation is designed for use in places where other insulations soon would perish. Asbestos is one type of it.

Question No. 355—Name as many types of insulation as you know.

Gnaegy says:

Rubber covered, weatherproof, slow burning, fireproof and a varnished cloth insulation to be used only in dry places.

Cooley says:

Glass, porcelain, rubber, rubber compounds, slate, marble, asbestos, mica, fibre, cotton, silk the compounds used in weather and fireproofing, and shellac. These are in general use. Did not think you wanted a lot of others named, as they are not generally used.

Question No. 356—Where may weatherproof insulation be used? Where may rubber covered insulation be used and where must each type be used?

Lufkin says:

It may be well to remark that up to this time no material is known which is an absolute non-conductor of electricity. That is to say, any material known to science will conduct electric current if the voltage be raised high enough. However, for commercial voltages the materials named in the answer to question No. 355 will serve to confine the current to its allotted path.

Weatherproof insulation may be used on conductors in open wiring in damp places, especially for exterior work where there is a certainty of much moisture, and where slow burning insulation is not demanded. Such insulation, however, is to be used only where the supports upon which the wires are mounted are depended upon for insulation, the covering being chiefly to prevent accidental contact with other wires and objects.

Rubber covered insulation is designed primarily to be used for inside work, although they may be used, if desired, anywhere that weatherproof insulation is permissible, but not where slow burning or fireproof insulation is demanded. It is necessary to use R. C. insulation for all conduit work.

Cooley says:

Weatherproof insulation is permissible for outside wiring, or in any open spaces where the insulation may be exposed to the elements, and where excessive heat is not encountered. It is generally used where the main element of insulation is the insulators upon which the wires are mounted, and not the insulating covering of the wires themselves.

Rubber covered wires may be used for interior work where neither excess of heat or moisture is encountered, or in work where the entire insulation dependance is placed upon the covering of the wires.

I do not understand that excess of moisture forbids the use of R. C. If that is true, then I have something to learn. Unfortunately my National Code Rules book is not by me. Am I wrong in this? F. H. R.

Question No. 357—Why are rubber covered wires rated at lower capacity than wires having other types of insulation?

Doe replies thus:

Current passing through wires encounters resistance, and overcoming resistance produces heat. Heat, other than ordinary temperatures, is injurious to rubber. It dries it out, causes it to become brittle, and if the temperature be too high, destroys the rubber entirely.

Weatherproof and other types of insulation other than R. C. will withstand moderate temperatures without injury. Wire capacities are figured on the volume of current which will pass through a conductor of given area of cross section without causing an appreciable temperature rise. For insulations other than R. C. the full amperage allowance is made, but because of the fact that any appreciable rise in temperature in the metal will eventually dry out and injure the rubber, an allowance is made on the side of safety, and rubber covered is rated lower than other insulations.

All the others answered to the same effect.

Well, men, the hot weather is over, so let your cold feet warm up and get back in the game. We ought to have at least a thousand correct answers to these questions every week, instead of the wee few we have. I'm not complaining on my own account. It makes a lot less work for me, but for your own sakes I wish you would dig in and WORK on these questions.

Oh yes, I know it is a grind, BUT in this vale of sorrow THERE IS NO EXCELLENCE WITHOUT GREAT LABOR, no matter what you may tackle. Many of you envy me my position. Well, gentlemen, I got the "position," such as it is, through and by HARD, HARD WORK. I worked, fought, worked some more, and when things looked disheartening and discouraging, as they very often did in the old days, I cussed a bit, spit on my hands, dug my toes in and just plain refused to admit defeat.

Now, gentlemen, if you want to win out in the Bluebook School you've got to BATTLE with the inclination to drop it, and STICK. Some of you have pretty nearly all you can do, I know that, and excuse such men as Gray, who I know is really working very hard on a new stunt he is perfecting and using in his work. Others who have dropped out—and I am NOT hitting at any one in particular—just plain got tired of it.

In a way I don't blame them, BUT the fact remains that cold feet don't keep the refrigerator cooled off, and ONLY the STICKER and GO GETTER finally forges ahead in any big way, BUT sooner or later the opportunity ALWAYS COMES to the man who has the moral courage to STICK and fight his way through to the end of anything he undertakes. Personally I've never, within my recollection, started any battle or anything else which I did not finish. That is why I have, in my small way, succeeded.

INSTANTLY is aware that something radically wrong is going on at the projector. If he is away from the projector and does hear the change in sound, remembering that "one-to-three-seconds-in-firing time," you will readily see that he may or may not be able to reach the dowser in time to prevent the film blazing—probably not, and anyhow he will undoubtedly be too late to prevent the blaze getting away from the aperture, if it is able to do so.

On the other hand, if he is beside his projector, where he should be, almost the same instant the sound changes he would instinctively and automatically reach for the dowser and shut off the light. If he is watching the screen, AS HE SHOULD BE, the change in sound AND appearance of the screen tells him just what has happened, and if he is even a decently well trained and experienced machine operator, bang goes the dowser shut! and in not more than one second of time, too.

But, you say, suppose the film does fire, even in that short time. What then? Again IF the man is in his place beside the projector (This is qualified by conditions) he yanks friend dowser shut and instantly blows as hard as he can into the aperture two or three times. That may sound foolish to the uninitiated, but while only the one frame is burning it will, nine times out of ten, put out the blaze. I have, in the old days, squelched more than one aperture fire by that simple process. But one must be right on the job beside the projector in order to do it AND (this is the qualification) if there be a shield to protect the eyes from the spot, as usually is the case nowadays, the man might or might not be able to pull the "blow-it-out" stunt—probably not.

But the fire hazard is by no manner of means the only reason why the projectionist should NOT rewind while projecting. I cannot take space to go completely into the matter in all its phases, but here are some of the reasons: In the first place, as you have said, at least six minutes are required to rewind 1,000 feet of film PROPERLY and without abusing the films. If the projectionist is forced away from his projector to rewind, he certainly won't take the time to do it properly, unless he has a rewinder geared down to about eight minutes to the thousand feet, equipped with an automatic stop and in perfect line. He then, if it be considered unnecessary to examine the films, may let the rewinder do the rewinding, without attention. But few have a rewinder thus geared down. Most rewind by hand, and when forced away from the projector to do it you can gamble your last penny that rewinding will NOT consume six minutes, or even two. It is done at race horse speed, with "pulling down" and injured films, WHICH YOUR BROTHER EXHIBITOR'S SHOW MUST SUFFER FOR, just as YOUR SHOW SUFFERS FOR SIMILAR ABUSES PERPETRATED ON THE FILMS BEFORE YOU RECEIVED THEM.

Projectionist's Place

More than that, with the projectionist away from the projector there may be and probably will be various faults in projection which will, in the long run, mean loss of business at the box office.

There is only one right place for the projectionist while projection is in progress, and that is beside his projectors.

The best answer is our record.

Go right down the list.

We started with Lon Chaney in "The Unholy Three."

Then came Norma Shearer with Lew Cody in "A Slave of Fashion."

"Pretty Ladies" dragged them in next.

"Never The Twain Shall Meet" broke records from the start.

And listen.

Who else gives you one hit after another?

"Sun-up" "The Mystic" are outstanding audience hits.

Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney in "The Tower of Lies" is another "He Who Gets Slapped."

And this is the beginning.

We told you that we were going to repeat last season's record.

But now.

We find we've been too modest.

So we're here to say:- "Wait!"

"You ain't seen nothing yet."

Keep your eye on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The coming weeks will tell the story.

Sherman

Your patrons have been waiting for Lowell Sherman. There is a Romance about him, a touch of sophistication, a flair for subtle comedy that is unequalled. "Satan in Sables" casts him as the exiled Russian prince, wasting his gold and his youth in the playplaces of Paris. It is gorgeously produced. It is crammed with poignant drama. It is Lowell Sherman at his best.

Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

Stand by for SHORT FEATURE MONTH!

THE "infant" industry has an orphan on its own doorstep. The orphan, particularly of late, has been brought in from the cold, clothed and given a square meal, but sooner or later it has been kicked back into the cold. The stepchild has hit the doormat so often that the "Welcome" looks like "Parking Room Only."

The orphan is the Short Feature. Today it gets a reception fit for the Prodigal Son. Tomorrow it is out in the snowbank.

Moving Picture World is launching SHORT FEATURE MONTH, not with the idea of making a beggar a king for a day, but with the idea of bringing a stepchild in from the doorstep, feeding it, nourishing it and giving it the PERMANENT place in the affections of showman and public which it deserves.

SHORT FEATURE MONTH is the working title of the plan. Details of the Moving Picture World meeting which initiated the move will be found on another page of this issue. And more to come. This is to ask you to stand by for SHORT FEATURE MONTH, January, 1926.

The men who specialize in producing, distributing and exploiting the Short Feature will see to it, Mr. Showman, that you will not have to whisper to your patrons next January that you are "trying something new"—a program made up largely or in its entirety of little features. No apologies will be necessary. You'll be giving three cheers. And the men, women AND children will be three-cheering you at the box-office.

"Fillers" had to be apologized for in the old days, perhaps. That curse has left its mark more on the exhibiting than on the producing field. The great majority of SHORT FEATURES today need no apology whatsoever. They are built to entertain. They DO entertain.

The exhibitor who thinks of "fillers" today as he did six or seven years ago, and whose advertising whispers in agate type about his "shorts," gets just that out of them at the box-office—a whisper. The showman who shouts about his Little Features, specifying names, brands, personalities, gets that out of them at the box-office —a shout.

Bob Fitzsimmons never scaled above the middleweight limit in his entire ring career. David wasn't much for size, but he slammed Goliath for a home run. Size does not make the man. Size does not make the picture.

We ask you to stand by for SHORT FEATURE MONTH, not because it is a "Month," and not because it is our idea. We invite every publisher in the business to contribute.

We ask, not a sentimental interest in an orphan, but sound and solid co-operation in a movement for better business. The orphan is going to be a breadwinner.

Stand by!

Not What's Wrong But What's RIGHT with the Movies!

It took years to dream and to build Madison Square Garden, now coming down in wagon loads of junk. It's much easier to tear down any structure, topped or untopped by a Diana, than it is to build that structure.

The movies have been dissected. More, they have been vivisected by "surgeons" whose pens have been more skillful than their scalpels.

It is not our intention to be militant Pollyannas. Our creed, however, is not what's wrong, but what's RIGHT with the movies.

Our text this week is taken from the essay with which Mrs. Edward Dean won first prize in the Michigan Greater Movie Season essay contest.

Mrs. Dean is a farmer's wife, the mother of eight children, six living. She lives eighteen miles from the Frolic Theatre in Midland, Mich., which she attends regularly.

She wrote: "The motion picture does more toward making my life happy than any other thing I know of. It keeps me from faltering and falling on the way."

Mrs. Dean's message is part of the message taken by Jerry Beatty to the Michigan exhibitors convened this week in Grand Rapids.

Mrs. Dean doesn't belong to Michigan. She belongs, under all names and under all skies, to all the world.

What's right with the movies? The Mrs. Dean's will tell you.

Laemmle, Back from Europe, Reports Plans for Production in England

Establishes Distribution System for Poland—Makes Changes in Universal's European Organization—Speaks to Exhibitors

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, returned to the United States last week after a three months' stay in Europe, during which he closed several deals of importance to the Universal organization and its foreign branches. He was accompanied by his children, Miss Rosabelle Laemmle and Carl Laemmle, Jr.; by his secretary, Harry H. Zehner, and by Julius Bernheim, formerly director general of Universal City.

Laemmle's home-coming was celebrated in colorful style. He was met at the pier by all the officials and executives of the Universal home office and the New York Exchange. Also, Universal's "See America First" unit, the cross-continent studio-on-wheels, had just arrived in New York, and, loaded with pretty girls from the Universal home office carrying bouquets, it proceeded to the steamship pier, where Laemmle was overwhelmed with flowers and felicitations.

CARL LAEMMLE

Paving the way for future activities in Germany which are not as yet ready to be announced, Mr. Laemmle has appointed Max Schach, a well known German producer, distributor and theatre owner of Berlin, to take charge of Universal's activities in Germany. In connection therewith he will also succeed Henry H. Henigson, who returned a few days ago to America to be given an executive position at Universal City.

Another change which Mr. Laemmle inaugurated in Europe during his stay was the opening of a distributing organization in Poland. Sam Burstein has been appointed manager of this organization. To succeed I. Blofson, who has resigned as manager of the Paris Universal office, Mr. Laemmle has advanced Charles L. Brookheim, formerly in charge of Universal activities in Spain and prior to that in several other foreign fields. A Torres will succeed Brookheim in Spain.

While in Germany Mr. Laemmle became acquainted with a mechanical process of double-exposing which is unique and may work a revolution in the mechanical side of double-exposing heretofore practised by producers. It was this invention which caused him to decide to make "Gulliver's Travels," which he had had in mind to do for several years.

Just prior to his sailing Mr. Laemmle went to London at the invitation of the Cinema Exhibitors Association and at a luncheon where he was the chief guest he announced his acceptance of the exhibitors' invitation to produce pictures in England, using as far as possible the marvelous English backgrounds, English actors, English experts and English directors, although an effort will be made to select people who have had training in American studios.

The Universal chief's speech to the assembled British film men at the luncheon of the Cinema Exhibitors Association, was as follows:

"Every time I come to England, I am reminded of the old story of the bum who was thrown out of a saloon three times in rapid succession. As he picked himself up from the gutter, he looked back toward the saloon and then said in a surprised tone, 'Now I know what's the matter, they DON'T WANT ME IN THERE:'

"In this case I guess I represent the bum. Several times in succession I have had evidence that some of the people in England don't want me in here. For instance, the first thing I saw when I came to your country this time was a newspaper article which makes me certain I am the bum. May I read you a few extracts:

"It is being loudly proclaimed that Carl Laemmle proposed to produce pictures in this country. If the Yankees are allowed to get firmly rooted on British soil without giving any promise to employ British artists except for extra parts their operations may prove more harmful than ever to Empire interests. It is highly improbable that the Yankee would employ English technicians or directors or entrust the leading film parts to British players. Unless they undertook to do this, any pretensions that they wished to help the British industry out of its doleful depths could be regarded as mere eye-wash:"

The story then goes on to predict awful things which may happen if the terrible Yankees get poor old England down on its back, and closes with a warning to watch us very carefully. And, gentlemen, the headline on this story is "THE AMERICAN MENACE."

Now, my friends, if you never had a good look at a Yankee Menace, gaze upon me. I guess I am IT: Can't you picture me menacing you day and night and eventually crushing you beneath my mighty Yankee fist?

Well, between friends, let me tell you I am not a menace. Nor, on the other hand, am I posing as a fairy godmother who has come to lift England to her feet. I haven't the desire to menace anybody or anything and I haven't the gall or the cast iron nerve to pretend that I can uplift English producing business.

I am going to produce pictures here for the sole and simple reason that I consider it good business. Is that frank enough? I may be mistaken. It may be bad business, but I don't think so. If the newspaper which I quoted is correctly giving the views of the majority of English picture people, then I am not wanted. But I tell you man to man, I would not give such a slam to British artists and British technicians as this newspaper has done. It takes it for granted that I will engage no British help. What nonsense. Is British help so inferior that even your newspaper folks think there is no hope for them? I don't care a rap about any man's nationality. If he can help me make better pictures or if he can help me bring business to a higher point of commercial efficiency, I'm not going to ask him where he was born, how he parts his hair nor even whether he drinks brandy and soda or bootleg stuff.

In the face of such a welcome as this newspaper has given me, I am going to appeal squarely to your spirit of sportsmanship. The whole world gives you credit for being the original, blown-in-the-bottle, good sports. Well, gentlemen, good sports always give the other fellow credit for fair play until he proves he is unworthy. I am just starting as the smallest of small producers in England. I am just entering the ring and don't want to get a straight left to the jaw until I am at least through the ropes.

I recently made one very serious mistake in England. You all know what it was. I figured that the only sporting thing to do to atone for my mistake was to withdraw a big picture which had been handled in such a way as to offend British sensibilities. The picture itself was not offensive, but our American method of publicizing it was, to say the least, unfortunate. I believe that if I asked you to forgive the mistake and show the picture you would have done it out of pure sportmanship. But I preferred to relieve you of any such obligation and, as you know, withdrew it from the market.

But this producing business is a different matter. With all the power at my command,

Four More Houses to Saxe in Deal Involving $4,000,000

FOUR more houses have been added to the ever growing Saxe chain in Milwaukee as a result of a series of important transactions announced within the last few days which, it is estimated, involve approximately $4,000,000.

One deal was the outright purchase, from George Bauch, of the Mirth Theatre in the Bay View suburban section.

Through another transaction, the Saxe interests acquired long term leases on two large houses being erected on opposite sides of the city by the Mal Investment Co.

A third venture concerns the building of an elaborate showhouse by the Saxe interests on property acquired some time ago at North and Lisbon avenues in one of the fastest growing sections of Milwaukee.

The new deals bring the total of Saxe houses in the city to ten and with twenty more theatres in various parts of the state the entire holdings of the organization total thirty. Within another year, this number will be raised to forty, according to Thomas Saxe, head of the company bearing his name.

Through the latest manoeuvers, the Saxe chain has acquired a foothold in the most strategic locations in Milwaukee.

Each of the new additions, with the exception of the Mirth, will be "big time."

The Mirth is a 1,000 seat theatre which was almost entirely rebuilt two years ago. The Saxe interests, in announcing its acquisition, made public plans to purchase adjoining property, so that the seating capacity can be doubled. The remodeling is expected to involve $100,000. Bauch, for the present at least, will be in the employ of the Saxe organization.

One of the two houses leased from the Mal Investment Co. is expected to be completed within a few months. It is situated at Twenty-seventh and Wells streets. It will have a seating capacity of 2,200 and will be known as the Tower.

The other theatre obtained through the lease is expected to be called the Ivanhoe. Its seating capacity will be 2,360. It will be completed next fall.

Saxe's own new theatre is to be known as the Uptown. It will accommodate approximately 2,000. In all, the recent transactions will therefore ultimately add 6,500 seats to the chain.

The three new houses are all to be patterned after the $2,000,000 Wisconsin and are to be operated on a similar large scale with elaborate stage presentations as well as de luxe picture programs.

Acquisition by the Saxe interests of the West side house came as a surprise, since it had been generally understood that George Fischer, of the Milwaukee and Capitol theatres, was about to swing the deal with the Mal Investment Co.

Czechoslovakia Now Demands Native Product

Up to 1914, states Sidney O'Donoghue, American Consul at Prague, in a recent report released by the Department of Commerce, it may safely be said that the Danish and German film producers controlled the territory in the country now in Czechoslovakia. American films, as well as French, Italian, English, and Czechoslovak productions did not appear in any volume until the year 1919. American films are now very popular despite the fact that there has sprung up in the last six months a strong and ever-increasing demand for Czechoslovak pictures made in Czechoslovakia by Czechoslovak players.

Although there were a number of films produced in what is now Czechoslovakia in the years preceding the war, nevertheless actual production of pictures in this country did not commence until 1919. That year there were about 60 film companies established in Czechoslovakia, which began to produce films of various sorts and description. However, practically all of the companies lacked sufficient working capital to make the ventures successful and one after the other were forced to cease operations.

Within the past six months the situation referred to above has changed somewhat and the public has begun to demand Czechoslovak films to such an extent that film distributing centers in Prague are unable to meet the demand. With the increased demand there came a revival of the film industry, which, profiting by the mistakes and errors of the past five years, is producing more slowly and successfully.

Plans for England

I ask you not to judge our British Universal Productions before they are made.

I may bring American stars over here, What of it? If I do, it will be solely because I consider it good business. I may bring American technical men for the same reason. But if I can find what I want right here, it would be poor business not to use them, wouldn't it? I am not going to employ any of the stuff you call eye wash. I am not pretending that I can make better pictures in England than English producers make. I am not coming here to teach you anything. I am not pretending that I am going to be the Moses to lead you out of any wilderness.

Climates and Miracles

I am hoping and praying your climate will try to behave itself and I trust I am not giving undue offense to your national pride when I say I don't see how on earth your British producers have done as well as they have with so much climate to contend with. And I hope no English newspaper will construe this to mean that I have come here for the purpose of reforming your climate.

I'm not here to reform anything, not even the climate. I am not here to perform miracles. I am not here to pretend to be anything I am not. I have too much respect for your hard common sense as well as your sense of humor to make any mistake about why American producers as a whole have been more successful than English producers as a whole. I know as well as you do that the war gave us a tremendous jump on you and I know as well as you do that we've got to fight and fight hard to keep you from giving us a licking.

Regarding Ability

Your directors are just as brainy as ours. Your technical people are just as skilled. Your actors are just as able. Outside of the fact that the war crippled your production work fearfully while we went madly about our business, I think we've got you beaten in only one respect and that is our willingness to gamble on results. You always speak of Yankees as synonymous with money. You've got just as much money for picture producing as we have, if you'll go ahead and gamble with it as we do. Don't imagine we pick money off the trees. I've seen the occasion many a time, when I put the last dollar of cash and the best dollar of credit I could dig up into one season's pictures. I've been up against it just as hard and as often as you have. So I know exactly how you have been feeling for a long time.

There's just one idea I want to pass along to you in closing. If I can make pictures in England which will sell all over the world, you can do it, too. No matter how I do it, if it helps to show you the way, then my efforts here will have been helpful. So, as good sports, I ask you not to throw the bum out of the saloon until you first find out whether he is worthy or worthless.

HONOR ILLINOIS SHOWMAN

W. M. Savage, well-known exhibitor of Alton, Ill., has been re-elected president of the Illinois Poster Association, and W. L. Bushy, manager of the Empire Theatre at Quincy, Ill., treasurer. B. W. Robbins is secretary, and David Jarrett, vice-president of the organization.

T. O. C. C. Seeks Burkan's Opinion on Hays' Contract

At their first meeting in three months the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, New York, this week appointed a committee to go over the new Hays contract with Attorney Nathan Burkan.

Although the Hays document, news of the completion of which was published last week in Moving Picture World, in an exclusive interview with Hays' attorneys, was not discussed by he T. O. C. C., it is understood that Chairman Charles O'Reilly told his organization that the M. P. P. D. A. contract does not solve existing problems.

It is understood that the T. O. C. C. considers the contract recently presented to the organization by Joseph M. Seider as the most feasible of all proffered formulae. At their meeting next week they will discuss the contract situation in all of its phases.

B. & K. Gets Lynch—Another Chicago Combine of 60 Houses Also Affected

THE long-expected affliation of the Lynch Theatres circuit with the Balaban & Katz Midwest circuit has taken place, and for the past two weeks Floyd Brockel, of the Midwest circuit, has directed the booking of the new combination. The offices of the Lynch Theatres circuit at 910 South Michigan Avenue, under the management of Charles Casanave, are being closed, and Casanave will go with the James Coston interests, known as the 63rd Street Theatre Corporation, whose booking offices are at 845 South Wabash Avenue.

The following houses are in the Lynch Theatres circuit: the Crystal Theatre, the Tiffin, the Manor, a new theatre recently opened; the Milford, the Famous, the Avon, the Vogue, the Hub, the Alvin, the Karlov, the Apollo, the Iris, all in Chicago; the Ridge Theatre at Park Ridge, Ill., recently opened; the York Theatre at Elmhurst, Ill., another new house, and two houses now building, one at Maywood, Ill., and the other at Berwyn, Ill. The officers of the Lynch Theatres, Inc., are V. T. Lynch, president; Arthur Sass and William Mueller, vice-presidents.

With the new arrangement in effect, no new theatres will be erected in the territory covered by the Lynch Theatres by the other interests interested in the booking combination, unless all concerned agree on the new houses. Other economies will be effected by the arrangement that should prove mutually profitable to the interests that are in the new amalgamation.

The Coston, Karzas and Cooney theatre interests are working out a mutual booking combination that will soon be ready for action. With the closing of the Lynch Theatres offices on South Michigan Avenue, Charley Casanave, who was manager of the offices, goes with James Coston, 63rd Street Theatre Corporation, at 845 South Wabash Avenue, as manager of that office for the Coston circuit. Jack Miller and Simon Simansky theatres, the Plaisance, the Savoy, the Park, the Lucille and the Windsor Theatres, will be booked independent for a while until Miller, who, by the way, is business manager of the Chicago Theatre Owners' organization joins up with one of the booking circuits, that have been after him for some time, to come into their organization.

In the Coston and Karzas circuits there are thirty theatres, with two new houses going up for Karzas, one the Robey Theatre at Lincoln and Robey Avenue, which is expected to be ready late this fall, and the other a large theatre at Gary, Ind., which will soon be under way, according to word from that live little city. In the National Theatre Corporation, of which Cooney Brothers are the heads, are six houses, two of which, the Avalon and the Paradise, now in the hands of builders, and the new American Theatres Corporation, of which Joseph Hopp is manager, have about twenty-two houses in the smaller towns outside of Chicago.

The new booking combination will have at least sixty houses to start with, according to latest information from the principals interviewed, and this will give them a strong front in making their booking connections for this territory. The details of the new combination are being worked out, and a complete announcement is expected before the end of the week.

Michigan Conventionees Get Cordial Message from Hays

ANY grievance that any exhibitor may have toward any member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will be immediately considered with the endeavor to arrive at a fair solution on the part of the organization's president. This fact Will Hays emphasized in an address read by Jerome Beatty, of the Hays staff, at the convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, held this week at Grand Rapids. Hays' message, as relayed by Beatty, is as follows:

"I am glad you are going to Grand Rapids for the convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan. They are a fine group and have been splendidly constructive. I wish I could be there myself, but other engagements are such that it is utterly impossible.

"It is especially fitting that you should make the trip at this time, because of the progress which has been made in connection with Greater Movie Season, and your splendid part as the manager of the association's participation in it. Greater Movie Season is a real success. Michigan, particularly, did a fine, constructive job. I will be glad if you will ascertain the opinion of the Michigan exhibitors as to whether or not it should be undertaken next year.

"Please give them all my very best wishes and assure them of my continued appreciation for their cooperation. Reassure them, too, of the continuing purpose of the association and my own personal determnation to do everything possible to further the interests of the exhibitors as well as the members of the association. Call their attention again to the fact that the purpose of the association is to promote the common interests 'of all those engaged in the motion picture business' and that our efforts are directed quite as much for the ultimate welfare of the exhibitor as for the interests of producer and distributor. The formula of confidence and cooperation originally suggested as the solution of our problems is as pertinent today as when originally indicated. Some of the problems still continue and new ones arise, but with a united, determined purpose, carried out in good faith and with confidence in each other and cooperating always, all of these problems will be solved. Let us lay bricks, not throw them.

"You may further say for me to the exhibitors that this determination on our part to do everything possible for them and to promote to the fullest extent the plan of cooperation, goes to the extent of assuring them that if any exhibitor in Michigan or anywhere in the country has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this association and will call my attention to such grievance, that the good offices of the association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration of such real grievance by the parties interested that a fair solution may be quickly sought. It is our purpose to do everything possible to bring about an adjustment of every real grievance wherever and whenever any such exists. I know that the exhibitors of Michigan will appreciate the value both to exhibitors and to distributors of this possibility."

Decrease in Cases Shows Wisconsin Is Watchful

Exhibitors and exchange men in Wisconsin are exercising exceptional care in their contract relations. This is the deduction of Ben Koenig, secretary of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade, who announces that during September only five cases were brought to the attention of the arbitration board.

None of these, he said, was of a serious nature. "It only proves that exhibitors are no longer overbuying and that most of the hocus pocus methods of doing business is disappearing from the film game," he declared.

L. and T. Plan Six More Theatres

Emil Stern, general manager of Lubliner & Trinz, announces an increase of activities for the further development of the circuit. Six houses the smallest of which represents a million dollar investment are now under construction and will be completed within the next five months.

The Harding theatre will open on October 15; it is a $2,500,000 project and will be the first of the new theatres to open. The entire twenty-first floor of the Bell building has been leased to accommodate the continually growing staff.

Population 10,000, Yet He Gets 10 Musicians

When Charles Sesonske, owner of the Grand Theatre in Johnstown, decided last week to install a ten-piece orchestra, he did not take the trouble to consider that the city has a population of a little over 10,000 persons. Sesonske has learned to reckon these days with the automobile, and as a result his house is so well handled and so well advertised, and furnishes so excellent attractions that he plays to a neighborhood that stretches out more than 25 miles in every direction. Last year Sesonske used a five-piece orchestra.

Careful inquiry among his patrons disclosed the fact that they liked good music, and if five pieces pleased, then Sesonske believes that ten pieces will just double the drawing power when it comes to the musical end. The theatre also has a $20,000 organ, and, incidentally, Sesonske will plank down a matter of $5,000 or more next month, for a new lobby and marquee.

Montreal Labor Situation Shows Improvement

The labor situation has been straightened out in Montreal, Quebec, at last. The projection machine operators decided a short time ago to accept last year's wage scale of $40. and $45. per week but the stage hands held out for something different. B. M. Garfield, secretary of the Montreal Theatre Managers Association and manager of the Rialto Theatre himself, has announced that a compromise has been effected with the stage employes in agreeing upon a five per cent increase in wages for 1925-26. The union has asked for a 10 per cent raise.

Projection machine operators in Calgary, and Edmonton, Alberta, are now insisting on a further increase in pay to $50. per week, an advance of $2.50.

$1,000,000 SPRINGFIELD HOUSE

Contracts have been let on Springfield, Ill's., new Lincoln Square Theatre and Apartment building at Fifth and Jefferson Streets. The building will be three stories, 157 by 242 feet and the cost has been estimated at $1,000,000.

Beats Non-Theatricals

After a trial period covering several months, non-theatrical competition in Kansas apparently has been conquered. Under strict fire regulations of the state, covering projection booths, and an unwritten agreement with the Kansas City Film Board of Trade not to serve non-theatrical enterprises, exhibitors virtually are free from trouble of this source, if the small number of complaints coming into the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri headquarters may be accepted as a barometer.

British Film Imports Take Huge Jump in Current Period

A recent report just released by the Department of Commerce from Alfred Nutting, clerk in the Consulate General, London, gives an interesting analysis of British foreign trade for the first six months of 1925 in comparison with similar periods in 1924 and 1923. The report follows:

Coincident with the announcement that the McKenna duties on British imports of films would be re-imposed on July 1, 1925, there was a great increase in the quantities received during the first half of the current year, far transcending the decrease recorded in 1924 (compared with 1923), when shipments were withheld pending the removal of such duties in August, 1924. Two years ago the amount imported aggregated 58,940,968 linear feet; last year the total was 48,898,631 linear feet; while in the current period no less than 154,742,426 linear feet were imported. Against an average import value on total receipts in 1923 of 2d. per linear foot, the rate rose last year to just under 3d, and decreased in 1925 to 1½d.

Of the present year's imports 112,070,968 linear feet (£316,070) comprised blank films, contrasted with 36,715,356 linear feet (£122,213) a year ago, and 44,997,838 linear feet (£128,107) in 1923. Positives rose to 36,051,101 linear feet (£186,100), against 8,961,679 linear feet (£74,638) in 1924, and 10,020,170 linear feet (£83,011) two years ago; while negatives increased to 6,620,357 linear feet (£427,833), contrasted with 3,221,596 linear feet (£376,866) and 3,922,960 linear feet (£250,943) in 1924 and 1923, respectively. Countries of origin are not shown in the official returns of trade available.

British exports in the current period aggregated 54,894,482 linear feet, valued at £198,749, compared with 37,598,472 linear feet (£124,313) last year, and 21,063,515 linear feet (£77,147) in 1923; 40,096,413 linear feet (£104,410) comprised blank films, against 16,552,254 linear feet (£42,219) in 1924, and 222,180 linear feet (£1,012) in 1923; positives increased from 10,498,473 linear feet (£68,364) two years ago, and 10,825,900 linear feet (£71,380) in 1924, to 14,545,347 linear feet (£87,532) in the current six months, the comparatively small balances consisting of negative films.

Figures of total re-exports do not show any extensive movement, except, proportionately, in value, the aggregate of 6,875,880 feet re-exported in 1923, being valued at £146,410; of 8,268,949 linear feet a year ago, at £102,264; and in 1925 the total of 7,656,105 linear feet declining to £87,661.

STOP "PICKETING" OF KANSAS CITY THEATRE

Another victory of exhibitors in Kansas City over union tactics has been registered, this time in the Federal Court. Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves this week granted a temporary restraining order to Arthur Harrison, manager of the Grand Theatre, restraining union pickets from patroling the theatre. The order was against the operator's union, theatrical and stage employees, musicians and billposters. Harrison alleged that the theatre had been picketed since its opening on September 13 and that prospective patrons had been informed loudly that the theatre used non-union employees.

Kansas Safeguards Against Film Tax

Fearing the disastrous result of the film tax in Connecticut may be duplicated in Missouri and subsequently in Kansas, the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri is launching a thorough investigation of the plan of Governor Baker to submit an amendment to the Missouri constitution, calling for a 5 to 10 per cent levy on all amusement and luxuries.

"Missouri exhibitors are not to be caught asleep in this proposed action," said C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri. "We always have co-operated in constructive legislation and we are capable of fighting what we believe is unjust legislation just as hard as we have aided the Government in various ways."

Jules Mastbaum Returns from Trip Abroad

Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, returned to Philadelphia recently, after a visit to Europe, dating from last July.

"It was a wonderful vacation, but I am glad to be back again," he said. "I was in conference with people in Paris regarding a motion picture theatre of the same quality as those that are typical of the best in America, but nothing was actually accomplished.

"We have the site near the Grand Opera House, but there is lacking that assurance of Government interest that we deem essential. The motion picture situation abroad cannot be compared with that in this country. There isn't a picture house anywhere that is superior to our Palace Theatre here, and, as for entertainment, it is of the old type, without large orchestras, fine organs, special features, concert entertainers, prologues or the like.

TRINZ AND SAX VISIT FLORIDA

Edward Trinz and Martin Sax, of the Lubliner and Trinz circuit, have returned from an extended tour of Florida, where they gave the real estate market the once-over with the view of expansion of the circuit, but the latest report is that the activities of the Lubliner and Trinz circuit will be continued to be centralized in the Chicago district.

Poor College Girls!

Miss Kathleen Gillard, dean of women at the Southeast Missouri Teachers' College, Cape Girardeau, Mo., doesn't believe in Sunday motion picture shows, so she plans to prohibit all the girls attending the college from enjoying such amusements. She has decreed that Sunday engagements must be limited to church and the home. No motoring will be permitted after 5:30 P. M.

"U's" Chicago Chain

Louis Laemmle, well known to the Chicago movie industry, and brother Carl Laemmle, of the Universal, is building up a little theatre circuit of his own in Chicago. The latest acquisition of the Louis Laemmle circuit is the organization of the Chicago Park Theatre Company, with a capital stock of $2,500, to own and operate theatres for pictures and other legitimate theatre productions. Michael Broderick acted as attorney in this organization and is a director of the new company with Louis Laemmle.

English Unit Forms Branch in Canada to Tax Music

That the problem of a copyright license scheme is really to be experienced by the exhibitors of Canada is shown by the fact that the Performing Right Society of London, England, has organized a Canadian branch of the association to impose and collect copyright fees on a wide variety of music which is now being played in the theatres of the Dominion.

Announcement is made by the Secretary of State at Ottawa, Ontario, of the incorporation of a company under a Canadian Federal charter with title of Canadian Performing Right Society, Limited, the headquarters being at Toronto, Ontario. The formation of this branch has been sponsored by officials of the parent body in London. The Canadian company has been established with a capital stock of 10,000 shares having no nominal or par value.

This development follows upon a move in the Canadian Parliament last winter to amend the Canadian Copyright Acts to provide for the payment of royalties on all copyrighted music played by theatres in Canada. Strenuous objection was taken by organized exhibitors in Canada, namely the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, a branch of the Hays organization at Toronto, and the Canadian Division of the M. P. T. O. The net result of the agitations against the bill was that it did not get beyond its first reading and the committee stage in the Canadian House of Commons.

NEW ENGLAND CHAIN INJUNCTION

Elias M. Loew, head of a circuit of New England theatres, has been granted a temporary injunction against the Musicians, Stage Employes' and Operators' Unions in the cities in Massachusetts where he has theatres. The court in Boston issued the injunction after hearing the final report of the master assigned to hear the evidence. A final decree will be issued later as there are several more issues to be determined.

Loew's theatres were picketed for nearly two months following a walkout of the union employes. The trouble started in Pawtucket, R. I., when Mr. Loew laid off a stagehand for the summer because he decided to dispense with stage attractions during the slump period. The union there contended that he had no right to do this and called a strike.

Associated Calls Its Field Men in for First Conference

This week marked the first step in the sales policy reorganization of the Associated Exhibitors with the arrival in New York of the four field representatives for a conference. The four representatives are Harry E. Lotz, Melville E. Maxwell, Claude E. Ezell and Floyd Lewis. They were called into home office by general manager John S. Woody at the instigation of Oscar Price, the new president. While here they will be instructed in the new selling policy of the company installed by the new owners.

The plans for the coming season for the Associated Exhibitors are by far the most ambitious of any this company has entertained since its beginning. Over $200,000 has been set aside for special advertising, most of which will be spent in reaching the exhibitor direct. This amount will be spent under the direct supervision of Robert Welsh, the new appointed director of advertising and publicity.

The taking over of the Associated Exhibitors by its new owners, headed by P. A. Powers, has caused many changes to be made in the policies of the company. The most marked changes occurred in the publicity and advertising departments. Until two weeks ago these departments were run under the supervision of the Pathe organization. Under the new arrangement all the work in these departments is done direct by the Associated Exhibitors under the supervision of Robert Welsh. The style of publicity and exploitation has been changed. Campaign books now in work for the second group of releases are being printed standard newspaper size with more thought given to the promotion of ideas for the exhibitor to use.

N. J. Showman Sues Famous Because of Swanson Film

Joseph M. Seider, as chairman of the M. P. T. O. A.'s committee on contract and arbitration, announces this week the filing with the Philadelphia film board of trade of a complaint by I. M. Hirshblond, New Jersey exhibitor, against Famous Players-Lasky.

In the complaint, Seider makes known, it is alleged, that Famous recently notified Hirshblond, who operates the Tracco Theatre, Toms River, that they will not make the picture, "Conquered," which, it is further claimed, was announced as a Gloria Swanson vehicle, to be included in the company's season product.

Hirshblond, through Seider, maintains that when he booked Paramount product it was with the understanding that he would receive this Swanson picture. His claim, according to the contract and arbitration chairman, is that the absence of this film should warrant a readjustment of the price of the rest of the program on the ground that its value as a whole is lessened.

Seider makes known that the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, at their meeting this week, also decided to take action in connection with the film "Conquered."

Personals

Colonel C. E. Bray, long connected with the Orpheum Theatre, San Francisco, has arranged to sail shortly for Australia and South Africa, accompanied by Mrs. Bray. They will be joined in Africa by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who are on another trip to film pictures of big game.

William Mitchell, sales supervisor of First National Exhibitors, Toronto, has gone to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he will cover the territory out from that city.

Henri Ellman, vice-president of the Capitol Film Exchanges and franchise holder for B. P. Schulberg Productions in the Chicago territory, arrived in New York recently to confer with J. G. Bachmann, who is in charge of the distribution of Preferred Pictures.

Evelyn Brent returned to Hollywood this week after a five weeks' stay in New York, which was spent in shopping and playgoing.

MAKE CARLOS SECRETARY

Tiffany Productions Inc., announces in a statement issued that all duties pertaining to the executive end of the Tiffany Productions Inc., Truart Film Corporation and the Renown Pictures Inc.; has been taken over by A. Carlos, secretary of the companies. Carlos still retains the same interest as President of the Carlos Productions Inc., who have as their star Richard Talmadge.

WALLER GOES WITH ASSOCIATED

Tom Waller, for three years connected with Moving Picture World as political writer and news specialist this week tendered his resignation to the Chalmers Publishing Company. Waller will next week join the publicity and advertising department of Associated Exhibitors, under the directorship of Robert E. Welsh, former editor of Moving Picture World.

Ontario Government Films Make Hit

That Ontario Government moving pictures are proving popular is indicated by the publication of a special catalogue of the releases produced by the Ontario Government Motion Picture Bureau at Trenton, Ontario. This studio produces pictures under the name of "Province of Ontario Pictures." Through the bureau, the Provincial Treasurer, Hon. W. H. Price, K.C., has issued the catalogue which is being sold to various organizations interested in the pictures.

Announcement has been made that the Ontario Provincial Government now has 2,500 regular subscribers for its film productions and the number is rapidly increasing. The lists include scenic, industrial, educational, recreational and many other subjects.

KNIGHT SUCCEEDS MARKS

Four years ago John T. Knight resigned as captain in the U. S. Army and entered business life as assistant manager of the Chicago theatre of the Balaban and Katz circuit. His work with the organization has brought him several promotions and last week he was made supervisor of theatres of the circuit, succeeding Harry Marks, who has gone to Boston to supervise the opening of the new Metropolitan theatre in that city. Mr. Marks will devote his time in the future to the activities of the Balaban and Katz organization expansion program in connection with the Famous Players theatres that they have taken over for management.

Kansas Ignores Cohen

"Mail your dues direct here and ignore any assessments from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in New York," states a bulletin from M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri headquarters, issued last week, in explaining to members that the Missouri-Kansas body no longer is active in the national organization as long as Cohen remains identified with the latter body.

INDICT 13 IN ILLINOIS

The Federal Grand Jury, before Judge James H. Wilkerson, in the Federal court, Chicago, last week, voted indictments against thirteen officials of the Bankers and Merchants Theatre Company. The company was organized in 1916 and advertised throughout the territory, its projects of building theatres, hotels and cafeterias, promising big profits to investors. Investigation, it is alleged, has failed to show any buildings erected and that several million dollars was put into the scheme by the public with poor results to the investors.

BACKS SATURDAY MORNING SHOWS

The Missouri Theatre, Grand Boulevard at Lucas Avenue, St. Louis, owned by the Paramount-Balaban Katz interests, has joined the national movement to encourage Saturday morning motion picture shows for children. An admission fee of 10 cents is charged. The entire proceeds of the first five Saturday morning shows will be turned over to the Post-Dispatch Free Ice for Babies Milk Fund.

URBANA IN THROES OF SUNDAY WAR

The question of the legality and morality of Sunday motion picture shows has torn Urbana, Ill., asunder. While some 10,000 students of Illinois University stand by cheering the managements of the town's two theatres who defied the Sunday closing ordinance on September 27 by holding shows the Puritans and others of the blue variety are clamoring for a tight lid on the town. The managers, G. T. Freeman and E. E. Alger have announced that they will fight the closing ordinance to the highest courts. Urbana merchants have taken the side of the theatre owners.

ALBANY SETTLES WITH UNIONS

Matters have been adjusted between the theatre owners of Albany, N. Y., and members of the motion picture machine operators' union of that city, following several conferences. Both sides have conceded certain things, with the result that the same wage scale will prevail for the next twelve months. While the operators demanded a six-hour day, a compromise was effected at seven hours to constitute a day's work. From now on, booths will be occupied by full fledged union members, doing away with apprentices. A union operator will do the relief work for two theatres.

BUFFALO SETTLES UNION FRACAS

Through a mutual agreement between the management of the Strand-Cataract Theatre the disorderly conduct charge preferred in Niagara Falls police court last week against William Sarginson, Jr., secretary of the local musicians' union, has been withdrawn and the case disposed of. This course was taken when officers of the union handed the complainant a written guarantee that there would be no further molestation of theatre employes on the part of union members.

Fox Corporation Builds Big Exchange in Australia

The similarity and good will existing between the American and Australian people was again emphasized when the cornerstone was laid for the new building of Fox Film Corporation in Sydney, Australia, during the Fox Australian convention for 1925.

Clayton P. Sheehan, home office representative for Fox, presided over the laying of the cornerstone, assisted by Stanley S. Crick, Australasian managing director. Two hundred and fifty prominent persons were present, including leading exhibitors. Members of the State and Federal Parliaments who attended spoke of the great value of the motion picture industry in helping to amuse and educate the people of Australia.

F. B. O. Gives Luncheon To New York Salesmen

A luncheon at the Hofbrau House was tendered by F. B. O. to the New York salesmen of the company last Monday in celebration of the sale of 50 per cent. of the year's quota.

Charles Rosenzweig, manager of the New York exchange, presided. Major H. C. S. Thomson, president of the F. B. O., Colvin W. Brown, vice-president, David Poucher, treasurer, Lee Marcus, sales manager, Nat G. Rothstein, publicity and advertising director, Al Boasberg, sales promotion director and Cleve Adams, division manager of Chicago, attended. The F. B. O. salesmen who partook of the feast were G. William Wolf, H. Kram, Jack Ellis, L. C. Wechsler, Leo M. Fox, L. B. Sherwood, J. W. Holden, Phil Hodes and Frank Leonard, exploiteer, connected with the New York exchange.

Major Thomson, in a brief talk, thanked the men for their loyalty and splendid service.

New Inwood Opens

Thursday, October 1, the Inwood Theatre, Dykman Street at Post Avenue, opened in a blaze of glory and the glare of two sunlight arcs, set across the street to advertise the fact that this section of the upper Manhattan area of Greater New York had a real theatre at last.

The house, a two story structure with seats only on the lower floor, accommodating about 1,200, has a charming interior, with a decorative scheme in light colors, the feature being a crystal chandelier in a challow dome, which becomes a blaze of red or blue or white, according to the circuit thrown in. It is equipped with a Moller organ but makes a feature of the playing of an excellent orchestra.

It gives this fast-growing section, virtually a small city in itself, a theatre worthy the name, and under the management of Sol Brill a fine line of attractions has been booked, Lightnin' being the opening feature.

HOUSE FOR BRIGHTMOOR, MICH.

A new modern theatre is in course of erection at Brightmoor, a Detroit suburb. It will seat 2,000 and will have ten stories and twelve offices and halls. It is being built by John G. Golden, who now operates the Virginia Theatre in that section.

Milwaukee Averts Strike

A strike of motion picture operators which appeared possible in Milwaukee several weeks ago has been averted through a compromise agreement reached between theatre owners and their employes. Under the terms of the agreement, the operators will receive pay increases of five cents an hour for houses of 800 seats or less and 10 cents an hour for theatres with more than 800 seats. The operators, in their original demands, has sought advances ranging from 5 per cent. in the small outlying theatres to 32 per cent. in the first run downtown showhouses.

BROKERS SUE ON THEATRE COMMISSION

Claiming they are entitled to $10,000 commission for services in connection with the leasing of the Columbia Theatre property at Sixth and St. Charles Streets, St. Louis, Mo., to the McCrory Stores Corporaion, Rochester, N. Y., Arthur S. Martin and Fred C. Briett, real estate dealers, have filed suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court to enjoin payment of the commission to S. J. Bernheimer, another real estate man. The Columbia Theatre Company and the Supreme Realty Company, owners of the property, have indicated they will pay the commission to Bernheimer.

BIG ST. LOUIS PROJECT

Plans for a building on a mammoth scale with picture theatre, restaurant, dance hall and garage are in preparation. The site is at the triangle formed by Skinker Boulevard and Oakland and Clayton Avenues at the Southwestern entrance to Forest Park, St. Louis. The project calls for an expenditure of $1,000,000. The identity of the syndicate behind the big deal has not been divulged by the Paul Jones Realty Company, which acquired the site for the promoters.

POSTPONE ARBITRATION CHAT

The conference on arbitration between Hays representatives and officials of the Albany and Buffalo zones of the New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners did not take place this week in Manhattan as it was scheduled. According to the Hays organization it was postponed until October 20 upon the request of A. Michaels of the Buffalo territory.

NEW BOSTON HOUSE OPENS OCT. 15

The big new theatre in Boston to be operated jointly by the Keith-Albee interests and Famous-Players has been named the Metropolitan Theatre. Harold B. Franklin, in announcing this fact, said the name Metropolitan was chosen because it will be the policy of this theatre to offer a type of entertainment of metropolitan appeal. The house will be opened about Oct. 15.

The Metropolitan will seat 4,500 persons The theatre will change its programs weekly. There will be an orchestra of 55 musicians. The combined resources of Famous-Players, Balaban and Katz and the Keith-Albee interests will be drawn upon for the presentations.

WARNERS GET CHICAGO ORPHEUM

The management of the Orpheum Theatre, on State Street, one of the oldest of the moving picture theatres in the loop, will pass from the Jones, Linick & Schaefer circuit on November 1, to the Warner Brothers' circuit. George H. Moore, for twenty years manager of the house, will continue under the Warner Brothers' regime.

Second Half of "Quality 52" Soon to Be Launched for M-G-M by Louis B. Mayer

FOLLOWING conferences in New York with Marcus Loew and Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, will shortly return to the Culver City studio to launch the production of the second half of the "Quality Fifty-Two" productions.

The producing program for the coming six months involves the most ambitious schedule in the history of either Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor or Cosmopolitan productions or the combined forces, according to the announcement.

Mayer, who originated the plan of an executive staff supervising various units, it is pointed out, has proved that this method of large-scale motion picture production is an unqualified success as evidenced by sixty-eight weeks of consistent box-office successes.

In the production of the second half of the "Quality Fifty-Two," the executives associated with Mayer will be, as in the past, Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf, with the addition of Hunt Stromberg, recently signed. This announcement definitely refutes rumors concerning a change in the executive personnel of this organization.

"Under the producing schedule just prepared, provision has been made for vacations among the members of the executive staff," said Mayer. "Harry Rapf will shortly make a trip to Europe with his family, where he will combine pleasure with M-G-M business. Upon his return Irving Thalberg will take a well-earned rest, and later, I myself will spend a month abroad. The addition of Hunt Stromberg and others with whom we are now in negotiation, will make it possible for members of the executive staff to take vacations which have thus far been denied them because of the rush of production.

"In the production of the second half of our 1925-26 program our system of operation will be exactly that which has proved such a success in the past. This method of production, which has made our pictures 'the talk of the industry,' is now recognized as the most successful in the history of filmmaking.

"The stars and popular players who will appear in the second half of the program of pictures are: Marion Davies, Lillian Gish, Jackie Coogan, Mae Murray, John Gilbert, Buster Keaton, Ramon Novarro, Norma Shearer, Lon Chaney, Renee Adoree, George K. Arthur, Katherine Bennett, Mae Busch, Edward Connelly, Joan Crawford, Frank Currier, Karl Dane, Antonio D'Algy, William Haines, Kathleen Key, Carmel Myers, Conrad Nagel, Sally O'Neill, Gertrude Olmsted, Zasu Pitts, Bert Roach, Conway Tearle, and Claire Windsor, Nigel de Brulier, and Greta Garbe.

"This roster will be augmented by a number of other players of unusual box-office strength with whom we are now negotiating.

"Our directors handing these pictures offer perhaps the greatest galaxy of directorial brains ever assembled by one organization, including King Vidor, Tod Browning, Hobart Henley, Robert Z. Leonard, Victor Seastrom, Leon Abrams, Paul Bern, Christy Cabanne, Benjamin Christianson, Jack Conway, Edmund Goulding, Fred Niblo, Alfred Raboch, Mauritz Stiller and Hunt Stromberg.

"Among the pictures to be produced during the coming months are: 'The Big Parade,' starring John Gilbert; Elinor Glyn's 'Four Flaming Days'; 'Free Lips,' starring Norma Shearer; Tod Browning's 'The Mocking Bird,' starring Lon Chaney; 'La Boheme,' starring Lillian Gish and featuring John Gilbert; the mammoth version of 'Ben Hur,' now nearing completion on the Coast, with Ramon Novarro in the title role, and 'Bardolys, the Magnificent,' a spectacular version of the Rafael Sabatini novel, to be made entirely in technicolor and to star John Gilbert."

THE LAST "REHEARSAL" BEFORE THE CAMERAS "SHOOT." Director Monta Bell uses his tiny megaphone for a pointer, while rehearsing Marion Davies, Frank Currier and Conrad Nagel in a scene in the forthcoming Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Lights of Old Broadway." This is the screen version of the stage success, "Merry Wives of Gotham."

THERE'S A WHOLE LOT OF FIGHT LEFT IN "WES," AS YOU'LL SEE

This Barry boy—Wesley in type and Wes not in type—has a typical role and one suggestive of his former freckle-faced days in "The Fighting Cub," a Truart production for release by Renown. The cast further includes Mildred Harris, Pat O'Malley and Mary Carr. Here's a "showman's picture."

First National Has Great List Planned for Next Three Months

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES makes the claim that it has, for the first quarter of the new season, the greatest list of releases for any three months in its history, in stories, in casting, in directing, in entertainment value and in artistry.

Thirteen productions will be released during this period, exclusive of the two specials, "The Lost World" and "Winds of Chance," which are now being extensively booked for showing during October, November and December. "The Sea Hawk," the big special for last season, which was withdrawn from the market during June, July and August, is also again being booked in big first run theatres for return engagements. Among the coming releases is the new picture starring Norma Talmadge, "Kiki," and Colleen Moore's new starring vehicle, "We Moderns," from Israel Zangwill's play.

The thirteen pictures scheduled for release during October, November and December are a part of the Winner Group of pictures for the new season, which have been booked in their entirety in more than 1,250 theatres aside from franchise bookings and which are still being booked rapidly throughout the country.

The thirteen productions, in the order of their release, are:

Oct. 4—"The Pace That Thrills," an original automobile racing story written for Ben Lyon by Byron Morgan, directed by Webster Campbell, includes in its cast, Mr. Lyon, Mary Astor, Tully Marshall, Charles Beyer, George Cooper, Fritzi Brunette, Warner Richmond, Evelyn Walsh Hall and Thomas Holding.

Oct. 11—Corinne Griffith's "Classified," from Edna Ferber's story, directed by Alfred A. Santell, with Miss Griffith, Jack Mulhall, Charles Murray, Carroll Nye, Ward Crane, Edythe Chapman, Jacqueline Wells, George Sidney, Jean Vashon and Barney Randall.

Oct. 18—"Why Women Love," Edwin Carew's production of Willard Robertson's play, "The Sea Woman." In the cast are Blanche Sweet, Robert Frazer, Dorothy Sebastian, Edward Earle, Russell Simpson, Alan Roscoe, Fred Warren, Charles Murray and Herbert Pryor.

Oct. 25—"The Beautiful City," Inspiration Pictures' new production, starring Richard Barthelmess, is an original Edmund Goulding story, directed by Kenneth Webb. Supporting Mr. Barthelmess are Dorothy Gish, William H. Powell, Florence Auer, Frank Puglia and Beryl Halley.

Nov. 1—"The New Commandment," Robert Kane's initial production for First National, adapted from Frederick Palmer's novel, "Invisible Wounds," directed by Howard Higgin. In the cast are Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Holbrook Blinn, Claire Eames, Effie Shannon, Dorothy Cummings, George Cooper, Pedro de Cordoba, Lucius Henderson and Diana Kane.

Nov. 8—"We Moderns," the new Colleen Moore picture made from Israel Zangwill's play, directed by John Francis Dillon. Supporting Miss Moore are Jack Mulhall, Claude Gillingwater, Clarissa Selwyn, Dorothy Seastrom, Tom McGuire, Cleve Moore, Carl Miller, Louis Payne, Blanch Payson and Marcella Corday.

Nov. 15—"Clothes Make the Pirate," a Sam Rork production based upon Holman Day's novel of the same title, directed by Maurice Tourneur, starring Leon Errol. Supporting Mr. Errol are Dorothy Gish, Nita Naldi, George Marion, Shirley Mason, Tully Marshall, Frank Lawlor, Edna Murphy, James Rennie, Walter Law, Reginald Barlow, Henry West and Ernest Carr.

Nov. 22—"The Unguarded Hour," starring Milton Sills, from Margaretta Tuttles' new novel. Lambert Hillyer directed. In the cast are Doris Kenyon, Vivia Ogden, Jed Prouty, Claude King, Charles Beyer, J. Moy Bennett, Dolores Cassinelli, Cornelius Keefe and Lorna Duveen.

Nov. 29—"The Scarlet Saint," directed by George Archainbaud from Gerald Beaumonts' story, "The Lady Who Played Fidele." Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes are the featured players.

Dec. 6—"The Splendid Road," the new Frank Lloyd production, adapted by J. G. Hawks from Vingie E. Roe's new novel. The cast includes Anna Q. Nilsson, Robert Frazer and Lionel Barrymore in the featured roles.

Dec. 13—"Caesar's Wife," starring Corinne Griffith, adapted from a story by Somerset Maughan and directed by Irving Cummings.

Dec. 20—"The Girl from Montmartre," Sawyer-Lubin's production based on Anthony Pryde's novel, "Spanish Sunlight." Alfred E. Green directed. Barbara La Marr and Lewis Stone are featured.

Dec. 27—"Kiki," the new Joseph M. Schenck production starring Norma Talmadge, adapted from David Belasco's stage production.

F. B. O. Lines Up Imposing Product for New Season

FOLLOWING a series of production conferences at the Coast Studios of the company, as a result of which big strides were made in the assembling of next season's product, J. L. Schnitzer, vice-president of F. B. O. in charge of production and John C. Brownell, Home Office scenario editor, arrived in New York last week. They spent several weeks at the F. B. O. Studios.

Another F. B. O. traveler who made the journey from Los Angeles to New York was Paula Gould, general press representative of the company who spent a vacation of one month at the studios.

Announcement was made by Mr. Schnitzer before he departed for the East that F. B. O. would take the field next season with the biggest array of special attractions in the history of the company. Just how many specials the program will include has not been definitely established. It is certain, however, that F. B. O. will present at least twelve specials which will dwarf any heretofore offered by that company.

The program will also include an attractive list of star series productions, of which the Fred Thomson and Evelyn Brent productions will be the outstanding features. Pictures in which these stars will take the leading roles will be produced on a far more elaborate scale than in the past, it was announced by B. P. Fineman, general production manager of F. B. O.

MARGUERITE DE LA MOTTE IN ONE OF HER BEST ROLES

Directors like Tom Forman know they can get the best work out of Miss de la Motte when her role is highly emotional, and in "The People vs. Nancy Preston," the Hunt Stromberg production for Producers Distributing Corporation, this splendid star is really at her best. John Bowers, who seems to "pair off" so well with Miss de la Motte in ever so many pictures recently, will again be seen in her support.

Fox Film Corporation Passes Halfway Mark in Filming Its 1925-26 Product

WITH twenty-two of its Supreme Attractions and starring vehicles and approximately fifty per cent. of its short subjects completed as far as actual filming is concerned, the various Fox Film Corporation departments at the West Coast Studios are now preparing to launch the remaining half of the company's 1925-26 releases.

Ten companies are actually shooting on the Fox lot, with five more scheduled to begin work in a few days.

Four of the pictures now being filmed are Supreme Attractions and starring vehicles. Henry Otto is directing the final scenes in the allegorical sequence of "The Ancient Mariner." Tom Mix is busy on his fourth starring vehicle for the current season, titled, "The Best Bad Man," under the direction of J. G. Blystone. "Wages for Wives," the screen version of John Golden's stage success "Chickenfeed," is progressing toward the final stages under the expert eye of Frank Borzage. Buck Jones, with R. William Neill wielding the megaphone, is on his fifth 1925-26 production, which has the catchy title, "Her Cowboy Prince."

The other films in work are two-reel comedies. Robert Kerr is back on the Fox lot and has another of the celebrated Van Bibber comedies under way. Albert Ray has the fourth of the Helen and Warren married life series, "Hold Everybody," at a point where it will be finished soon. Daniel Keefe is directing another of the O. Henry series, and fun-makers Bryan Foy, Lew Seiler and Benjamin Stoloff are at work on new Imperial comedies. All these two-reel entertainments are under the personal supervision of George E. Marshall, the Will Hays-Judge Landis of Fox short subjects.

The pictures that are scheduled to be put in work immediately are: "Daybreak," an adaptation of the stage play "The Outsider." "The Golden Strain," Peter B. Kyne's first contribution to the Fox program, from the Cosmopolitan magazine story "Thoroughbreds." "The Golden Butterfly," an original story by Evelyn Campbell. "My Little Pal," which is a Tom Mix starring vehicle from Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Gallant Guardsman," and "The First Year," the sixth of the John Golden unit of clean American productions.

CROSSING A CONTINENT FOR A HANDCLASP! HIP! HIP!

Within an hour after Sam L. Warner (left) and Lina Basquette were married, they entrained for the West Coast, and in this picture Mr. and Mrs. Warner are seen, with Jack Warner, studio manager, in Hollywood, with a floral "Welcome," and banks of flowers surrounding them. Miss Basquette was a precocious "child" star a few years ago, and more recently danced with great success in Ziegfeld's "Follies." (The honeymooners were last reported planning a voyage to Japan.)

HERE'S A TEAM SHOWMEN AND FANS ALIKE WILL DO WELL TO WATCH

Clara Bow and Donald Keith have distinguished themselves heretofore, but in B. P. Schulberg's Preferred picture, "Free to Love," these clever young people live up to every promise made for them by Mr. Schulberg when he selected them for stardom.

Associated Exhibitors Will Release "The Sky Rocket"

ONE of the first steps taken by Associated Exhibitors to acquire the biggest stars and productions in the independent field was taken this week when Peggy Hopkins Joyce's first starring screen vehicle, "The Sky Rocket," was accepted for distribution.

As a production "The Sky Rocket" is one of the most talked of pictures of the year, and inside reports have it that Miss Joyce's work in this film is nothing short of marvelous. It was because of the calibre of this production and the strong drawing power of the star that Oscar Price, president of the Associated Exhibitors, entered the competition with other national distributors to get the picture.

"The Sky Rocket" will not be included among the thirty pictures announced for release by the Associated Exhibitors, for the coming season, but will be distributed as a special, as it truly is. The story is an adaptation of the famous novel of the same title written by Adela Rogers St. Johns. Marshall Neilan, one of the outstanding directors of the day handled the megaphone on the picture from a scenario written by Randall McKeever.

Heading the cast of supporting players are Owen Moore and Earle Williams while Sammy Cohen, Gladys Brockwell, Gladys Hulette, Bernard Randall, Joan Standing, and Lilyan Tashman, head a long role of lesser players.

In a statement issued in connection with the taking over of this production, Oscar Price stated that this is only the beginning of what Associated Exhibitors intend doing in the way of acquiring stars and productions. Further in his conversation he hinted that important announcements will be made in the near future in reference to the plans of the company that will make every exhibitor in the country sit up and take notice.

As a public figure Miss Joyce is one of the most widely known women in the world today and even the most skeptical admit that she will have an enormous drawing power at the box office. Prior to her debut in pictures Miss Joyce established herself as a legitimate star at the head of the Earl Carroll Vanities, touring the country with this show and establishing a popularity second to no woman in public life.

IN THE LAST MINUTE RUSH—EVERYBODY WORKS!

Director Fred Niblo is so eager to get through with the colossal production of "Ben Hur," which he is making for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, that he offers no objection when he finds his principal players, Francis X. Bushman, Ramon Novarro and May McAvoy, helping forward construction work on the huge Antioch Circus in which the chariot races will be staged. ('Sall right, so long as the carpenter's union doesn't catch 'em!)

Breaking Records

M.-G.-M.'s "Never the Twain Shall Meet" Increasing Business On Second Week

"Never the Twain Shall Meet," the Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer directed by Maurice Tourneur, has broken all attendance records for the Madison Theatre in Detroit, Mich. The second week of the showing has opened to bigger business than the first, and the management is accordingly planning to hold the film over for a third.

Anita Stewart, Bert Lytell and Huntly Gordon are the featured players in this stirring picturization of the well known Peter B. Kyne novel. Director Tourneur took the entire cast to the South Sea Isles for the exteriors and obtained some of the most beautiful tropical scenery ever recorded by the camera. Exceptionally effective work has been done by Miss Stewart as Tamea, the dusky South Sea Island heroine, and Bert Lytell and Huntly Gordon have won high praise as the white men who strive for her affection. A number of scenes recording spectacular native dances are a fascinating feature of the film.

Governor of Utah Wires Congratulations After Premiere of "Keeper of the Bees"

THE American Theatre, Salt Lake, City, was selected by F. B. O. for the world's premiere of "The Keeper of the Bees," J. Leo Meehan's picturization for F. B. O. of Gene Stratton-Porter's famous novel. The production made a triumphant cinematic debut on Saturday evening, Sept. 19th and played for an entire week to capacity. The first two days of the run the picture played to more than ten thousand persons, which breaks all records held by any theatre in Salt Lake, and during its week's run played to over 22,500 persons.

Acclaimed by an unusually distinguished and enthusiastic first night audience, composed chiefly of state and city officials, as the greatest picture premiere the Mormon city has yet known, it is not surprising that news of the overwhelming reception tendered this production has already reached hundreds of exhibitors throughout the country who are wiring F. B. O. for booking dates.

The F. B. O. executives attribute the remarkable success of the production to the fact that "The Keeper of the Bees" is the only picture made from a popular novel which was released simultaneously with the publication of the book, thus insuring a ready made audience of more than 10,000,000 persons who read the story in serial form during its run in McCall's Magazine.

Big Advertising Campaign

An intensive advertising campaign was launched by F. B. O. for several months in the pages of McCall's Magazine during the serialization of the novel. It was advertised in every trade paper and is now on sale in about 16,000 book stores and newsstands. Eleven hundred and forty dealers made window displays of the book. Two thousand others used posters on it. The book was advertised in the leading magazines and in about two hundred newspapers throughout the country. This coupled with the fact that Gene Stratton-Porter's name is a household word throughout the world, and that she has sold more books in the last twenty years than any other author, will easily make "The Keeper of the Bees" the biggest picture of the year. The book received unusually favorable notices from the press throughout the country, and was reviewed at Salt Lake the day after the picture opening. The success of Mrs. Porter's first film venture, "A Girl of the Limberlost" has already made screen history.

Cutting on the first print of "The Keeper of the Bees" was completed barely in time to rush the negative by special airplane to the American Theatre, Salt Lake. The print arrived an hour before the rise of the curtain.

Congratulations from Governor

Among the distinguished first night audience were Hon. George H. Dern, Governor of Utah; Hon. C. Clarence Neslen, Mayor of Salt Lake City; Harvey H. Cluff, Attorney General of Utah; Heber J. Grant, President of the Church of Latter Day Saints; J. H. Rayburn, Sec. Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce and H. W. Lane, President Salt Lake Baseball Club. Numerous Chamber of Commerce officials and prominent social celebrities attended all of whom expressed their appreciation of the picture in the most enthusiastic terms.

After the opening, Governor Dern wired:

"'The Keeper of the Bees' is a splendid picture. If we had more like it the country would be better off and the traducers of the screen would have no ammunition. Accept heartiest congratulations.

Harvey H. Cluff, Attorney General of the State of Utah was most enthusiastic. An excerpt from his wire follows:

"'The Keeper of the Bees' a fine dramatic story, ably directed and acted which can not fail to prove an outstanding hit, if it pleases the public elsewhere as I believe it is pleasing Salt Lake. Essentially it is the best kind of American entertainment."

Rev. Heber J. Grant, President of the Church of Latter Day Saints, echoes Attorney General Cluff when he wires:

"The picture version of Gene Stratton Porter's 'The Keeper of the Bees' I thoroughly enjoyed. A sincere and honest picture which should be fine entertainment and which can be sincerely and honestly endorsed."

Hon. Clarence Neslen, Mayor of Salt Lake City, enthuses:

"Producers of 'The Keeper of the Bees,' and all connected with it have right to feel proud of screen version of Gene Stratton-Porter novel. We of Salt Lake City who saw it first welcomed it enthusiastically and anticipate whole country will do likewise."

J. H. Rayburn, Sec. Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce says:

"Salt Lake City was honored in having seen Gene Stratton-Porter's 'Keeper of the Bees' before any other community. It was well worth seeing first. It is a picture of which you may well be proud."

He Keeps "The Bees," Too!

H. W. Lane, President Salt Lake Baseball Club, echoed the enthusiastic sentiments of the entire sporting community in Salt Lake when he wired:

"I am a 'Keeper of the Bees' (Salt Lake Ball Club) myself but I resign in favor of your great picture. It is a home run, a Babe Ruth. Out here we would call it a Tony Lazerre. Congratulations."

The wire that caused the greatest huzzas, however, came from Garson Dahnken, Manager of the American Theatre, the day after the opening. Mr. Dahnken's telegram is a genuine forecast of what will happen in thousands of theatres when they play "The Keeper of the Bees."

"Stood them up all day with Gene Stratton-Porter's 'The Keeper of the Bees.' Had 2400 house capacity in and hundred foot lobby three times during evening. Had to establish extra box office to handle crowd. Everybody tickled to death with picture. Warmest congratulations."

And seven days later Mr. Dahnken wired F. B. O. again:

"Just closed week's run on 'Keeper of the Bees' to biggest attendance we have had in years. Played to twenty two thousand five hundred sixteen people. I recommend this picture to every exhibitor in the world as a box office attraction and real audience picture."

The press of Salt Lake were as enthusiastic as the audience. The notices accorded the film in the newspapers were flattering to the nth degree.

Critics Like It

Dan S. McQuarrie in the News says: "Salt Lake citizens are asked this week to give the first verdict on 'The Keeper of the Bees,' a picture destined to become known over the world. For those who love the Gene Stratton-Porter stories, which means millions it is sufficient recommendation to say from a preview that what the author put in the book, Mr. Meehan and the cast have put in the picture—a notable achievement. How many of the readers of this book or others by the same author will be able to say definitely wherein lies the appeal or exactly what it was that brought the whimsical smile or the lump to the throat? Yet this intangible charm will carry the picture to the hearts of theatregoers."

The picture met with the enthusiastic approval of the Salt Lake Telegram, which says: "Salt Lake City turned out to enjoy the world's premiere yesterday at the American Theatre, and to honor J. Leo Meehan, former local newspaper man, who directed Gene Stratton-Porter's great novel 'The Keeper of the Bees.'

"The charm of the author has been preserved by Director Meehan in the screen version. Against the backgrounds of Southern California, a story more dramatic than the usual Gene Stratton-Porter tale moves smoothly to its climax."

"'The Keeper of the Bees,'" says the Salt Lake Tribune, "should rate high in the popular estimation. The picture has just enough heart appeal to make it a success. Acting of high grade caliber and pleasing photography all contribute to make it an entirely meritorious production. Most of the scenes were taken at Santa Barbara just previous to the earthquake. The ocean and the rugged beach do much to enhance the picture. Coupled with the well planned and well done photography, the picture was directed by J. Leo Meehan, former Salt Lake newspaper man, and son-in-law of Mrs. Porter. Under his direction, the scenario has not deviated from the book.

"The various parts of the picture are taken care of by capable actors. As the partner of the 'keeper of the bees' little Gene Stratton, granddaughter of Mrs. Porter, does some really remarkable acting."

The New York premiere of "The Keeper of the Bees" took place at Town Hall on Monday evening, October 5th. Society, the stage and screen, as well as literary New York was well represented.

Attends Convention

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer who arrived in the East early last week, has gone to Louisville, Kentucky, where he will attend the convention of International Fire Chiefs and consult with officials and heads of local fire departments throughout the country, on the production to be made by M.-G.-M. in behalf of fire prevention, C. Gardner Sullivan's "Flames."

MARION DAVIES IS A BLONDE AND A BRUNETTE

In "Lights of Old Broadway," a Monte Bell production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Miss Davies has the roles of sisters—one a pronounced blonde and the other a brunette—and those of us who have seen the picture privately believe she has done her best work in this instance.

M.-G.-M's "Tower of Lies" Given Lavish Praise by N. Y. Critics

VICTOR SEASTROM'S "The Tower of Lies," starring Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer, has opened at the Capitol Theatre in New York to truly astonishing acclaim from both critics and public This new, smashing success from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios is a stirring picturization of the Selma Lagerlof novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia," adapted to the screen by Agnes Christine Johnston.

"Now and again we are privileged to behold an offering of the silent drama," writes Katherine Zimmerman in the New York Evening Telegram, "of such merit and character that our supplementary diet of pictorial piffle is almost forgotten in a floodtide of gratitude. Of such a rare order is 'The Tower of Lies.' Unlike most motion picture adaptations, characterization has not been systematically reduced to action. There is none of the automatic 'going through the motions' when the director pulls the strings."

"The talents of Victor Seastrom," reports the New York Sun, "bloom in their finest flower in 'The Tower of Lies, a poetic, imaginatively staged photoplay. That should be considered in the nature of a command to attend one of its showings at the Capitol this week, where additional delight may be obtained through witnessing Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer in the distinctive acts of giving their finest performances."

"The picture is a triumph of artistic directing and acting," remarks Regina Cannon in the New York Daily Graphic. "While Lon Chaney has done more spectacular things, he has never been called upon to do anything which so indelibly stamps him as perhaps the greatest character artist on the screen. Norma Shearer as Glory is perfect."

"Here, you feel, are great gifts," declares Mildred Spain in the New York Daily News. "Rarely has a director put a story on the screen with such fine restraint, such poetical simplicity. 'The Tower of Lies' is a drama at its best. It is realism coated with romance."

"There is an outstanding fine bill at the Capitol Theatre this week," testifies Aileen St. John-Brenon in the New York Morning Telegraph. "'The Tower of Lies' is an exceptional moving picture, beautifully directed and a far cry from the hackneyed, trite stories."

"What this reviewer would wish to say at the earliest possible moment," says Quinn Martin in the New York World, "is that Lon Chaney's performance in 'The Tower of Lies' is one of the most fascinating which he has seen in months."

"'The Tower of Lies' is an absorbing drama of the lives of simple folk," comments Palmer Smith in the New York Evening World.

"I have seldom seen anything finer than the work-ridden old peasant played by Claire McDowell," exclaims Louella O. Parsons in the New York American.

"This film," points out the New York Evening Post, "featuring the work of that trio responsible for 'He Who Gets Slapped'—Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer and Director Victor Seastrom—is brilliantly conceived and acted with a sincerity that is impressive."

"Loew's Ink"

R. W. Baremore, of the Publicity Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in the New York home office, and editor of "Loew's Ink," a publication devoted to the employees of Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has turned out a breezy October Number, in which details of the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Ball, at the Astor, October 31, are set forth.

We also learn that Miss Anne Mary Graham, the beautiful hostess on the third floor of the Loew State Theatre Building and one of the few girls out of 15,000,000 to decline a contract to work in motion pictures, has returned from a protracted visit to Ireland, and other parts of the British Empire in Northwestern Europe.

We are glad Miss Graham is home again, safe and well—and herewith our official congratulations.

We also congratulate R. W. Baremore on his snappy little publication, "Loew's Ink."

Gladys Hulette to Attend "Go Straight!" Premiere

EWART ADAMSON'S melodrama, "Go Straight," a Preferred Picture, presented by B. P. Schulberg, will have its initial New York engagement next week when it opens as the feature film at B. S. Moss' Broadway.

A cast of popular players worked in this story picture, under the direction of Frank O'Connor, its players including Owen Moore, Gladys Hulette, Mary Carr, Robert Edeson, George Fawcett, Ethel Wales, Lillian Leighton and others.

The production also shows Anita Stewart, Larry Semon and Donald Keith in special Hollywood sequences in which the audience is given a glimpse of screenland.

Gladys Hulette, the feminine lead, who recently arrived in New York from the West coast, will attend the first performance at the Broadway.

Ship Film by Dog Train

If you ever get the idea into your head that motion pictures are not about the most popular form of entertainment throughout the world think this over:

William Kelly, Paramount's branch manager at Calgary, Canada, has the distinction of serving the only Eskimo exhibitor on the Continent. Each print used by this theatre man must be shipped 300 miles by dog train. Not unlike the days of "The Pony Express" in the United States.

Can you think of any other form of entertainment that is so popular that it is in demand 300 miles from the nearest railroad?

Signs Contract

Louis B. Mayer has signed Alice D. G. Miller on a new long term contract to write continuities exclusively for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Miller has been one of the feature writers with the M.-G.-M. organization ever since the merger more than a year and a half ago. Listed among her successes are: "So This is Marriage," "Lady of the Night," "The Exquisite Sinner," "Pretty Ladies," and "Dance Madness."

BETTY BRONSON FOLLOWS GREAT FOOTSTEPS

A screen hit in the "Peter Pan" role made famous by Maude Adams! Again paralleling in pictures the great actress' role in "A Kiss for Cinderella." Seen here in the latter Paramount picture, a Herbert Brenon production, in which the little Famous Players-Lasky star has Tom Moore for her leading man.

Warners to Screen "The Tavern Knight," Sabatini's Novel, Starring John Barrymore

AFTER several weeks of negotiations, Warner Bros. announce they will make a third picture with John Barrymore while that actor is on the West Coast. The signature of Barrymore was obtained this week out on the Pacific Ocean where he is making "The Sea Beast," and the Warners immediately purchased "The Tavern Knight" by Rafael Sabatini, author of "The Sea Hawk" and "Captain Blood" as the story in which Barrymore will be put out in a big special production.

This does not mean that the Warners are to abandon their plans to present the star in Lord Byron's "Don Juan." On the contrary work on this great love story will be started with the completion of "The Sea Beast," which will practically be finished so far as Barrymore is concerned when the whaling episodes now being shot are completed.

"The Tavern Knight" in a period picture of the seventeenth century in England when Charles II attempted to regain the throne from the parliamentary rule of Oliver Cromwell. Barrymore will play the title role, that of Sir Crispin Ballaird, who from his strong, noble albeit tender and chivalrous nature, is called "The Tavern Knight" and is the good, right arm of Charles II.

The Warners announce they will make a pretentious production of this Sabatini story, filled, as it is, with the clash of battle and the atmosphere and color of the days of Charles II. It is written with Sabatini's adventurous swing, and there is excellent opportunity for Mr. Barrymore to stand out in another great role in the Warner program along with his "Don Juan" and Captain Ahab in the "Sea Beast."

This means that Barrymore is not likely to appear on the speaking stage this season, but it does not mean that he is deserting the foolights permanently. He stated this week that on the screen he believes he is offered a wider field of characterization and he wants to make a thorough trial of it under favorable circumstances before he resumes his stage work. It is known that Mr. Barrymore has in mind a big stage production for next season and he has been dealing with a German playwright along this line. The play in which he will return to the stage on the completion of his Warner contract will be whipped into shape and made ready while he is working on the Warner Bros. progam.

Mr. Barrymore went to the coast with the intention of making but one picture. When "The Sea Beast" was about half completed, he felt so satisfied with it that he permitted the Warners to exercise their option and signed up for "Don Juan." This will keep him on the coast until the first of the year. He informed H. M. Warner that if a suitable story could be found, he would remain in Hollywood until the spring and do a big special for him.

When "The Tavern Knight" was offered for his approval, it was satisfactory and the contract was signed this week. It is not believed that this production will be completed until well on toward spring.

Production of "The Sea Beast," the special attraction in which Barrymore is to make his first bow on Warner Bros.' 1925-26 schedule, has been finished, according to advices from the company's West Coast Studios. If present plans are carried out the picture will be held over until after the Christmas holidays, and January 9th has been tentatively selected as the release date.

Harry M. Warner, who returned from California a few days ago, is tremendously "sold" on "The Sea Beast," and is convinced that it is one of the very finest pictures ever made. He saw it in a pre-view in Los Angeles and was so thrilled that he rushed to a telegraph office and wired an enthusiastic message to the home office.

Since reaching New York the Warner president has amplified his original comment with many additional expressions of enthusiasm, but the telegram itself contained sufficient praise to make certain that the producers have unlimited confidence in this attraction. The wire read as follows:

"Saw 'The Beast' tonight in fourteen reels. It's quite as great as anything that has ever been made, not excepting 'The Ten Commandments,' 'The Covered Wagon' or 'The Iron Horse,'—if not greater."

LITTLE SISTER TO THE UNHOLY THREE

Mae Busch is credited with one of her choicest bits of acting in the Tod Browning production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "The Unholy Three," in which Lon Chaney has one of his important roles.

Gladys Hulette in New York

Gladys Hulette whose latest film appearance is in the Preferred Picture, "Go Straight," arrived in New York last Monday. She will remain until Spring.

Exploitation Campaign Puts New Chaplin Comedy Over

BACKED by an extensive and highly novel exploitation campaign, the Warner Bros. production, Syd Chaplin in "The Man On The Box," in the first week of its indefinite run at Warners Theatre, New York, smashed all attendance records this Broadway house has known since it was opened in 1924.

With unusual stunts being performed in the streets, and with newspaper reviewers giving high praise to the attraction, the indications were that the long queues daily forming in front of the ticket window would remain the rule for some time to come.

For the first time in many years Broadway was treated to the sight of hansom cabs—the kind that half-filled the streets in the "rare old, fair and golden days," when motor cars were unknown and traffic rules unnecessary. Six of these were used to exploit "The Man On The Box" and five of the drivers were gray-haired "Jehus" of the type popular on Broadway in the olden times.

The sixth driver to operate a hansom was Alt La Rue, a well known wax figure impersonator, who attracted increased attention because no one was certain whether he was a human being or the automaton he pretended to be. In front of the passengers' seat each cab bore the legend, "The Window Of A Thousand Laughs," while the sides of the various vehicles carried such signs as:

"Broadway's Laffing! Don't let Broadway get a Laff on You!" "1,000 Laffs a Minute!" "Laff Insurance Keeps You Well," "A Joy Ride of Laffs," "1000 Laffs for You! Happiness Insurance," "It Will Get Every Laff You've Got!" "A Laff a Minute—Every Minute!" and "A Real Old-Fashioned Rib-Tickler."

Meanwhile, six men were engaged in front of public schools and in subway stations, varying their places of call on different days, distributing throwaways, sacks of peanuts and buttons. Before the first week was over half the school kids in town were wearing buttons inscribed, "Syd Chaplin in 'The Man On the Box' at Warners Theatre."

SYD CHAPLIN

Whose first Warner Bros. picture, "The Man on the Box," is now playing Broadway.

Evening promenaders on Broadway were checked at 46th Street by the sight of another wax figure impersonator—Mrs. Alt La Rue; garbed as the driver of a hansom and doing the automaton stunt in the window of Weinberg's clothing store. Signs, conspicuously placed, referred the throngs to the attraction at Warners Theatre.

Both the exterior of the theatre and the lobby were especially decorated for this run. The outside front was particularly attractive. A telegram of congratulations which Charlie Chaplin, in New York when the run opened, had sent to Brother Syd, was displayed in exact facsimilie except that it was enlarged to immense size. Covering a large part of the building's front, and flanked by portraits of Charlie and Syd, the telegram was flooded with lights from the marquee. This highly interesting message read:

"CONGRATULATIONS SYD SAW MAN ON BOX LAST NIGHT AND THOUGHT IT WONDERFUL STOP MORE POWER TO THE FAMILY STOP WITH LOVE."

In front of the theatre, too, were two 24-sheet cutouts, while special plaques also bore photographic enlargements of the telegram, with pictures of Syd and Charlie Chaplin. Some of the best reviews which have appeared in New York newspapers were thrown up to massive enlargements, while in the lobby itself were four frames of stills from the production.

The run has been accompanied also by an uncommonly extensive advertising campaign in the New York newspapers. The Warners devoted to "The Man On The Box" three times the normal amount of advertising in the dailies and started the local campaign on the Monday preceding the opening Saturday, instead of on Friday, as ordinarily. In the whole of the advertising care was taken to stress the fact that here was a great laugh picture with a popular star, rather than the title or the fact that this was based on a novel and play.

Yet additional importance was given this production by the launching of the run in a special midnight invitation performance—the first midnight showing arranged by the Warners in their new theatre. This was attended by a distinguished company composed of representatives of the dramatic, artistic and literary worlds; as well as figures high in business and professional life. Despite its sophisticated character, the audience was at times demonstrative in showing its appreciation of the star and the production.

New York Papers Praise New Syd Chaplin Comedy

PICTURE reviewers on the New York papers have been giving warm praise to the Warner Bros.' production, Syd Chaplin in "The Man On The Box," now having an indefinite run at Warners' Theatre, New York. Extracts from some of the comments follow:

New York American:—"I know very little of what constitutes a box-office record, but I do know Syd Chaplin should come very near qualifying for that distinction. The theatre was packed to the doors. The audience laughed loudly at every comedy situation. Warners have enhanced the value of Harold McGrath's story rather than detracted from it. The direction of an involved comedy like this is the most difficult directorial feat in the world. And Chuck Reisner comes out with credit due to the deftness with which he plans his various situations. If you feel in need of a laugh take yourself to Warners' Theatre. It is there waiting for you. As comedies go, I am willing to go on record as saying that 'The Man on the Box' is near the top in the percentage of entertainment and laughter."

The Daily Mirror:—"Syd Chaplin covers himself with glory and sends his audiences into gales of merriment. Even the Sphinx would shriek at Syd Chaplin's canny giftie o' fun, his clever acrobatics and female impersonation. Director Charles ('Chuck') Reisner has sustained the laughs until the final fade-out. He never permits the story to drag. Take our tip and put 'The Man on the Box' on your 'must' list. We're going to see it again with more anticipation than we saw it the first time."

The Evening Journal:—"Syd Chaplin as 'The Man on the Box' is a comedy riot. Yesterday's audiences shrieked at his exploits, and while Harold McGrath's novel was funny, this is one of those rare cases where a picture is an improvement on the original script. Chaplin is an excellent pantomimist. Toward the end of the film he disguises himself as a lady's maid, and if you thought he was good as Charley's Aunt, you'll have a treat in store for you at this masquerade. The gags are spontaneously uproarious. Although it may be high treason to say this, if Syd's famous brother, Charlie, kept to this kind of straight comedy he'd be better off."

Evening Telegram:—" Credit for the smoothness of the production is due in considerable measure to Charles Reisner, the director. With little straining after effect and not a few novel twists, the picture romps along from start to finish in boisterous good humor. As an exponent of the gentle art of pantomiming the younger Chaplin has made quite a niche for himself in this latest comedy of his."

Morning Telegraph:—"It is a pleasant, laugh-provoking farce, with enough merriment to please any audience. Alice Calhoun is quite lovely as the heroine. Helene Costello, daughter of the old-time favorite, Maurice Costello, makes her film debut as Syd's sister. She is very beautiful and her screen success is hereby predicted. ('Chuck') Reisner and David Butler also contribute to the success of the picture. That the film is a success there can be no doubt. It is certainly highly amusing."

The Sun:—"So far as I am concerned, 'The Man on the Box' is every bit as worth while as was the screen version of 'Charley's Aunt,' through which the same Syd Chaplin bounced in petticoats. At yesterday's matinee Warners' Theatre was filled to standing with an audience that seemed to relish the picture highly."

Rogers Announces Cast for Harry Carey Picture

CHARLES R. ROGERS, who is producing a series of Western features starring Harry Carey for release through Pathe, announces that he has assembled the strongest cast ever seen with Carey to support him in his initial subject. Harriette Hammond is named as leading lady and others in the cast are Bert Woodruff, Ruth King, Pat Harmon, Stanton Heck, Raymond Nye and Joseph Gerard.

Miss Hammond began her screen activities and attained fame as a leading Mack Sennett bathing girl. During the last few years she has become a very popular leading lady, dividing her time between studios in the East and West. Her work will be recalled in Marshall Neilan's "Bits of Life," "The Golden Gift," "Confidence," "The Midshipman," etc.

Miss King recently completed her role in Associated Exhibitors' "The Lady From Hell," in which she supported Blanche Sweet and Roy Stewart. Her recent appearances have been in "He Who Gets Slapped," "The Woman" and "The Wheel."

Mr. Harmon dates his screen career 'way back to the days of Kinemacolor. He gives an outstanding performance as the footbaal coach in Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe feature comedy "The Freshman," and has also been seen in several recent two-reel comedies released through Pathe. He has a long list of feature characterizations to his credit.

Bert Woodruff is a veteran of the films who has appeared for all the leading filmmakers. One of his best characterizations was in "The Rosary."

Raymond Nye began his screen work with Fox, ten years ago, and has continued before the camera ever since.

Joseph Gerard is another one of the leading supporting artists. The cast will be augmented as production progresses.

Sol Polito, A. S. C., one of the best of the cameramen, who has photographed a number of the Harry Carey productions, has been resigned.

The story for the first Carey-Pathe feature is an adaptation of "Buck Up," a story by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven.

Scott Dunlap is directing the organization which is making its studio headquarters at Universal City.

Marguerite De La Motte Home

Marguerite De La Motte, whose work in "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work" has won recent critical approval, has returned to the West Coast after a fortnight's vacation in New York. While here she attended the first public presentation of this Preferred Picture, presented by B. P. Schulberg and directed by Marcel DeSano.

CHARLES R. ROGERS

The producer of a series of Harry Carey "Westerns" for Pathe release, the first of which will be "Buck Up."

Pressbook for "Headlines" Follows Newspaper Style

THE ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS pressbook for "Headlines," just off the press, is a complete newspaper in every respect, containing all the features of a daily publication and made up to resemble a newspaper.

The covers are printed in tinted ink to give a rotogravure effect and the scenes from the production, the story of which is bound up with the life on a metropolitan paper, have captions written similar to those on illustrated papers. Across the top of page one is a logotype which is similar to those used on newspapers.

Page three opens up with some big headlines covering the story synopsis and newsy events about the picture. Right through the book are publicity stories, advertisements, pictures, cartoons, etc., resembling those in daily publications. There is financial news, covering the box-office, angle for exhibitors, editorials, The Inquiring Reporter, Woman's Page, Ship News, Sporting News, Dramatic Page, which contains reviews of "Headlines," Views of the Press, Advice to the Lovelorn, Want Ad Section, Ye Olde Towne Gossip, Answer Man and other features of a daily newspaper.

The exploitation pages are made to resemble a two-page spread of a department store and are headed "Business Builders Unlimited." A full page advertisement is the replica of a newspaper feature which tells a story in pictures. There are advertising punch lines under the various scenes.

Part of the background for "Headlines" is the city room of the New York World and many of the big line-up of publicity stories cover interesting phases of the newspaper profession which have a connection with the story. Due to the fact that "Headlines" is a newspaper story, there is a natural tie-up with the newspaper profession and publications throughout the country are likely to use more of the material than they would on a drama of another type.

Alice Joyce is starred in "Headlines," while Malcolm McGregor and Virginia Lee Corbin head the balance of an excellent cast.

The "Headlines" pressbook was supervised by S. Barret McCormick, who has turned out several other outstanding showman books within the last few months.

A LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Clarence Brown, director of "The Lone Eagle" for United Artists, is American; Vilma Banky, leading woman, is Hungarian; Rudolph Valentino, star, is Italian, and it's a Russian picture.

"Stella Dallas" Premiere At Apollo, New York, November 15

"STELLA DALLAS," Samuel Goldwyn's latest production, directed by Henry King, will have its world's premiere presentation in a legitimate New York house when it opens at the Apollo Theatre, November 15. It is a United Artists picture.

Closing of the theatre negotiations marks the climax of a series of interesting events in conjunction with "Stella Dallas" that date back over a year and a half. About that time Mr. Goldwyn outbid all other producers and purchased the screen rights to Olive Higgins Prouty's best seller novel, which first appeared as a serial in the American Magazine.

Then began the search for the ideal director best suited by temperament and background to direct this human story, vivid with emotional climaxes. Henry King who had read the story, and believing it to be one of outstanding merit, came to the producer and requested the privilege of directing it. Henry King also directed "Tol'able David," "The White Sister" and "Twenty-three and One-half Hours Leave." Over four months was spent by Frances Marion, who has written all the scripts for Mr. Goldwyn's independent productions, in adapting the novel for the screen.

In the selection of the cast, seventy-two candidates of both stage and screen were tried and tested for the leading role before Belle Bennett, a comparative unknown, was awarded this big screen plum.

Lois Moran, the "unsophisticated and unmodernized child wonder," was chosen to play Laurel, the daughter, and according to Mrs. Prouty, the authoress of the novel, Lois Moran perfectly meets all the requirements of that strange and beautiful child.

Ronald Colman, the magnetic lover of the screen, Alice Joyce, Jean Hersholt, well known character actor, and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., complete the balance of the all-star cast.

WILLIAM JAMES CRAFT

The director of the Bob Custer "Westerns" for Film Booking Offices of America, Inc., is demonstrating his ability to freshen up this particular type of pictures

ALBERT SYDNEY HOWSON

The new head of the literary department of Warner Bros. has a wide background of varying experiences in the literary field back of him. Big things are expected during his administration.

Titles Twisted—Tornado Threatens!

Dated October tenth, Moving Picture World sallied forth to the service of the industry it so ably represents.

There was a calm—but you know the saying about calms! Suddenly two telephones began to ring in the editorial office of this publication—then a third took up the call.

And that wasn't anything but the start.

Never did we realize how popular, how well friended were Messrs. William James Craft and Albert Sydney Howson.

One after another their respective friends blew us up because we had published their respective photographs with the captions transposed.

We're sorry—so is the proof reader and the make-up who pulled the "bone." We give the pictures to you again as they should be captioned. Mr. Craft, meet Mr. Howson. And 'excuseit, please.

GEORGE NARDELLI

"Plastic Age" Ready

The B. P. Schulberg Picture From the Percy Marks Novel Has Star Cast

An advance audience of three million persons, already reached by Percy Marks' novel, "The Plastic Age," attests the wide appeal of the Preferred screen version of this famous college story just completed by B. P. Schulberg.

"The Plastic Age" in film form is now ready for first runs. It was directed by Wesley Ruggles, with the featured roles filled by Clara Bow and Donald Keith. The supporting cast includes Mary Alden, Henry B. Walthall, Gilbert Roland, Joan Standing, David Butler and J. Gordon Edwards, Jr.

MacIntyre Made Production Head

In order to cope with his augmented production activities, Samuel Goldwyn, independent producer, has engaged Robert D. MacIntyre as production manager.

Mr. MacIntyre, who has ben casting director for Metro-Goldwyn for the past four years, assumes his new duties with Samuel Goldwyn immediately and will supervise the three production units under Mr. Goldwyn's sponsorship, viz. George Fitzmaurice productions, Potash & Perlmutter productions and the Henry King productions.

Signs Contract

Louis B. Mayer has signed Alice D. G. Miller on a new long term contract to write continuities exclusively for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Miller has been one of the feature writers with the M.-G.-M. organization ever since the merger more than a year and a half ago. Listed among her successes are: "So This is Marriage," "Lady of the Night," "The Exquisite Sinner," "Pretty Ladies," and "Dance Madness."

LILYAN TASHMAN

This lovely Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player is featured with Pauline Starke and Charles Ray in Robert Z. Leonard's production, "A Little Bit of Broadway."

Chicago Dailies Accord Pathe's "The Freshman" Editorial Note

CHICAGO dailies have accorded "The Freshman," Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe feature now enjoying a run at the Roosevelt Theatre in the Windy City, special editorial comment as well as laudable reviews in the regular photoplay departments.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner published the following editorial about Lloyd and the Roosevelt showing:

"Across a loop theatre—the Roosevelt—is a sign, 'Laugh and Live Longer!' Not a bad slogan. When a theatre shows pictures that make possible longer, louder laughter at clean, bright comedy, it is doing more than merely making money. And when a comedian sets his ambition on creating incidents of clean, wholesome, laugh-making quality, he is doing more than merely earning a handsome living."

Mae Tinee in the Chicago Daily Tribune said:

"I just love 'The Freshman'! Haven't seen its like in good, clean, original, spontaneously funny entertainment for an aeon—more or less. Do you know that you can almost bank on Harold Lloyd to turn out winners, and it doesn't take him three years, either. This time you see him in the humorously pitiful guise of what the press notices call a 'Sport model freshman'—and I know of no better description."

Polly Wood in the Chicago Herald and Examiner said:

"Gloom doesn't stand a chance against the line plunges of Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman.' As the dumb hero of this comedy, Harold does his darndest for dear old Tate, and the final score is: Gloom, 0; Joy, 100."

Bob Reel in the Chicago Evening American said:

"Harold Lloyd's horn-rimmed glasses this time surround the eyes of one of the funniest of the many college boobs, who, although they do not attempt to give—or, at any rate, seldom succeed in giving—a true picture of campus life, have essayed to enliven an hour in the theatre. This overdone freshman is a genuine comic spectacle—or pair of spectacles."

Virginia Dale in the Chicago Daily Journal said:

"Harold Lloyd, after the fashion of Chaplin, gets his fun from being downtrodden—not in any big tragic way, but in the simple, heart-rending moments that come to most of us."

"Prince of Broadway" Stars George Walsh for Chadwick

THE master print of George Walsh's third starring vehicle for Chadwick Pictures Corporation, "The Prince of Broadway," has reached the New York office of the company. Leon Loe of Chadwick, who adapted and titled "The Wizard of Oz" for the screen, will supervise the writing of the titles for the fight picture. Co-operating with Mr. Leo are five prominent newspaper columnists and two sporting editors of popular New York papers.

Realism will be the keynote of the entire film, and, together with clever acting and wording, there is no doubt but that "The Prince" will receive a royal welcome.

A number of prize ring luminaries head an altogether perfect cast. From the "roped-in square" we have James Jeffries, former world heavyweight champion; Ad Wolgast, Frankie Genaro, Capt. Bob Roper, Tommy Ryan and Gene Delmont. The popular Leach Cross also appears in the film.

The professional cast includes Alyce Mills, in the role of Nancy Lee. Miss Mills plays the feminine lead opposite George Walsh. Freeman Wood plays the part of the theatrical promoter, Wade Turner; Frank Campeau, well-known character man of the screen; and Alma Bennett, the dark-eyed beauty, conclude a superb cast.

"The Prince of Broadway" was personally supervised by Hampton Del Ruth, and it is another link in the chain of Chadwick successes. The picture is a worthy addition to the list of Chadwick successes, such as "Paint and Powder," the Hunt Stromberg special; "The Perfect Clown," starring Larry Semon, directed by Fred Newmeyer; "American Pluck," and "Blue Blood," the two preceding George Walsh successes, and "The Unchastened Woman," Theda Bara's return picture after five years of retirement.

"The Other Woman's Story"

B. P. Schulberg's picturization of a famous American divorce suit, "The Other Woman's Story" will be next on his company's release schedule, being delivered to first runs on October 16.

"Madam Behave"

To further improve the box office value of the title of the forthcoming Al Christie feature in which Julian Eltinge will be presented in his famous feminine characterization, the production will be released as "Madam Behave" instead of its original title, "Madam Lucy."

LOTS OF AMERICANS VANISH

But in Paramount's "The Vanishing American" Richard Dix essays the role of an American Indian, and, supported by Lois Wilson and a splendid cast, this offering should prove one of the outstanding pictures of 1925. The picture is based on a Zane Grey story, with George B. Seitz at the megaphone.

A "WIFE" TITLE THAT SHOULD GET FRIEND HUSBAND, TOO

"The Wife Who Wasn't Wanted!" Page all the "In-Laws." Friend Husband is on the well-known "pan"! Warner Bros have a good selling title for this picture. The fascinating Irene Rich is the star, and she is ably supported by Huntley Gordon John Harron and Gayne Whitman.

Big Steel Making Scenes Feature of "Steel Preferred"

SOMETHING of a filming record was established when director James Hogan and his "Steel Preferred" company and technical staff filmed nearly two hundred scenes for this picture in the Pittsburgh steel mills in exactly ten working days under the many handicaps that accompany the filming of scenes away from the studio. Working right alongside of the big bessemer furnaces with their tons upon tons of molten steel, enacting scenes on and around the ladle trains which transport the flaming loads of liquid metal to and fro, and staging important sequences with the assistance of hundreds of steel workers was all accomplished without delay and without loss to the gigantic steel mills who cooperated with the picture company.

William Boyd, Walter Long, Nigel Barrie and William V. Mong, who portray steel workers in the picture, were all initiated into the wonders of steel milling in advance of actual filming and on the screen give such realistic portrayals that in the first "rushes" screened for Metropolitan studio executives, it was difficult in many of the scenes, to distinguish them from the regular steel mill workers.

"Steel Preferred" is a romance of the world's largest industry and is being filmed from the novel of the same name by Herschel S. Hall built around his "Wally Gay" stories published in the Saturday Evening Post. Vera Reynolds, Hobart Bosworth, Charles Murray, Helene Sullivan and Herbert Prior are other members of the cast which is now working at the Metropolitan Studios, where the picture is being completed for early release through Producers Distributing Corp.

Engage Production Managers

One for Each Unit of Metropolitan Pictures To Be New Policy

With "Simon the Jester" in the cutting room, the "Steel Preferred" company now working at the studio after its long location trip to the Pittsburgh steel mills, the "Rocking Moon" company on its way to Alaska and preparations under way for the filming of "The Million Dollar Handicap," Production Manager George Bertholon of the Metropolitan Studios, is finding his hands more than full. As a result he is now lining up a staff of assistant production managers, one of which will be assigned to each unit, producing the Producers Distributing Corp. releases.

E. J. Babille, recently with Cosmopolitan Productions, has been assigned to the "Rocking Moon" company, and Bob Ross, in the industry fourteen years, has taken charge of the "Steel Preferred" Company.

Additional unit production managers will be engaged as fast as new pictures go into production, thus keeping step with the expanding program recently outlined by General Manager William Sistrom and John C. Flinn, president of the company.

Praise for Warner Bros.

Advertising Co-operation With Exhibitors Appreciated in Pawtucket

Warm praise of Warner Bros. for the extraordinary service extended to exhibitors in the Warner national advertising campaign is contained in a letter received from Harry F. Storin, manager of the Leroy Theatre Company, Pawtucket, R. I. Acknowledging receipt of a Warner advertising bond, the organization's pledge that the amount and character of the advertising placed will be exactly in accordance with the plan outlined, Storin says:

"This is splendid co-operation, inasmuch as you are coming right on 'our front porch' to ballyhoo."

Storin says that he has had special lobby cards made from the Warner page advertisements on Ernst Lubitsch and John Barrymore, for use as decorations. In the Leroy Theatre he is running a slide calling attention to the publication by the Pawtucket Times of the serialization of the Warner production, "The Limited Mail." The use of fiction in such a form is said to be new to the Times.

Many Historical Shots Seen in Vignola's "Fifth Avenue"

ROBERT VIGNOLA and his company, filming the A. H. Sebestian production, "Fifth Avenue," left New York City for Hollywood, this week after securing scenes of every point of interest on America's most aristocratic business and residential thoroughfare and, in addition, something in the nature of a pleasing novelty, in the discovery and the filming of a group of models.

In addition to this rare beauty find, Vignola directed shots of such historic and imposing structures as; the First Presbyterian Church which was built in 1716, St. Patrick's Cathedral, the Washington Arch, the Public Library, and the Vanderbilt, Carnegie, Frick, Gould and Wanamaker mansions.

The scenes of Fifth Avenue as they will be arranged in the production, will run from the quaint Latin quarter of Greenwich Village at the southern end of the avenue, on through the business section, into the stretch of magnificent mansions and end in the congested new Ghetto at the northern extremity of the world-famous street. In their range they will picture poverty rubbing elbows with luxury, culture living beside crudity, and the mighty waves of commerce beating on the very doorsteps of the staid, dignified homes of the aristocracy.

With this scenic arrangement, "Fifth Avenue" should be a most unusual pictorial document as well as a melodramatic romance founded on Arthur Stringer's story as published in the Saturday Evening Post.

Los Angeles Premiere

The world premiere of Marion Davies in "Lights of Old Broadway" will take place on October 31st at the Loew State Theatre, Los Angeles. This production represents Miss Davies' first starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"The Vanishing American" Given World Premiere in San Francisco

"THE VANISHING AMERICAN" in its world premiere has been given such a tremendous reception by the San Francisco public and has won such glowing tributes from the critics that it is established as one of the great pictures of history.

The opening day's business shattered all house records for the St. Francis theatre, and the audience's reception was so favorable that the second day's business topped the first day's by a wide margin.

The Bulletin says: "Magnificent in its setting, powerful in its realism, 'The Vanishing American' is more than a motion picture; it is an artistic historical chronicle of the American Indian; it tells of his rise and fall, and the picture is given just enough of romantic fiction to intensify interest and help impress indelibly upon the mind a true story of a race rapidly disappearing from the face of the earth."

The Chronicle calls the picture "an epic of the Indian, his beginnings, his rise to power and glory, his fall and the tragic qualities of his existence today."

The Herald says: "The credit for the success of 'The Vanishing American'—and it is unqualifiedly a success—must go to George B. Seitz, its director. The picture is superb. 'The Vanishing American' is destined to achieve general popularity and is an important link in the chain of historical drama toward which picture producers are turning nowadays for their greater efforts."

The Call says: "Perhaps the most thrillingly picturesque photography as yet displayed on the motion picture screen, backed up by a story of unusual pith and interest, to say nothing of its coherence, consistency and pathos, is to be seen in the world premiere screening of Zane Grey's powerful tale of the Great Southwest entitled 'The Vanishing American.' The writer sat enthralled for upwards of 100 moments while this screen story of the semi-final chapters of the supremacy of the American Indian of the continent over which his forbears once held undisputed sway was unfolded before our eyes."

New Buck Jones Film

"The Desert's Price" Now in Production—Based on Popular Novel

Buck Jones, Fox star, appears to know no limit when he starts to work. He rushed from the set where he had just finished "A Man Four Square," directed by R. William Neill, to start on "The Desert's Price," which is being directed by W. S. VanDyke. Both productions are adapted from novels written by William MacLeod Raine. Charles Darnton wrote the scenario for "The Desert's Price." Both of these tales are stories of the plains, fitting vehicles for the rugged acting of Buck Jones.

"A Man Four Square" will be released December 13, and "The Desert's Price" is scheduled for January 31.

Change in Gotham Schedule

Re-Arrangement Will Strengthen Program and Add Greater Variety

Announcement is made from the New York offices of Gotham Productions that a realignment of releases has been made which will have a tendency to further strengthen the program and add greater variety. This does not mean that the original line-up will be changed in any way. The productions announced will be made as scheduled and there has been but one change in the program, the substitution of "The Phantom of the Forest" with "Thunder" the Marvel Dog in place of "The Forest of Destiny.'"

Under the new release schedule "One of the Bravest," the big fire picture starring Ralph Lewis, will be the November release in place of "The Shadow on the Wall," the mystery drama which will be released for December. "The Phantom of the Forest" will be put out in January, and the third "Thunder'" picture, "The Sign of the Claw," will be the twelfth release as this is a mystery story and thus it is removed as far as possible from "The Shadow on the Wall."

Columbia to Nationalize Their Franchise Holders

AT A special meeting held in New York, attended by most of the exchange men who are franchise holders of Columbia Pictures Corporation, definite plans were made whereby the nationalizing of these exchanges would be brought about within a short time.

Messrs. Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn, president and treasurer of Columbia, stated that exchanges handling Columbia product throughout this country have felt the need of forming a national distributing organization, and at this time it was suggested that the activities of these exchanges be restricted to such product as will be made by Columbia for the coming season.

Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt did not feel free to discuss in detail the plan that had been adopted but did commit themselves to the extent of saying that every franchise holder at this meeting favored this idea and that definite steps are being taken to work out the plan so that it will bring about the simultaneous release of Columbia Pictures throughout the United States and enable Columbia to launch a big advertising campaign in both newspapers, trade journals and magazines.

Columbia was complimented regarding the strides made in quality of product and also on the fact that at this time it has only a few more pictures to be made to complete the eighteen originally scheduled and promised.

A general meeting of all franchise holders of Columbia will be held again immediately upon the arrival of Harry Cohn in New York, which will be some time during October, and at that time the plan of the national system of Columbia distributors will be worked out in detail and put in execution, and steps immediately taken to acquire additional stories, players and directors to definitely determine the number of pictures to be made for the next season.

THREE FEATURES ON THE CHADWICK PROGRAM.—Charles Ray in "Sweet Adeline," Elaine Hammerstein in "Paint and Powder," Theda Bara in "The Unchastened Woman."

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

Albany Theatres Double Advertising

The Clinton Square and the Leland theatres in Albany, going after business in a smashing way this fall, have nearly doubled their newspaper advertising during the last two or three weeks. Alex Sayles, manager of the houses, is partly responsible, for Mr. Sayles is an old time newspaperman. "The Iron Horse" gets under way at the Leland on October 12, and more newspaper space will be used than ever before.

Tony Veiller, newly appointed manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, had a tough time last week with the weather as variable as the wind, and ushers who were, it is said, not entirely satisfactory. As a result, patrons of the theatre sat at least one night with upturned collars, while two ushers completed their duties on Saturday, with another said to be slated to go. Tom Clark, a newcomer, however, came to the rescue, and with Uly S. Hill's usual good judgment, being named as assistant manager of the Mark Strand, worked like a veteran in handling the crowds that thronged the theatre during the week.

Exhibitors who trip the light fantastic will be interested to know that Film Row in Albany is planning a Hallowe'en masquerade party at the Hotel Kenmore on the night of October 3. J. H. Macintyre is chairman of the entertainment committee.

Fred Mausert, a prince of good fellows among the exhibitors of New York State, and whose house, "The State," was recently opened in Glens Falls, is charging 10 and 15 cents. He has booked practically all of the F. B. O. and Universal product, and while awaiting the arrival of new chairs is being forced to use church pews.

John Garry, manager of the Empire in Glens Falls, had a toohache last week, and being somewhat of a stranger in the city where he is now located, he lost little or no time in making his way straight to Albany to consult a dentist. Alex Sayles, who looks after Mr. Buckley's houses in Albany, went to Glens Falls to substitute for Mr. Garry on Sunday. The Empire, by the way, will provide plenty of good entertainment for Glens Falls, for "Graustark" and "The Scarlet West" will each run for three days, while "The Iron Horse" and "The Ten Commandments" will each run for four days.

As a host, C. H. Buckley, runing the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany and the Empire in Glens Falls, left nothing to be desired the other night, when Johnny Hines hit town for a personal appearance in connection with one of his pictures being shown at the Clinton Square Theatre. Mr. Buckley was right on hand at the depot when Mr. Hines alighted from the train and later entertained at a dinner at the Hotel Ten Eyck.

Instead of starting on October 11, as was first planned, the anniversary week at the Griswold in Troy will get under way on October 18. In the meantime, Jake Golden, manager of the theatre, is installing new seats and supervising the recarpeting of the house.

The Family Theatre in Burnt Hills, a hamlet outside of Schenectady, will be run this winter by the Knights of Pythias, with Mr. Hammond, an employee of the General Electric Works, doing the booking.

Between milking—milking means getting up at 4 A. M.—and running the Temple Theatre in Richmondville, Exhibitor Snyder, or Milkman Snyder pays no attention to such a thing as a union day. He runs a dairy farm, and his efforts with the theatre have been such that the Odd Fellows of the village, with "Doc" Frazier doing the booking, have been able to bring the mortgage down to $500 or less.

Mike Freedman, formerly associated with William Shirley of Schenectady, blossomed forth as a full-fledged exhibitor last Sunday when he reopened the Rialto, a 400-seat house that had been closed for six months, using "The Making of O'Malley" as the feature. Mr. Freedman also owns the Woodlawn in Schenectady, which Mrs. Ida D. Eisenberg will run for at least some little time to come.

Herman Vineberg, recently named manager of the Albany and Regent theatres in Albany, should become a very good customer for the shoe dealers of the Capital City. The two theatres are located about a mile apart, and Mr. Vineberg travels between the two once or twice a day.

Clyde Allen of Antwerp, running the Casino there, struck Albany the other day as a delegate to the State Convention of Kiwanis Clubs. Antwerp is one of the cheese centers of the country, and so when Mr. Allen came to Albany he brought with him a box of assorted cheese for C. R. Halligan of the Universal exchange.

"The Gold Rush" drew such crowds last week in Utica that the Majestic, run by Nathan Robbins, secured an extension of the engagement and gave five or six more days to the picture.

James Roach, managing the Farley houses in Schenectady, played to enormous business last week with "The Ten Commandments," holding the picture for an extra day, with a ten-piece orchestra furnishing the music and with no advance in prices.

A. W. Goodman, who runs the Orpheum in Utica and likewise manages one of the big stores of the city, is planning to take over another theatre soon. Like a hen on a hot griddle, "Pop" Linton is working right with his men these days, hustling along his new theatre in Utica.

Sol Manheimer of Watertown, is patiently awaiting the outcome of negotiations between the Robbins people and Famous Players, and doing but short booking for the Palace and Antique.

No wonder Meyer Schine has such a beautifully furnished home in Gloversville. His father-in-law runs the leading furniture store there. Mr. Schine was in Boston and New York during the past week.

Joe Kallet, runing the Strand in Rome, has probably had more new automobiles this summer than any exhibitor in all New York State. He buys a new car, runs it a couple thousand miles and then turns it in for another. He is said to have nearly reached a dozen different cars since last spring.

Grange Hall in Granville is now running two nights a week with Arthur Austin, former manager of the Pember, in charge. James Rose, owner of six theatres in this section, has the sympathy of his friends these days in his wife's illness. Sam Hochstim of the Star in Hudson was in town during the week.

There was one time when William Shirley of Schenectady was almost a commuter between that city and New York. But those days are as nothing with the present, for one week finds Mr. Shirley in Florida and the next back in Schenectady. Mr. Shirley arrived back from the South on Sunday, and with Mrs. Shirley in tow left the next day for Buffalo, to spend a week with his father and mother. Real estate profits also are responsible for Mrs. Shirley driving a brand new Packard club coupe.

B. W. Griffin, who runs the Lyceum in Red Hook and also has an ice cream and soft drink establishment, found himself in hot water last week when the building housing the latter establishment was sold over his head to a New York City man. Now Mr. Griffin is endeavoring to buy it from its new owner.

The Victory of Cambridge has been leased by William Curry, possession October 5, the house to run two nights a week.

W. W. Farley of the Farash Amusement Company, is ill at his home in Albany. John A. Gillis took over the Star in Salem on October 1. J. B. Harte of the Harte Theatre, Bennington, Vt., plans to leave soon for Florida. H. C. McNamara of Valatie will open his new theatre in that village the latter part of October. The Park Theatre in Glens Falls announced last week a cut-rate admission for children of 14 years and under, at matinees, beginning at 3:50 o'clock each day with a 10-cent admission.

The Biter Bit

"Sure and it's a foine police department ye are," Art Regan has remarked to the police of Ponca City, Okla., often recently. Art runs three theatres in Ponca City and he hasn't understood why the police didn't enforce the law prohibiting parking cars in front of them. For that matter nobody else did understand.

A few days ago, after a hurried trip from a neighboring city, Art parked his car in front of one of his theatres. Returning to it from the theatre, he found a notice telling him to call at the police station. He did—and paid a five dollar fine.

But leave it to Art in an emergency. "Me compliments to our worthy police department." he told the judge. "Sure and I hope they don't stop pinching them parkers."

Harry Crandall Seeks Baltimore Site

Harry M. Crandall, prominent Washington, D. C. exhibitor, is negotiating for a large piece of property located in the business district on which he will build a large theatre. This is an independent move by Mr. Crandall and will have no connection with the recently-formed Stanley-Crandall Company.

Last week Arthur Price purchased an interest in the Blue Bell Theatre, in which Jack Whittle and Harry Mann are interested. This week Arthur Price and Jack Whittle sold out their interests to Harry Mann. What's going to happen next week?

Mary Wasolowski has sold her Sunset Theatre on South Charles Street to a local bank for $25,000.

Benjamin Dishner, of the Pictorial Theatre, motored to Philadelphia with his family last Sunday and reports a pleasant trip.

Ralph Martin, manager of the Broadway Theatre, has returned from his vacation and is ready for work. He spent most of his time fishing, and he claims the fish he caught were of enormous size, but the boys think it is another fish story.

The Century Theatre has opened its roof garden and Mr. Whitehurst reports business good from the ground up. The theatre will hold a special show in the morning on October 9 for women only.

Philomena Cavanaugh has been elected first vice-president; Thomas Reese, second vice-president; Helen Douris, social secretary; Dr. William Stapleton, executive secretary and Margaret Crowley, recording secretary. Directors are: Al Beckerich, manager, Loew's State; Basil Brady, manager, Pathe exchange; Dr. Joseph Burke, William J. Conners, Jr., the Rev. Charles Duffy, Vincent R. McFaul, managing director, Shea's Hippodrome; Garry McGarry, John R. Oishei, Mayor Frank X. Schwab, John Laughlin, Mae Forrestel, Joseph Gavin, Clayton Sheehan, district manager, Fox Film company; Harry Yates, Mrs. Ruth Ashley Smith, Mrs. Orson Yeager, Alice Ryan, P. T. O'Connor, the Rev. C. J. Sloan, Mrs. J. J. Zimmerman, Mrs. John Lascelles and John Kloepfer.

It is reported that the Yellen family of Buffalo, of which Jack Yellen of popular song fame is a member, is interested in a new picture theatre soon to be built in Tonawanda, N. Y. Well, if Jack does his stuff at each performance they ought to do business.

George Eastman and party, after hunting in Alaska and British Columbia, will arrive back in Rochester on October 11, according to word received from the "fillum magnate." Good weather and fine hunting were encountered by the group which is made up of Mr. Eastman, the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Norton and Dr. Albert D. Kaiser. The party has been gone about two months.

The return of regular time has brought a noticeable increase in business in Western New York picture theatres. Daylight saving is a terrible thing for exhibitors, expecially in Buffalo. Many of the towns, however, do not recognize it and profit accordingly.

Hiding in the cellar of the Capitol Theatre, Syracuse, the other night, burglars waited until the performance was over and then after the place had been closed for the night, looted the house. The thieves left through the front door of the theatre, which was found open later by a patrolman. Little of value was stolen.

George T. Cruzen, manager of the Palace Theatre in Lockport, N. Y., will inaugurate a series of Saturday morning programs for children similar to those presented by the Eastman in Rochester. The Lockport programs will begin October 10. Mr. Cruzen, by the way, has engaged Ernest Whistler, former conductor of the Strand Theatre orchestra in Niagara Falls as the leader of the Palace orchestra. Mr. Whistler has several of the men who were with him at the Strand, which is one of the Cataract City houses that refused to give in to the demands for increased salary on the part of the musicians' union.

The little Hippodrome and Keith's theatres in lower Main street, Buffalo, are having a new fall dress put on their fronts, adding about 100 per cent. improvement in looks.

Three new specially built Simplex machines will be installed in the new Shea Buffalo Theatre by the Becker Theatre Supply Company of Buffalo. A Brenkert double dissolver, a Brenkert color effect machine and a Dalite high intensity screen will be among the other equipment items to be installed.

Winnipeg Man Offers Olden Entertainers

When "The Gold Rush" opened at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, September 28, Manager H. M. Thomas advertised for "all the old-time singers, dancers and musicians I can find" for an atmospheric prologue to accompany the presentations. A large number of real old-timers took part in a regular old-fashioned mining camp dance hall scene and made a real hit.

Steve Ladas of Ottawa, Ontario, a prominent local merchant, has entered into an arrangement with Montreal interests to take over the lease of the Family Theatre, Ottawa, one of the two local moving picture halls operated for years by the late Harry Brouse of First National fame. The family, which is a downtown theatre, is to be renamed and will be reopened after extensive renovating.

The Coleman Electric Company, formerly at 21 Dundas street east, Toronto, is now situated in a new and larger premises at 258 Victoria street, Toronto, where the company is displaying various Powers, Motiograph and other projectors and other equipment for which it is Canadian distributor.

Manager Dave Coplan of the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, a large cinema of the Canadian Capital, is now issuing a weekly house organ which is bright and newsy. It is of a type similar to the printed program of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis. The Imperial now has an increased orchestra under the direction of Conductor Beaudry. In various ways, Manager Coplan has been making it "snappy."

Maurice Milligan, Canadian manager for Paramount, has been spending recent weeks at Winnipeg and in the Canadian Middle West in the interests of Famous-Lasky Film Service. Mr. Milligan formerly lived in Winnipeg.

J. M. Franklin of Ottawa, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, is having a busy time. What with directing the Keith house with its stand-up patrons every night, he is now organizing the annual Rotary Club musical show, Mr. Franklin being the chairman of the committee supervising the feature.

For the Canadian premiere of "The Knockout," a First National release starring Milton Sills and Lorna Duveen, which was made in the heart of the lumbering country to the north of Ottawa, about 50 prominent government officials, lumber kings and newspaper reviewers were invited by Manager Don Stapleton to the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, for the regular performance Saturday evening, October 3, a section being reserved for the invited guests.

Although his Hollywood Theatre is less than a year old, Sam Pylet, veteran Milwaukee showman, already is planning for an addition which will increase its seating capacity from 800 to 1,400. Work on the addition, according to Pylet, will start in the spring. All of the seats will be on the main floor. Besides increasing the seating capacity, Pylet will build an addition story and add to the ground floor to accommodate several stores and apartments. Pylet recently obtained an option on property in Sherwood, Milwaukee's most exclusive suburb, where he hopes soon to erect another house. Details have not yet been worked out, however, it is announced.

A new front has just been installed at the Idlehour, South Side Milwaukee house belonging to Max Krofta.

Jerome Casper, for eleven years connected with the Rowland and Clark Theatres of Pittsburgh, has been forced to resign owing to ill health. Mr. Casper plans taking a long rset. He officiated as manager of various of the R. & C. theatres, and more recently was stationed in the executive offices of the company. For three consecutive years Mr. Casper served as President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania.

Anthony Jim, well-known local exhibitor, on October 1, added two more theatres to his rapidly-growing list. Jim's latest acquisitions are the only two theatres in Carrick, the Brentwood and the Carrick. The former house was owned by Daniel Feick and the latter by John Davis. Other theatres owned by Jim are the Lyric and Coraopolis at Coraopolis, the Copeland, North Braddock and the Strand, Woodlawn. He is also erecting a new theatre in the last-named town.

Among the recent out-of-town exhibitor visitors to Pittsburgh's Film Row were: J. George Schweitzer, Titusville; Theodore Mikalowsky, Masontown; C. E. Gable, Sharpsville; Walter Silverberg, Greenville; Maurice Baum, State College; C. B. Pascoe, Somerset; Carl Becker, Butler and Mike Manos, Greensburg.

Radio Big Aid to Chicago Theatres

Balaban & Katz have appointed J. C. Ryan, brother of Quinn Ryan, announced on the Chicago Tribune WGN station, as director of radio activities of the organization. The circuit is now broadcasting through four of the leading stations in the city and is building a fine studio in the Uptown Theatre for use of Station WEBH, which will broadcast the entire program of the house every Tuesday evening. The Chicago Theatre program is broadcasted at the first show each Sunday by Quinn Ryan, of the WGN staff, and the Daily News station WMAQ broadcasts an organ recital each evening from the Chicago Theatre from 6 to 6:30. Every Saturday night, from 9 to 10, a program is sent out from the little Chicago Theatre studio in the Chicago Theatre Building, and KYW, Westinghouse station, broadcasts the Paul Ash program from the McVickers Theatre Tuesday and Friday nights of each week.

Allen Bradley will discontinue the operation of the Lyric Theatre at Edinburg and will open the Masonic Temple Hall as a movie theatre. He will install a fine pipe organ in the building and make other improvements, bringing the structure up-to-date for pictures.

George Burdick, manager of the American Theatre on Ashland Boulevard, in co-operation with the new Weiboldt department store there, will stage a three-day fashion show at the theatre early in October.

The new Paradise Theatre, projected by Cooney Brothers for the Crawford Avenue district, will seat about 4,000.

U. J. Hermann, manager of the Cort Theatre on Dearborn Street, says that the house is for sale at $750,000.

George Burdick, manager of the American Theatre on Ashland Boulevard, has introduced the Charleston contest to boost business, and reports the contest nights have brought capacity business. He was made vice-chairman of the West Town celebration that was held in honor of the opening of the Weiboldt Company, and thousands of people were brought to that district by the celebration.

Will Hollander, publicity director of Balaban & Katz, and Harry Marks, supervisor of theatres of the corporation, have gone to Boston to attend the opening of the new Metropolitan Theatre in that city. They are expected back early next week.

The cool weather of the past week has increased the attendance of the outlying theatres in the residence sections of the city.

Paul Ash, leader of the McVicker Theatre programs, has added the supervision of the new jazz program of the Pantheon Theatre on the North Side and in addition is directing the Paul Ash Night Club on Michigan Avenue. It keeps him busy these days.

Julius Goodman and Louis Harrison, well known to the trade, have bought a site at 175th Street and Kedzie Avenue for $163,800 and intend to develop the property in the spring.

The Avendale and Logan Square Business Men's associations have united to make plans for a big festival to celebrate the opening on October 12 of the new $2,000,000 Harding Theatre of Lubliner & Trinz, at Milwaukee Avenue and Sawyer Street. The celebration is planned to last a week.

Jack E. Dwork, James H. Pickard and William Jacobs have organized the Pickard Enterprises, with offices at 56 West Randolph Street, to operate theatres and theatre enterprises.

The Pantheon Theatre on Sheridan Road opened last week with Siggie and his jazz orchestra as the headliners with the film bills, and the reports from Sheridan Road indicate capacity business for the week.

Cincinnati Films Held For Extended Runs

Holding pictures for extended runs seems to be one of the favorite indoor sports at some of the Cincinnati, Ohio, theatres, as witnesseth: The Lyric is in its third week of "The Lost World," while the Walnut is li ewise playing "The Freshman" for the third consecutive week, both pictures still going strong and promising to brea attendance records at the respective houses, which are a part of the Libson chain.

The entire house staff, as also members of the orchestra, at the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, appeared in gay colored black and orange striped jackets as the new season opened, which uniforms will be the official regalia at this house henceforth.

The Boulevard Theatre, Vine street and Central parkway, Cincinnati, Ohio, has been purchased by the Seton Realty Company, presumably for a client. No particulars have been given out as to any changes in the property.

Maysville, Ky., is to have a new theatre to be built by A. M. Potts, who now operates the Eastland Theatre in that city.

The Grand Theatre, located on Broad street, at Elyria, Ohio, which was recently ordered sold by the Common Pleas Court after having been in the hands of a receiver, was purchased by John Pakras and W. F. Magginis, who also own the Dreamland and Rivoli Theatres at Elyria. It is reported that the price paid for the twenty-five year lease was $115,000.

Garland Shelter, Middlefield, Ohio, has purchased the Opera House at Middlefield, as also the Opera House at West Farmington from F. L. Olds.

The Angela Theatre, Cleveland, under management of Mrs. G. Robinson, has been entirely renovated and a new ventilating system installed.

Editors of the various trade papers have been invited to speak at the annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, to be held in Grand Rapids, October 6 and 7. Other speakers will be Lieut. Gov. George Welsh, Judge Alfred H. Murphy and Hon. Clarence McLeod, congressman. One of the sideline features of the convention will be a golf tournament, the principal prize of which will be a fourteen-inch loving cup contributed by H. M. Richey, manager of the association.

Carl Buermele Joins Detroit Booking Co.

Carl Buermele has resigned as assistant manager of F. B. O. in Detroit to become assistant to L. H. Gardner, of the Co-operative Booking Corporation, with offices in the Madison Theatre Building. "Cully," as he is familiarly known to everyone in the film business, has been connected with F. B. O. since its inception.

So many rumors concerning a merger have been scattered about that John H. Kunsky, before leaving for Europe, made a statement to the effect that although he had been approached with propositions along that line, he turned them down. Mr. Kunsky reiterated his previous statements to the effect that he is in the picture business to stay.

Charles H. Miles, who recently advertised his intention to relinquish claim to the Ferry Field; an outskirt film theatre, has decided to try it with a stock company and announces an opening under that policy for October 12.

Glen Watkins and Alexander Shreiber have formed a partnership and have taken over the Plaza Theatre from Harry Goldstein. The new company will also operate the new East End Theatre now in course of constructino on the old site.

Oscar W. Hanson, Pathe manager in Detroit, is taking his first vacation since taking charge of the office. He left a few days ago for Omaha, Neb., his former home and where he was Pathe manager before coming to Detroit.

Dennis Vanes, proprietor of the Tibbets Theatre at Coldwater, has sold the house to Nicholas Pappas, who recently sold his Dawn Theatre in Hillsdale to the Butterfield Enterprises. The price paid for the Coldwater Theatre was $50,000.

Detroit's Film Row was practically dead the first few days of the week, most of the exchange men and exhibitors treaking to Grand Rapids where the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan was being held.

ANOTHER F. AND E. IN INDIANA

Richmond, Indiana, just across the Ohio state line, is to have a new house, to be constructed by the Fitzpatrick and McElroy interests, on which construction is scheduled to begin by the first of the year. The house, is the Rivoli and will cost $250,000.

Few Policy Changes in Louisville Houses

The Walnut Theatre is open for the fall season and is combining excellent feature films, with musical comedy shows, at 50 cents a seat. Walter Davidson's crack jazz orchestra is one of the attractions.

The Strand Theatre, for some years a successful picture house, later running vaudeville and pictures, this year is operating as a stock theatre, at a price of $1, plus tax for night shows.

The National is again running combined pictures and vaudeville, while the Keith Rialto, which remained open all summer, is showing vaudeville and pictures.

The Majestic, Mary Anderson and Alamo are all running first-run pictures exclusively, and the Kentucky has second-run pictures.

Mixed pictures and stage attractions are featured at the Savoy, formerly the Buckingham. No change is seen in the policies at the smaller theatres, such as the Rex, Star, Casino, Orpheum, Hippodrome, etc., which are running their usual picture program.

Louis F. Steuerle is reported to have shown rapid recovery from an attack of appendicitis, suffered recently at Atlantic City.

M. M. Switow of the Switow Amusement chan of picture theatres in Louisville and Southern Indiana, has recently returned to the city after spending the summer with Mrs. Switow in Europe.

U. S. EXPORTS MORE PROJECTORS

Preliminary Department of Commerce figures show that 166 motion picture machines valued at $38,890 were exported from the United States during the month of August as against 99 valued at $23,699 in July and 64 valued at $16,484 in August 1924.

Kingsmore Leaves San Francisco Field

Howard Kingsmore, formerly manager of the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., and who came to San Francisco several months ago to take charge of the St. Francis Theatre, has resigned and arranged to return east at once. He has been succeeded by Ed J. Smith, well known local theatre manager, who has lately been in charge of the State Theatre at Oakland.

Joseph F. Enos, manager of the Portola Theatre, has arranged to show the world series baseball returns in this house through the medium of the new radiograph device. This will interfere with the regular picture shows but little, as the ball games are usually over before 1 o'clock, Pacific time.

Harry W. Poole, of the Liberty Theatre, Klamath Falls, Ore., was a recent visitor at San Francisco to arrange fall and winter bookings.

Marco Wolf, who has won fame for his stage offerings at Loew's Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, and other houses on the West Coast Theatres circuit, has signed a three years' contract with this organization as director general of all stage activities. Under his direction a complete scenery building studio is operated, this giving steady employment to fifteen carpenters and property men and eight scenic artists. The costume department employs eighteen modistes, and the art department, which designs stage settings and costumes, has four artists.

The new Parkway Theatre, a house seating about 900, has been opened at Oakland, Cal.

Sam Gordon, owner of the Hippodrome Theatre, Napa, Cal., has purchased the Hayes Theatre property in that city and will remodel the house.

Extensive improvements have been made of late in the Royal Theatre, South San Francisco, including changes in the projection room.

H. L. Beach of the Beach-Krahn Amusement Co., Berkeley, Cal., has returned from an extended trip through the southern part of the state. Leading theatres were inspected to secure ideas for new houses planned for the East Bay field.

The Glade Theatre at Lindsay, Cal., has been remodeled and redecorated and has been reopened under the management of Harry Fontana. An airdome was used during the summer months.

Omaha People Oppose New Theatre Name

The Community Playhouse of Omaha, incorporated by 120 Omaha citizens, plans to fight proposed change of the name of the Gayety Theatre here to "The Playhouse." Robert Bruce Murray, Columbus, Ohio, head of the Murray-Harold stock company, which came to occupy the Gayety Theatre last Sunday, was notified by wire that the Omahans would go into the courts to prevent the Gayety from taking on this name.

A fine new picture theatre is planned for Benson, a suburban addition to Omaha. The Metcalfe Co., a big real estate and building organization here, has just bought the old Country Club Grounds near Benson, which will be developed, and the company has announced that ground will soon be broken for a big picture house.

James Crapenhoft has sold the Opera House at Surprise, Neb., to George Miller.

B. G. Schmidt has sold the Folly Theatre at Sterling, Neb., to B. B. Smith.

A. Melcher has sold the Franklin Theatre at Omaha to George Adams.

Kate Blake has sold the Pearl Theatre at Shelby, Neb., to John Duren.

DenverShowmanYields to Lure of Florida

Homer Ellison, Jr., has gone to Florida to enter the real estate business. Mr. Ellison was associated with his father as manager of the Queen Theatre, one of the most popular suburban houses of Denver.

The new Alpine Theatre, East 33rd avenue and Williams street, Denver, has opened. It is a new 700-seat house and is modern in every respect. The theatre is under the management of Edward N. Nesbit and Dale R. Kline.

The Mena Theatre, another new house, celebrated its grand opening on October 2. This is located at Alameda and South Pearl streets, contains 500 seats and is owned and operated by William Menagh, a well known exhibitor of the Denver territory. Mr. Menagh recently owned and operated the Park Theatre, Greeley, Col.

Exhibitors visiting Denver during the past few days were J. J. Goodstein and C. H. Ernst, Palm Theatre, Pueblo, Col.; V. Barrett, Park Theatre, Greeley, Col.; James Lynch, Laramie, Wyo. and Tom Love, Hanna, Wyo.

HUGH FLANNERY PROMOTED

Hugh Flannery for several years manager of the Palace Theatre at South Bend has been prompted to group manager at the main offices of the Orpheum circuit in Chicago. He will have direct charge of 3 houses in Chicago.

A New Film Fan

Here's a new one. A small porcupine entered the Mission Theatre, Denver, strolled down the main aisle and brushed against a silk-clad ankle. There was a scream and plenty of excitement. After much persuasion with the broom, the porcupine was induced to take up quarters indefinitely in a back store room and the show continued.

So runs the story of Fred P. Brown one of the proprietors of the house. Porcupines, during the past summer, have been frequently seen in and near Denver, but this is the first instance of any having become so bold as to actually attend a movie. Exhibitors are somewhat anxious for the reason that these animals sneak in without paying, and no one will argue about seats if the porcupines occupy them first.

Ohio Theatre News

The Majestic Theatre, Sidney, Ohio, which was recently purchased at sheriff's sale by Morris Strauss, Cincinnati, Ohio, representing a mortgage company in that city, has passed into possession of N. C. De Weese. The house will be under the management of C. B. De Weese.

The Temple Theatre, Toledo, Ohio, under management of E. Mandelbaum, which has been closed some time for remodeling, reopened recently with "The Iron Horse." The night prior to the opening Mandelbaum showed a pre-release to which invitations were issued to city officials, railroad officials and others.

Newman Welcomed Home in Kansas

It was a gay throng which welcomed home Frank L. Newman in Kansas City. Mr. Newman, now manager of a trio of Paramount theatres in Los Angeles, returned to close contracts for the sale of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, to Paramount. Although Balaban & Katz, of Chicago, have merged with Paramount, the sale of the Kansas City theatres will be made with Paramount, Mr. Newman said. Leo Forbstein, former director of the Newman Theatre orchestra, will accompany Mr. Newman on his return to Los Angeles, where he will direct the orchestra of the Metropolitan Theatre.

With all the details of Greater Movie Season now a thing of the past "Doc" Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, will soon leave for a tour of the territory in behalf of the membership drive, which was cut short by an avalanche of routine details. The policy of inviting an exhibitor, once—just once—to enter the organization, will remain in force.

The Beldorf Theatre, Independence, Kans., has been obtained by Universal, according to Charles T. Sears, general manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory. The Royal and Crystal, Atchinson, Kans., which were purchased by Universal, are to be managed by A. R. Zimmer, recently a First National salesman, it was also announced.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: George Planck, Sedalia Theatre, Sedalia, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kans.; C. R. Wilson, Liberty Theatre, Liberty, Mo.

The Isis Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, in future will have the first suburban run on all Fox product, according to M. A. Levy, Fox branch manager at Kansas City.

Roy Phipps, assistant treasurer of the Missouri Theatre, Kansas City, and Miss Mary Frechin, formerly cashier at the Mainstreet Theatre, Kansas City, were married the other day and left for Pittsburgh, Pa., where Mr. Phipps will be assistant manager of Loew's Aldine Theatre.

The opening of O. K. Mason's New Regent Theatre in Winfield, Kans., last week, took its place in the history of that town as an auspicious event. Virtually all merchants tied up with the theatre in a special eight-page section of the Winfield Courier on the theatre's opening. Film men from Kansas City and adjoining towns attended.

SEERY MADE CHICAGO HEAD

R. C. Seery has been named as manager of the Chicago branch of First National Pictures, Inc., by E. A. Eschmann, in place of C. E. Bond, resigned. Mr. Seery assumed active charge of the branch on Monday, September 28th.

Raymond Griffith as Prince of Fanciful Kingdom Packs a Powerful Comedy Punch

Reviewed by E. W. Sargent

All question as to whether Raymond Griffith could keep up the pace he hit in "Paths to Paradise" are answered in the affirmative in his newest comedy offering. He can.

Wisely diverging from the former play, the producer puts all America and half of Europe between the locales of the two stories, and Grffith becomes Prince Alexis, of a mythical kingdom on the Baltic Sea. He heads the "personal relations" department of the government, and is kept so busy laying cornerstones, launching ships and other publicity stunts that he is run ragged. He wants to quit, but the family has been tied to the throne for generations, and his sympathetic father does not quite see how it can be fixed.

Then Alexis meets "the" girl, and on his father's death he cuts the fetters with the aid of a rather amiable anarchist—only to find that he has been elected president of the new kingdom. He is still on the never-ending job, but at least, as a commoner, he can marry the girl he wants.

On this rather slender plot foundation has been built a fine succession of gags, some of which are rather long-drawn out, but which seem to gain through iteration. Two sequences, in particular, offer this angle.

The first is the revolution. The anarchist has called in his gang, but the Prime Minister, not knowing the prearrangement, calls the soldiery to throw them out. Alexis rushes out and whistles them back. But someone has thrown a bomb, and when he comes to toss it away, they all beat another hasty retreat. He calls them back again, but the palace pup retrieves the bomb—and the retreat is repeated.

Another rather extended gag is the bomb-hunting dog. A half-dozen times he brings back the bomb, and finally when Alexis seeks to run away, one of the biggest laughs in the play is attained as the dog is seen riding comfortably along on the tail of the royal mantle.

On the other hand, there is a thread of story that works up to near-drama when the girl discovers that her budding romance is about to be frosted by the Prince's accession to the throne. For a few moments the comedy is forgotten and real heart-interest is evoked.

Griffith's own work is the same easy, unconscious comedy that first marked him for stardom. He seldom overstresses, and carries off impossible situations with an ease that makes them seem momentarily real.

As the Girl, Mary Brian never looked prettier, but this is about all she has to do. Gustav VonSeyffertitz has some opportunity as the Prime Minister, and Jacqueline Gadsden, as the Princess, has a brief moment when she shares the screen, but most of the action is held closely to the star without making him tiresome.

There are some fine laugh-getters distributed through the story, as when the boat, newly launched, promptly goes to the bottom; an escape from prison by the simple device of inducing a horse to kick the walls down, and an airplane episode that has both thrills and laughs.

"A Regular Fellow" clinches Griffith's claim to stardom. He can repeat.

"The Keeper of the Bees"—Film Booking Offices

Newest Novel by Gene Stratton Porter Is Offered Simultaneously As Book and Film

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Following its serialization in a national publication of wide circulation and practically coincident with its publication in book form, F. B. O. is offering the screen version of "The Keeper of the Bees," the latest novel by the popular writer, Gene Stratton Porter.

The story derives its title from a kindly philosophical old man, whose life is wrapped up in the care of a number of hives of bees. The main character in the action, however, is a wounded soldier who learns that the doctors figure he has only a few months to live. Escaping from the hospital he wanders a long way and finally meets the old bee-keeper, who dies and leaves his bees to his pal, a young girl masquerading as a boy, and to the hero, who, believing that his days are limited and struck by pity, marries a girl in trouble. It afterwards develops that he has really married her cousin, and when the hero brings the baby home after its mother's death he finds that his wife is the daughter of the woman who has befriended him. Finally it is all straightened out, he recovers his health and really marries the girl he all along believed to be his wife.

Good dramatic interest is established in the hero's plight, but with the introduction of the other characters and the building up of the groundwork of the story too much footage has been used and the interest lags. Aside from a few interesting scenes dealing with the handling and swarming of the bees the attention is not quickened again until the hero, meeting the girl in a storm, marries her. The girl goes away and the period of their separation is taken up with scenes that advance the story very little, leaning more to the heart-interest angle. With the calling of the hero to the hospital, his discovery that he has married another woman and the following events straightening out the tangle again pep up the action somewhat.

There is very little action to this picture and as a whole the story drags, as much of the character work in the novel has been omitted. It is a story of sentimentality and heart-appeal, handled at an easy-going tempo. It is not the type of picture for sophisticated city patronage or those who demand either a lot of action or intense drama, but will probably prove fairly interesting in the smaller houses and with the wide circle of admirers of Gene Stratton Porter's works.

The continuity seems rather vague at times and the direction of some of the scenes is not up to the best standards. As a whole the cast does good work, although the doctor in the hospital scene is badly miscast. This, together with the performance of little Gene Stratton as a girl, are liable to cause some amusement where it is not intended. This child, however, is excellent in the role of a boy and keeps thoroughly in character.

French-Riff Campaign Figures in Exciting Romantic Melodrama, with Rubens and Lowe

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Do you wish to capitalize on the large amount of newspaper space that is being devoted to the campaign in Morocco by the French against the Riffs?

The Fox production, "The Winding Stair," offers this opportunity, for the story is laid in a Moroccan city, garrisoned by the celebrated French foreign legion, and although the action occurs at an earlier period, an upraising among the Riffs forms an important angle in the story.

The title is an allegorical one, symbolizing the spiral, roundabout route by which we rise to higher levels, but the story itself is a romantic melodrama, dealing with a member of the foreign legion in Morocco on secret duty. In a questionable cafe he meets again a dancer whom he had previously seen in a convent school. Out of pity he helped her and took her to his home. Learning of a ruse of the natives to stage a massacre in the city by luring the troops to the Riff country, he deserted his command and by disguising as a native saved himself and the girl, but being disgraced as a deserter though he opened the gates to let the troops in. During the World War he led a regiment of natives, and through heroism won back his name and was honored by his country.

"The Winding Stair" should furnish good entertainment for those who like fast-moving action melodrama. Some of the situations are theatrical, but with the various complications which dovetail into each other, there in hardly a moment in which there is not romantic interest or vigorous action. A particularly dramatic situation is where the deserter is recognized by his comrades and given a pistol with which to end his own life. He faints, and the girl lowers him on to the rocks, and for a time it seems that the ruse will work. There is good punch in a number of the scenes and this picture should please the average audience.

Alma Rubens is excellent as the girl and Edmund Lowe gives a good performance as the soldier. Warner Oland as an obnoxious native millionaire, and Emily Fitzroy as the coarse proprietress of the questionable cafe do good work.

"Exchange of Wives"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Amusing High-Class Comedy of Married Life Adapted from Stage Play by Cosmo Hamilton

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Based on a play by the celebrated dramatist, Cosmo Hamilton, and adapted to the screen and titled by the accomplished writers, Frederic and Fanny Hatton, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Exchange of Wives," is an amusing, sophisticated comedy of newly married life.

The apt title gives a good idea of the plot. Living side by side are two couples. A jazzy flirtatious husband has a quiet, sedate wife. In the other house the situation is reversed. The jazzy wife attracts the other woman's snappy husband and the two quiet ones find solace in each others company. The quiet wife, discovering that both husbands have one thing in common, love of good home cooking, contrives to get the four to a lodge in the mountains, where the conventionalities are observed, but each wife cooks for the other husband. Her own husband's ardor for the other woman cannot stand canned food and he begs to be taken back. The other husband takes matters in his own hands, uses cave-man methods and wins back his wife's love.

The idea behind this comedy is slight, but a lot of amusing incidents have been introduced that are good for smiles if not laughter. Good work by all of the players and a lot of little realistic touches of married life pep up the action, and the concentration of the interest in the four players with no diverting side lines of action, helps.

Eleanor Boardman as the quiet wife gives a fine, subdued performance, and Lew Cody is excellent as the snappy husband, his light comedy being on a par with his more familiar "heavy" roles.

There is nothing boisterous about the humor here; it is easy-going comedy, aided by good subtitling and clever little touches. Slapstick admirers will doubtless find it slow and its greatest appeal will be to high-class patronage. Married folk especially should like it, for there are a lot of little touches that will strike home and cause them to chuckle.

Cast of Well-Known Players in a Dramatic Story by the Author of "Flaming Youth"

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With a cast headed by Constance Bennett, Wallace MacDonald and George Hackathorne, supported by Henrietta Crossman and Effie Shannon, two stars of the stage who are well known especially to the older generation of theatre-goers, Arrow Film Corporation is offering "Wandering Fires," written by Warner Fabian, the author of "Flaming Youth."

A serious minded young man who rather frowns on jazz and petting, falls desperately in love with a girl about whom there is considerable scandal. She insisted that he know the whole story of how she remained all night in her sweetheart's apartment just before he went to war and when he was accused of treachery told her story to save his memory from dishonor. Admiring her bravery he married her and then was tortured by doubt as to whether she still loved the other fellow. This lad who had wandered about in a daze finally reached home and familiar sights restored his memory. The tortured husband finally found peace in the knowledge that his wife loved him.

The acting of the entire cast is high-class, especially that of Constance Bennett in a rather more serious role than she usually plays. She gets full sympathy and makes you admire the girl's courage. George Hackathorne shows to better advantage as the shell-shocked boy than as the dreamy musician before going to war.

There are several good situations that develop considerable drama but the story is not one that is swept along by the logic of events, the sequences several times giving the impression of having been shaped by the author for dramatic effect. While the story is not spontaneous or entirely convincing it is cleverly worked out to a satisfactory conclusion and should furnish pleasing entertainment for the average patron. The sex angle is prominent in this theme but there are no scenes that are objectionable and the matter is straightened out by a subtitle denying wrong-doing. Up to the marriage of the couple the interest is held tensely, then there is a let-down, but a number of the situations command the attention because of good acting and directing.

"Children of the Whirlwind"—Arrow

Lionel Barrymore, Marguerite De LaMotte and Johnny Walker in a Crook Melodrama

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

In "Children of the Whirlwind," a Whitman Bennett production, which is being distributed on the independent market by Arrow Film Corporation, there is unfolded a story of the inner workings of a gang of crooks.

The plot centers around Larry, the leader of the gang, who, while in prison, decided to go straight. He finds himself between two fires, for the gang calls him yellow and believing he has squealed on one of their number, is out to "get" him, while a crooked detective also seeks to "frame" him as a murderer. Through the help of a friendly artist he finds refuge and succeeds in repaying his debt to his friends by arranging the sale of the artist's pictures and by saving his benefactor's brother from becoming the victim of one of the crook's schemes. His sweetheart finally confesses her real love for him and aids in landing the gang in jail.

The story as unfolded is a rather hectic melodrama of crooks and their methods, their code among themselves and their hatred of detectives and plans to outwit society. A large number of characters are involved, and their relations are so interwoven that the story becomes involved and loses any semblance of realty. The individuals are but puppets twisted around at the author's will. There is considerable action, but it follows along rather mechanical and conventional lines and arouses only mild interest. Coincidence has been badly stretched in bringing together the various characters and in their relations to each other.

Johnny Walker has the leading role and gives a pleasing performance, but is handicapped by the artificiality of some of the work he is called on to do. Marguerite De La Motte gives a capital performance as the little girl crook. Lionel Barrymore seems miscast and has little to do as an elderly crook, who has been double-crossed by another crook

"Children of the Whirlwind" seems so unreal and unconvincing that it gets very little hold on either the sympathy or interest, although it may prove fairly entertaining to "dyed-in-the-wool" fans, who dote on crookaction melodrama.

Hunt Stromberg Production with Box-Office Cast Is Entertaining Story of Stage Life

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Chadwick Film Corporation is offering on the independent market with Elaine Hammerstein in the principal role, supported by a cast which includes a number of box-office names, "Paint and Powder," a production personally directed by Hunt Stromberg, the

"Paint and Powder" is largely a story of stage folk. It starts out with Mary the heroine and her sweetheart Jimmy employed in a Bowery cafe. Jimmy after a row with a tough frisks him of a wallet belonging to a big theatrical producer and finally lands in jail. Her endeavors to obtain clemency for him brings Mary to the attention of the producer, Kelsey and finally she becomes a Broadway star. Kelsey's partner tries to drag her down but fails, but Jimmy misunderstands and goes away. Eventually he returns chastened, but only to find that Mary has married Kelsey.

This picture is a melodrama of contrasts, taking the spectator from sordid surroundings to the glitter of the theatre and to the handsome apartments of Kelsey's partner. There are a number of behind the stage scenes and a big jazzy party with a fashion display that will please the ladies and a rather risque lingerie parade. A lot of human interest has been injected into the story and there are unexpected twists that add to the interest, for example, when the girl hopes to impress the producer on his visit to the cafe and he does not even look in her direction.

The biggest departure in the handling of this story is in the ending. Although the development of the story for the most part follows along familiar lines and contains a lot of situations of the type that have demonstrated that they appeal to the average audience the ending is so radical a departure that it is a question whether it will satisfy a large number of patrons. Having the girl marry the producer and bringing her sweetheart back just too late gives a logical and decidedly unstereotyped ending and adds an extra note of realism.

The feature as a whole should provide interesting entertainment for the majority of the patrons.

Elaine Hammerstein as the girl, John Sainpolis as the producer, Theodore Von Eltz as the sweetheart, Stuart Holmes and the villain Derelys Perdue as his companions and Pat Hartigan, Russell Simpson and Charles Murray in minor roles are all well cast.

Evelyn Brent Scores in Another Pleasing Crook Film Involving Regeneration Theme

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

F. B. O.'s "Three Wise Crooks," starring Evelyn Brent, should make a hit with small-town audiences who insist upon a regeneration theme along with safe-cracking heroes and heroines. Sophisticated city audiences will find virtue altogether too triumphant. That about summarizes it, for little fault can otherwise be found with the plot, the product of the imaginations of John Brownell and Fred Kennedy Myton. Both are capable playwrights.

Molly ("Spug") Casey and Dan Pelton rob a diamond merchant and take refuge with "Ma" Dickenson, an elderly lady, in the country. Betsy Ann Morgan, a chubby country girl, vamps ("Spug") successfully. Molly begins to feel the stirrings of a conscience in the new environment, especially after she learns that the local banker has swindled "Ma" with some oil stock. The three crooks catch the banker and aid in robbing their own bank and hide the money in "Ma's" home. There the city detectives find it. Molly produces the diamonds, convicts the banker of crookedness and is allowed, with her companions, to go scot-free. Dan and she plan marriage and a clean life.

Harmon Weight, the director, has made the first half of the picture, even to a sophisticated viewpoint, very interesting. The crook stuff is well done, and Miss Brent scores in her role. Then, when regeneration begins with the help of a single subtitle, the story get saccharine, its only relieving feature being some good comedy by John Gough and Dodo Newton—that, at any rate, being the verdict of the city guy.

"Maid in Morocco"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Lupino Lane makes his debut as a star for Educational in this two-reel comedy. Produced under the supervision of Jack White, "Maid in Morocco" gets away from the regular run of comedy plots. White has employed the sets and locale of a regular sheik town in far-off Morocco. He introduces in the midst of brandishing swords, flowing gowns and sparkling jewels a newly-wed American couple bent on a novel honeymoon. Lupino Lane and Helen Foster enact the roles of the couple. Wallace Lupino plays the part of the Caliph, whose job it would seem is to compete with stories about the multiplicity of wives possessed by old King Solomon. The Caliph, in his endeavors to wean away the American beauty, furnishes Lupino Lane with the opportunity to dodge swords, kick over natives, dash through harems and indulge generally in acrobatics. Slapstick material is plentiful in "Maid in Morocco," thus the comedy is kept moving at a fast pace. All audiences should welcome this two-reeler as a short subject which delightfully deviates from the general run of its class.—T. W.

"Absent Minded"

(Universal—Comedy—One Reel)

This is another of the series of single-reel Bull's Eye comedies, featuring Neely Edwards. The fun grows out of the fact that Neely is cast as an absent-minded chap who even forgets to put on his trousers when he starts out from home. His wife tells him not to forget whose birthday it is, and that there will be a big party. To play safe he buys presents for all their relatives and comes home with an assortment ranging from a lawn mower to a live duck. Unconsciously he exchanges the mower for a baby carriage and the duck escapes, leading to considerable confusion. There are a few new bits, but on the whole the idea and the gags are of a familiar sort. Should prove fairly amusing for slapstick fans.—C. S. S.

"Film Facts"

(Red Seal—Magazine—One Reel)

One section of "Film Facts 'H'" shows in detail the manufacture of glass, melting, blowing, etc., also how cut glass articles are stamped, cut and polished. The interesting fact is brought out that glass is still being made in the same way as the Egyptians made it over 3,000 years ago, the only difference being in the improved machinery used. Another section shows the manufacture of baskets by natives in the tropics and the picking and shipping of cocoanuts. How they are tied in pairs and then fastened together to form a raft, and the manner in which the "meat" is removed, dried in the sun until it becomes copra, which is shipped all over the world for use in making oil and soaps. This subject is interesting and instructive.—C. S. S.

"Mixing in Mexico"

(Short Films—Cartoon—One Reel)

This is one of a series of cartoons dealing with the adventures of Mutt and Jeff, Bud Fisher's popular characters, whose doings are widely syndicated in newspapers throughout the country. Mutt persuades Jeff to enter the arena for a prize of $10,000 to the man who subdues a ferocious bull that has gotten the best of a flock of toreadors. Jeff dons springs and leaps over the animal, whose horns finally become entangled in the box in which Mutt, disguised as a woman, is flirting with a Mexican. The bull tears away the box front and throws Mutt over the fence. While he is weeping, the bull is tossed over and Jeff appears with the gold. There is plenty of action here and it should prove an amusing number.—C. S. S.

"Clever Feet"

(Pathe—Sportlight—One Reel)

In this Grantland Rice Sportlight Producer J. L. Hawkinson shows how important clever feet are in all forms of athletics. The scenes are of noted swimmers, baseball players, runners, skaters and dancers, with the emphasis on the pedal action. It is a fascinating illustration of an interesting theme.—S. S.

"The Heart Breaker"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

A lot of good clean fun is developed in this Imperial comedy, starring Sid Smith as a wealthy chap, who takes a bet that he can stay one week at a certain hotel without becoming engaged. Of course, he loses. The familiar but always amusing situation of a chap who belongs to a bachelor's club and has to be unmercifully kidded by his pals when he falls for the bonds of matrimony starts off the action. Sid takes up the chap's challenge and goes to a hotel where all the guests and help are attractive females hunting a man. He meets a girl who is masquerading as a boy to escape an unwelcome suitor and to save himself suggests that she pose as a girl. Naturally he falls in love with her. There is a definite and amusing idea behind this comedy, and the fun is supplied by the situations and good gags with quite a little slapstick.—C. S. S.

"Cuckoo Love"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

The players in this good comedy are Glenn Tryon, Katherine Grant, Chester Conklin, Jimmie Finlayson, Blanche Mehaffey and Jane Sherman. Fred L. Guiol directed. With such an array of talent it was certain that the subject would be worthwhile and it is. Briefly, the situation revolves around the reappearance of an ex-sweetheart of Tryon's, who is engaged. She marries the father of Tryon's girl, a jealous gentleman, and immediately the couples get mixed. Matters are only straightened out after circumstances indicate that the husband is unfaithful and he has to forget his suspicious of others in defence of himself. This is a good burlesque, with wonderful sub-titles by A. H. Giebler. They had the projection room in screams of laughter. Not only are they funny but they have some relation to the situations, which is more than may be said of many wise-cracking comedy subtitles.—S. S.

"Ko Ko Packs 'Em"

(Red Seal—Cartoon—One Reel)

Cartoonist Max Fleischer decides to move his studio, but prepares to leave his little clown, Ko-Ko, behind, but Ko-Ko gets busy, packs everything in sight, including the scenery and sets, and then starts a vacuum cleaner which draws everything into it. This is an ingenious idea, cleverly worked out, and the manner in which the little clown takes windows, doors, stairways, water pipes, etc., and rolls them up, even pulling down the sun from an "exterior" scene, is amusing. As usual, there is a mixture of cartoon work and photography. One of the best and most baffling bits is where Fleischer himself and the moving men get smaller and smaller and are finally sucked into the big cleaner. Your patrons will wonder how this is done and the entire subject should amuse them. One of the best of the "Out-of-the-Inkwell" series.—C. S. S.

"The Road from Latigo"

(Universal—Western—Two Reels)

Edmund Cobb is the featured player in this Mustang Western, which deals with a young chap who aids in driving a robber gang from a stage coach and takes the money for safekeeping when the driver is wounded. Stopping at a farm house he is mistaken by a girl as the thief because the sheriff has previously notified her that there is a reward for him. She prepares to turn him over to the sheriff to get the reward, but in the meantime the gang appears and she weakens in her belief that he is the thief. Eventually the sheriff gets the gang after she has lured them back to her shack for the gold she has hidden, and it develops that the hero is a rich man's son. There is riding and fighting of the usual type, but the direction and continuity is rather crudely handled and not up to the usual standard. Regular Western fans will, however, probably find it entertaining on account of the action.—C. S. S.

Good Morning, Madam

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

In this subject Ralph Graves and Marvin Lobach appear as book agents. They meet with repeated frustrations despite "advanced" selling methods. Thelma Parr plays the pretty society girl whose Pomeranian Graves rescues. Coincident with the appearance of skirts comes more trouble. Graves and Lobach entertain at "tea" in a restaurant. Thelma's many girl friends sit down with her and the impecunious salesmen. Lobach passes the check to Graves, but Thelma senses the situation and comes to the rescue. Later, Thelma averts marriage with father's choice by seizing upon Lobach, in Graves' absence. Lobach is supremely satisfied, but Graves breaks in and cuts him out. This is a corking comedy, full of fun and fast-moving. Graves, Lobach and Miss Parr constitute an ideal team.—S. S.

"Scrambled Eggs"

(Educational—Comedy—One Reel)

This Cameo comedy, "Scrambled Eggs," is one of the funniest of one-reelers that Educational has ever released. Phil Dunham, George Davis, Babe London and Helen Marlowe comprise the cast. They put over the subject of marriage by correspondence with a realness that makes this comedy screamingly funny. There is an abundance of slapstick antics, but these all fit in the story perfectly. The titles should come in for their share of praise, since they are "snapped up" to the minute. All in all, this is an exceptional comedy—one that should register exceedingly well in any theatre. —T. W.

"The Hero Wins"

(Pathe-Cartoon-One Reel)

Cartoonist Terry has his cat bottle Mr. Mouse which he uses as a decoy on a fishing expedition. A shark liberates the mouse who in turn sets free a "beautiful" female rodent from the clutches of the cat. This cartoon testifies further to Terry's remarkable imagination. It provides plenty of mirth and makes quite a hero of the mouse.—T. W.

"Spot Light"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

The life of a "property man" and the troubles and anxieties of a theatrical manager in putting over a first night in a new vaudeville theatre are amusingly portrayed in "Spot Light." This two-reel comedy, a Jack White production, released through Educational, has an exceptional cast of funsters, including Lige Conley, Jack Lloyd, Bob Kortman, Earl Mahan, Virginia, Babe London and Sunshine Hart. Conley, as the "props" man, manages to reverse every order, so that the prima donna instead of being sprayed with "snow" is deluged with rain, and the "fleas" of a magician, instead of being confined to himself, escape through the audience. Any fan will find many a hearty laugh in "Spot Light." Conley introduces the fun by parading through a small town on a pair of high stilts. Balling up traffic and wrecking bicycles and store windows are accomplished before he manages to lose these appendages. The titles will also afford much mirth.—T.W.

"How the Elephant Got Its Trunk"

(F. B. O.—Cartoon—One Reel)

Cartoon work and photography are combined in this Bray cartoon, executed by Walter Lantz, and in which he also appears as a young husband who returns home one evening and finds a note from his wife to amuse the baby. After trying various schemes, having trouble with putting a nipple on the bottle and covering himself and the child with milk, he hits on the idea of telling the kid the story that gives the picture its title. This part, which is entirely cartoon work, shows the baby elephant's carriage rolling down hill and landing in the water. The elephant's nurse, a hippo, together with a mouse and a monkey, pull on a rope attached to the elephant's short nose, which results in its being drawn out to its present length. This cartoon is cleverly executed and contains several amusing situations. Up to the usual standard.—C. S. S.

"Air Cooled"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

This Aesop's Film Fable shows the farmer attempting a dirigible flight. All the animals take a hand in rendering it a complete failure, and many are the bumps the farmer's head gets in falling from the upper spaces to the solid earth. Up to Terry's standard. —S. S.

Producers and Exhibitors Approve Plan For "Short Feature Month," January, 1926

R. F. Woodhull, President of the M. P. T. O. A., Addresses Conference and Pledges Support —Sydney S. Cohen Urges Co-operation —Short Subject Experts Applaud Moving Picture World's Idea

By Charles Edward Hastings

JANUARY, 1926, has been designated SHORT FEATURE MONTH, with the producers of short subjects united in an intensive campaign to further increase the interest of exhibitors and public alike in "the little gems of the program." Following the initiative of Moving Picture World, in advancing the practicability of boosting short features during the month of January, representatives of the leading short subjects producers, at a luncheon at Keen's Chop House, New York City, on Tuesday last, decided to get squarely back of the campaign and put it over with a display of enthusiasm such as "short subjects" have not, heretofore, known.

As a detail of the forward impetus which Moving Picture World will give short features, in its new department "Little Pictures with the Big Punch," the World, invited the representatives of the short subject producers to the Tuesday luncheon, on which occasion R. F. Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc., a guest of honor, addressed the short subject experts on the value of little features to the theatre owners.

In the course of an open session plans were mapped out to begin the January campaign immediately.

The campaign as tentatively mapped out contemplates a movement in the entire trade press to stimulate exhibitor interest in short features, and through the exhibition of short features, to further interest the public in the amusement value of short subject programs, properly balanced and carefully selected.

The speakers at the luncheon discussed the subject from many angles, and a strong foundation was laid for further high tension activities by a Special Committee on Short Subjects and by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. The Committee has held several meetings during the past summer. Another meeting is called for next week.

William J. Reilly, editor of Moving Picture World, in his opening remarks, said in part:

"In offering the suggestion for a short subject month, Moving Picture World seeks to advance the interests of the producers of short subjects, the showmen who use these little featurse and the large public, which enjoys them. We have asked for this conference to sound out the men who have made this topic a special study, and we invite the fullest co-operation of the motion picture trade press, the producers, exhibitors and public, in enlarging the demand for, and increasing the value of, the short features on motion picture theatre programs.

Mr. Reilly then introduced Mr. Woodhull, who reviewed his experiences with the short subject problem in his house, the Baker Theatre, Dover, N. J. Mr. Woodhull spoke of the big features, and his audience reaction on them, and turned to "shorts."

"I have found it advantageous to advertise my short subjects, and never fail to put my 'shorts' on the marquee, and more especially is this true when I feel that my feature is weak. I can not emphasize too strongly the need to bring before the public everything that is of interest on the program. In some cases, incidents in the news reels demand that they be called to the attention of the public. Big news features in pictures should be advertised, and displayed out front.

"In making a drive on Short Feature Month I believe special stress should be made on bringing the matter before the theatre owners. If you can educate the thousands of exhibitors, if you can convince them that there is big money to be made in taking every advantage of their short subjects, much will be gained. Further than this, it will be necessary to make a direct appeal to the public. I find my public responsive to the good things I include in my program, and I believe this is true of every audience, for human nature is the same the world over."

Mr. Woodhull said he will be glad to cooperate with the committee in charge of the campaign for Short Feature Month, and he has promised to attend further meetings and assist the committee in every way.

The Editor of Moving Picture World quoted from a letter written by Max Graf, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Egyptian Theatre, Market and Jones streets, San Francisco, who has screened two complete Pathe short subject programs, and is so elated over the result he contemplates a theatre devoted exclusively to short subject programs.

A statement was read from Sydney S. Cohen, Chairman of the Administrative Committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc. In his statement, anent short subjects, Mr. Cohen said:

Sydney S. Cohen's Views

"The business building possibilities of the short subject are almost limitless. After all it is entertainment and entertainment only which the theatre going public seeks; and they care little or nothing as to whether the entertainment is contained in two thousand or five thousand feet of film. The average feature is too long, and this being the case, entertainment values of your program are lessened by a haphazard arrangement of short subjects. It is possible to build programs which shall contain enough of variety to provide everyone with at least a measure of entertainment. But to do this we must take heed to the selection of our short subjects.

"Too frequently, short subjects are simply thrown in, unhonored and unsung, on our programs. We pay for them; why not advertise them. Let us call them featurettes, associate attractions, or whatever happy designation comes to mind, but let us call them something, and let us see to it that our patrons know that we have them. Many a dull feature has been eclipsed by the inclusion in the same program of Fox's 'Van Bibber' stories, F. B. O.'s 'Pacemakers' and 'Go-Getters,' or Universal's 'Leather Pushers.' There are other subjects for which a demand can be created, so let us have initiative enough to pay some real attention to our entire programs.

"Make a Noise About Them!"

"Let us select carefully, in so far as is possible, the shorter subjects which round out our bills. Let us make a noise about them. If they are good, so much the better. Let us make them desirable at all events. If we really concentrate on this angle of our business we shall shortly transform the hitherto neglected and somewhat despised short subjects from 'fillers-in' to 'pullers-in'."

Prologues, epilogues and divertissements in keeping with outstanding short features have been tried successfully, the speakers pointed out. During the coming short subject month the services of Moving Picture

Woodhull Pledges Support

"It is true that exhibitors have overlooked the value of the short subject. This should be corrected, and I shall do everything in my power to bring the facts to the exhibitors. In a more personal sense, speaking for myself, and of my own theatre, I will be glad to take an active part in 'Short Feature Month'."

President, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc.

World's expert, Colby Harriman will be available for those exhibitors who wish to push their short features through presentations.

P. A. Parsons said the idea for a short subject month is an excellent one, and thanked Moving Picture World for going into it so thoroughly. He pledged the full support of his organization to put the campaign over.

Participating in the open session, during which many phases of the short subject problem came up, were Messrs. Rothstein, Waite, Hill, Parsons, Dowling, Fleischer, Bernstein, Ryskind and Bate.

Those at the Conference

Among those at the conference were Nat G. Rothstein, Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation of Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.; P. A. Parsons, Director of Advertising, Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Stanley B. Waite and W. A. V. Mack, executives of the Pathe Sales Division; Henry Clay Bate, of Universal Pictures Company; Pat Dowling, representing Christie Comedies; Clarence A. Hill, of the Short Subject Department of the Fox Film Corporation; David Chatkin, Sales Manager of Educational Pictures, Inc.; Max Fleischer, creator of "Out-of-the Inkwell" series; Morrie Ryskind, of Red Seal Pictures; Harry Bernstein, of Red Seal; Arnold Hansen, treasurer of Ricardo Films; Max Karper, of Ricordo; John F. Chalmers, President of the Chalmers Publishing Co., publishers of Moving Picture World; John A. Archer, Managing Editor of Moving Picture World; Clarence Shottenfels, L. A. Urbach and Gus Fausel of Moving Picture World.

Mr. Woodhull has as his guest S. C. Hume, a member of the Board of Aldermen of Dover, N. J., and a devotee of motion pictures.

Max Graf, Managing Director of the San Francisco Egyptian, successfully tried weeks of "all-short-comedy" numbers. Above is a handbill of one of the shows.

Coolidge Sees "Thrills"

"Life's Greatest Thrills," the two-reel novelty thriller being put out by the International Newsreel Corporation, and which contains thrill shots from the news of the past decade, was shown to President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge at a special private showing this week in their private train, on the journey from Omaha to Washington. Major Jack Connolly, of the Hays organization, and Herman Stockoff, International Newsreel cameraman, who directed the showing, report that the President was highly entertained by the picture.

The President planned several weeks ago to view "Life's Greatest Thrills." At that time he intended going aboard the Mayflower, and the picture was to be shown to him while underway. His plans were changed and the Omaha trip presented the first opportunity for a showing of the newsreel thriller.

The picture was shown while the train was between Omaha and St. Louis. The showing was only to the President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Eight Short Subjects on F. B. O. List for November

AN unusually imposing schedule of short subjects will be offered by F. B. O. for the month of November.

November 1 is set as the release date for "'A Ton of Fun' in a Beauty Parlor," a Standard Fat Men comedy starring Fatty Karr, Tiny Alexander and Kewpie Ross, the three fattest men on the screen. The same day will also see the release of a Bray Cartoon from the pen of Walter Lantz, as yet untitled.

On November 8 the fifth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" starring Alberta Vaughn will be distributed. No title for this two reel subject has yet been selected. In support of Miss Vaughn are Larry Kent, Kit Guard and Al Cooke, while Ralph Ceder is directing, from the continuity done by Doris Anderson.

The sixth Bray cartoon as yet untitled, will be distributed on November 15, as well as "Hold Tight" a two reel Blue Ribbon comedy starring Alice Ardell, which Joe Rock is producing for F. B. O. release.

On November 22 the sixth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be ready for exhibitors.

A Standard Fat Men comedy, as yet untitled, will be shown on November 29, as well as a Bray Cartoon.

Kennedy to Direct "U" Comedies

Edgar Kennedy, well known actor and director, has discarded his makeup box for the megaphone once more. He has been signed by Universal to direct Arthur Lake and Eddie Clayton in the next series of "Sweet Sixteen" comedies, according to announcement from Scott Darling, Universal comedy supervisor.

Waldron En Route East

John A. Waldron, general manager of the Mack Sennett Studios, has recovered from his recent illness, and is en route to New York. He will spend several weeks in conference with P. L. Carroll, Sennett's Eastern representative, and with officials of Pathe Exchange, Inc., distributors of Sennett comedies. Mr. Waldron will visit his home in Utica, N. Y., where he and Mrs. Waldron will spend a week prior to their return to the Coast.

Fox Signs New Comedy Leads

William Fox has signed two pint-sized comedy leads to long-term contracts. Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy are the latest additions to the Fox West Coast studios. Miss Luddy and Mr. Harris will have the leading roles in a new Irish-Jewish comedy series to be filmed shortly.

"East Side, West Side," the first comedy of this new series, has just been completed under the direction of Benjamin Stoloff, with Georgie and Barbara in the leading roles.

New Helen and Warren Comedy

Director Albert Ray has started production on the latest William Fox-Helen and Warren comedy, "Hold Everybody," with Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley again playing the roles of Helen and Warren.

Supporting Miss Perry and Mr. Cooley in "Hold Everybody" are Sidney Bracey, Grace Darmond and Frank Rice.

"Hold Everybody" is being filmed under the personal supervision of Comedy Supervisor George E. Marshall.

It's two reels in length, but in its great comedy star, excellent story, gorgeous settings, lavish costuming, and abundant laughs, it's a superfeature.

International Newsreel Has Special World Series Service

THE International Newsreel Corporation has completed elaborate arrangements for the making of motion pictures of the World Series baseball games between the Washington and Pittsburgh teams and the quick distribution of special pre-release newsreel sections to all parts of the country.

In both Washington and Pittsburgh especially equipped film laboratories have been installed by the International Newsreel, in which the World Series pictures, as soon as a game is played in each city, will be developed and printed without delay. In fact, the early innings will have been developed and printed before the final play of each game.

In Pittsburgh motion pictures of the first game will be rushed to the Pittsburgh International Newsreel accounts before the crowds are out of the ball park. Positive prints of the game will be sent to Washington by airplane, so that they may be shown in leading theatres early the next day. As soon as prints for Pittsburgh and Washington have been turned out, the improvised laboratories will start on prints for all cities. It is expected that by the morning after the game, prints will be on the way to every section of the country, from Pittsburgh.

The same procedure will hold good in Washington, where prints will be made during the progress of the game, the Washington theatres supplied immediately, then prints for Pittsburgh speeded westward by aeroplane, and then prints for other parts of the U. S.

"We are going to get these pictures on the screens of Pittsburgh and Washington almost as soon as the score is known," said S. H. McKeon, news editor of the International Newsreel. "And we are going to put them on the screens of all first-run theatres throughout the country while the World Series is still red-hot news."

"Behind the Front" Selected

"Behind the Front" has been selected as the final title for the picture that will mark Mildred Davis' return to the screen, it was announced today at the Paramount studio.

The production, an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's war story, "The Spoils of War," had been, tentatively titled "Two Soldiers." Production will start October 12.

Brooks Goes on Tour

Serial Sales Manager E. Oswald Brooks, of Pathe Exchange, Inc., left New York on last Sunday, October 4, for an extended tour of the field in behalf of the several Pathe-serials now in distribution and production.

"Play Ball," the ten-chapter feature written by John J. McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, is receiving wide showing throughout the country at the present time, exhibitors everywhere capitalizing on the current interest in the World Series tournament.

Century Studio Starts Work On Third Buster Brown Film

WORD has been received from the Hollywood studios of the Century Film Corporation that work has begun on the third comedy of the Buster Brown-Century Comedy series. It is called "Oh! Buster," and will be released in December.

The Buster Brown Comedies form a new venture on the part of the Century Film Corporation. The series is based on the famous newspaper cartoons by R. F. Outcault, but are being made by Julius and Abe Stern, officials of the Century Company, as regular screen comedies with live actors. Little Arthur Trimble plays the part of Buster Brown, little Doreen Turner is Mary Jane and Pete, the dog comedian, is Tige.

The first two releases of the series, "Educating Buster" and "Buster, Be Good," already have played in hundreds of theatres. The first was released through all Universal exchanges on September 23. It played in such big first-run houses as the Forum, Los Angeles; the Granada Theatre, San Francisco; the Piccadilly, Rochester; the Liberty, Kansas City; the Alhambra, Milwaukee, and scores of others of equal prominence, and was an unqualified success according to reports from these theatres.

"Oh! Buster" is being directed by Gus Meins, well known as a comedy director and who for two years has been with Mack Sennett. Assisting him is William Mull, with William Hyer as cameraman.

The same principals are being used throughout the Buster Brown Comedy series. In addition to Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Pete the dog, in "Oh! Buster," the cast also includes Pinto Colvig, a character comedian recently seen as the cross-eyed taxi-driver with Edna Marian in "After a Reputation."

During the filming of "Oh! Buster" preparatory work is being done on the fourth Buster Brown Comedy, as yet untitled. Meins also will direct this. It is for release in January, but it is expected to be ready for holiday showings in theatres which cater to youngsters around Christmas-time.

Although the Buster Brown Comedies are being released as a part of Century's schedule of fifty-two pictures a year, they are being sold under special arrangements and are said to be chalking up new sales records for the Century company.

There is plenty of action in "The Land Rush," the Pathe serial featuring Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson.

Keith-Albee Theatres Exploit "Our Gang"; Hippodrome Prologue for "Your Own Back Yard"

FOLLOWING the contract for the entire 1925-26 two-reel comedy output of Pathe's Hal Roach Comedies by Keith-Albee Circuit, the latter organization has launched a far-reaching advertising and exploitation campaign on this new feature of their big-time vaudeville programs.

The lobbies and theatre fronts of the greatest vaudeville houses in the world, members of this circuit, now contain much of the regular publicity and accessories put out by Pathe and a great array of specially framed paintings and display material.

The Pathe comedy product is in the lights of the houses on this great circuit, in the newspaper advertising, window cards and special heralds, while exploitation stunts of various kinds are being used around the circuit to make known the fact that the Pathe Comedies have a prominent spot on the vaudeville bills.

The big New York Hippodrome staged what is believed to be the first prologue ever produced for a two-reel picture in connection with the showing of "Your Own Back Yard." The prologue was put on by Alan Foster, the Hippodrome's producer. Six of the Hippodrome's chorus girls and two of Paul Whiteman's musicians were in the attraction.

Up stage was a cottage set with a fence. Along the fence were the girls in country dress, singing with the two boys, the latter seated upon a bench. The song was "Stay In Your Own Back Yard," on which a special tie-up has been made between the Pathe exploitation department and the publishers. The Hippodrome intends to continue its prologue for the forthcoming Pathe Comedies.

"Your Own Back Yard" was played up in the Hippodrome lobby billing while a specially-painted announcement called attention of the patrons to the first run presentation. of all the Hal Roach Pathe Comedies.

The Palace, New York's finest vaudeville theatre, has placed in the lobby a silver frame which will carry the black and white photos of the Pathe comedies. A large framed sign calls attention to the "Extra Added Comedy Feature" and lists the names of leading players in the various productions.

HEADLINE HONORS
Were Accorded Pathe's "Topics of the Day" at B. F. Keith's Bushwick Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.

At the Bushwick Theatre, in Brooklyn, the initial Pathe feature was ushered in with a special "Holiday Comedy Carnival." The first of the series of comedies played was "Your Own Back Yard," which was featured next to intermission. The theatre-front-billing carried several one sheets on this comedy and others to follow, while large papier mache jester heads were mounted on the coping of the theatre.

At the Riverside, New York, "Our Gang" was given a prominent place in the list of vaudeville headliners while a comedy one-sheet was placed alongside the vaudeville billing on the theatre front. The opening scene of "Your Own Back Yard" was reproduced in the lobby. There was a back yard with a mechanical reproduction of the mammy of the picture washing clothes, a miniature cottage, fence, chickens, mule, goat, kids swinging on the gate, etc. This lobby display was entirely enclosed in glass and painted in bright colors. This back-yard display was lighted up brightly at night.

The 81st Street Theatre, New York, placed "Your Own Back Yard" in the marquee lights; the Royal printed a special window card with the "Gang" lined up across the top of a fireplace; while other Keith houses in New York exploited the new feature in various ways and gave it a good spot on the bills.

In the out of town houses just as much care was taken to give the new feature a big send-off. The Keith Theatre in Providence, R. I. working with the Providence News, has offered money prizes for the best suggestions from youths for scenario ideas for future "Our Gang" productions, a trip to the studio and a part in an "Our Gang" picture to the winner.

Stages Epilogue with 40 People for Song Car-Tune "My Bonnie"

SO impressed was Managing Director H. M. S. Kendrick with the entertainment value of the Ko-Ko Song Car-Tune, "My Bonnie," booked to play at the Mosque Theatre in Newark, that, together with Colby Harriman, his technical director, he proceeded to stage this Red Seal release precisely as though it were a feature picture. In addition to his orchestral overture and a male quartet during the playing of the film, he put on an epilogue calling for the services of forty people on the stage. It is believed that this is the first time so elaborate an act has been staged around a short feature.

The introduction to the film itself was played by the Mosque orchestra of fifty; suddenly the drummer gave his signal, a whistle, and the film was on, with the audience joining in the song. At the first chorus, a male quartet off-stage joined in and sang to the end.

As the Car-Tune ended, the lights went up on a Scotch mountain scene. A traveler looks over a high precipice into a valley. Faintly he hears music and begins to smile. The sound of the bagpipers, playing "My Bonnie," grows clearer and clearer, until they enter, together with twenty Scotch lassies. The troupe, under the leadership of Laddie McIntosh, played some Scotch melodies, while the girls, the Mosque ballet, did the Highland Fling. Several solo songs and dances, and then the pipes begin again, to be taken up by the orchestra. The curtain came down amidst a veritable tumult of applause.

Six Completed

W. Ray Johnston, President of Rayart Pictures Corporation, announces that Gerson Pictures Corporation have completed shooting of a series of Six Superior Melodramas for Rayart release. The present picture was directed by Oscar Apfel and is entitled "The Midnight Limited." It will star Gaston Glass, Wanda Hawley, and Richard Holt. The first of the Gerson series, produced by B. Berger, "The Pride of the Force," has just been booked by the Loew Circuit.

Marion McDonald "Steps Out"

Marion McDonald is the first of the 1925 Mack Sennett bathing girls to "graduate." Miss McDonald was promoted to the Sennett stock company this week when she signed a long term contract to appear in Sennett comedies for the next few years. Every year the comedy producer assembles a dozen young beauties to romp through his comedies in fetching beach costumes. From these ranks emerge the girls with real promise, to whom contracts are awarded. Miss McDonald has appeared in only one comedy so far, that was sufficient to convince Mr. Sennett that in the young Irish beauty he has a real find. Marion McDonald came to Hollywood six months ago from Boston. She has won several beauty contests.

New Century Comedy Year Starts With Record Breaking Week

THE new Century Comedies, the group of star series two-reelers being put out by the Century Film Corporation for the 1925-1926 season have definitely gone over the top with exhibitors, according to reports reaching the Universal home office as to the opening week's business.

This condition bears out the new Century policy, announced several months ago by Julius and Abe Stern, officials of the comedy company, who promised that the new season's output would far eclipse Century's past successes.

In carrying out Century improvement, the principal step was the acquisition of screen rights to the celebrated Buster Brown cartoons by R. F. Outcault. These are being made a straight comedies, with little Arthur Trimble, Doreen Turner and Pete the dog comedian in the roles of Buster, Mary Jane and Tige, respectively. These comedies have proven to be exceptional and are heralded as one of the best comedy buys in the market this fall. The big first run houses, which pre-released them unanimously hailed them as box-office pullers.

In addition to the series of twelve Buster Brown comedies scheduled for the coming year, Century's new output includes a series of twelve comedies starring Wanda Wiley, a series of twelve starring Edna Marian, and other comedies featuring Eddie Gordon, Al Alt and Charles King respectively.

H. M. Herbel, sales manager for Century, reporting from Chicago on the new outlook for Century Comedies, sends word that in every exchange visited by him during the past several weeks, Century business has been soaring as a result of the new releases.

Fox's $2,000,000 Comedy Program Comprised of Eighteen Two-Reelers; Six Completed

GEORGE E. "SPEED" MARSHALL is proving the wisdom of Fox Film Corporation in selecting him as comedy chief by the way he is packing punches into two reelers and getting pictures out on time on the Fox lot. The six production units under his supervision have already completed eighteen comedies, and six more are in work.

It was the extraordinary success last season of the Van Bibber comedies, based on Richard Harding Davis' stories, that won for Marshall the assignment as supervising director of all the two-reel comedies in the $2,000,000 Fox short subjects program this season.

With sumptuous settings and feature casts worthy of the stories by Richard Harding Davis, O. Henry and Mabel Herbert Urner, Marshall and the seven comedy directors under his command are proving that laugh-getters can be produced without slapstick.

Two of the new series of Van Bibber comedies, "The Sky Jumper," and "A Parisian Knight," were made under Marshall's personal direction. Robert P. Kerr has completed "The Big Game Hunter," "The Wrestler," and "The Feud," and is now preparing to film the sixth Van Bibber. Earle Fox is back as star in this series after playing an important role in the Supreme attraction, "Wages for Wives."

Daniel Keefe has just completed "Failure," third of the O. Henry series, with Harvey Clark as Lawyer Gootch and Kathryn McGuire as Tillie Jones. In a few days he expects to get under way with the fourth of the series. "Shoes," and "Transients in Arcadia" were the first two O. Henry films.

Albert Ray is in the midst of filming "Hold Everything," fourth of the Helen and Warren married life comedies, based on Mabel Herbert Urner's stories. Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley are playing the title roles, supported by Sidney Bracy, Frank Rice and Grace Darmond. The young newlyweds have finished "A Business Engagement," "All Aboard," and "The Peacemakers," under Ray's direction. There will be eight two-reel comedies in each of these three series.

Supervisor of Fox Comedy Productions

Imperial comedies, of which there will be twenty in the course of the season, are going forward rapidly. Director General Marshall drafted Robert Kerr from the Van Bibber lot to produce "The Brain Storm," with Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett in the leading roles and Larry Stears as the villain. Kerr will start another Van Bibber as soon as he has finished this Imperial.

Benjamin Stoloff is putting Georgie Harris and Barbara Leddy through their paces as the Jewish boy and his Irish sweetheart in "East Side, West Side," the first of a series of Irish-Jewish comedies that will be released under the Imperial brand.

Lew Seiler has just finished filming "Strong For Love," with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles and Stanley Blystone as the villain. Bryan Foy is hard at work on a new comedy as yet untitled.

Other Imperials already completed are "On the Go," "Sweet Marie," "Love and Lions," and "A Cloudy Romance," which have already been released; "The Heart Breaker" and "Heavy Swells."

In completing the remainder of the Fox comedy program, Director General Marshall will have the assistance of Felix Adler in writing comedy titles. Thomas Buckingham has just returned to the Fox lot and is preparing to launch an Imperial comedy.

Graves and Tryon Head Casts of Comedies on Pathe Schedule

A GREAT diversity of short feature entertainment is offered on the Pathe schedule for the week of October 18, which lists a Glenn Tryon two-reel comedy, a Ralph Graves two-reeler, chapter four of the Patheserial "Wild West," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," "Nazareth," a Biblical film; "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," Pathe Review and two issues of Pathe News.

"Good Morning, Madam," is the two-reeler with Ralph Graves and produced by Mack Sennett. Graves appears as a book agent, a role which gives him ample opportunities. Marvin Lobach, stout Sennett comedian, is Graves' pal in the book-selling enterprise and Thelma Parr is the sweet society girl who crosses Ralph's path and starts a romance. Others in the cast are Wm. McCall and Bud Ross. Lloyd Bacon directed.

"Cuckoo Love" offers Glenn Tryon in a two-reel comedy from the Hal Roach studios. In this comical society romance, Tryon is engaged to a young lady whose father once had an affair with a charmer at Palm Beach. When this charmer arrives for a visit and recognizes Tryon as an old admirer, complications come fast and furious. Katherine Grant, Chester Conklin, Jimmie Finlayson, Blanche Mehaffey, and Jane Sherman are the distinguished members of the cast. Fred L. Guiol directed.

"Ride 'Em, Cowboy," is the title of the fourth chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West," featuring Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson. In this episode a real Wild West rodeo with bucking steers and rough riding cowboys is staged in all its thrilling glory. An interesting development in the plot takes place when Bob Miller becomes possessed of the secret of Polly Breen's (Helen Ferguson's) identity. These scenes were staged on the 101 Ranch in Oklahoma with the Miller Brothers' show. Virginia Warwick, Gus Seville, Eddie Phillips, Fred Burns and Dan Dix appear in this chapter.

"Clever Feet" is the newest Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. In this reel, Producer J. L. Hawkinson shows how important clever feet are for the participants in all forms of athletics. Famous swimmers, baseball players, runners, skaters, dancers and others are shown in action with emphasis on the part their feet play in their efforts.

"Nazareth," the second release of the "Pilgrimage to Palestine" series of Biblical films, presents scenes of Christ's activities. "Bethlehem," the initial release of the series, was released on October 4. Three films are particularly adapted for showing during the forthcoming Christmas season.

Pathe Review No. 42 presents three entertaining subjects: "The Gorges of Rocamadour," a mountainside village in Central France in Pathecolor scenes; "Tree-Top Nurseries," first flashes of bird life; "Brides of the Northland," another of the "Here Comes the Bride" series.

"Air Cooled," one of the "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day," the world's best humor from the press, and two issues of the popular Pathe News complete the October 18 release schedule which is outstanding in its diversity of entertainment offered.

"Our Gang" Increased

Hal Roach announces that another kiddie actor has been added to the famous troupe known as "Our Gang," making one of the most popular series of Pathe comedies. The newcomer is a quiet little youngster with freckles and a diffident manner, bearing the name of "J. R." Smith. His mother says he was christened that and never before has felt the need of a longer first name. But, of course, an actor had to have an attractive name, so now he is known as Jay Smith. Director Robert McGowan believes that Jay has great possibilities.

Red Seal's October Ouput

Seven Featurettes Are Announced for Release For This Month

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal, announces seven subjects on his October schedule, completing the first sixteen of the announced ninety-five featurettes to be released this year.

"Daisy Bell" (On a Bicycle Built for Two") is this month's Ko-Ko Song Car-tune.

The second of the "Marvels of Motion," the films made by the revolutionary Fleischer-Novagraph process, is also on the list.

"Ko-Ko on the Run," which introduced a race between two clowns for the benefit of Broadway audiences at the Strand two weeks ago, is the month's "Out-of-the-Inkwell" contribution.

"Land's End" is another of the Gems of the Screen series. This shows the beautiful country at the far end of Wales, known as the "port of shipwrecked mariners."

Two more of the famous "Animated Hair Cartoons," by Marcus, the New York Times cartoonist, and another issue of the lively "Film Facts," this one called "Dance of All Nations," and recording choreography throughout the world, complete the list.

Joy Completes "The Orphan"

Al Joy, the well known English pantomime comedian has at last returned to the screen, after an absence of three years, during which time, he toured the world in vaudeville. Mr. Joy just completed "The Orphan" at the Ideal Studios, under the direction of Charles Brooks, which is the first, of a series of two reel comedies in which the comedian will be featured and presented by the Ricordo Films Inc., 1674 Broadway. In "The Orphan," Mr. Joy is supported by Rose Mass, Pierre Le Collosse, Lucio Lomey and Thomas Burrello. Mr. Joy starts next week on "The Old Gang" the second picture of the series.

Start Two-Reel Westerns

"The Man With the Scar," a two-reel western starring Fred Humes, is being made by Universal with William Crinley directing. Others in the cast are Colin Chase, Jack Pratt, Dan Paterson, Anton Vaverka and Morgan Brown.

"The Pinnacle Rider," another two-reel western, is also in course of production at Universal. Jack Mower is being starred in this picture with Willie Wyler directing. Velma Connor plays the leading feminine role.

Five Acres of Stage Space

A reception to mark the formal inauguration of the new Educational Studios at 7250 Santa Monica Boulevard, Los Angeles, was held at the Studio Saturday October 3, following completion of the final stage.

"We now have five acres of stage space, and the greatest comedy producing studio in the world," said Jack White, who is in charge of production at the Educational Studios in greeting the guests, who included many of the best known leaders of Filmland.

Here we are again—Short Subject reports right with the other items you need about the business building short but vigorous audience tickler.

When you fill out your regular report blank, sing out about the short subjects you used. VAN.

BOTTLE BABIES. (Pathe). Good comedy for the Spats as they have their usual spat and this one went over nicely. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Good attendance. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

CAKE EATER. (Pathe). Star, Will Rogers. Very good comedy that makes lots of people laugh. Unusual thing for most comedies. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 90 per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

EASY PICKIN'S (Educational). Star, Neal Burns. This one had a pippin of a burlesque on a boxing match that made the fans roar. Burns is becoming a favorite here with his comedies. Good tone and appeal. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

GRIEF IN BAGDAD. (Fox). Monkey stars. A burlesque on the famous Bagdad Thief and it is a good one, in fact about the best comedy the monkeys have appeared in to date. In many places the kids almost yelled their heads off. Play this, boys. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes, for Sunday. Draw general class, town about a thousand. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

GUEST OF HONOR. (Fox). This is the best two-reel comedy Fox has made this year. It had them roaring from start to finish. Give us more like it. Great appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

HYSTERICAL HISTORES. (Universal). These are simply awful. Rip Van Winkle and Olympic Games are the only ones worth playing. I'm off them for life. One reel. Farmers, town of 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

INTO THE NET. (Pathe). We have just finished this serial and had the pleasant surprise of using it to the complete satisfaction of our particular clientele. We heartily indorse the big improvement shown in this Pathe serial, not only in subject matter but also in the elaborateness of production. A. L. Child, Wells Ward, manager, Grant Stake Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah.

IRON NAG. (Pathe). A real one. Another new release and it came up to standard. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

JUST A MINUTE. (Pathe). A one-reel comedy that I didn't get to see, but reports say good. Farmers, town of 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

LOVE NEST. (First National). Star, Buster Keaton. This is a crackerjack two-reel comedy. I have run several Keaton comedies and have found them good. One Keaton fan said, "I always like Buster because he never smiles." He can pull some clever stunts, too. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes, for Sunday. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

NEAR DUBLIN. (Pathe). As usual, Stan Laurel pleases the gang. Print good. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

PLEASE TEACHER. (Universal). A fair comedy. Nothing to rave about. Farmers and Fromberg, Montana.

RADIO RIOT. (Fox). Here is a little of everything for comedy from Yankees to monkeys and savages. Has some laughable situations. Would call this a very fair comedy. Fair tone and appeal. Sunday, no. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

SEA LEGS. (Educational). Star, Neal Burns. A fine comedy with Neal Burns going through a lot of stunts that cause plenty of hearty laughter. The chap playing the sea captain was good. Tone, good. Good appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

SECRET SERVICE SANDERS. (Rayart). The best serial I have ever run in either of my houses, both from the standpoint of box office returns and pleasing my patrons. You can advertise this as the best and biggest serial you ever ran and it will back up your campaign. Action and thrills galore. I hope we get more like it. Neighborhood theatres. John Santo, 2110 Pascoe Street and 2007 W. 22d Street, Chicago, Illinois.

SHOES. (Fox-O. Henry). Boy! When you make old men laugh on rear seat you can say it is "some comedy!" Buy O. Henry and you get results. G. A. Peterson, Folly and Cozy Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

STRETCHING THE TRUTH. (Fox). A comedy telling the story of the ancient times and the three big liars, each one telling a story and each story is pictured. A very good comedy. Tone, good. Special, no. Fair appeal. General class town of 1,200. Admission 15-25. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit (250-700 seats), Union, Maine.

SUNSHINE AND IMPERIAL COMEDIES. (Fox). I run these right off of release date and they satisfy. They are hard to beat. G. A. Peterson, Folly and Cozy Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

TONS OF TROUBLE. (Fox). A very poor comedy and Fox has made some very poor ones this year. Print good. Poor appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

UNEASY FEET. (Educational-Hamilton). A dandy. Hamilton is always a success. This is one continual laugh from start to finish. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (450 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

UNIVERSITY OF THE NIGHT. (I. C. S.). Produced by International Correspondence Schools and deals with their school. Has a nice story, splendid photography. Should be played in every theatre for the benefit of the schools, as it carries a message that most every child will remember for some time to come. You can get this absolutely free of charge and it is worth more than many two reel subjects for which you pay good money. Book it, and get behind it with your school boards, as it will be well received and at the same time bring you some money in return. Get it. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

WAITING. (Educational-Hamilton). One of the rottenest two-reel comedies I ever ran. Hamilton willl have to go some if he makes another one like it. Not a laugh in it. If you have booked it, pay for it and let it out. Tone, none. Appeal 10 per cent. Draw city and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502 and 485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

WESTWARD WHOA! (Fox). Another of Fox's new comedies and people came to see comedy and second night! It's a real one, boys, believe me! Try it. If I am wrong, I pay the damages. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

WHY KIDS LEAVE HOME. (Pathe). This is a picture of Miller Brothers' 101 Ranch shows and is a very good subject for a filler. Use a little extra advertising on it. Print new. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Very good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

Selling the Picture to the Public

This Department Was Established September 23, 1911

Edited by Epes Winthrop Sargent

Makes Big Saving on His Display Ads And Also Gets Better Sales Results

SENDING in a bunch of advertisements, W. A. Burke, publicity director for the Silver Bow Amusement Company, of Butte, Mont, offers the opinion that it is a slightly different angle on theatrical advertising. He further adds that it seems to give

A Paramount Release

better than usual results, and at the same time costs the Rialto Theatre about $100 a week less than the usual display ads formerly used.

The idea is not as novel as Mr. Burke thinks. You will find it mentioned in Picture Theatre Advertising, where the idea is credited to the Howard Theatre, Boston, which made this style of advertising peculiarly its own for a great many years. Mr. Burke's style is slightly different, but the idea is virtually the same. We reproduce one of the examples.

There may seem to be small connection between the need for a new dress and Adventure. That's where part of the kick comes. Mr. Burke uses any small cut he can find at the printer's or drag out of the plan book stuff, and if you read him each day you get interested in seeing how he works from the headline to the sales copy. In this instance the kids want new shoes, the jitney wants new tires, the cat wants catnip and he will be wanting a job if he does not put over Adventure.

He starts to sell Adventure in the second paragraph and keeps it going down to the signature. Below that is a wise crack by the cat. The cat—you'll recognize the Pathe Felix, was drawn into the ads about the time the Coolidge cat was lost, and as "Myrtle" was made a feature of two or three spaces. It seems to have been dropped after a week or two, but it could enjoy a longer life, since it gives opportunity for a snapper to the main appeal.

Heads Are Varied

Mr. Burke writes that he could do better with specially drawn cuts, but we question this. We believe that having to use what he can makes him hustle harder and gives a

Here's to a Real Guy!

YOU could festoon the brow of Epes Winthrop Sargent with as noble a wreath of laurel as ever set a man apart, but it wouldn't mean a thing to Sargent. He could easily have become a Collector of Laurel, but he knew that his department in Moving Picture World would have diminished in value in direct proportion to the time spent in grooming the expectant brow.

Consequently Mr. Sargent said nothing—and sawed ideas out of TWO typewriters (Two, count them, TWO!). A lot of water has gone over the picture advertising spillway since Sargent inaugurated his department September 23, 1911. The tide today is a mighty one. Today, as then, Sargent is riding it.

Volumes could be written on the personality of Epes Winthrop Sargent—by scores of distinguished men in high office all over this country. This, written over his protest, is but a small measure of the esteem in which we hold this man who for fourteen years has held the admiration and the respect of an active industry —without a let-up.

We know that from coast to coast, the men to whose best interests Sargent has been ever loyal will gratefully rise with us to: "Here's to a real guy—Epes Winthrop Sargent!"—The Editor.

THE CHAPLIN FLOAT USED ON THE "GOLD RUSH" IN ASHEVILLE, N. C., AND THE HOUSE

The float was used for a week in advance of its showing at the Plaza Theatre, and T. L. Stelling used a similar figure for a lobby display as well as flinging a very assertive banner to the Southern breezes. An impersonation contest, announcement by a stock star at a drama house and a street worker in Chaplin make-up all helped get the picture a strong patronage.

Badged Seattle Newsboys for The Iron Horse

Newsboys Badged For Iron Horse

Some years ago it was a popular stunt to blanket newsboys for a coming attraction or to give them tickets for calling out a play title in connection with their paper sales, but the idea seems to have been forgotten of late.

EARNING A TICKET

But recently the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, dug out the idea and had huge celluloid buttons made for all newsboys, the lettering being: "Have you seen The Iron Horse at the Liberty?"

The boys wore these for an entire week and then were given a special morning performance of the Fox feature. If you cannot afford to have celluloid badges, you can at least make pasteboard ones and varnish them to give them durability.

more varied appeal. Writing around stock cuts long has been a favorite trick of the newspaper humorist, and it never fails to get attention. It's the fact that the cut does not match that helps make this interesting. It draws the reader down to the selling talk.

Space will not permit the reproduction of many of the examples. The one shown is fairly typical. A man offering a price card starts off with the statement that thirty cents will buy four pork chops, a gallon of gas or two plugs of chewing tobacco, while a Christmas ornament wishes the patron the season's good will 201 days ahead of time, the Christmas greeting in midsummer being an especially good attractor.

The copy is changed every day, generally a two sevens, always with a white space to the left with the program set in. The essential is that the copy be breezy and selling. If you can write jazzy talk, you can get away with it nicely and sell more than you can with a four tens of display.

One of the early stunts was a contest for a name. The spaces had been used off and on for a considerable time, always with the signature "the Ad. Man." Burke offered a season pass for the best name, and so many replies were received that the decision was delayed for several days.

It was stipulated that the name suggestion be accompanied by a letter telling the writer's reaction to the advertisements, and the winner's letter gives a good sidelight on the pull of the stunt. Joe Duffy wrote:

MR. AD MAN:—

When your ads first appeared I tolerated them. As they continued, I felt like stopping the paper.

Names I originated to fit you embodied everything from "Sap" to "Damphool."

The wife sez: "Why do you read 'em?"

I wondered. "Why do I?—Why does anyone read 'em?"

Inviting criticism of your methods made me think: "If I read 'em, so do others! If I doubt your claims concerning the Rialto productions, others do also."

Result—We attend performances, trusting to be amused, yet secretly hoping you have touted us wrong.

You win!—So do your advertisements.

I suggest for a name, "THE AMUSEMENT PILOT."

That's one of the reasons, but we think the real answer is that people get interested in the breezy style and keep on reading just to see what he has to say and how cleverly he can connect the headline with the sales talk.

Unless you can write really readable copy this style is fatal, but if you can there is no better seller, and Burke has used no other style for three months, and is still going strong.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

The sixth anniversary of the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre was celebrated with a program 2 hours and 6 minutes in length, with Richard Barthelmess in "Shore Leave" as the feature photoplay, running 1 hour and 15 minutes. Film subjects in addition to the feature were the Mark Strand Topical Review, running its accustomed 8 minutes; an especially made anniversary greeting film, a brief birthday salutation by Moe Mark, and a preliminary title to the prologue from "Pagliacci." Altogether the film part of the show took up 1 hour and 27 minutes, leaving 39 minutes for the musical presentations. The latter consisted of: "Pagliacci" prologue, sung by baritone, "Second Hungarian Rhapsody" as the overture by the orchestra, "Divertissements Populaire," introducing favorites of the stage and radio, and an atmospheric prologue to "Shore Leave."

Each de luxe performance opened with especially made title of salutation. During the run of the salutation film, the archestra played "Auld Lang Syne" and the lights were as follows: 2 light blue Mestrum floods of 150 amperes on the orchestra from the dome; large stage, blue foots and borders. From projection-room light green and light blue spots crossing on ceiling drapes. At the conclusion of the salutation film, the orchestra went into the prologue from "Pagliacci," and at the same time an introductory title for this was flashed on the screen. The baritone appeared from behind the purple spangled draw-curtains in correct operatic costume. The lights were the same as in the preceding number, with a light blue spot on the singer from the booth. Five minutes for this prologue.

The orchestra played Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody," with an original piano cadenza by Lilly Kovacs, girl pianist. The lights: 2 dark magenta floods from the dome covering the orchestra and apron of the stage. Small flower basket on piano in which baby spot was hidden to pick out the girl pianist when she did the cadenza: ceiling spots of light green and light blue remained as in the preceding number, with 2 light green spots on the mirror mosaic vases in the window on either side of the stage; 4 arch spots hitting the purple draw-curtains with a light magenta, a light blue, straw and a light green. This overture 9 minutes.

Next came the anniversary greeting film, 4 minutes long, in which were worked pictures of Mr. Mark and Edward L. Hyman and several of the favorite Mark Strand artists of stage and radio.

"Divertissements Populaire," the biggest presentation on the bill, ran 20 minutes. The scene was set with the black cyclorama joined with a painted scrim 5 feet wide and 26 feet long. Wicker furniture with wicker lamp and huge basket of wisteria 10 feet high were among the props. The selections ran as follows: "If I Had A Girl Like You," by the Cortland Mark Dance Orchestra; "Pal of My Cradle Days," by contralto, with a tableau as a finish for the second verse, this tableau showing a mother seated before a cradle. "Cecilia," sung by baritone, assisted by 6 girls of the ballet corp. "Heebee Geebees" by banjoist; "Let Me Linger Longer In Your Arms" by soprano, assisted by the dancers; "Twelfth Street Rag" by xylophonist; "Carme Carme" by baritone, assisted by the dancers; "Let It Rain, Let It Pour" by the ensemble as the closing number, with rain effect for finish. The dancers made change of costume for each selection in which they appeared and the lights likewise were changed for each selection. The predominating lights were amber.

After the Mark Strand Topical Review came the atmospheric prologue to "Shore Leave." This scene represented a wharf about the Brooklyn Bridge with the New York skyline on the opposite side. This drop was a transparency by P. Dodd Ackermann, showing up the lights on the bridge and in the buildings across the river, as well as the lights on the boats which were passing up and down the river. A moon light effect was thrown on the water. Eight people appeared in this, 4 men and 4 girls. The men were in white sailor suits and the girls had on white skirts with tan sweaters. At the opening a ukulele and a harmonica took up "Ukulele Lady," while the rest of the characters danced on the wharf. A baritone then sang "Three for Jack" as the closing selection of the prologue and the feature picture was started immediately.

White's Useful Stage for Lobby Display

A Paramount Release

THIS IS OSCAR WHITE'S VERSION OF NEW YORK CITY

This small stage is a permanent fixture in the Liberty Theatre, Greenwood, S. C. It has been used for a number of titles and is shown dressed for Night Life in New York. It may not look like Broadway, but it made a hit in Greenwood.

Miniature Stage Has Many Angles

Many towns seem to gauge the value of a picture by the importance of the lobby display. This is particularly true of the smaller towns, and no one knows this better than Oscar White, now at the Liberty Theatre, Greenwood, S. C.

We show on this page a picture of a stunt recently evolved by him, and which already has done good service on three titles. It is a miniature stage, the size of which may be judged by comparison with the lobby in which it stands. It nearly fills the opening.

For its first use Mr. White made a stage setting with a picture screen. Obtaining permission from the city authorities to dowse the street lights in the vicinity of the lobby; (in itself no mean accomplishment), he used the screen for the projection by a toy projector, of the trailer on Sally during the run of that picture, adding trailers on other coming features. When the trailers were run off, he would drop the curtain, throw on the lights, and a large percentage of the crowd would go in to see Sally. As soon as the lobby cleared, he would start in again.

The following week he took down the screen and set into place a Rocky Mountain scene with an electric train running across the foreground. This made a profitable display on Riders of the Purple Sage.

The third week he built up a skyline effect, as shown in the cut, for Night Life in New York. He left the toy train down, finding it an unusual attractor, but he actually laid a cement pavement, (with three street lamps,) on which stood an automobile advertising the picture and another with a banner for The Lucky Devil, an underline.

And here is a good tip for you who make these small scenes now and then. Mr. White's stage was too small to use grass mats, so he got his grass effect through the use of a treated sawdust sold under various names and used to prevent dust when sweeping bare floors. It is very inexpensive and can be had at a price that is within reach of slender advertising appropriations. The same effect can be had by dyeing sawdust green. Just paint the surface with glue, sprinkle the sawdust down and you have really convincing grass.

How about that Potato Matinee for a Thanksgiving stunt?

Twelve-Foot Wheels Sell The Gold Rush

One of the stunts that put The Gold Rush over to two unusual weeks at the Victory Theatre, Denver, was a unique perambulator. This was mostly a pair of wheels twelve feet in diameter, drawn by a diminutive burro which was led by a Chaplin impersonator. On top of the wheels was a box supposed to contain snow, but it does not seem to add much to the advertising value and might well be left off.

Building details are lacking, but we presume that the wheels were made of light stuff, since they were only for temporary use. The theatre name might have been added with good results, though other billing had told the town where the picture could be seen.

The house front was bannered with a back drop showing an arctic landscape, with the cutout of Chaplin in the foreground. This was flanked by profile fir trees, with painted snow. Scenes from the lithos were pasted at the base of the trees.

A candy store was tied to a display of "gold rush nugget" candies, presumably a form of taffy. The window carried a nicely painted snow scene, with a mine and a "real" car emerging from the tunnel. This completely filled the window and got attention for the comedy and the candy.

A prologue included The Shooting of Dan McGrew. We just knew that someone would pull that for a prologue. Wonder if they used Gunda Din for an encore!

Won Ten Block Parade for Iron Horse

Ten Block Parade Aided Iron Horse

Almost everywhere the railroads have been eager to come in on the publicity of "The Iron Horse," but an exceptional co-operation was provided for the Fox release at Portland, Oregon. Charles E. Couche and Frank Lacey, of the Empire Theatre, arranged with the Union Pacific Railway for the loan of the first locomotive used on that road.

This was mounted on a low truck and dragged through the streets by a tractor, forming the main feature of a parade that covered more than ten blocks. It was aided by the band from the U. P. shops, and was closed by a little band of Indians in full war paint. The rest of the parade was mostly automobiles, six of them carrying locomotive bells, which were rung continuously during the parade in addition to that on the engine.

The parade finished in front of the Majestic, where the locomotive was parked for the week, and the band gave a concert in front of the house. All of the newspapers carried stories, which with the cuts aggregated 260 inches of space.

The Oregonian was permitted to act as host to all pioneers who came into Oregon on the railroad prior to 1885, and also sponsored an orphans' matinee, the local Elks providing the transportation for the children.

Four painted signs, each 12 by 60 feet, were erected on the four main automobile highways. Each carried a built out engine front. Forty of the regular 24-sheets also were posted.

Motion pictures of the parade were shown in three other houses, and three windows were given over to the picture, one carrying the trailer and the others model locomotives.

The trailer was run at a special booth at the County Fair. Opening on August 1, the picture held business up all through that month and was going strong in its sixth week.

A Fox Release

OREGON'S FIRST IRON HORSE FEATURED IN A PARADE

The parade, which was staged by the Union Pacific, was ten blocks long and included the UP shop band and a dozen Indians in full war paint. It drew about 260 column inches of pure reading matter with two and three cuts to each story.

Collected Lincolns

Here's a new angle of the tin can matinee. W. F. Brock arranged with a local newspaper to print a coupon good for an admission to the Strand Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., a week before the showing of Abraham Lincoln, provided that a photograph of painting of Lincoln was handed in at the same time. Newspaper and magazine clippings were not accepted.

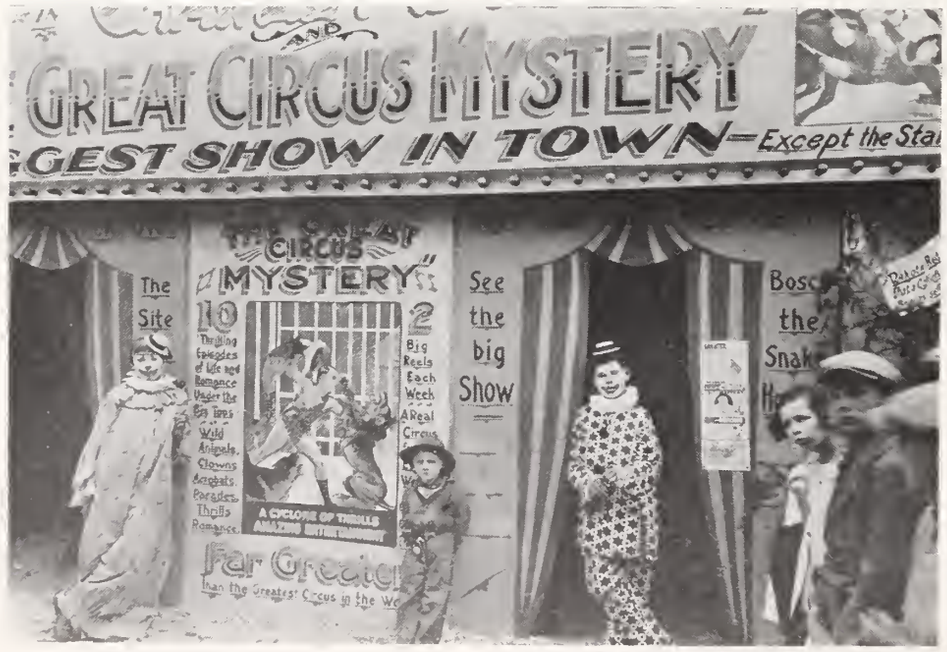
This gave a number of pictures of Lincoln for use as a lobby display, and the loan exhibition was a better attractor than the usual lithographic lobby. The pictures were returned after the showing.

Tarpon Was Caught In Rugged Water.

Fate smiled on Charlie Morrison when he came to play Rugged Waters at the Imperial Theatre, Jacksonville. He had arranged for a display of fishing tackle in a prominent store and just before the picture opened the manager of the tackle department caught a large tarpon, which was displayed in the window with the statement that it was "caught in the Rugged Water at Mayport," the latter being a small village just inside the mouth of the St. John's river.

The fish halted hundreds, and they all stopped to read the sign and look at the pictures.

Lem Stewart had advised the ever-useful Life-saver cooperation, but the picture was booked on short notice and Morrison did not have time to make arrangements, so he did the next best thing. He printed up cards reading: "Enjoy any of the five flavors in candy Life-savers, then see real life savers in Rugged Water, etc." He put these over the display cases in most large stores in the business district, and they seemed to help.



A Universal Release

ANOTHER GOOD FRONT IN THE GREAT CIRCUS MYSTERY

This was framed by the Strand Theatre, Calgary. P. D. Egan was playing the first chapter just ahead of a rodeo and made an extra splash to get the visitors to town. The clowns rubed the crowd until they had to go inside to let the patrons get in.

Spotting Ball Stars

Baseball is going into its Winter eclipse, but before that happened the Lyceum Theatre, Bayonne, N. J., got the Universal serial, Play Ball firmly established through an identification contest worked by the Evening News as a circulation scheme.

For five days the newspaper published each day half of the face of baseball stars, and prizes ranging from an outfit down to just bats were given for the most complete identifications.

There were 13 prizes in all, the youngsters were on the job early and late, while the fathers learned about the serial through their work in helping the boys make the identification.

Lost World Stunts Prolong Paris Run

A First National Release

PARISIAN SANDWICH MEN PARADING FOR THE LOST WORLD

Dummy legs suggest that they are sitting in theatre chairs and the back signs proclaim that they are happy because they have purchased seats at the Cameo to see "Le Monde Perdue." Try this idea.

Old Time Stunts Amuse Parisians

The "because I am a jackass" stunt has reached Paris at last. And Paris laughed. It was one of the lesser ideas used on the Parisian run of The Lost World, known as Le Monde Perdue.

Another, not so common, was the old Lone Fisherman. A man was stationed on one of the bridges over the Seine. At intervals he would "catch" and land a highly painted property fish, properly titled for the play and theatre. After everyone had seen it, he would toss it back into the river to be caught again in a few minutes.

Two sandwich men were provided with reproductions of theatre seats, hung from their waists like basket horses. A dummy lap and legs suggested a seated person, the actual legs being concealed by drapes. On the back of each chair was painted: "Naturally I am happy. I have just bought a seat at the Cameo to see Le Monde Perdue."

A more original idea was a Columbus with an egg announcing that he had discovered a new world, while a companion in modern dress carried a globe declaring that he had discovered the last world."

These ideas gained laughs, and a laugh sells seats better than the strongest argument.

Got Golfers

It had nothing whatever to do with The Street of Forgotten Men, but Bruce Taylor, of the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, got a fine business on that picture with an appeal to the country clubs.

A cameraman made motion pictures of the professional and best players of each club, and one set was shown each night of the run, all members being notified of the date of the showing of their club.

This also was tied in to the stores handling sporting goods and sports clothes.

As there were some 1,500 members to appeal to, there was considerable extra business made.

Ties Two Shelties To Black Cyclone

A voting contest that not only sold Black Cyclone but goodwill was staged by the Victory Theatre, Denver, for this production in which Rex is starred.

It was figured that this was a picture to interest the entire family, and that it could be sold through the horse angle, so Shetland ponies were offered to the two most popular mothers in Denver, and the Post was declared in on the event, in return for more publicity than the cost of the ponies represented.

The moment the contest was announced the youngsters were after their mothers to enter. Mother might not appreciate a pony, but they would, and most small boys can persuade their mothers to do anything within reason, so there was a large entry.

Then, of course, "Pop" and the rest of the family had to get a hustle on for the sake of the family honor, and the battle was fair-mission to The Black Cyclone, and the Post also printed a coupon to be used in the balloting. The kids were given permission to electioneer in the lobby, so long as they did not annoy the patrons, and they were able to wheedle the votes from those who had no entry of their own.

Tremendous totals were rolled up and there was no comeback from those who failed to win, since all had an equal chance. If you have played The Black Cyclone, save the idea for the next picture. The pony will pay for itself with any reasonable seating capacity.

And the pony, either in the lobby or at the curb, makes a wonderful ballyhoo.

Masqued Don Q

Some 7,000 persons attended a movie ball at an amusement park in Spokane lately, and the chief figure was a masked man in the costume of Don Q. It was explained that Fairbanks had hoped to be present, but was too busy on his next picture, and so sent a deputy. It was the next best thing to Fairbanks himself.

That and a whip-cracking contest for boys, ostensibly sponsored by the Spokane Press, held business up for a record ten days in the face of Interstate Fair week.

Where Luck Lies

A perambulator with a laugh was used by the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y., on The Lucky Devil. This was a battered old Ford "racer" bannered with a sign reading "I'll be the lucky devil if I get to the Broadway in time to see Richard Dix."

Charles R. Hammerslough not only did the largest three days' business up to date, but he knocked the Saturday night's record into atomic particles.

Fine Dance Effect With Flasher Lights

Made Dancer Dance in Lobby Display

Adapting an old stunt, and simplifying the idea, George E. Findley, mechanical engineer of the Saenger Theatres in Shreveport, La., got out a lobby display for Her Sister from Paris that had them standing around as long as the lights were on.

This circular display was outlined with lights on a chaser flasher, and as it looks in the cut it would have been a pretty effect, but that's not half of it.

Back of that miniature stage in the centre there was the figure of a nude dancer. Back of the cutout were four lights, green, red, amber and pink, which flashed in rotation. Each light gave a slightly different shadow on the screen, and the rapid rotation gave the effect of a dancing movement that had the passers-by puzzled.

Try This Experiment

If you want to get an idea of the effect, cut out the figure of a woman from any picture, paste it to a sheet of white paper so that the middle of the figure bulges a little. Hold a lighted match back of that section and give it a rotary motion and you'll get a very good imitation of a coochie dancer. Instead of rotating his light, Mr. Findley used four fixed lights, but the effect is about the same. You can work this effect with a single light mounted slightly off centre on a wheel that is slowly rotated by a motor. If you put the wheel outside the two supports for the axle you will have no trouble with the light connection since a sample cord will suffice. A little experimenting will give you just the right distance and you'll get a surprisingly good effect.

Boy Racers

Hooking to the Seattle Star, the Columbia Theatre got a lot of good publicity for California Straight Ahead through a set of pushmobile races.

There were so many entries that the race was divided into three sections, or rather two trial heats and a playoff.

The course was over a down grade several blocks long, and police guarded the side streets during the course of the three races. Each boy was entitled to a "mechanic" who gave him a ten-foot start, and each driver and mechanic was given a ticket to the matinee performance.

The first race was the Seattle Star Handicap and the second was the Columbia Theatre Derby. The third race, the California Straight Ahead Sweepstakes, was limited to the first three in each of the previous races. There were three merchandise prizes in each race, the larger being for the sweepstakes, in which the prizes were $15, $10 and $5.

A TRAVELING BALLYHO FOR THE IRON HORSE IN TOLEDO

The Mayor is shown shaking hands with Emanuel Mandelbaum, owner of the Temple Theatre, with Manager Jack O'Connell next in line for the grip. The soldiers were contributed by the Army recruiting service. The loco is a converted automobile.

A Don Q Reporter Questioned Town

For the Boston run of Don Q, Mark Larkin adapted the Inquiring Reporter idea, hooking to the Boston Traveler.

Each day a man made up as Fairbanks asked questions of the pedestrians, rewarding those who answered correctly with tickets and subscriptions to the newspaper. The questions related to local matters, such as the location of well known centres and historical facts; the latter put in to make it more difficult to reply. Each day for four weeks the paper carried a story of Don Q's experiences, and a deal of publicity was achieved. The paper also put out 3,500 tack cards on the stunt and bannered its delivery wagons.

The cost of the idea was one thousand monthly subscriptions at 55 cents and $100 for a prize essay on Boston to be competed for by all who had answered the questions. That worked out at around $130 a week for the five weeks of the run.

A radio stunt was the repetition of the story of Don Q each evening with the offer of tickets for the best Don Q adventures. This was defined as one in which the son reflected glory upon his father. The radio gave special emphasis to the father and son angle and suggested that fathers bring their boys to see the show.

The Boston Advertiser gave two weeks of publicity to a tango contest at a restaurant, and the latter ran a display ad for three days in return for the cup and the hook-in value of the idea.

Ernest Morrison, of the Imperial Theatre, Asheville, N. C., made his lobby into a theatre dressing room for the run of Pretty Ladies. He set a long pine table in the lobby with the usual make up material in front of each of several chairs, and to each chair he tied the cutout of a woman. It looked real enough to interest Asheville in the play.

AN OPENING ANNOUNCEMENT

York openings, and probably was suggested by the Strand's special preview on the same picture, The Gold Rush. The opening ad is much better than the advance teasers, and the space is a four elevens, which gives it leading position on the theatrical page. The best feature from angle is the border of white on top and sides. This gets a display attention for the space where the star and title are buried in the drawn design. The best part of the type display is the program, where the items are presented in a manner that lets it all get over.

Includes Contest In Cyclone Space

Ralph Ruffner, of the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., sends in an attractive cross page tens on Black Cyclone in which one of his attractors is a hook to a very liberal drawing contest on the picture. Ruff writes that this contest works just as well for him as did the original contest on Black Beauty when Vitagraph first introduced this very valuable stunt for that picture. The attention getting value of that "$100 free" is not to be denied. If it interested only those who competed, it would have a real value, but that panel is going to get the close attention of every reader. The man or woman who is not a contestant will read the offer to find out about the free money. This will centre attention on the cut, and there are few who can resist the appeal of fine horseflesh. The cut would sell well without the prize offer, but the latter clinches the interest. The first prize is $50 with $25, $15 and $10. Ruff can afford this with his large capacity. He goes a little beyond the ordinary contest in that he requires the drawing to be in colors. He has a long entrance which carries the patron through a business block and across the next street to where real estate is cheaper, so he has a ready-made art gallery such as few houses enjoy. There is a characteristic touch in the line "enacted almost entirely by a cast of proud horseflesh in the rugged Nevada wilderness." The display is nicely done. There is a lot of type over on the left, because there is a lot to be said, but it is all held subordinate to the title line. That dominates the space in only a ten line letter, and the rest is held so clear that the signature and the prize offer stand out prominently though the signature is only seven-eights of an inch high. Many managers would think this too small for a two column space, but Ruff knows that size is less important than prominence, and by the handling of the general display he throws up the signature so that you get the house and title at first glance though they are separated by almost the entire height. Ralph knows that he does not need a four inch signature just because he has a large space. He knows how he can use that space to better advantage, so he plans accordingly.

Appreciated Cards

Charles R. Hammerslough, of the Broadway Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y., did not have to force his cards on anyone at a recent community outing attended by about a thousand. He had them asking for cards instead of shaking their heads when they were offered.

The slips were 2 by 8 inches and one side was printed: "If you don't know me, I'll get a friend to 'Introduce Me' at the Broadway Theatre, Tomorrow, Friday and Saturday. You'll get the laugh of your life."

The reverse carried a press book cut for Introduce Me; one of the single column cuts of MacLean in his mountaineering costume that showed up well. It was cheap, and vastly effective. Everyone knew the title and received a favorable impression.

Clean Type Space Cleans Up Boston

Boston is about the last place in the country to look for a good display ad, yet this 75x3 on The Fool is for the opening of that play at Tremont Temple. This was placed on the text dramatic page, instead of the sol l page of amusement advertising, but it could have gone into the latter and still have held its own with the jumble of cuts and hand lettering that make the Boston amusement pages so unlovely. There is something solidly substantial about this that suggests something different from the usual picture—and better—and the sales value of the typography is greater than would be the case were the other advertisements better set. This is about the best set advertisement that we ever found in a Boston paper, and it is not the type alone which counts. It is good argument for this type of play. It will appeal to the class of persons who will most greatly enjoy it. The very fact that it so little suggests a theatre advertisement will help the sale of the story to those who are interested in this play and not at all in plays and pictures in general. It is not a flashy piece of work, but it is one of the best examples of good selling that we have shown in a long time.

REX THE WILD HORSE IN Black Cyclone
There Below Stood "The Killer," of Evil Eye, Pirate! Usurper! With Death Hidden in His Cruel Hoofs! —Come to Rob "Black Cyclone" of His Beloved Mate!
Unbridled and Untamed! Born to the wilds unafraid, as fearless as a knight, "Black Cyclone" awaited the coming of his enemy! Beside him stood "Lady," her white coat gleaming in the sunlight like the robe of a bride! How she adored this mate! this valiant and Regal "Black Cyclone," who, like a statue carved from onyx, with the blood of battle in his vens, stood waiting for the death struggle with this vandal horse who would rob him of his Lady—Lady, whom he had wooed and won in the lonely stillness as the Red Fire died in the West.
A picture so big, so gripping, so filled with the things that stir the heart that you will sit spellbound, held enchanted by the magic of its story!
Enacted almost entirely by a cast of proud horseflesh in the rugged Nevada wilderness
THIS PICTURE IS THE TALK OF THE FILM INDUSTRY — just now. See it without fail. It's wonderful.

Good Advertising Ideas from Many Cities

Plaza Must Be A Funny House

If the Plaza Theatre, San Diego, Calif., is "Dimpled, Daring and Dangerous," it must be well worth a look, but we take it that these adjectives apply to the show and not to the theatre, and are put alongside the signature because there was not room further down. Most patrons will get the right idea, but it would have been better to have moved these down or to have moved the title up to where the house signature is. It's just as good for effect and will then be appropriate.

Second Week Space On The Iron Horse

TOO FULL

loses some of the effect of that "held over by public demand for another week" through the use of a letter so heavy and so closely set that you have to stop and read it. Set in a smaller, fancy letter in the same space, upper and lower case, the idea could have been put over at a glance. Of course most of the theatregoers will know this is a hold-over, and will guess the reason, but there is a moral value to the statement that makes it worth while to put it over in strong type, but strong type does not mean railroad gothic. Washington printers generally do better than this.

Good Text Best Sale for Connie

This panel is the Sunday appeal of the Allen Theatre, Cleveland. It drops about two tens, and most of the selling is done in the upper half of the space, where there is a good bank of type to back up the fairly good portrait of the star. Perhaps a costume pose would have been better on this picture, but this does very well. The small features are well displayed and hand work is used only where it will give results. It is an attractive display calculated to react favorably on behalf of the picture.

The Limited Mail Rounding a Curve

This three tens from Cleveland on The Limited Mail suggests that the mail train must run on the Erie, which is said to have more curves to its mileage than any other road in the country. But curving the title gets more attention than a straight line probably would, though it is not enough off the regular to be difficult to read. The cut of the head-on locomotive is somewhat lacking in detail, but this is an advantage rather than a defect. What is wanted is the suggestion of the railroad atmosphere rather than a microscopic picture of an engine, and this is less distracting to the attention than one with greater detail. This is a point some art rooms are apt to overlook. They laboriously work in the details where they often detract from the strength of the cut. This picture would not possess half the strength did the cut show every bolt on the boiler head. They are not trying to sell the engine, but the title, and they do this more effectively with an impressionistic sketch. Some of that hand lettering might be replaced with type to real advantage, but this is a generally good display.

All Lit Up

In addition to being dressed as Colleen Moore in The Desert Flower, the girl ushers at the Palace Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, carried small railroad lanterns instead of the usual flashlights to take patrons to their seats.

Exhibition Information Direct from the Box-Office to You

Edited by A. Van Buren Powell

Boys, these tips are contributed by us, exhibitors like yourselves, to help you pick the pictures that are most likely to please your patrons.

"It is my utmost desire to help my fellow man"—that's our motto. We play fair by you and by the pictures we have run.

You can help us in return for our willingly given tips. Send reports on the pictures you have used—especially late releases. "OUR GANG."

Associated Exhibitors

BARRIERS BURNED AWAY. (6,226 feet). Star cast. A very good picture of the Chicago fire. Should please any type of patronage. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BATTLING BUNYAN. Star, Wesley Barry. This is a very good picture, but the star is not what he was several years ago and does not draw near as well. Print new. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

LONE WOLF. (6 reels). Star, Jack Holt, with Dorothy Dalton. Didn't get to see this, but reports say too many dark night scenes, but good aeroplane shots. Business no good on account of revival meeting. Draw farming and town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

F. B. O.

BLOODHOUND. (4,800 feet). Star, Bob Custer. Star making better pictures with each new release. This is full of action and is great for a Saturday showing. Paper great. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BLOODHOUND. (4,800 feet). Star, Bob Custer. A good story, well acted and excellently photographed, put this over. Not a western—a fact which disappointed a few (a very few) of the Saturday night bunch. However, the production is very entertaining and proves that Bob can act in Northwoods pictures; but—now that we KNOW it—let's, in the future, keep him in westerns! Fair tone, good appeal. Sunday, yes, here. No as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

CLOUD RIDER. Star, Al Wilson. This is a good program picture. It sure has some good airplane stunts in it. The scenery is very good also. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

DESERT FLOWER. (6,837 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Boys, this is a pippin—and so is Colleen! Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

GIRL OF THE LIMBERLOST. (6,500 feet). Star, Gloria Grey. This is a dandy and had the best drawing power of anything that ever showed in this town. It drew people in that never came to a moving picture theatre before. Fine tone. Appeal best yet. Yes Sunday and special. Draw all classes, small town, 500. Admission 10-15. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

HIGH AND HANDSOME. (6 reels). Star, Lefty Flynn. F. B. O. has the product that pleases the people and the exhibitor both, and should be supported by every exhibitor in the country for they at least give you a chance to live. The picture in question has fine tone, excellent appeal, is all right for Sunday and almost a special. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

LADY ROBINHOOD. (5,580 feet). Star, Evelyn Brent. This is about the poorest picture this new star has made. Many more like this and she is due for a flop. The rest of her pictures are great. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Poor appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

LIFE'S GREATEST GAME. (7,010 feet). Star, Johnnie Walker. This makes a fairly interesting picture. Did not draw for me, though. Good tone. Fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw all classes, town 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

MILLIONAIRE COWBOY. (4,841 feet). Star, Lefty Flynn. Absolutely nothing to these pictures here. No pep or anything else. Good tone. Appeal nil. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER. Star, Richard Talmadge. Not as fast as some of the other Talmadge productions, but it was interesting enough to hold the audience to their seats. Some fast action in spots kept 'em guessing. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER. Star, Richard Talmadge. Fine picture, some good acting. Dick sure takes a chance of breaking his neck. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 98 per cent. Farm class, town of 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

O. U. WEST. Star, Lefty Flynn. This is a very good western story. Has a little comedy all through the picture. I had some very good comments on this one from my western picture fans. Tone O. K. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

RANGE TERROR. (4,738 feet). Star, Bob Custer. My people like western stories, and Bob certainly drew them in with this one. Good tone and appeal. Sunday or special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, manager, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

SMOOTH AS SATIN. (6,043 feet). Star, Evelyn Brent. Another good story from this star. Don't be afraid to boost it. Male star in this picture growing popular with the ladies. Print good. Very good tone. Good appeal. Sunday and special yes. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

STEPPING LIVELY. (5,317 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Pleased the kids but the story too shallow for adults. That is the one weakness of Talmadge productions. Print was not in very good shape. Tone, good. A family picture. Not a special. Fair appeal. Better class, town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TEARING THROUGH. Star, Richard Talmadge. Another very good picture for action fans. Transient trade houses should use Chinese lobby on this as it has lots of Chinatown scenes. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Very good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

WILD BULL'S LAIR. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. This is a good western and it drew good business. Pleased patrons. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

WOMAN WHO SINNED. (6,500 feet). Star, Rich Busch. A good picture and I played it to a good sized crowd, who all seemed well pleased. Well acted throughout. Good tone and appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw all classes, town 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

First National

BAD MAN. (6,404 feet). Star, Holbrook Blinn. This picture will draw and should please, as the name has drawing power; part is not so "bad" as it is advertised, but has enough action to get by. No as to tone, Sunday or special. Appeal 75 per cent. Draw town and country class; town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

CHILDREN OF THE DUST. (6,228 feet). All star cast. A good picture; the children have a great part in this picture. Good story, good acting. Be sure and play this one. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

CIRCUS DAYS. (6,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Played this last summer, but you can still get it. Not so good as some of Coogan's, but his name is all that's necessary here. Tone, good. Sunday, Yes. Special, no. Appeal, 98 per cent. Farmers, town of 110. Admission 10-24. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

HER TEMPORARY HUSBAND. (6,722 feet). Star cast. Proved to be a very acceptable offering. Lots of comedy. Tone, good. Appeal, good. Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

INEZ FROM HOLLYWOOD.. Star, Lewis Stone. Fair entertainment. Tone, fair. Sunday, maybe; special, no. Appeal, 75 per cent. Small town class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

IN HOLLYWOOD WITH POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (6,750 feet). Star cast. A fair opening on Monday fell to less than half on Tuesday. I consider it a good, satisfying picture, although it cost too much to make any money here; I split about even with it. Tone, none; good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed classes, town 2,900. Admission 10-25, specials 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

JEALOUS HUSBANDS. (6,500 feet). All star cast. The title is a drawback to this picture. Consider it a good picture: good story, good acting. Fair tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Sunday or special no. Draw town and country class, town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star cast. Extraordinary sensational crowd-pulling picture at advanced admission of fifty and twenty-five cents. Everybody pleased. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Immense audience appeal. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

NECESSARY EVIL. (8,307 feet). Star, Viola Dana. A fine little picture. Ben Lyons is fine, and so is Viola. This is a little different from the usual run of pictures and on that account it is very enjoyable. Tone O. K. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town of 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

PAINTED PEOPLE. (5,700 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. A dandy comedy-drama that will please any house. Good acting by Colleen and good story in seven reels. Fair tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Sunday or special no. Draw town and country class, town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

PERFECT FLAPPER. (7 reels). Star, Colleen Moore. Real good. Colleen in a class by herself: comes near being a special. Good tone and appeal. Sunday no. Draw small town class, 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Canon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

PONJOLA. (7 reels). Star, James Kirkwood, A. Q. Nilsson. A good picture—good acting, good story. The name is a drawback to picture for small towns, but it will please if you can get them in. Fair tone. Appeal 80 per cent. Sunday or special no. Draw town and country class, town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (7,700 feet). Stars, Barney Bernard, Alex Carr. A little old, but still well worth showing if you haven't already. Good tone and appeal. Sunday no. Draw small town class, town 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

POTASH AND PERLMUTTER. (7,700 feet). Star cast, Alex Carr, Barney Bernard. Here is a good "Jew" comedy that will please anywhere. Good acting, good story. Fair tone. Appeal 90 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 700. Admission 10-20. W. F. Denny, Electric Theatre (250 seats), Lowry City, Missouri.

Fox

AS NO MAN HAS LOVED. Special cast. Great! Pleased 100 per cent. But if you will advertise it "The Man Without A Country" you will stand them up. Fox can name more specials and put out worse paper than most any company yet. "As No Man Has Loved" is wonderful—buy it and ADVERTISE. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

CYCLONE RIDER. (6,672 feet). Fine action picture, but had no drawing power. Lost on it. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

DANCERS. (6,656 feet). Star, George O'Brien. The Fox paper was rotten for this picture. It was a great picture, but you wouldn't know it by looking at the paper. Went over great second night as people advertised it. Appeal 85 per cent. Draw town and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

DAUGHTERS OF THE NIGHT. (5,470 feet). Special cast. A real one. Pleased a hundred per cent. Some said best they ever saw. G. A. Petcrson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

DICK TURPIN. (5,224 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Mix, in a different role and a costume picture, failed to do as good as in previous pictures. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

DICK TURPIN. (5,229 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Fair. Tom goes better in real western pictures. No for Sunday or special. Draw farming and town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (225 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

DRAG HARLAN. Star, William Farnum. This is a reissue, but it is the best of the series and worth running whether you have played it before or not. Print good. Draw

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

Service to exhibitors was the idea that gave this dependable tip department a start; service is still the basic idea.

Tips, of course, are the primary thing and they are the greatest service that an exhibitor can receive—open and above board, honest, straight to the point, signed in the open by exhibitors who give their experience to help their fellows.

There are other services, too. They are important.

Don't forget, for instance, that you can always write in to me about the things that come up, the problems you get up against.

I may not be able to iron out your difficulties—but I'll do my darndest to get the sort of help for you that the resources of a compact, service-ready organization can offer.

VAN.

all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

FLAMES OF DESIRE. (5,438 feet). Star cast. A good program picture of real quality, but somewhow it didn't pull. Here poor appeal. Draw small town class, town 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

GOLD AND THE GIRL. (4,512 feet). Star, Buck Jones. In regard to this I find that state right westerns have better stories in their films than this apparently factory-made sort. You know what's going to happen in the picture next to the title; so what's the use to waste your eyesight looking at the five reels? The tone is O. K., appeal 50 per cent. No for sunday or special. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

HEARTS AND SPURS. (5 reels). Star, Buck Jones. A dandy western; full of pep and holds interest throughout. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday. Draw small town class, town 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

HEARTS OF OAK. (5,326 feet). Star cast. Just an ordinary program picture. Fair tone. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farming and town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (225 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

IN LOVE WITH LOVE. (5,677 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. Fairly good one day picture. No drawing power here, however. Lost money. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

IN LOVE WITH LOVE. (5,677 feet). Star, Shirley Mason. Fair comedy-drama. Program quality. Good tone. Average appeal. No for Sunday. Draw small town class, town 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

IT IS THE LAW. (6,000 feet). All-star cast. While the cast was unknown here, this picture went over well, and there were many nice comments on the acting of Arthur Hohl, who played a dual role. The suspense was well sustained and the photography and condition of film were excellent. We paid too much for this picture, but can recommend it as a high-class program feature, to the little town brothers. Tone somewhat morbid, but strong appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

KENTUCKY PRIDE. Star cast. One of Fox's specials for 1926 and will say it's a bear. Can't boost it too much; step on it and you will not regret it. Draw town and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

LAST OF THE DUANES. (6,842 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Boys, you don't need a tip on this popular star who stands at the head of his class. In this western production Tom and his wonder horse Tony excel in desperate wild riding and stunts that are so deservedly famous. The story is very good, the scenes are marvelous, the acting is splendid. Any audience, I warrant you, will enjoy this one. Go get it. Draw from tourist town of 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

LUCKY HORSESHOE. (5,000 feet). Star, Tom Mix. Rotten here. If Tom Mix makes another like it he's dead in my houses. Worst I ever ran; not worth price of real comedy here. Appeal 30 per cent. No for special. Draw city and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

MAN WHO PLAYED SQUARE. (6,700 feet). Star, Buck Jones. This is an unusual story for Jones and he is very good. Supporting cast is also very good. As a whole a very good picture. Tone good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

MY HUSBAND'S WIFE. Star, Shirley Mason. A very good picture for Mr. Fox to make "easy money" (so are the Farnum reissues); but for theatres like mine to run—well, that's a different story. Tone, not any. Appeal fifty per cent. at most. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE. (5,578 feet). Star, Tom Mix. The only fault I find with Mix's pictures is that he does not make enough of them. He surely is a great favorite here. I drew the biggest crowd, on my usual poor night, that I have had in quite a while. Fine picture. Tone O. K. 100 per cent appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town 3,000. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

ROUGHNECK. (7,519 feet). Star, George O'Brien. Another fine town picture with action and thrills galore. Fox surely have some fine pictures this year and they use you square. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw from town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn't Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

Metro-Goldwyn

CIRCE, THE ENCHANTRESS. (6,882 feet). Star, Mae Murray. Good Murray picture. Plot overdone in previous pictures. Special, no. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Stars, Conway Tearle, Alice Terry. Pleased every audience. Good tone. Sunday and special yes. Draw conservative class, city 23,500. Admission twenty-five cents. D. J. Adams, Auditorium Theatre (1,000 seats), Concord, New Hampshire.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Star cast. Very good picture if you can get it for a reasonable rental. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday. Suitable for special under above condition in small towns. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Stars, Conway Tearle, Alice Terry. Here is a fine picture with a wonderful cast. Everyone well pleased. This kind of a picture makes a good Saturday show. Scenery, cast, story, direction O. K. You should do the business. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,210.

Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

NAVIGATOR. (5,600 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. A fine comedy; one that pleased a hundred per cent. of our audiences. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special, in small towns. Draw mixed classes, town 725. Admission, regular, 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

NAVIGATOR. (5,600 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. Great comedy. Laughs all the way. Tone, okay. Sunday yes. Special, no. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

NAVIGATOR. (5,600 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. This brought them out and pleased them all. You can rely on this one to get the laughs. Would make a dead man laugh. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,210. Admission 10-25. C. R. Sell, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

PRAIRIE WIFE. (6,487 feet). This is a very entertaining picture. It did good business for two days. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

SNOB. (6,913 feet). Star, John Gilbert. Exceptionally good picture that drew a few extra patrons. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Very good audience appeal. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

Paramount

AIR MAIL. (6,976 feet). Star, Warner Baxter. An excellent show for a Saturday night. Plenty of aeroplane stuff with Baxter and Fairbanks Jr. doing good work. Will please the youngsters right through. Tone, good. A family picture. Special, no. Fine appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet). Star, Richard Dix. This one did not have as much action as "Manhattan" but it pleased most of them. The fans seem to like Dix fairly well. Edna Murphy looked good to me in this one. Good tone and appeal. A family picture, not a special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Extra good program picture. Dix is a sure fire here. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 98 per cent. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre, Loyalton, South Dakota.

A MAN MUST LIVE. (6,116 feet). Star, Richard Dix. An average program picture, but had no drawing power at this theatre. Good tone. Appeal 60 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmers and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

ANY WOMAN. (5,963 feet). Star cast. Where did they get these stars? Here this was sure as rotten as it was possible to make them. every patron walked out on this show and boys, they have sure given me, of late, some factory pictures until my patrons are passing up the trade mark so that is so well advertised. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

ARE PARENTS PEOPLE? (6,586 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. A mighty good program show, but it failed to draw expenses for us. Betty Bronson sure was right there in this show and is going to be well liked. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

ARGENTINE LOVE. (5,970 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Very good picture that was enjoyed by the few that came. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

A SON OF HIS FATHER. Star cast. Very good. Didn't follow story. Cast didn't suit my crowd. Did a fair business. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. Small town class town of 1,000.

Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

BORDER LEGION. (7,045 feet). Star cast includes Jack Holt. Good western. I have not read the book so don't know how it follows the story but it is worth booking if your patrons like action pictures. It sure has plenty. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special in case above mentioned. Draw farm and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

COAST OF FOLLY. (7,000 feet). Star, Swanson. This was as fine a picture as Gloria has made; she plays a dual role and her acting is wonderful. Everyone enjoyed it, although business was just fair. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw town and country class, town 1,210. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

CODE OF THE WEST. (6,777 fet). Star cast. Melodrama of west that pleased a Saturday night crowd. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

COMING THRU. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A first class production: fine mining scenes. Good tone. Appeal 85 per cent. Yes for Sunday and (in comparison with some "specials") as special. Draw farmer and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

COMING THRU. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Just fair; I don't think star at his best in that kind of picture. Worth playing but not up to Meighan's standard. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town and farm class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

CONTRABAND. (8,775 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. Good acting and good cast but story rather improbable. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Fair appeal. Agricultural class town of 1,500. Admission 10-30. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

DANGEROUS MONEY. (6,864 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Not a bad picture, but a role hardly suitable for Bebe Daniels. Good tone. Appeal 65 per cent. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

DRESSMAKER FROM PARIS. (7,080 feet). Star cast. We combined a local style show with this brilliantly staged pictures with excellent results from a financial and artistic standpoint. The picture will please high class audiences extra well, especially the feminine portion. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, yes. Appeal, good. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

EVE'S SECRET. (6,205 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Below average program. Tone, fair. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 75 per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

EVE'S SECRET. (6,205 feet). Star, Betty Compson. Good picture above program schedule but not a special. Worth seeing. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Farmers, tourists, merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

FLAMING BARRIERS. (5,821 feet). Star, Antonio Moreno. A pretty good program picture. Quite interesting and the forest fire scene was very good. Tone, okay. Special, no. Appeal, 85 per cent. Farmers and merchants town of 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Fromberg, Montana.

GOOSE HANGS HIGH. (6,186 feet). Star cast. A splendid picture from every angle. Pleased 90 per cent. Tone and appeal, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Agricultural class town of 1,500. Admission 10-30. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

GOOSE HANGS HIGH. (6,186 feet). Star cast. Some liked it, others panned it. Just so-so. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

GOOSE HANGS HIGH. (6,186 feet). Star, Myrtle Steadman. Very good family program. Improbable but nice and clean. Fine cast. Well done in every way. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, should be 100 per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

IN THE NAME OF LOVE. (5,377 feet). Star, Greta Nissen. A romance adapted from the famous stage play, "The Lady of Lyons." Here's love and comedy combined, a real treat for the fans. Greta Nissen is most wonderful in face and figure and Ricardo Cortez loses his heart over her—(who wouldn't). Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are mirth provoking comedians. A more than average picture. Draw city and country class, town 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Falther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

IN THE NAME OF LOVE. Star, Greta Nissen. Just a little above program schedule. Good tone. Fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farmer-merchant class, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS. (6,650 feet). Star, Dustin Farnum. Star cast. A good western picture, full of thrills. Title drew good house. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. L. Whitton, Town Hall (800 seats), Poultney, Vermont.

MARRY ME. (5,526 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. Program picture with some good acting and comedy. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 80 per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Stars, Glenn Hunter, Viola Dana. Some said the worst I ever had and some said fine, out of the ordinary, and good. I think most of them liked it and it drew well. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farm and small town class, town 600. Admission 10-20 and 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. A picture they all bragged on; and it sure is a pleasure to play pictures that please your people. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. Good picture: not a feature. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farmer and merchant class, widely scattered, town 1,649. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. One of his poorest ones. At that better entertainment than lots of sex specials that cost lots more. Tone, fair. Sunday, maybe. Special, no. Appeal, 80 per cent. Small town class town of 1,000. Admission 10-15-25-30-35. S. G. Harsh, Princess Theatre (249 seats), Mapleton, Iowa.

NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK. (6,908 feet). Star, Rod La Rocque. Stars miscast: Improbable story with too much jazz; however, we put it over by using the eight piece Gustave Dorn Orchestra. When patrons stop at the box office and say the music was better than the picture—you know what that means.

Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

NIGHT LIFE OF NEW YORK. (6,908 feet). Star cast. Very good. Will please the better element in your community. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Agricultural class town of 1,500. Admission 10-30. L. M. Zug, Rialto Theatre (380 seats), Jerome, Idaho.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (6,943 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. A very pleasing picture that people liked enough to talk about. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

PARAMOUNT RELEASES. "Salome of the Tenements," "Welcome Home," and "Marry Me." Boys, for me here are three sure-enough lemons: machine-made pictures. Patrons walked out on every one of them, especially "Salome of the Tenements." I had the first two booked for Paramount Week, which only means a loss to me as my patrons don't pay any attention to trademarks; they are too well posted and will look over the advertising matter and shake their heads; you can't fool them here. One of the poorest weeks that I have had in some time was Paramount Week and the worst of all—the newspaper space and extra advertising did not draw them in. A. Mitchell, Dixie Theatre, Russellville, Kentucky.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. Plenty of action. Good comedy situations above program schedule. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farmers, tourists, and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. Played two days to fair business considering the fact that it rained both nights. It might have pleased the young girls, but I couldn't see it personally at all. Tone, not so good. Sunday and special, no. Appeal, fair. Better class town of 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pensylvania.

SHOCK PUNCH. (6,151 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Okay. Good for Saturday night. Lots of action and thrills. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

SIDESHOW OF LIFE. (6,511 feet). Star, Ernest Torrence. Not much appeal—sixty-five per cent. Tone fair. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer class, town 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (250 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

STORY WITHOUT A NAME. (7,912 feet). Star cast. From reports, this was one of the best Paramount pictures I have run and it was the cheapest. Many praised it highly. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,366 feet). Star cast. A fine drama. Lots of favorable comment as people left the theatre. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,366 feet). Star, Percy Marmont. Excellent portrayal of fakers in the underworld. Details of the pre-prohibition Bowery and costumes of a former day are outstanding. Ninety per cent appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Heart interest throughout the story should appeal to everyone. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. We took a flop on this. Exhibitors in small towns be careful. They told us it was out-grossing "The Wagon." It sure did not here. Fine picture, but did not draw. Good tone, divided appeal. Yes for Sunday and special (consider above). Draw all classes, town 4,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. This drew a better crowd on Monday than it did on Sunday and this is high praise from the box office. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. This was second time in our town and broke every record we made. Tone O. K. Fine for Sunday, yes as special. Draw small town class, town 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

When the patron cranks the Lizzie, or with Radio is busy, (or your posters make him dizzy)—.
Business slips.
That's the time your show must suffer if you try to be a bluffer and by lies drag in the duffer—
(He hates "gyps").
There's a tonic very handy, and you bet it is a dandy, feeds the box office on candy—
Gives your lips
The chance a smile to wear—
THE SHORT SUBJECT!—it's "there!"—
When you run one that's a bear—
SEND THE TIPS!

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast includes Theodore Roberts. Am confident that this one will hold my 1925 record by far, "Abraham Lincoln" standing next. The three most prominent points, in my estimation are: (1) The Red Sea business, (2) The Exodus part which is done in color, (3) the presentation of the Commandments to Moses on the Mount. Ohio Censors have it trimmed down to about ten and a half reels. It's interesting to note that stuff still remains that probably wouldn't get by in a regular production; but guess that my people overlooked it, as I have received nothing but compliments on it. Fair tone, great appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw rural and village classes, town 400. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (250 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

THUNDERING HERD. (7,187 feet). Star cast. Very fine, but couldn't touch "Covered Wagon" and "North of 36." It's worth showing, however, anywhere. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

THUNDERING HERD. (7,187 feet). Stars, Jack Holt, Lois Wilson. Played two days to fair business and pleased practically eighty per cent. This one had the most drawing power of them all outside of "The Call of the Canyon" of the Zane Grey pictures of Paramount. Good tone and appeal. A family picture and a special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. Carl A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (404 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TIGER'S CLAW. (5,325 feet). Star, Estelle Taylor. Good picture and drew fair crowd. Tone and for Sunday O. K. No as special. Draw small town class, town 3,300. P. L. Vann, Opera House (600 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

TONGUES OF FLAMES. (6,763 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Can't hand them much on this. For some reason Meighan has lost out here. Absolutely no drawing card. Lost heavily on this one. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TONGUES OF FLAME. (6,763 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Many people think that Meighan is not as good as he once was but he has pleased my people straight through. Good tone and appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

TOO MANY KISSES. (6,750 feet). Star, Richard Dix. A dandy picture. Dix is sure coming into his own. Better for us than Meighan. Better than many so-called "Big Ones." Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 3,700. Admission 10-30. C. F. Kreighbaum, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

TROUBLE WITH WIVES. (6,489 feet). Star, Esther Ralston. A dandy society comedy drama way above the average. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A sure fire hit. Cannot go wrong with this one. Tone, good. Yes for Sunday and special. Very good appeal. Farmers, tourists and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A good western but not as good as most of Zane Grey's Paramount pictures. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Town of 3,200. Admission 10-20-30. Charles Lee Hyde, Grand Theatre, Pierre, South Dakota.

Pathe

DYNAMITE SMITH. (5 reels). Star, Charles Ray. Boys, this is a darn good picture, but it did not bring me any money. Star is just as good as he ever was. My advice play it. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

FRESHMAN. (6,683 feet). Star Harold Lloyd. A good picture if you care to run it for prestige—and Mr. Lloyd get the money—and you'll get the crowd, but not the cash. Tone O. K. Very good appeal. Sunday and special, yes. Charles Martin, Family Theatre, Mt. Morris, New York.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Old, but made money for the first time on Lloyd's feature length comedies. Always have to pay too much. Tone, good. Appeal, good, Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

COMING OF AMOS. (5,037 feet). Star, Rod La Roque, Cecil De Mille prod. I'd lay off of this one. Story weak. Lacks action. Title and star didn't draw for me. Audience appeal poor. John Feyvessy, Flash Theatre (700 seats), Tonawanda, New York.

United Artists

ISN'T LIFE WONDERFUL? D. W. Griffith special prod. Went over big. I never fail to stand them up and then satisfy them with D. W. Griffith's specials. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY. Star, Mary Pickford. Good. Tone, good. Good appeal. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

THIEF OF BAGDAD. Star, Douglas Fairbanks. Fairbanks does it again! Boy, he's a money-getter for me. If you can buy it right, don't fail to step on it. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

WILD JUSTICE. Star, Peter the Great. This is a real special and Peter shows more than Rin-Tin-Tin in "Wild Justice." Great picture, and don't fail to book it. Stood them up two nights. Draw town and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats, Hollis, Oklahoma.

Universal

FIGHTING FURY. (4,491 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A good western, full of thrills. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed classes, town 725. Admission, regular, 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

LET 'ER BUCK. Stal, Hoot Gibson. A real first class western that went over good. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

LET 'ER BUCK. (6 reels). Star, Hoot Gibson. This picture takes us back to the days before Hoot Gibson became a fireman, ball-player or a deep-sea sailor. This type of story is best suited for Gibson. The kids went wild over this picture. W. C. Budge, Comedy Theatre (275 seats), Jamaica, New York.

THE MEDDLER. Star, William Desmond. A very good picture for a Saturday crowd. Well liked by all. Print good. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Sunday or special, no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

OH, DOCTOR! (6,507 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. Here is another coming favorite. He is already a big favorite here and this picture helped to make him more so. I would advise any brother exhibitor to step on this one; it will stand it. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

PRICE OF PLEASURE. Star, Virginia Valli. This is what I consider a nice little program offering. Nothing big about it, but yet it is the kind of picture the average audience enjoys. Nice little plot; some fine comedy; pathos—a good picture. Tone O. K. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

RAFFLES. Star, House Peters. Rather disappointing. The plot seemed to be very weak and in general I don't think that it pleased the majority. My opinion is that after you had seen it, you hadn't seen anything much. Peters very good in his part. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Drow from town of 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SAWDUST TRAIL. (5,500 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. This is a good program picture. Our patrons like good, live westerns. Good tone. Sunday yes, special no. Draw mixed class, town 725. Regular admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

SECRETS OF THE NIGHT. (6,138 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. A fairly good mystery picture that pleases a certain class. Quite a little comedy; but it did not draw for me. It is really no small town picture. Print good. Fair tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farming class, town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (245 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

WESTERN WALLOP. Star, Jack Hoxie. A real good western picture that will please most any audience. Has action and story is well up to standard. As good as some of the bigger actors. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw farmer class, town 750. Admission 10-25. E. F. Gick, Pastime Theatre (245 seats), Moundridge, Kansas.

Vitagraph

BARREE, SON OF KAZAN. (6,803 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. Showed this Special—

Short Subjects

First of October was Moving Day in New York—busy time for Moving Vans—so moving Van's Short Subjects into a new residence was appropriate.

Did you see the short subject reports last week? They were in a new place! In the new department devoted exclusively to news, reviews, exploitation and reports on these little business getters.

They're there again this week—on page 576 this time. They're going to be in that position permanently, so get used to freezing onto them among the other items grouped in a handy spot to make it easier for you to get the most out of the short subject.

first time in State, and will say it's a real one, if you like dog pictures. Pleased them all. Draw town and country class, town 2,000. Admission, 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

LOVE HOUR. (7,038 feet). Star, Huntly Gordon. I cannot say too much for this picture. It's a scream from start to finish and I don't mean maybe! Fellows, if you can't buy "The Freshman" this is a best bet. Wish we could get one like this every night. Draw farmers and merchants, town 3,300. Admission, 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House, Greenville, Alabama.

SCHOOL FOR WIVES. Star cast. Good, high class program production, but not suitable for Saturday in small towns. Good tone. Fair appeal. No for Sunday. Draw small town class, town 1,500. Admission, 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield Tennessee.

WEST OF ARIZONA. Star, Pete Morrison. Good western; Morrison improving. They advertise the horse, but he looks good and does nothing. When you advertise a horse they expect "Silver King or Tony action." Tone O. K. Fair appeal. Sunday and special, no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

Warner Brothers

FIND YOUR MAN. (7,300 feet). Star, Rin-Tin-Tin. Excellent picture with some good action. Fellow exhibitors, if you have not played this one, get busy and book before it gets too old. Good action, an excellent love story, fine photography, make this picture a one hundred per cent. audience wow! Fair tone, very strong appeal. Sunday—yet here. No as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admission, 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Independents

AMERICAN PLUCK. State Right. Star, George Walsh. Oh, boy! This is a pip. Run this and chase away the blues. Oh, why don't this produce more pictures like this? Yes as to tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. Sunday, you bet! Special, yes. Draw from small town, 300. Admission, 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma.

BENNY LEONARD'S FIGHT (Progress). To me not worth price of good comedy, I was glad when I finished six reels. Never made a dime. Poor tone. Appeal 40 per cent. No as special or for Sunday. Draw city and country class, town 2,000. Admission, 10-25 and 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

BRANDED A BANDIT (Arrow). Star, Yakima Canutt. A very good western picture but there is a little too much hokum in it; but it will please western fans. Print new: Tone O. K. Good appeal. Sunday or special no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DANGEROUS ODDS (Independent). Star, Bill Cody. Bill Cody is growing popular here and they should give him better stories. This one is fair. Print new. Good appeal. Sunday or special no. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

MODELS AND ARTISTS (State Right). Just a fair comedy. They look for lots of slapstick stuff in comedies but this was very mild. Print new. Fair appeal. Sunday yes. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

RACING FOR LIFE. (State Right.) Star, William Fairbanks. Just a fair program picture that will stand a one day showing. Print good. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Fair appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SAND BLIND. (Arrow). Star, Ben Wilson. Not as good as the former pictures made by this star, but is well worth a one day showing. Print new. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Fair appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

TRAIL DUST. (State Right). Star, David Dunbar. Good pay; attractive lobby display; and gets the people in. Bucked good tab show. Fine western appeal. Sunday or special, no. Cole Brothers, Lyric Theatre (400 seats), Jefferson, Texas.

$1 for Your Time

Many exhibitors tell us that Moving Picture World Guide to Releases is the most accurate available to them. We know it is the most complete, in that it is the only chart containing names of stars, type of picture, and all necessary information to the exhibitor.

We want it to be absolutely accurate—Moving Picture World recognizes the importance of accurate footage information, etc.

If you notice an error in FEATURE footage, or any other major error, we will pay you $1 for the effort on your part of writing us a letter telling us the correct facts.

In many territories local censorship cuts after the footage to a minor extent. Don't write to tell us of these unimportant variations. But in any case where you feel that our figures will work a real hardship on the exhibitor following them—shoot us the word and we will shoot the dollar for your trouble.

Moving Picture World is willing to back up its complete confidence in the accuracy of its chart with its money.

We can't do more. No one else does as much. We thank you.

Film Executives—Please Read!

This Quick Reference Picture Chart is your servant in an effort of Moving Picture World to give Exhibitors ALL THE FACTS about the pictures they are going to run.

You can do a heap to make this service more complete!

Jazz up the fellow who takes care of this sort of information in your organization!

Say to him—or to her if that's the way it stands—"Send Moving Picture World's QUICK REFERENCE PICTURE CHART all the dope—ALL THE DOPE, understand!—on the pictures." Emphasize this by adding, "Be sure to notify them of change in titles, of change in footage on pictures. Send the style of story and the star. AND BE SURE YOU SEND IT!"

Do this, won't you? It will help us help you help exhibitors.

Talking It Over

THERE come times when it is advisable to sit down and talk things over. For the past two or three months we have been running along in a routine. We haven't directly talked things over. The new season is under way. Presentation programs have been inaugurated, some on a lavish scale, others on a conservative basis. During the interim of our last direct chat with the producers generale many phases have presented themselves with which we wish to acquaint this fraternity. As informality succeeds to a greater degree than an austere countenance and the seeming unapproachable demeanor, we want to insist that this is a chat among us without any pretentions.

Joseph Plunkett met me one afternoon in the lobby of the Mark Strand Theatre, New York, and we discussed the selection of subject matter, and one thought which J. P. gave was, "The man who succeeds in the presentation business is the creator, not the copyist." There is a great deal of truth in that statement. It is all right for producers to cover the musical revues and similar attractions, and then hie themselves to their respective theatres and re-enact the episodes, but the man who really gets somewhere in this business is the man who devises an idea, or adapts one in a manner which embodies originality, novelty, extreme artistry and reflects his own individuality.

The other day at luncheon a well-known musical director was talking to a group of producers and managers about the selection of vocal numbers for the programs. He said that his experience convinced him that grand opera selections could be put over to better advantage if they were sung in the vernacular rather than in the original. We have all had experiences with the grand opera numbers, and we have noted the effect on the audiences. We may broadly say that fifty per cent. of the patrons "know" good music and fifty per cent. know "good tunes." One class appreciate the technique, is familiar with the opera or the particular number given, but the other belongs to a class whose musical education has not reached the point of understanding these highly classical compositions, which require a background of gradual development. So the producer is confronted with the problem of pleasing everybody, and catering to public opinion, especially when one must woo and win it, is a mightier problem. Therefore, the happier medium is to select such portions of grand opera having a defined melody and when assigned to a singer who can sing, and sung in a language that everyone can understand, the opera selections will be received more favorably.

We are changing cars this week. Next week we will inaugurate several new features in this Department. The new policy, which was mentioned in our last issue, has been thought out in detail, and with the prospects ahead we are confident that the service we will be able to render the producers through the medium of this Department will be one of manifold benefits. This Department has tried on many suits of clothes to find the one which would be the most pleasing. We think we have found the proper cut and color.

We have made repeated pleas for co-operation from the men who are actually engaged in production work. I know that it is difficult for a producer to sit down and send in detailed articles about what he is doing, as I find that my daily work oftimes becomes a mountain of detail difficult to surmount, but even a few lines may tell the story. This Department is going to stand or fall according to the co-operation given it by the producers, and the information relayed to it by the men who are responsible for its inception. Let us all work together for a season of benefit, one of co-operation to the "nth" degree, as this Department is international in its scope. We are in communication with producers in Australia, New Zealand, China, France, Germany, Great Britain, throughout the United States and Canada, and your bit of information can be very helpful to one of the producers' fraternity. Let us work hand in hand this season for a real Department.

PROJECTED SCENERY

Introducing a Novel Scenic Background

A Presentation Arrangement Devised

By COLBY HARRIMAN

PROJECTED Scenery is not new. Stereopticon slides have been used to achieve a scenic background, but a simple arrangement devised by certain Continental stage craftsmen has enabled Projected Scenery to become a scenic rather than a photographic feature. The two drawings which accompany this suggestion present the idea of two applications of this novelty. Fig. 1, we have a scene which is projected from the back of a drop, permitting the artist, properly high-lighted, to appear in front of the drop, and in Fig. 2 we have the reverse, the scenic treatment being projected from the front, while the character is back of the drop in silhoutte. Projected Scenery is valuable for the small stage, and particularly with the producer who has stage limitations to consider. The methods of applying Projected Scenery to a number are described herein.

1. Face Projection

A slide may be placed in the stereopticon and operated from the projection room, the desired scene painted upon the slide. A space should be left permitting the artist to be properly placed in the design. In Fig. 2 the artist would be back of the drop and would be silhouetted against it. To achieve the proper effect the drop upon which the scene is projected should be opaqued over its entire surface with the exception of the spot used by the artist in the silhouette. The drop may be opaqued either by painting it on the back or hanging drapes back of it. A small platform may be placed back of the drop upon which the artist stands, giving the effect of the artist fitting into the scene itself. The Face Projection permits the scene to be in color and in marked contrast to the shadowy tones of the silhouette.

2. Reverse Projection

The scene is projected from the back of the drop. A very simple method of achieving the effect is to have a special lamp constructed or the hood of an olivette may be used. The special lamp is simply an elongated olivette hood. The scene can be painted upon a piece of glass and inserted in the medium holder of the olivette and placed upstage at a distance sufficient to cover the entire area. Of course, the larger the opening of the hood the larger the picture. The artist in front may be standing on a small platform with a ground row, the latter being silhouetted, and by hanging a baby spot at an angle to highlight the face and upper part of the artist, particular attention being given to the masking of the baby spot so there will be no spill light on the drop, the effect will be an excellent one, as the scene will not be impaired by the addition of lighting in front of it. These two suggestions are ideal for song or dance numbers, and practically any scenic treatment may be used.

Figure 2

SCHELL SCENIC STUDIO

COLUMBUS . OHIO

STANLEY THEATRE
Philadelphia

Featured Picture: "The Man Who Found Himself" (Paramount) (Week Sept. 27).

Graham Harris, guest conductor from the Capitol Theatre, New York, directing the Stanley Symphony Orchestra in excerpts from Gounod's "Faust"; musical feature, Paul Zim and Band, syncopators unusual; exponents of terpsichore, Piatov and Natalie in their original dance creations.

MOSQUE THEATRE
Newark, N. J.

(Week Oct. 6)
Featured Picture: "Graustark" (First National)

The management of the Mosque Theatre takes great pleasure in presenting this week's program on the largest stage in any motion picture theatre in the world. Irvin Talbot and his Mosque Grand Orchestra. Overture, "Il Guarany," Gomez. "The Dance of the Marionettes," featuring Mlles. Le Pette Puntin and Chere Bowne. A screen gem, "Unknown Switzerland," quaint people and queer places, synchronized with Mlle Ella Daganova and the Mosque Ballet Corps in a delightful novelty ensemble, "Swiss Militaire." A Mosque stage creation, presenting J. Humbird Duffy, assisted by Eleanor Marum and a glorious singing and dancing ensemble of thirty artists in a notable musical offering redolent of the atmosphere of romantic Graustark, entitled, "In the Garden of the Princess."

Featured Picture: "The Dark Angel" (First National) (Week Sept. 29).

Overture, "Orpheus in the Lower World," (Offenbach) with Irvin Talbot, conducting. Mlle. Ella Daganova and her Mosque Ballet in a unique fantasy "The Music Box." A Mosque stage creation entitled "A Wee Bit o' Scotch," with Laddy MacTavish and his little Scotch Lassies, including incidental film novelette "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean." The grand opera favorites: Beatrice Belkin, coloratura soprano, De Feo Opera Co.; Anne Yago, contralto, San Carlo Opera Co.; Hunter Kimball, tenor, Montreal Civic Opera Co.; Henry Kelly, baritone, Boston English Grand Opera Co., in (a) prologue from "I Pagliacci," Leoncavallo, Mr. Henry Kelly; (b) duet, "Home to Our Mountains," from "Il Travatore," Verdi, Miss Anne Yago, Mr. Hunter Kimball; (c) quartet from "Rigoletto," Verdi, Miss Belkin, Miss Yago, Mr. Kimball, Mr. Kelly.

RIALTO THEATRE
New York City

(Week Oct. 4).
Featured Picture: "Thank You" (Fox)

Ben Bernie and the Rialto Gang in "Toyland," with Joseph Wetzel, Burnoff and Josephine, Ernest Kola, Morris Brothers, Nee Wong and the Rialto Wooden Soldiers, (Toys used in stage production of "Toyland" supplied through courtesy of R. H. Macy, Inc.).

Featured Picture: "A Son of His Father" (Paramount) (Week Sept. 27).

Ben Bernie and the Rialto Gang present "At the Country Club." The scene consists of a back sky drop with a ground row painted to suggest the vista of a "Green." Wicker chairs and tables grouped right and left to dress. Bernie introduces Ruby Keeler, Jerome Mann, Carl Rollins, Ross Sobel, golf professional, and the four Rialto Dancers.

STRATFORD THEATRE
Chicago

(Week Sept. 27)
Featured Picture: "He's a Prince," with Raymond Griffith (Paramount)

Topping the bill this week is a Francis A. Mangan presentation, taken from Victor Herbert's immortal "Love Boat." The scene opens with James Jordan singing "The Love Boat," in one. Mr. Jordan, by the way, has a very pleasing voice and is fast becoming a favorite with the Stratford patrons. This is his second appearance at the Stratford within the last three weeks, his last appearance being in Mangan's "Diamond Horseshoe of Girls." During Mr. Jordan's number the curtain opened, revealing a love boat with eight girls lying around the deck. The scene is in mid-ocean and is very realistic. It is beautifully lighted, which is one of Mangan's real traits. Another number, "The Beautiful Lady," with Esther Nelson, the well-known soprano, was also very well received. At the end of Miss Nelson's song the curtain opened, bringing into view a tableau of "The Beautiful Lady" and her maids. This number was also beautifully lighted and very magnificent.

CAPITOL THEATRE
New York City

(Week Oct. 4)
Featured Picture: "Exchange of Wives" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Overture, "Les Preludes" (Symphonic Poem), Liszt. William Robyn, "Onaway! Awake, Beloved," from "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," S. Coleridge-Taylor. "Tomorrow's Promise," a Robert C. Bruce "Overture" scenic, the Capitol Theatre's tribute to Aviation Week—Miss Columbia, Doris Niles. Licensed by N. Y. State Motion Picture Commission, No. 94450.. Mlle. Maria Gambarelli, prima bellerina: "Tres Delicat,"; music: "Wispering Willows," Victor Herbert. Rudy Wiedoeft, saxophone virtuoso—(a) "At Dawning," Cadman; (b) "Erica Waltz," (c) "Saxarella," (d) "Saxophobia," Wiedoeft. "Dance of the Elves"—music, "Prelude," Armas Jarnefelt. Doris Niles and Capitol Ballet Corps—Desha Podgorska, Alice Delano, Terry Bauer, Pavla Pavlecek, Clara Burke, Mignon Dallet.

RIVOLI THEATRE
New York City

Featured Picture: "A Regular Fellow" (Paramount) (Week Oct. 4).

"Serenade," from Don Juan, Mozart. Marcel Salesco, baritone; J. Yaltoff, mandolinist. James A. Fitzpatrick presents "Mozart-Haydn," one of the famous music master series. Musical accompaniment by the Rivoli Concert Orchestra. Riesenfeld's classical jazz. "Charleston Everywhere," (a) Holland—Myrtle and Lorelei; (b) China—Alma, Margaret and Rose; (c) Russia—Marley, Ruth and Beth; (d) Arabia—Beth; (e) Charleston—Ensemble. Arthur Utry, baritone. "Charleston Everywhere," by Addy Britt and Jud Kline. Harold Ramsbottom at the Wurlitzer, "The Midnight Waltz," Donaldson.

WARNER'S THEATRE
New York City

Featured Picture: "The Man on the Box" Warner Bros.) (Week Oct. 4)

Herman Heller and his orchestra of versatile soloists in "Milestones to Jazz," compiled by Mr. Heller, arranged by Erdody. A Patch-Quilt of Dancing: (a) "Moonlight and Roses," song and dance fantasie; ballet interpretation, Helen Mae Cox; vocalization, Barney Weber, tenor. (b) A Bit of Russia; dancer, Alfred Brower; accordionist, Alexander Ivanoff. (c) From Waikiki; danseuse, Helen Mae Cox. (d) Southern Impression; dancer, Ross A. Himes; banjoist, Jack Ivner. (e) On Broadway; denseuse, Helen Mae Cox, and a dance demonstration by "The Man on the Box."

TIVOLI THEATRE
Chicago

Featured Picture: "The Coast of Folly" (Paramount) (Week Oct. 5).

Overture, "Faust," by Gounod. M. Khaby Liszt. "A Sea Fantasy," Willard Andelin singing "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep." Albert May Malotte at the organ, playing (a) "Polonaise Militaire," (b) "Chopin Up-to-Date." "An Evening at Home," featuring Nat Nazarro, Jr. Charlotte Bergh, soprano; Margaret McKee, whistler; Paul Haakon, dancer; Buster Lamont, harmonica soloist.

UPTOWN THEATRE
Chicago

Featured Picture: "Exchange of Wives" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) (Week Oct. 5).

Overture, "Faust," by Gounod. M. Kharum, Persian pianist, playing "Hungarian Fantasie," by Liszt. Milton Charles at the organ, playing "How's Your Voice." "A Twilight Romance," Georges Dufranne, tenor; Miriam Klein, soprano; Adolphus & Eastman, dancers; ballet, arranged by Mme. Maximova.

CAPITOL THEATRE
Chicago

Featured Picture: "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work" (B. P. Schulberg Production) (Week Oct. 5)

The Second Edition of Musical Comedy Week. The artist is Francis A. Mangan, whose years of study with Victor Herbert have well enabled him to produce a magnificent musical comedy offering. The program is headed by an overture compiled by Albert E. Short, entitled "Melodius Memories of Victor Herbert." Following the overture an excellent likeness of the musical comedy genius is brought to view on a drop by means of lighting effects. This is immediately followed by a ballet interpretation by the Merriel Abbott Dancers. "A Comedy in Towels," includes a song by Roy Dieterich, tenor, and a novel dance by the Capitol-Abbott Ballet. "The Gilded Gage," an illusion in beauty in which a petite young miss sings in a cage that rises from the stage and moves out over the heads of the patrons in the first few rows in the audience and thence back onto the stage. Leo Terry at the Capitol-Wurlitzer organ a pleasing solo entitled "Musical Memoirs." "Lady of Dreams" is divided into four scenes. The first scene opens with Roy Dieterich singing "My Dream Girl" in front of a black drop. The curtain opens, revealing a boudoir scene with Miss Pearle Frank, soprano. The next scene opened with six little girls in six little white beds. After a pillow fight, they executed a cute and entertaining dance. The last scene, Thirty Pink Toes, in a burlesque on the former scenes. "The Royal Mountys," in which eight males dressed as Royal Mounted Police harmonize very well in a song about the Royal Mounted. "After the Storm" is opened up with the song "Till The Clouds Roll By." "April Showers" follows with six girls in raincoats and umbrellas, and finally comes "Lilac Time." This number has an appeal which draws exclamations from the audience as the crashing of the storm, the lighting, which demolishes a tree, and eventually, softened, soothing music brings quiet and the Capitol-Abbott Ballet waltzes forth portraying "Lilac Time." The inimitable "Frisco" (originator of the Jamboree Dance) assisted by Loretta McDermott, the Dresden China Doll, draws bountiful applause by his comical antics.

Scene of the Prologue to "The Freshman," Produced at the Colony Theatre, New York City, by Harry Shaw and Jerry De Rosa.

Better Projection Pays

Why and Wherefore

From San Francisco comes this letter:

Dear "Rich": I noticed a while back that you landed on a little west coast publication which proposed to start a projection department. I don't think you should have done that. True, the publication in question is small, and a monthly; also from what I have seen of its new department it won't exactly set the projection or any other kind of a world on fire, still every little bit helps, and both yourself and your department are big enough to need feel no jealousy because someone else jumps in and helps in the fight you have for years been putting up for the recognition of projection.

However, that was not the prime reason for this letter. I, like most of the others who write, want something. I read regularly and benefit largely by the work of the department, but somehow I just plain don't ever get up enough steam to write to it—unless I need something. Now that is an honest confession, so I hope it is good for my soul.

What I want is this: I am handling high intensity arcs and am having my troubles. My chief one just now is that with the negative carbon pencils. It burns to a long, slim point. I am using the sizes recommended by the carbon sharks, and there was no trouble at first. It has developed lately, and no one seems able to suggest a remedy, nor can I find any apparent reason for the trouble.

Another thing: Can you suggest anything which will stop a cement floor surface from scuffing up? My projection room floor constantly gives off a fine dust, which not only is "not so nice," but I think is not very good for the films. (It certainly is not; also it is not good for the bearings of your motor generators or your projector bearings either.—Ed.)

A third thing and I am through, for this time at least: Do you regard frosted globes or indirect lighting as best for projection room illumination?

"Got My Goat"

As to the west coast paper you refer to, the matter really was not worth bothering with, and I regret that I paid the slightest attention to it. Had it entered the field decently and in order, I would have welcomed it, just as I welcome any publication.

This publication, however, as is evidenced by its announcement, sought to give the impression that it had made the original discovery that projection really was important in the motion picture scheme of affairs, and that it would act as a sort of Moses to lead the benighted projectionist out of the wilderness of ignorance.

I will admit that this act, which I now look upon as being merely ridiculous and a bit silly, did "get my goat" for a bit. This department has literally plowed, harrowed and sown the field of projection for fifteen years. Its work began when it was more in the nature of grubbing than plowing. It is aggravating to see those who did absolutely not one item of the grubbing, the toilsome plowing or the hard harrowing, jump in where they have never sown, and propose to reap, without even a single word of recognition to those who did the years of hard work in the days when one was just plain ridiculed for presuming to say that projection amounted to anything at all.

From the viewpoint of competition the paper in question did not amount to very much. It was NOT the paper or its projection department I objected to, but merely the way it went about it. Also it has been suggested to me that possibly there was a method in that, because "getting my goat" by such an outrageous process might move me to roast them (and it did, so the thing worked) and thus give them some free advertising. Some editorials it carried afterward inclines me the more to credit that suggestion.

Bluebook School

Question No. 387—What would you do if you blew a fuse and had none with which to replace it. You could get another fuse in a short time, but until it came what would you do. The other fuse is all right.

Question No. 388—Tell us what care you would give the fuses of your projection circuits.

Question No. 389—Suppose one of the fuses on your projection circuit blows after a short run. You test the circuit for grounds and shorts and there are none, but just the same one of the fuses—the same one—blows after say half an hour of use. Where would you expect to find the trouble?

Question No. 390—Draw a sketch, or describe a practical tester for both plug and cartridge fuses.

Question No. 391—Set forth the important points in the fusing of theatre emergency circuits.

As to Questions

And now as to your questions: As to your high intensity trouble, you have not told me which carbon it pencils, but inasmuch as the commonly reported trouble of this sort is with the negative, I guess that is it. The penciling probably is due to poor electrical contact at the contact next the arc, which compells the current to enter the other contact and travel the whole length of the carbon. This overloads and heats the carbon throughout its entire length. Clean the contact nearest the arc thoroughly and often and I think you will find he trouble will cease. If that proves to be correct, you may remit the cost of the day letter wire I sent you. I am publishing the matter because this particular thing has not been published for some time and it is a bit common.

As to your dusty floor, you are correct in presuming that it raises Sheol with both the films and the bearings. Get some water glass—to be had, I think, at any large drug store—and mix with water in the proportions of one part of a thick syrup of water glass to five parts of water. Apply to the floor liberally with a broom. Allow this to dry thoroughly—a day or two—and then repeat with a solution of one part of the same syrup to three parts of water.

This effectively fills all pores of the cement and prevents dusting by forming an insoluble compound coat on the surface. The floor may then be painted, if you wish.

In my opinion if projectionists just must have the projection room illuminated during projection—a thing which is projectionally bad, and in nowise necessary—I would NOT recommend anything in the way of a concentrated spot of light, such as frosted globes.

By this I mean that while they of course may be used, still the comparatively diffused light of the indirect lighting fixture is much

Bluebook School—Answers No. 358 to 362

Note: Some of the vacationists are coming back, but we want em all. Dobson wrote. Says he just hadda play hookey, and I guess he really did—had to I mean. He will be back as soon as he can make it. So will Bennewitz and Gray. Fell is getting real careless too. C. O. Henning, Iowa City, Iowa, had answers to questions 348 to 375, all correct. Don't know how they got themselves overlooked. Apologies, brother Henning.

Question No. 358—Practical question submitted by C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa: presuming the current to be alternating, and that when you took charge of a new theatre and proceeded to superintend the installation of the machines (motor generators) you found the A. C. circuit wires to be No. 4, from the main house switchboard to the projection room board. The length of the circuit is seventy one feet. The circuit is a 3-wire, and each wire is well encased in standard conduit, the three pipes side by side and well fastened. Would you accept such a circuit as satisfactory?

This one proved something of a sticker. Only S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; Glenn G. Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; F. H. Moore, Taunton, Massachusetts and G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois made good. I think brother Hanover purposely worded the question so as to catch you off guard, though he did not do so unfairly, for he set forth the wrong thing very clearly. It was not really a wire size proposition, though that item called for consideration, too. Wallace answers the question thus:

No. I would not accept such a circuit, although so far as wire size goes No. 4 is not objectionable, as such wires will carry anything up to 70 amperes. (But how do you know that would be the maximum used?—Ed.) However the length of the circuit is a bit too great for that size. Figuring the voltage drop (good.—Ed.) we find it to be only about 3.745 volts, which is not at all bad, though a little less would be better. This might be reduced either by increasing size of wires or reducing length of circuit. The wires as they are, however, I would accept insofar as has to do with their size.

I would not accept the circuit nevertheless, because of the fact that the current is alternating, and the wires in separate conduits placed side by side, which is not permissible. It is characteristic of alternating currents that a magnetic flux or field surrounds the wires when current is flowing through or over them. If the wires of a circuit be placed in separate metal conduits and the conduits be placed side by side, a magnetic action will be set up, the practical effect of which will be to cause a heavy voltage drop. I would only accept the circuit as satisfactory when the wires had all been placed in one conduit.

Hanover answers thus:

This question presents two distinct items for consideration, viz (1) the size of the wires employed as projection room feeders and (2) the method of installation of the circuit.

Item No. 1—The circuit is 3-wire, and much would depend upon whether the motor of the motor generator set is 220 or 110. If it is 220, then certainly the circuit should be plenty heavy enough. If it is 110, then there is a question, the answer to which would depend upon how much amperage it is proposed to use. Probably the circuit would not be large enough to admit of burning arcs at changeover.

However, I purposely made this part of the question indefinite, because of the fact that the circuit condemns itself because it is a fixed underwriter's rule that all wires of an A. C. circuit MUST be placed on one conduit. If A. C. circuit wires be placed as indicated in the question, there would be a magnetic flux set up which would cause heavy voltage drop, heat both conduit and wires and in time probably destroy the insulation of the wires, hence I would NOT accept the circuit on that count alone. As to wire size, I would determine that point in accordance with the maximum current the room would use, demanding wires which would carry it without a too great voltage drop.

An excellent question and answer, if you ask the Editor. Brother Cooley's answer was, in effect, much the same as Hanover's.

Doe replied thus:

Since insufficient data is given to enable us to decide what size wires should be used, I presume brother Hanover has in mind two things only, namely: voltage drop and the placing of the wires in separate conduits.

Provided not to exceed seventy amperes be used on these lines, they are all right, except that the voltage drop would be a bit more than the best practice demands. If the maximum amperage demand is not to exceed 70, then I would accept them were they properly installed though had I been there before the installation of the circuit I would have recommended the installation of one size larger, because they would be a bit more economical in operation, and that fact, together with the further fact that there is always the possibility of future demand for more current in the projection room, would, in my opinion justify the relatively small increase in cost.

But anyhow the circuit is impossible and would not be passed by any competent inspector or official. The underwriter rules require that all wires of any alternating current circuit which is to be conduited, must be placed in one conduit. This is because of the fact that if placed in separate metal pipe conduits a magnetic flux will be set up which will offer high resistance to the current flow and heat both wires and conduit. The heating effect would not in itself involve actual fire hazard, but it would be sufficient to, in course of time, destroy the efficiency of the rubber insulation and thus probably cause the grounding of the conductors to the conduit, with result that the circuit would be permanently out of business and have to be renewed.

Excellent, friend Hanover. Excellent. I agree with your argument as to wire sizes, particularly because it is always best to use feeders a bit larger than the present actual demand.

Question No. 359—Set forth, briefly, the principal difference as between R. C. and other insulations.

Cooley says:

Substances used in making the insulations, is the answer. R. C. is used where the insulation of the circuit is dependent entirely upon the covering of the conductors. With other insulations the covering of the conductors is mostly to prevent injury to living things by accidental contact of the same with the wires, or trouble by reason of accidental contact with the conductors by current carrying objects which would cause a short or ground. Where insulations other than R. C. are used the main dependence for circuit insulation is placed on the supports of the conductors themselves.

Doe puts it this way:

Practically all electric circuits have insulated wires these later days. Such insulation is for the purpose of preventing the wires from coming into electrical contact with each other, or with something which would cause a short or ground. The kind of insulation depends upon where the circuit will be run, and the conditions which will prevail after the current is turned on.

In the main we have rubber covered and weatherproof installations, the former being tinned copper wires with a layer of pure rubber, or of rubber composition next the wire, protected by an outer covering of insulating compound impregnated cotton braid. Such insulation is used where the covering of the wires is depended upon practically entirely for insulation of the circuit.

Other insulations, including weatherproof, are not really insulators in the true sense. They are more in the nature of protection for the wires from accidental contact. Most of them consist of cotton braid inpregnated with insulating, and in some cases more or less fireproof compounds.

Question No. 360—Is it necessary that conduit be grounded? Why?

Wallace says:

Yes. It is very essential that all conduit be thoroughly grounded. If it is not, and electrical connection, through failure of insulation or otherwise, be established between it and one of the wires it contains, then the entire conduit would become electrically charged, which would, of course, be dangerous.

Moore says:

Yes! It is very essential that all conduit be grounded, or, as it is sometimes called, bonded to the street side of the water feed pipe by means of a No. 6 copper wire. The bond between wire and water pipe must be made in an approved manner, so as to insure perfect electrical contact, and the wire must be soldered to the conduit. The reason for grounding is that there may be opportunity for any accidental charge imparted to the conduit to pass off, without which a dangerous condition would be set up.

Question No. 361—Explain the insulation of a rheostat. By this is meant the insulation necessary to the construction of the rheostat itself.

Allan R. Gengenbeck, New Orleans, Louisiana, makes the best reply. He says:

The rheostat is nothing more or less than a considerable length of some high resistance medium, to either end of which one of the conductors of an electric circuit connects in such manner that in order to flow through the circuit at all the current must pass through the aforesaid resistance element.

This resistance element, which may consist of ten feet or twenty feet, or any other necessary length of resistance wire (which may itself be of regular resistance wire, or of what amounts to a cast iron wire), must, of course, be supported by a frame, and that frame must be metal, since resistance generates heat, therfore the frame must be noninflammable. It therefore follows that the resistance element before described must be insulated from the metal frame supporting it, and that the insulation must be such as will not be affected by high temperatures.

For resistance not easily damaged by vibration or jarring, and which has high heat resistance qualities, mica has been selected as the best, and it is, so far as I know, used almost exclusively in rheostat insulation.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

At Kodak Park every known precaution is exercised to make sure that every foot of Eastman Positive Film actually will reproduce tone for tone, all the detail of the negative.

Eastman experts safeguard for the screen the photographic quality your audiences are entitled to see there—and expect.

Look for the identification "Eastman" "Kodak" in black letters in the margin of prints you screen.

As to describing just how and where this insulation is employed, why I think that is impossible, because of the great number of designs of rheostats.

I believe it is sufficient to say that it is so employed as to thoroughly insulate the resistance element or elements from the carrying frame.

A corking good answer, don't you think? I do. I agree with brother Genegenbeck that it would be impractical to try to describe, in minute detail, the method employed for insulation, where there are so many different designs of rheostat.

Question No. 62—When using rheostats, would you insulate the whole instrument or ground its frame? Give reasons for your answer.

W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, New York, says:

The frame of the rheostat should not be grounded, since if it is, a slight grounding of one of the resistance elements to the frame would cause current leakage, which would, of course, register on the meter, and if the ground be only a slight one, it might continue for a considerable time without detection.

Cooley, Wallace, Moore, Doe, Gengenbeck and Henning all answered to the same effect. Henning adds another item, thus:

When using rheostatic resistance in a circuit, the instrument should be completely insulated from the ground, and the coils or grids, of course, from the frame. Should the frame of the rheostat be permitted to have electrical contact with ground, and there be leakage from coils or grids to frame, then if there be a ground anywhere on the other side between which and the rheostat the resistance is not too great, there will be current leakage. Should the ground resistance between the rheostat and a ground on opposite polarity be low enough, and the ground from resistance to rheostat frame be heavy enough, then the current leakage will probably be heavy enough to blow a fuse. Regardless of that, however, current leakage through such a ground would be registered on the meter, and, of course, have to be paid for. If it continued for any considerable time it might prove rather expensive. The rheostat should be placed on a non-inflammable, insulating slab of asbestos, slate or other material, in a location where it will be easy of access to the projectionist.

Why and Wherefore

better. The best possible illumination I still hold to be the plan published in this department some years ago. It was the location of incandescent globes in a trough located close to the ceiling of the FRONT WALL. The inside of the trough and the wall above the trough to be painted and enameled white.

The drawing shows an end view. A, out as far as the mark, is painted and enameled (enamel paint) white, as also are surfaces B, D and C. One beauty of this plan is that there may be as many sockets as desired, and they may be wired in two or three circuits, so that by closing one switch you have a dim light which is well diffused, and reaches the front wall but very little. By closing another switch you have plenty of light for threading, etc., and by using all three circuits you have the room brilliantly illuminated when something happens which requires fast work and lots of light.

I received a sample of a globe frosted on its interior a few days ago. It is remarkable that engineers have accomplished such an apparently impossible feat. Such a light is good, provided it does not blacken on its interior surface too quickly—as probably it won't but I cannot recommend it for projection room lighting, except to say that it would be better than the open, raw light, which unfortunately many who do not and will not follow methods of ordinary intelligence in their work use.

Condenser Trouble

From Pedro Martinez, Tampa, Florida, comes this letter:

I am having trouble with condenser breakage, and am applying for information. The trouble is with the condensers in one of the Powers Six-A. In one of the projectors the condenser cracks all the time. The one next to the carbons do not last an hour. Have tried several makes of condenser. At present have installed a La France (imported) lens, but the result is the same. Am using a 6½-7½ combination. Have tried them both with the 6½ next the arc and the 7½ next the arc, but the results are the same. In the other projector I have no trouble with the same combination.

There are no air currents around the lamp, no fans in the projection room, and the condenser mount is completely airtight, with no leaks around it.

You should have sent me an impression of two or three of your positive carbon craters—presuming you to be using D. C. at the arc—and the distance crater to fact of collector lens. As it is I have no means of knowing that your crater is not too close to the lens. However, I will do the best I can with the material in hand.

First, measure the distance from crater to face of collector lens in both projectors. If they are the same, AND THE AMPERAGE IS THE SAME ON BOTH LAMPS, then that proves fairly conclusively that the trouble is not that the light source is too close to the lens.

Next take notice as to whether or not the flame from the arc comes closer to the top of the collector lens in the projector in which the lens breaks than it does in the other. If it does, then that is probably either the cause or one of the causes of the trouble.

Then be certain that the ventilation of the lamphouse in which the trouble occurs is free and open. Watch your step there, for the fact that the ventilation at the top is open and free is NOT proof that there is good ventilation, because the vents at the bottom may be stopped partly or entirely up, and if the heated air is to pass out, naturally there must be a way for the cool air to enter.

If you find these things to be O. K. then there must be something wrong with your condenser mount. Maybe it only touches the edge of the lens at two or three spots. Try insulating the lens from the holder with strips of thin sheet asbestos. I don't know which type of condenser holder you have, hence cannot comment intelligently on the "air tight" matter, except to say that if it is of the box type, on the outside of the lamphouse, then the casing ought to be ventilated. An air tight casing of that sort would heat the lenses abnormally. That is about all I can tell you from the information in hand.

Better Projection Pays

I note that the Westinghouse Company has adopted and is using the slogan: "BETTER PROJECTION PAYS," originated by P. A. McGuire, head of the advertising department of the N. Power Company, in its advertising. The Westinghouse Company is to be congratulated for this action. When great manufacturing companies such as the Westinghouse openly recognizes the importance of high class projection, it is evidence that that particular gear wheel in the train of the motion picture industry is at last going to be given real attention—attention at least in some measure commensurate with its importance.

Poor Patch Work Eliminated With Duplex Film Cement

THE Duplex Motion Picture Industries, Inc., of Long Island, New York, has recently launched on the motion picture market a Duplex Film Cement known as the Duplex Cumminone No. 7, for use in projection booths, exchanges and laboratories whenever the cutting, splicing or patching of films make it necessary to use a cement that will hold.

An important factor in the motion picture projection booth is the cementing of a "break" in a film, and the operator is in the habit of "splicing" his "break" and then testing it to see if the patch holds securely. The Duplex Motion Picture Industries has proven to the satisfaction of the users of their Duplex Cumminone No. 7 cement that their cement will patch a break in a strip of film without any testing after the "break" is made whole. The patch holds securely and stands more than the ordinary strain. A representative of this publication put a patch, made by the new Cumminone No. 7 cement, under a severe test and the result was most gratifying. Much grief in the projection booths over poor patch-work will be eliminated by this new cement.

It has been estimated that with the run of cements on the market as much as a bottle a day is being used for "breaks." The Duplex cement claims to last for weeks before the bottle is used up. Both inflammable and non-inflammable film stock take instant patches with this new cement.

The Duplex organization is offering to exchanges and projection booths a trial one-ounce bottle of the Duplex Cumminone No. 7 cement for twenty-five cents. This trial bottle will last for a couple of weeks, and is guaranteed by the manufacturers.

The Duplex products have been on the market for the past eighteen years. The company is fully equipped with an up-to-date plant to serve any number of products being used in the theatres, projection booths, laboratories, exchanges, and, in fact, every branch of the business.

MACK SENNETT COMEDIES

Two Reels

"She's a good gal. Why not treat her right?"

A hungry man wouldn't be satisfied with humming bird's tongues on toast, or a dill pickle.

He wants a real square meal, like good rare roast beef, potatoes and brown gravy.

The "subtle stuff" may go with a Browning Club, but your crowd likes to haw haw. They don't like to guess at the laughs.

When you give them a Mack Sennett you give them a good square meal of comedy, and they thank you for it.

Take a look at "Over There-Abouts" and "Dangerous Curves Behind." When you get through laughing, plan to advertise them. What's the profit in having a good thing if you don't tell them about it?

THE EASIEST JOB IN PICTURES

The man who writes the ads for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has the easiest job in pictures.

And no wear on the conscience.

He can tell the truth.

And he does.

He tells you that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is the talk of the industry.

And you know it's true, because everywhere you go you hear it.

You hear them say: "Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is doing their stuff again this year. How do they keep up that pace?"

Here's how.

The way to release only good pictures is not to release weak ones.

Our standard is high because we never offer you a picture until we're satisfied you'll like it.

And we know what you like.

Because we're showmen.

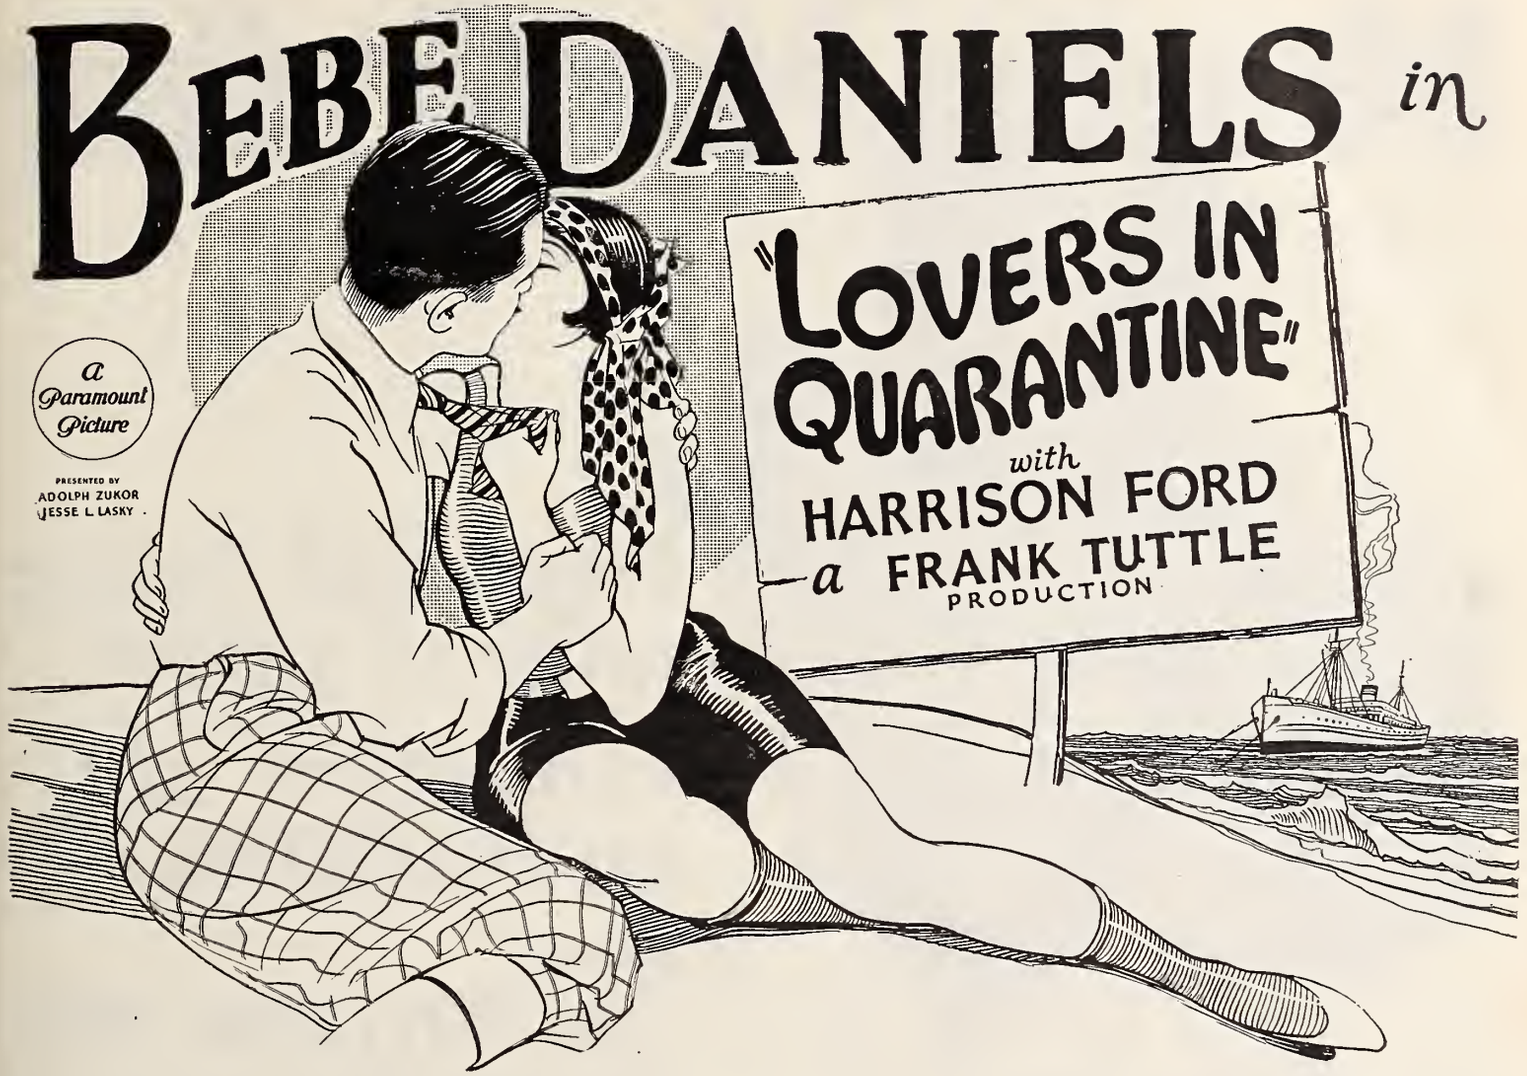
So we work on a picture until every possible box-office angle is packed into it.

And it meets our showmanship standards.

That's why you hear this slogan everywhere.

THE TALK OF THE INDUSTRY

BEBE DANIELS in



YESSIR—HERE'S A COMEDY! Funny, frisky, fast and flashy. "The Rivoli audiences shrieked with delight," reports the New York Daily Mirror, and, boys, that's putting it mildly.

"Bebe's best picture to date," declares the American. "A merry, rollicking comedy with laugh after laugh." The Herald Tribune: "One of the funniest things ever put on the screen. It is filled with little touches that are irresistible. Bebe is better than in anything she has ever done. The people at the Rivoli screamed with merriment."

Bebe has no equal in the screen world when it comes to the type of de luxe comedy like "Lovers in Quarantine." It's a big bet for any theatre anywhere!

From the big Broadway hit, "Quarantine," by F. Tennyson Jesse. Screen play by Townsend Martin and Luther Reed.

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

"Thar's Gold in Them Thar Box-Offices"

YOU would be surprised if carpenters, building a new box-office for you, found pay dirt in unbelievable quantities sown in the woodwork of the old structure. We mean real pay dirt, not casual dimes or quarters your cashier might have lost, but gold nuggets—the kind at which the hero in the Yukon drama on your screen inside may be staring pop-eyed, at that very moment.

It may be hard for you to believe, but the pay dirt is there just the same. Don't take this tip and smash your box-office into bits, expecting to see your lobby littered with gold. It sounds like a contradiction, but you cannot mine this pay dirt with an axe.

You have to go out in the field where you have staked your claim, turn over the old gravel, dig deep into the subsoil you haven't as yet touched—and even then you will not find the vein of yellow ore. It is when you have finished digging, shouldered your tools and gone back to your box-office that you will find the gold—not in phantom woodwork nuggets, but in CASH IN THE TILL.

Fairy tale? No sir!

Pipe dream? No SIR!

When the hospital in your town put on a drive for funds for a new ward, were you IN digging? Or were you a disinterested spectator?

When the committee from the Women's Club called to see you about some special showings of special pictures every other Saturday morning did you DIG IN, meet them half way, win them to a change of plan that worked not only for them but for you? Or did you send them on their way with a little plain talk about who was running your theatre and who was not?

When your community unites for a CAUSE, are you called in? Or is it the fast talking realtor across the street?

Does your theatre reflect the happy spirit of the entertainer? Or is it just a commercial institution where every transaction begins and ends at the box-office?

You are SOMEBODY in your community. You cure more ills than the doctor. You stop more ailments than the bottled cures on the druggist's shelves. And you often preach a better sermon than the minister.

You are an INFLUENCE.

The formula for finding that now ghostly gold in your box-office is: Use that influence. Sell not only feature pictures, but complete units of ENTERTAINMENT. Sell your theatre to your public. Sell yourself to your public.

The moonshine melodrama puts it: "Thar's gold in them thar hills, straunger." We say it this way: "There's gold in your box-office, friend, pay dirt you haven't struck yet."

The original version of "Thar's gold in them thar hills" was written in Spanish a long time ago. high up in the Peruvian Andes. They said to the treasure-hungry, empire-bound Spaniards: "That's gold in them thar hills" —with a nod toward the "hills" that reared 15,000 feet in the air.

The Spaniards climbed the western roof of the world and found the gold mines of the Incas. They sought gold —and found it. More, they found silver. More, they found copper.

Copper!

With gold and silver richly at hand, they passed up the copper like a cheap white chip in a heavy poker game, among stacks of yellows and blues.

Huge "dumps" of the despised ore were left on the mountain sides. They were nothing less than hills of copper. American mining engineers, years later, took over these "abandoned" workings as copper mines, and found these "dumps" mineral manna from the Peruvian heavens. Ready made ore sources easily accessible, they still yielded enough gold and silver to pay for the production of the copper. The copper—and lots of it—was pure "velvet."

Men climb high and dig deep for gold. You don't have to climb high. Dig deeper into the soil you've been working. It's not only a civic obligation. It's a business obligation.

You will not stumble on an El Dorado under the crossing at Church and High streets. And the local newspaper will not announce "Gold Found in Box-Office Woodwork at Happyhour Theatre." But you WILL find more gold, more silver AND more copper in your cash register, when you come BACK from the field.

William J. Reilly

Not What's Wrong But What's RIGHT with the MOVIES!

We will never have to get out a search warrant to find something RIGHT about the movies.

There is something RIGHT about the movies that is shining through the clouds of smart-boy criticism like a lighthouse.

It is Universal's picture, "The Phantom of the Opera."

This is the first opportunity we have had to speak in public print about Carl Laemmle's magnificent achievement in "The Phantom."

We speak of it as a Carl Laemmle achievement.

Rupert Julian directed the picture as a director works with a symphony orchestra, establishing and sustaining a dramatic tempo that grips the senses; using every artist to the highest pitch of power; working up to a mad, triumphant end.

Lon Chaney! Lon Chaney! That is enough. Except that his maniacal hansom ride to death near the finish of "The Phantom" will rank, in itself, as one of the finest pieces of acting on any screen—or any stage.

And Mary Philbin. Critics will keep on "discovering" Mary Philbin. But Mary Philbin in "The Phantom of the Opera" puts a new meaning into that shop-worn phrase "a star in her own right."

And Norman Kerry. A performance of dignity, stamped with lasting merit.

But we speak of it as a Carl Laemmle achievement. Because it represents in production and exploitation the combined effort of men and women with whom Carl Laemmle has surrounded himself for years. Home talent at its best.

Carl Laemmle is an old timer. He might have clung to the ideas of yesterday. He might have kept on making "Hiawathas." But he didn't. He made "The Phantom of the Opera."

That's achievement. That's magnificent achievement.

What's RIGHT with the movies? Carl Laemmle's "Phantom of the Opera!"

St. Louis Amusement Company Stock Over-subscribed; Ten Houses Owned

Financial Situation of Koplar-Skouras Bros. Concern Made Public—Skouras Leases King Bee Theatre from Nash

THE St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Harry Koplar and Skouras Brothers, has announced that subscriptions for an issue of 12,000 shares of Class A common stock of the company have been far in excess of the offering and that the shares will have to be pro-rated to the prospective stockholders. The subscription price was $38 per share.

The Class A stock will have priority over Class B common to non-cumulative dividends of $4.50 per share in any one year. The authorized capitalization of the company is 40,000 shares of Class A with 20,000 shares outstanding and 30,000 shares of Class B with 30,000 shares outstanding.

The St. Louis Amusement Company was formed November 22, 1921, with an outstanding bonded indebtedness of $887,452.75 and $300,000 capital stock. One-half of the stock was held by Skouras Brothers' Enterprises and the other half by Harry Koplar and associates. The bonded indebtedness has since been reduced out of earnings to $528,125 and recently was refunded by the sale of $600,000 in new bonds. The surplus after refunding the old bonds goes into the corporate account of the company. When it was formed the company took over the neighborhood houses of the City Wide Amusement Company and of Skouras Brothers' Enterprises.

The company now owns in fee simple ten theatres: Arco, Grand-Florissant, Gravois, Lindell, Maffitt, Manchester, Novelty, Pershing, Shenandoah and Grand-Florissant Airdome, and also operates under attractive leases the Arsenal, Lafayette, Pageant, Tivoli, Russell Airdome, North Grand Airdome, Zelphia Airdome, Compton Airdome, Pageant Airdome, Shenandoah Airdome and Cinderella Theatre. It also has a half interest in the Shaw Theatre. The total seating capacity of its theatres and airdomes is 28,005.

Plan Expansion

The plans of the company also contemplate the acquisition in the very near future of additional theatres in St. Louis and elsewhere, and negotiations are under way involving the transfer of eleven prominent St. Louis and suburban houses.

The earnings of the company for the two years prior to December 31, 1924, was sufficient to pay $3 per share on the Class A stock, while for the six months ended June 27, 1925, the earnings were $45,246 or more than sufficient to pay $4,50 per share on the Class A stock.

The balance sheet of the company as of June 27, 1925, as reported by Ernst & Ernst, certified public accountants, adjusted to give effect to the exchange of the old capital stock for the new no par value common stock and also to give effect to the new issue of $600,000 first mortgage gold bonds, showed assets of $1,688,116.77.

The assets included: Land and buildings, $1,232,500; leaseholds and improvements, $100,000; fixtures and equipment, $79,761.15; cash, $149,409.76; accounts receivable, $7,604.17; sundry deposits, $15,287.08; due from affiliated companies, $2,395.95; stock Shaw Theatre, par value, $12,600, and deferred charges, $75,325.79. The liabilities: First mortgage bonds, $600,000; not payable, $2,500; accounts payable and accrued accounts, $40,160.61; due Shaw Theatre Co., $9,395.52; reserve for income tax, $6,600. Capital stock: 20,000 shares of A and 30,000 shares B at book value, $1,029,460.64.

The company plans to pay dividends on the A stock at $3 per share, payable quarterly.

The officers and directors of the company are: S. P. Skouras, president and director; Harry Koplar, first vice-president and director; Charles P. Skouras, second vice-president and director; George P. Skouras, third vice-president and director; W. A. Stickney, secretary and director; Sol Koplar, assistant secretary and director; Sam B. Jeffries, director; Lambert B. Walther, director, and J. L. English, director.

King Bee Leased

The King Bee Theatre, 1710 North Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, for many years operated by Mike Nash, has been taken under a ten-year lease by the King Bee Amusement Company, controlled by George P. Skouras. The new management has already taken charge of the King Bee, which has 1,291 seats with an adjoining airdome seating 1,300 persons. It is said that Nash received a very attractive proposition to lease his theatre and airdome and finally consented.

Associated with Skouras in the management of the King Bee is P. E. K. Collins, who is well known throughout the St. Louis territory as an exhibitor and salesman.

The acquisition of the King Bee increases the string of houses in which George Skouras is the principal owner or largely interested, to eight, while he books for three additional houses at present.

The other houses in which he is interested are: Aubert, Aubert and Easton avenue, 1,599 seats, and an adjoining 200-seat airdome; Chippewa, Broadway near Chippewa, 575 seats; Powhattan, Manchester avenue, Maplewood, Mo., 1,500 seats; Congress, 4021 Olive street, 1,096 seats; Columbus, Southwest and Columbia avenues, now nearing completion, 2,000 seats; Virginia, Vermont and Virginia, 881 seats, and nearby airdome, 1,200 seats; and Highpointe, 1301 McCausland avenue, 794 seats, and airdome, 910 seats. He books for the Ozark, Webster Groves, and the Ashland and Newstead Theatres in St. Louis. In addition he is third vice-president and a director of the St. Louis Amusement Company.

Skouras Bros. and Paramount Confer

Rumors that Famous Players is negotiating to take over the Butterfield circuit of forty-six houses in Michigan and the twenty houses of the St. Louis Amusement Company persisted along the Rialto this week. The presence in town of Spyros and Charles Skouras, who with Harry Koplar control the St. Louis circuit, lent them credence.

It is understood that there is nothing to the Butterfield rumor, but that negotiations affecting the control of downtown St. Louis theatres are in progress between Harold B. Franklin of Famous Players and the Skouras brothers. These negotiations, however, have not reached the point where any definite announcement can be made.

The original rumor, now declared unfounded, had it that Paramount was to merge the Michigan and St. Louis holdings in a new theatre corporation to be organized by Paramount and Balaban & Katz. Mr. Franklin denies any negotiations with Butterfield.

Double Programs Prevail In Detroit Theatres

Double programs seem to be the style in Detroit neighborhood theatres this season. Nearly every theatre in the outskirt sections is now offering a bargain bill to its patrons on at least one night of the week. Invariably this comes on Monday, generally figured as the weakest business night in both outskirt and downtown houses. As a result of the twin feature offering every house has reported that the former weak night has been made into one of the best of the week. The cost of extra film rentals for these occasions is more than made up by the extra business drawn in, many managers report, while others have been using as the extra feature some of the product they have been obliged to purchase in blocks, sight unseen.

NOTED OHIO EXHIBITOR DIES

George Moore died recently as the result of peritonitis which followed a case of appendicitis. Moore, for the past twelve years had operated houses at Bellevue and Bucyrus, Ohio, and was also a member of the executive board of the M. P. T. O. Ohio.

FILM TICKET IN TROY

Theatre owners in Troy will be given an opportunity, regardless of their political affiliations of voting for one of their friends at general election day this fall. Harry Brooks, president of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union of Troy, is running for the Assembly, on the Republican ticket, while his opponent is Michael F. Breen, head of the bill posters of the Collar City.

F. B. O. gave a luncheon to Richard Talmadge, the thrill-star. This shows the gathering at that function in the Ritz-Carlton.

Cooney Bros. Admit Seeking Chicago Loop Theatre Site

THE report that Cooney Brothers are after a theatre site in the Loop is confirmed by J. J. Cooney of the National Theatres Corporation, who said that negotiations are being conducted but that it will be some time before a statement can be issued. The probable location will be near the Morrison Hotel, which is on the southeast corner of Clark and Madison, two blocks from the busiest corner in the city, State and Madison street. The Cooney Circuit has the Avalon under construction on the far South Side, and plans to begin work on the huge new movie theatre reported for Crawford and Washington boulevard are under way, according to word from the publicity department of the circuit. Other plans that call for co-operation from one of the largest film companies in the country are under way, according to word from the Cooney headquarters.

One of the most progressive of the smaller circuits in the state is that of the Mid-State Theatre Company, recently organized by Elmer Ramsay and E. E. Alger. The company recently added the Rialto at Bloomington, Ill., to the circuit, which is now composed of the Central at Fairbury, the Riveria at Peru, the Park at La Salle, the Colonial at Urbana, the Rantoul at Rantoul and the Family at Paxton. Elmer Ramsay is president and E. E. Alger is secretary. Other houses will be added from time to time.

Another huge theatre is planned for the far South Side. The Karzas circuit is associated with the purchase last week of the southeast corner of 79th and Cottage Grove avenue. The property extends to Maryland avenue and the American Bond and Mortgage Company is reported as planning to sell bonds on the projected three million dollar building to seat several thousand people.

Andrew Halas is having plans drawn for a twelve-story hotel building and roof theatre for the southwest corner of Leland and Racine avenue. The new project is to be called the Uptown Square and the theatre will be reached by special elevators.

Richard Talmadge Is Guest of Honor at F. B. O. Luncheon

Richard Talmadge, daredevil stunster, who arrived in New York last week for a month's vacation, was, at the end of a hectic week of personal appearances and radio talks, given a luncheon by F. B. O. at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York on Friday, October 9, at 12.30.

Sixty-five guests, including F. B. O. executives, representatives of the New York newspapers, fan magazines and trade journals, as well as many prominent New York and New Jersey exhibitors were present to welcome Mr. Talmadge.

Nat G. Rothstein, Director of Publicity and Advertising, who was master of ceremonies at the luncheon, introduced Mr. Talmadge, who "said it with stunts." His entrance was as thrilling as his pictures. He made a flying leap down the grand stairway of the Crystal room, in typical Talmadge style, and jumped over the table into his seat, turning somersaults that made his guests gasp.

A souvenir of the luncheon was a menu with Richard Talmadge's name engraved on the cover.

No speeches were made, although Mr. Rothstein announced that the Richard Talmadge Productions intend to bring suit against Popular Mechanics Magazine for a statement in their columns which declared that Talmadge uses a double for his stunts. Mr. Talmadge's reputation and prestige has been injured to the extent of half a million dollars, for which amount he intends to sue. Talmadge, Mr. Rothstein told the guests, is the only stunt star on the screen who does not use a double.

Cleveland Newspapers Place Ban on All Amusement Passes

THE most unexpected event has happened in the show business in Cleveland. The Cleveland newspaper actually have refused to accept any more passes. Not only that, but one paper, the Plain Dealer, has posted written notice that any employe accepting a pass will lay himself open to immediate discharge.

In the future no passes will be accepted from theatres, music halls, fights, races; in fact, any event where tickets are used for admission. The newspaper editors and managers have told their employes they must pay for their entertainment.

It all came about this way:

Certain sport writers were being paid fees as judges or publicity men for the race tracks. Also, they received a plentiful supply of passes.

But a race track manager objected when he was asked for additional supplies of passes. He investigated and claims that boys in the circulation departments of certain papers were selling them at a dollar a piece. He went to the editors and kicked, on the passes and the fees. That caused an explosion, figuratively speaking, after which one sport writer was let out, another er was demoted while another was switched off race tracks.

Then the papers got together and decided to cut out all passes. Notices were sent to the theatres, halls and sports promoters, including baseball and football managers.

One editor said: "It's great for us. We were bothered to death by outsiders calling up for passes. Now we tell them that passes are a thing of the past—and soon they won't call us any more."

Director Barry, of the police and fire department, also issued a ban on passes telling his men not to take them. However, the police officers are not all following out instructions in this respect.

RUBBING IT IN

Not satisfied with seeing J. W. Cotter, owner of the Fourth Street Theatre, Moberly, Mo., fined $50 for violating the town's blue law ordinance for opening on Sunday, the county prosecutor of Randolph County has filed against Mr. Cotter a charge of violating the state's anti-Sunday statute. The first case has been taken to the supreme court, while the second charge is regarded as more or less of a crude joke on the part of an over-zealous office holder.

Fall Golf Tournament Proves Huge Success

The Fall golf tournament in New York brought out 120 bidders for honors. The use of the Winged Foot links was obtained by W. H. Rabell of the Independent Movie Supply Company. Eddie Eschmann of First National was awarded the J. P. Muller cocktail shaker for his work. in arranging the handicaps. Joseph Dannenberg and Jack Alicoate if the Film Daily were given a vote of thanks for their efforts.

The winners were: T. C. Young, Mitchell May, Chris Deibel, E. P. Curtis, Walter Scheiber, Earl W. Hammons, Harry Brandt, W. H. Babell, Arthur S. Kane and Hy Gainsboro. Chris Deibel won a leg on the Film Daily cup.

BERT ENNIS

Ennis to Open Own General Advertising Business

Bert Ennis, director of publicity for Roxy Theatres Corporation and Sawyer-Lubin productions, will open his own office this month for the purpose of handling general advertising including national campaigns for commercial organizations as well as motion pictures.

Ennis will handle from this office, the Roxy Theatres Corporation, an organization recently formed for the purpose of building the Roxy Theatre, the world's largest motion picture house on 50th Street and 7th Avenue of which S. L. Rothafel will be the presiding genius.

He will also represent the Sawyer-Lubin organization covering the Barbara La Marr productions which are being released through First National Pictures, Inc.

In addition to these activities, Mr. Ennis will continue to direct the national advertising campaign of a big Massachusetts radio firm.

In addition to this campaign, he will also handle several well-known commercial commodities for publicity and advertising representation.

A separate department will be established for the representation of motion picture companies, directors and players.

A Pantages Rumor

Grand Island, Neb., is to have a new $250,000 theatre built by Universal, according to reports from there. The site has already been bought and ground is to be broken soon, it is reported.

Omaha and Des Moines are expecting that Alexander Pantages head of the Pantages Vaudeville circuit, will build picture houses at these two places soon, as it has been reported that he plans to enter the picture business and plans to build a chain of movie houses which are to include sites at Seattle, Omaha and Des Moines.

Clarke Sees Big Future For De Luxe Picture Theatres

SOME of the problems of theatre managers in building programs were discussed by Eric T. Clarke, managing director of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Roscoe, N. Y. Mr. Clarke declared that while the feature picture must have a wide public appeal, there are many unusual productions which do not get a proper showing because too frequently the distributor fails to offer the picture in its correct light through fear that the exhibitor can only be reached by extravagant praise and box office allurement. Exhibitors, he said, are too frequently misled into the belief that the public wants only the type of pictures to which it has previously responded and are therefore fearful of presenting something different, even if of a superior type.

In discussing what will be the next type of super de luxe motion picture entertainment, Mr. Clarke declared there is perhaps little need for speculation on this head, since there lies before us at this moment ample opportunity for the further development in efforts to arrive at the ideal de luxe performance. At all events, he said, the de luxe performance is a young child growing rapidly and with a big future before it.

"The de luxe house," said Mr. Clarke, "is really welding a new audience out of all the groups and classifications of the public. Playgoers, concert goers and vaudevillegoers are only three out of a number of classifications which might be made, but they will serve to make clear that individual preferences must be satisfied if we wish to attract all these people. In the first place, it is clear that they form a high-class audience.

"The most successful features are never morally questionable. Pictures with a strong sex appeal may succeed in other types of houses, but I know for certain that they can never beat the attendance records in a de luxe house. The de luxe houses are clearly come to stay and the tendency is to greater program variety."

Chicago Exhibitors Show Up Exchangemen at Golf Tourney

WELL, Chicago's Film Row Golf sharks are not so good after all, for Arthur R. Bogue, well known exhibitor of Rochelle, Ill., walked away with the Midwest film silver cup trophy and bag donated by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Second prize, a silver cocktail set, went to a brother exhibitor, E. W. Morgan, while C. E. Bond and Bob Lucas, both from Balaban & Katz Midwest offices, grabbed third and fourth prizes.

John Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, won the F. B. O. cup with the low gross on 36 holes. Len Ullrich of Pathe won the Laemmle cup for the third time when his 61 was the low for the 36 holes. He also grabbed the second low net for 18 holes and won the Pathe set of golf clubs. R. C. Seery of First National took down a silver vase for his efforts and Asher Levy of the Orpheum circuit walked away with the cup for the low gross on 18 holes. Floyd Lewis of B. & K. won the duffle bag donated by Schoenstadt & Sons for his playing.

Other prize winners were G. A. Fortin, Kankakee, Ill., exhibitor, first in 36 holes, gold cigarette box; J. Northcott, Orpheum circuit, sweater, second.

Class B winners were Ben Bervie, Rochelle exhibitor; Mort Singer, Orpheum circuit, second. Class C winners were Dale Leifholt, exhibitor at DeKalb, Ill.; second, Morris Huber, Kankakee, exhibitor. Class D winners were Malcolm Eagle, Keith Orpheum circuit, and Walter Nay, Pathe, second.

At the dinner which followed at the Olympia Fields Clubhouse prizes were distributed and the following officers were elected to serve the coming year: Len Ullrich, chairman; C. E. Bond, treasurer; William Burlock, Tom Greenwood and Jack Sampson, directors.

MOTHERS CALLED RESPONSIBLE

The entire responsibility in motion picture censorship lies in the home and mothers today are not anxious to assume it, declared Mrs. C. E. Siegesmund in the conference on motion pictures before the New York State Congress of Parents and Teachers in the Hotel Statler, Buffalo, last week. Mrs. Siegesmund said mothers are shelving their duty daily.

Conn. Changing Views on Tax

Hartford, Oct. 14—About 75 of 100 members of the Connecticut Legislature who have replied to questionnaires sent out by a committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners favor some form of immediate relief for exhibitors affected by the state motion picture tax law. There are over 260 representatives in the legislature.

The other twenty-five heard from, according to Joseph W. Walsh of Hartford, chairman of the committee, are divided between those who desire relief without a special session of the Legislature and those preferring that the present law stand the test of two years until the next assembly convenes.

The members of the committee making the canvas of the legislators and also conducting a campaign among patrons are Mr. Walsh, president of the exhibitor association; Louis M. Sagal of New Haven, I. J. Hoffman of Ansonia, C. M. Mansfield of New Hartford and N. S. Fournier of Moosup.

Cornerstone of Fox Exchange to Be Laid by Senator Walker

WITH officials of city and state, stars of stage and screen, and 300 exhibitors of the metropolitan area taking part in the ceremonies, Senator James J. Walker, Democratic candidate for mayor, will wield the trowel at the laying of the cornerstone of Fox Film Corporation's New York Exchange, 343-45 West 44th Street, on Wednesday, October 28, according to an announcement by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the company.

Beauty and utility have been combined in the plans drawn for the building by the architects. It will be one of the most scientifically laid out exchanges in the country, with every modern appliance for the handling and distribution of films and accessories. Construction will be absolutely fireproof. The building will be reinforced concrete, with all steel partitions, a full sprinkling system and every other known safety appliance. The exterior will be of burnt red brick with a purplish cast. The plans call for a beautiful marble entrance hall with massive highly decorative oak doors.

Elaborate provisions have been made for the comfort and convenience of visiting exhibitors. A beautiful lounge and reception room, opening out of a palatial projection room, will be fitted up for the comfort of visiting exhibitors on the third floor. There will also be vaults for the storage of films.

Harry Buxbaum, manager of the New York Exchange, will have his offices on the second floor, surrounded by the members of his staff. Plans call for large rest rooms on this floor for the office force. Lockers and other essential equipment will be found in these rooms.

The shipping room for handling incoming and outgoing films will be on the street floor. This most important branch will have every appliance to expedite handling. In addition there will be a film examination hall, a bureau of information, the auditing department and the cashier's office.

Posters, press books and other accessories for exploiting and advertising pictures will be handled in the full basement. Machines will be used for folding, wrapping and counting, to insure utmost speed in supplying the needs of showmen .An electrically operated dumbwaiter will convey films from one floor to another.

A unique feature of the ceremonies will be the placing of a can of films in the cornerstone instead of the usual papers. Great care is being taken to insure that the film will be typical of present day production. Excavators of future generations discovering the motion pictures sealed in the masonry of the new Fox exchange will be able to visualize the civilization of the early twentieth century.

Ascher Denies Rumor

Chicago, Oct. 14—Nate Ascher of the Ascher circuit brands the story that the circuit is to affiliate with Fox as "the bunk." He points out they have just settled up with the Loew interests and cleared up the indebtedness of the circuit to outside interests, and that now the Ascher circuit is going ahead on its own efforts. With several new houses projected and under construction, the Ascher circuit is in a strong position to secure its share of the business in this territory.

As a pioneer circuit in the Chicago district, the Ascher circuit has more than done its share to raise the standard of the business. Still one can never tell what will happen in these days of consolidations and combinations.

MORE MONEY FOR WARNERS

Waddill Catchings of the Wall Street firm of Goldman, Sacks & Co., has been elected to the Board of Directors of Warner Bros. and chairman of the Finance Committee. This will allow the Warners to devote all their time to production, Harry M. Warner said.

Mr. Catchings will remove from their shoulders the routine burden of financing matters.

Kansas City Showman Voices His Opinion on "Panic Yell"

KANSAS CITY just now is in the grip of a question so delicate that it has caused a factional division of opinion. The subject is mentioned only in guarded undertones. There is one exhibitor, however, Adolph M. Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O., Kansas City, and owner of the Circle Theatre, Kansas City, who is prone to voice his sentiment without "coloring."

"Why all this howl if an exhibitor expresses an opinion on producer-owned theatres which might conflict with the usual 'panic yell' voiced? If we think a conservative number of producer-owned theatres is such a terrible thing for the industry, why do we continue to sell our theatres to Universal and Paramount, who have been actively buying in the Kansas City territory of late? I have in mind not less than ten widely known, prominent exhibitors in this territory, who in the past at some time have assisted in singing the 'death hymn' of producer-owned theatres. Today, every one of them has sold at least one theatre to a producer within the last year. Do we expect people to take us seriously when our actions are so inconsistent? Are exhibitor organizations to be strictly an individual proposition, with the motto—'Wait 'til I get mine, then to hell with the others' —in force?

"One may say: 'It's only a comparatively few exhibitors who would sell their theatres to producers.' What 'one' really means is that it's only comparatively few theatres the producers want, but that they could buy from any exhibitor under the sun if the latter happened to need a buyer. Let's be honest about it. We—part of us, at least—are fighting among ourselves, trying to beat the other fellow to it by buying all the pictures that are made. Pretty soon we awaken and find that we are woefully over-booked, facing a big financial loss. We want to sell out. Do we think of the dear brother exhibitor who sat alongside of us at the meeting or convention and aided in passing a resolution against producer-owned theatres? Ha, it is to laugh. We would sell out to Jesse James if he had the cash.

"Personally I can see no harm, but a benefit, in a conservative number of producer-owned theatres in each territory. It will aid the owners of individual theatres to obtain better prices on rival product which must have an outlet. There are comparatively few theatres in each territory that producers want. Let them have them. It will make business all the better. The saddest thing of it all is that we exhibitors have to keep fighting among ourselves, with those who do the loudest bellowing usually the biggest hypocrites. If we must remain children all our lives, then the industry simply will have to wait until we catch up with it. It's time we sober up. We're long overdue."

SUNDAY OPENING EXPENSIVE

Ross D. Rogers, manager of the Fair Theatre at Amarillo, Texas, was arrested on Sunday, September 27, for opening his theatre on Sunday and paid a fine of $21 and costs of $11.25. All of the churches in Amarillo passed strong resolutions condemning Sunday picture shows.

Incorporations

Five companies were chartered by the secretary of state during the past week for the purpose of engaging in some one of the various branches of the motion picture industry in New York state. This is somewhat below the number that have been incorporating during the past few weeks. The companies included the following: Chester Beecroft Productions, Inc., capitalized at $100,000, with Henry E. Stohldreier, Esther Cohn and Edward Lemberger, of New York city; Beerbohm Corporation, $15,000, Harold P. Seligson, Edward S. Silver, Susanne Johnston, New York; Craig's Wife, Inc., $1,000, Edward J. Clarke, Charles Berg, I. C. Weisman, New York city; the following two companies not stating the amount of capitalization: Chippewa Theatre Corporation, with Joe Hart, Corona, L. I.; George Blake, Brooklyn; Edward M. Fay, Providence, R. I.; MacFarlane Productions, Inc., E. C. Raftery, Cecil Keller, Mae M. Lipp, New York city.

The Buffalo Strand Theatre Corporation has been incorporated in Albany with 500 shares of no par value. The policy of the company, as announced, is to conduct theatrical business and it is also stated that the incorporation was formed at this time merely to protest the name—Buffalo Strand. The directors are Walter Hays, Eugene L. Falk, Ira W. Smith, Stanley G. Falk, Raymond A. Williams and Lillian Olsen. But who knows? Perhaps, some day, Buffalo may again have a Strand. It was in Buffalo that the original Strand of the Mark interests was opened and which passed away a few years ago.

The Auditorium Theatre Co., Toledo, has been incorporated for $10,000, with Wm. E. Vogt, Geo. W. Ritter, F. E. Deihlman and others.

The Aywon Films, Ltd., is the name of a new film exchange which has been incorporated under the laws of the Province of Quebec with a capitalization of $20,000. The offices of the company are at Montreal.

Long Tie-up at Low Rate Recommended with Music Publishers—Present Arbitration Method to be Thoroughly Investigated

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan gathered in Grand Rapids on October 6 for their annual convention with the largest attendance and the most representative crowd in its history. At the business session this afternoon Mayor Elvin Swarthout delivered the address of welcome and J. R. Denniston of Monroe responded in behalf of the organization. Reports were read by John E. Niebes, treasurer; Harlan T. Hall, secretary; Glenn A. Cross, president, and H. M. Richey, business manager. Addresses were made by John N. Lovett, general manager of the Michigan Manufacturers' Association, and Martin Quigley, Chicago trade journal publisher.

The complete slate of officers elected at the Wednesday session follows:

A. J. Kleist, president; E. E. Kirchner, vice-president; H. T. Hall, secretary; John E. Niebes, treasurer. Mr. Kleist is a Pontiac exhibitor, all the other officers being Detroit men. The new directorate, extended from eleven to fifteen members, is composed of Roy Adams, Mason; Harry Angell, Adrian; W. S. Butterfield, Fred De Lodder, Ruby Fisher, C. W. Porter, J. C. Ritter, George W. Trendle, Detroit; Charles Q. Carlisle, Saginaw; Glenn A. Cross, Battle Creek; J. R. Denniston, Monroe; Harry Eiseman, Flint; W. S. McLaren, Jackson; P. C. Schramm, Kalamazoo; G. L. Willer, Grand Rapids.

Battle Creek was selected as the convention site.

The various reports showed that seventy-five new members had joined during the past year, bringing the total up to 425 theatres represented; also that the treasury of the association had increased by $12,000.

Richey in his report reviewed the work during the past year, showing the association had made great progress. He recommended for the coming year a number of things: first, that the association look into the present method of arbitration as to whether it was legal under the Michigan statutes, and that unless the present uniform contract is changed arbitration be discontinued; recommended a charity fund to care for those in need, also a building fund so that the association could have its own home and that this building be erected in Detroit; recommended that members make as long a tieup as they possibly can with the American Society of Music Composers and at the lowest rate they can get, the present rate in Michigan being 10 cents per seat.

Mr. Lovett thanked the association for its splendid cooperation in connection with combatting the state income tax and added that the most effective work in this campaign was the cooperation given by the Michigan exhibitors. He urged exhibitors to take an interest in politics, as politics was nothing more than government.

Quigley said the independent producers and distributors were on their last legs and predicted that unless they get more consideration from the theatre owners they would soon be completely out of business.

President Cross stated that Movie Season in Michigan was a big success and that he hoped it would be an annual affair. He said Michigan would back it even bigger next year.

There was a banquet at the Hotel Pantlind in the evening, followed by dancing at the Regent Roof Garden. Among the speakers were Glenn Cross, Battle Creek; James C. Ritter, Detroit; John M. Lovett, Detroit; Martin Quigley, Chicago; Arthur E. Vandenberg, Grand Rapids publisher, and Alfred J. Murphy, Detroit circuit court judge.

At the Wednesday session Ed Kirschner of Detroit read a report on arbitration and recommended an investigation of the present method. W. A. S. McLaren of Jackson read the budget report and urged economy for the coming year. Charles Porter of Detroit, reported on association activities and recommended that Greater Movie Season be made an annual affair. James C. Ritter of Detroit, presented the report of the ways and means committee. John Niebes of Detroit reported for the resolutions committee. All of the recommendations were unanimously adopted.

Wyoming Organizes

The Wyoming Theatre Owners' and Managers' Association was organized at a recent meeting of eighteen theatre owners. The session of the eighteen exhibitors lasted two days. James Lynch of Laramie was elected president. M. T. Todd of the Rialto Theatre of Casper was elected secretary-treasurer. The aim as set forth is to foster the displaying of high-class, clean motion pictures.

The organization plans to affiliate with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. The plan is that the next annual meeting be held at Cheyenne, Wyo., during the time the frontier days are held at that place. The association elected on the board of trustees the following: Thomas Berta, Rock Springs; Fred Besold, Sheridan; Earl Nye, Cheyenne; E. J. Schulte, Casper; Thomas Love, Parco; John Bangs, Rawlins.

Fourth Term for Collins as Arkansas Exhibitor President

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas held its eleventh semi-annual convention in Little Rock on October 11 and 12. The annual fall election resulted in the election of Eli Whitney Collins for his fourth consecutive term as president. Mr. Collins was elected by acclamation in the face of his persistent efforts to decline the honor.

Cecil Cupp of Arkadelphia was elected vice-president, succeeding H. D. Wharton of Warren, who was chosen to succeed O. C. Hauber as secretary-treasurer. Mr. Hauber, who has held the secretary-treasurer's office since the Arkansas organization was formed, declined to again accept since his personal business required all of his attention. He is no longer connected with the theatre, having sold his interests some years ago and turned his attention to real estate. The organization presented Mr. Hauber with a magnificent watch as a mark of the esteem in which he was held.

The Board of Directors selected was as follows: W. L. Landers, Batesville; L. B. Clark, Eldorado; E. H. Butler, Russellville; E. C. Robertson, Fayetteville; Walter Raney, McCrory; John A. Collins, Paragould; Sidney Nutt, Hot Springs, and W. E. Blume, Searcy.

The principal business was the consummation of a compromise which has been in the process of negotiation between Mr. Collins for the M. P. T. O. A. and Judge Felix R. Robertson, resident attorney, for the society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. An arrangement was completed that was satisfactory to the exhibitor organization and the society alike, which disposes of this vexatious problem for the time, at least. Judge Robertson was warmly received and presented the society's side in such an eloquent manner as to remove much of the bitterness that had formerly existed between the two organizations.

The entire first day was consumed by private screenings of late photoplays. These screenings were held in the New Theatre, owned by T. W. Sharpe, and followed a definite schdule outlined by the secretary. The meeting adjourned on the night of October 12 to reconvene again on the first Monday in April.

A resolution endorsing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and its officers, and pledging full moral and financial support, was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted by the convention.

Hartford Mayor Bans Films; Confuses State Tax Situation

THE first serious complication growing out of the Connecticut film tax law developed in Hartford last Tuesday when Mayor Norman C. Stevens banned "Greed" and "Birth of the Nation." Mayor Stevens explained his action by saying that complaints against the pictures had been received by him and that he feared they would excite racial feeling and "passions" and cause unrest in the commnuity.

The complication comes from the fact that State Tax Agent Splain had regularly passed the film "Greed," which produced a tax of $100, and that later Mayor Stevens acted under authority of a charter provision of the City of Hartford empowering the mayor to revoke a license granted for the production of public amusements. Thus the question of jurisdiction has arisen, for obviously there has been conflict in censorship. And the distributor is out $100, which under the new law he forfeits, in addition to losing prospective rentals.

"Greed" was to have shown in the Majestic Theatre, but the management at the request of the mayor dropped negotiations for it. "The Birth of the Nation"' was banned here before, a few months ago.

Benedict M. Holden of Hartford, associated in the constitutional fight over the new law, took issue with the mayor on the matter of his power to censor films, saying that he considered the charter provision giving the mayor power to revoke licenses only applied in case of fire prevention.

Mr. Holden pointed to the case of "Greed" as the first instance of what the producers had all along claimed about the law, that it was confiscatory. Mr. Holden indicated that the producers have a good action at law in the situation. "If Mr. Splain reviewed 'Greed' and passed it, and furthermore collected the stated tax, we have cause for action if it is banned and the tax forfeited," he said.

Didn't You Think So Too?

"THE Moving Picture World certainly was splendidly made up in the last issue. Things are arranged much better—and the Short Subject tips being next door to the reviews keeps us from licking our thumbs too much in searching for them.

"Thought the M. P. W. couldn't be improved upon, but you fellows DID IT! Congratulations from fatty Johnson and myself." H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

A Correction

In a letter to Moving Picture World, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, says:

"In your October 17 issue you published a story about a chain of theatres in Chicago, owned by my brother, Louis Laemmle. The story was quite all right, but the headline read: 'U's Universal Chain.' The Universal has no connection whatever with these theatres, either as a stockholder or otherwise, and I will greatly appreciate it if you will correct the erroneous impression given by your headline."

Re-Hearing on Conn. Tax Law Denied by Court

A decision filed in New Haven on October 10 denied the petition of motion picture interests for a re-hearing before the special federal court which declared Connecticut's new film tax law constitutional. This decision ends proceedings in the district court and clears the way for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court. Attorney Benedict M. Holden of Hartford and George W. Wickersham represented the motion picture interests. An appeal will be filed in a few days. The decision follows:

"The motion for re-argument is denied. The application is based on the theory that the court disposed of this case upon the theory that the statute was passed in the exercise of the police power, but the court decided that whether the act was passed in the exercise of the police power or the taxing power, it was valid."

The decision is signed by Judges Henry Wade Rogers, Henry Goddard and Thomas W. Thacher, the three federal judges who formed the special court provided to pass on the constitutionality of state laws.

The action was brought to the special court by the American Feature Film Co., Inc., of Boston and the Fox Film Corporation of New York. The court was petitioned to declare the law unconstitutional and to enjoin the state officers from enforcing it. Arguments were held on July 10, former United States Attorney General George W. Wickersham appearing for the plaintiffs and Attorney Arthur W. Shipman of Hartford appearing for the state. About four weeks later the court handed down a decision declaring the law constitutional and denied the plea for an injunction.

In the motion for re-argument the counsel for the plaintiffs claimed that the court had decided the issue on the basis that the act was passed under the police power of the state. The title of the act it was shown, reads "An Act Providing for the Imposition of a Tax on Films from which Motion Pictures are to be Exhibited," and it was claimed that the court should pass on the constitutionality as a revenue measure. The tax of ten dollars a reel, it was argued, could not be a fee to cover police supervision as it would bring a revenue several times larger than the cost of administration of the act.

Fox General Manager Finds Activity At Peak on Visit to Big Coast Plant

WHEN Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, reached Hollywood October 15th, he found the Fox lot humming with activity as the final half of this seasons productions were getting under way. On his return from a three months' business and pleasure tour of Europe, Mr. Sheehan remained at the home office in New York City only two weeks before he entrained for California to get into touch with production activities.

Two pictures had just been completed as Mr. Sheehan reached the studio, and five new Fox supreme attractions were being launched. Three completed pictures were in the cutting room, being edited preparatory to shipping them to the home office, two were in preliminary stages and three more were in work. In addition, six comedy production units were at work on the lot.

Tom Mix greeted Mr. Sheehan with the news that he had just finished filming "The Best Bad Man" under the direction of J. G. Blystone and was going right to work on "My Little Pal.'" Tom's new picture is based on Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Gallant Guardsman.'" Tom portrays the role of protector to a little orphan girl. Lillie Hayward wrote the scenario, and Blystone will direct.

Frank Borzage had the film version of "Wages for Wives" ready for screening and is now busy on his plans for launching "The First Year" into production. Both are John Golden stage successes. Borzage has cast Matt Moore in the leading male role of "The First Year," which is enthusiastically described as the greatest comedy of married life ever written.

With "The Silver Treasure," based on Joseph Conrad's novel, "Nostromo," in the cutting room, Rowland V. Lee is preparing to film "Daybreak," which is an adaptation of the stage succcess, "The Outsider." His brother, Robert N. Lee, wrote the scenario.

Victor Schertzinger made such a hit with "Thunder Mountain," based on John Goldne's "Howdy Folks,'" that he has been assigned to direct "The Golden Strain," another outdoor picture. It is the first of the four Peter B. Kyne stories to be filmed by Fox this season. Under the title "Thoroughbreds," the Kyne story was published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Madge Bellamy and Kenneth Harlan will play the leads in "'The Golden Strain," while Ann Pennington, Hobart Bosworth, Frank Beal and Lawford Davidson will contribute important roles. The entire 10th U. S. Cavalry and more than 500 Apache Indians have an important part in one of the sequences

"The Golden Butterfly" will be directed by John Griffith Wray, former Ince director general, who recently completed the romantic mystery melodrama, "The Winding Stair," based on A. E. W. Mason's story of the French Foreign Legion among the Riffians in Morocco. "The Golden Butterfly" is an original story by Evelyn Campbell.

Buck Jones at present is out on location in the midst of filming "Her Cowboy Prince," his fifth Fox starring vehicle of the season. R. William Neill is directing. Beautiful Helena D'Algy is the heroine.

W. S. Van Dyke is in the cutting room editing "The Desert's Price," which Buck completed before "Her Cowboy Prince" was started, and now Van Dyke is preparing to film the sixth Jones picture of the season.

Henry Otto is still busy with "The Ancient Mariner," which is to be presented as a special Christmas season release. The fantasy portion of the picture, the visualization of Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem, with Paul Panzer in the title role is bound to evoke a lot of comment because of the supernatural beauty of the settings.

Emmett Flynn will wield the megaphone on a new romantic drama now in the course of construction.

George Marshall, supervising director of Fox comedies, announced completion of "Hold Everybody," fourth of the Helen and Warren married life comedies directed by Albert Ray, and "The Brain Storm," an Imperial Comedy directed by Robert P. Kerr. The latter had got so far ahead on the Van Bibber series of two-reelers, starring Earle Foxe, that he took time off to put Sid Smith through his paces.

Kerr is now preparing to resume production on the Van Bibbers, with a clever scenario based on another of the Richard Harding Davis stories. Daniel Keefe has finished "Failure," with Harvey Clark as Lawyer Gootch and Kathryn McGuire as Mamie Jones, and now he's getting ready to produce the fourth O. Henry, titled "Cupid a la Carte.'" Thomas Buckingham, back again on the Fox lot, has been assigned by Mr. Marshall to direct the fifth "Helen and Warren" comedy, titled "The Silent Witnesss.'"

AILEEN PRINGLE

She's about ready for some terpsichorean ravings—er, that is, about to play the feminine lead in "Dance Madness," which Robert Z. Leonard will "do" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"The Reckless Lady"

Robert T. Kane announces the purchase of "The Reckless Lady," by Sir Philip Gibbs, and will soon start production at his studios on 127th Street. "The Reckless Lady" was the outstanding best seller of last year and still rates in the blue book as one of the leading six best sellers on the various bookstands of the country.

Frances Marion Completes Her First Big Production

FRANCES MARION has placed the final editorial touches on "Simon the Jester" and word from the Coast states that, at a special public preview, it proved itself a worthy initial offering in the series of Frances Marion Productions scheduled for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

In launching her own productions, Miss Marion climbs another step higher in the motion picture industry. Not only has she more successful pictures to her credit than any other scenario writer today, but she has also directed two productions of note: Mary Pickford's "The Love Light," and "Just Around the Corner," a Cosmopolitan Production.

Frances Marion was one of the first scenarists to be credited with successfully working in close co-operation with the star and director in the making of pictures, and when she and Marshall Neilan were associated with Mary Pickford the trio turned out a number of that star's most notable success, including "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Stella Maris" and "Pollyanna."

More recently Miss Marion prepared the adaptations and scenarios for "Abraham Lincoln," "East is West," starring Constance Talmadge; "Sunny," with Richard Barthelmess, and "The Eternal Flame," "Within the Law," "Secrets" and "The Lady," starring Norma Talmadge.

During her association with Cosmopolitan Productions, Miss Marion adapted "Humoresque," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Zander the Great" and a number of others. Still more recently, she prepared the scenarios for the "Potash and Perlmutter" pictures; "Cytherea," "The Dark Angel," "Stella Dallas," "The First Year" and Norma Talmadges "Graustark."

Aside from her screen work, Miss Marion has found time during the past year to write a novel of the film industry, called "Minnie Flynn." This was first published serially in Pictorial Review and although only published in book form recently, is already considered "a best seller."

In making her own productions, Miss Marion will devote her extensive picture knowledge to each production from the selection of the story, to its final cutting.

"Simon the Jester" is a picturization of the William J. Locke story of the same name and has been directed by George Melford under Miss Marion's personal supervision. The cast includes Eugene O'Brien, Lillian Rich, Edmund Burns, Cyril Chadwick, Henry B. Walthall, Mary McAlister and Billy Platt.

FRANCES MARION
The distinguished scenario writer and novelist, having become a full-fledged producer in her own right, has completed her first picture, "Simon the Jester," for Producers Distributing Corporation.

Associated Exhibitors Salesmen Hear of Firm's Plans at Meet

KEENEST enthusiasm was manifested by special field men when they learned in conference this week in the home office of Associated Exhibitors' big plans regarding Peggy Hopkins Joyce's starring vehicle, "The Sky Rocket." The fact that "The Sky Rocket" is Miss Joyce's first picture and that it is one of their company's super specials for the ensuing season, coupled with the official announcement that an appropriation of over $150,000 has been voted to exploit this production, were primarily responsible for the high tension evidenced.

General Manager John S. Woody and Sales Manager Jay A. Gove presided over these sessions which lasted for three days. Four of the five special representatives of Associated Exhibitors were present during the three days in the home office quarters at 35 West 45th Street, Manhattan.

Details of the company's new selling and administrative policy were outlined. In this respect the special representatives learned of Associated's Second Group of 1925-26 productions totaling sixteen. They were given the opportunity of previewing the major portion of this second half of the schedule. A statement of Associated's plans, reassuring to the present field organization was made by President Oscar Price and was received with much enthusiasm. Robert E. Welsh, director of publicity and advertising, explained in detail elaborate plans which he has under way in connection with his own department which call for the co-operation of the sales department to its mutual aid.

The special representatives were instructed with regard to the taking over of towns of less than 2,500 population, heretofore sold for Associated by Pathe, and for the employment of bookers and a greatly increased sales organization. In this respect were discussed many details of sales work and the entire distribution campaign for the remainder of the season.

Those of the special field force in attendance during this three-day conference were Claude C. Ezell, Floyd Lewis, Harry E. Lotz, and Melville E. Maxwell. A detailed report of what had been accomplished at these sessions was forwarded to Oren F. Woody who is now on the Pacific Coast and who was unable to get to New York. Mr. Woody will conduct exchange meetings on the Coast.

The delicious roguery of Madge Bellamy in her scenes with Leslie Fenton are among the highlights of Victor Schertzinger's production of "Thunder Mountain," for William Fox. This is John Golden's stage play, "Howdy, Folks," and Zasu Pitts has a "corking" role in the picturization.

"No Man's Law" Next for Custer

Bob Custer has launched his eighth Western feature for F. B. O.'s "No Man's Law." It is being produced by Jesse Goldburg from the story by Walter F. Coburn and continuity by William E. Wing. Forrest Sheldon is the director.

W. J. MORGAN
Sales Manager of Producers Distributing Corporation, reports brisk sales on the pictures scheduled on the 1925-26 program of his company.

Columbia Official Sees Bright Future for Independent Films

DAVID A. O'MALLEY, secretary of Columbia Pictures Corporation, has just returned from a six weeks trip covering all Columbia exchanges throughout the country. Mr. O'Malley made an exhaustive study of the independent situation and has returned with the opinion that the coming year will be the best and most prosperous to be experienced by independent producers and distributors.

"The financial situation," he says, "is better than it has been at any other time in the history of motion pictures. Distributors throughout the entire country have awakened to the fact that independent productions can be cashed in on as readily.

Columbia productions in particular have established the present high standing of independent product, and has won the confidence of independent distributors to such an extent that all those now handling Columbia pictures have laid definite plans to form a national organization for the exclusive distribution of Columbia Productions and will meet in New York during the coming week to definitely decide on new policies.

Mr. O'Malley states that his exhaustive study of conditions in the field reveals that at the present time exhibitors and distributors of independent productions feel that the revived competition in the motion picture industry and the splendid quality of independent product being offered has brought about a renewed interest which has permanently done away with the recent slump in motion picture production.

The Columbia secretary's optimistic report will greatly influence the plans of this company for the coming year, and may encourage Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt to even further increase the Columbia program for 1926-1927, which is even now scheduled for a greater number and more expensive productions than those on this year's schedule.

W. J. Morgan Reports Brisk Sales of P. D. C. Product

W. J. MORGAN, sales manager of Producers Distributing Corporation returned to New York this week after a business surveying trip that took him to every branch in the mid-western, central, southern, and eastern districts; and his report of conditions in general and the prospects for the Producers Distributing releases in particular, is more than gratifying to the company executives.

Mr. Morgan reports that exhibitors everywhere are booking the entire list of thirty-seven pictures on the present schedule, with the utmost confidence in the representations being made for their quality and diversity of entertainment matter and that the most interesting advance bookings is the fact that a great many contracts have been signed with the foremost theatres in first run towns, heretofore looked upon as "closed" territories.

A high compliment is paid to the Pro.-Dis.-Co. sales force in Mr. Morgan's report. He says that with the changes, additions and transfers made in the selling force during the past several months, he believes the personnel of the field organization to be the finest that ever represented a motion picture distributing company.

"The men we have in the field are of the highest calibre socially and commercially" says Mr. Morgan "and I am as proud of them as our representatives, as I am of the productions and the producers they are representing. I feel that we have a great organization as well as a great line of pictures under our banner."

To Direct Next Tyler Opus

Bob De Lacy has been engaged by B. P. Fineman, general manager of the F. B. O. Studios, to direct Tom Tyler's next starring Western production, work on which will begin in a few days. De Lacy recently completed direction of Tyler's first production "Let's Go Gallagher" with the assistance of James Gruen. Tyler has taken his place as a formidable feature of F. B. O.'s new program.

New Mix Picture

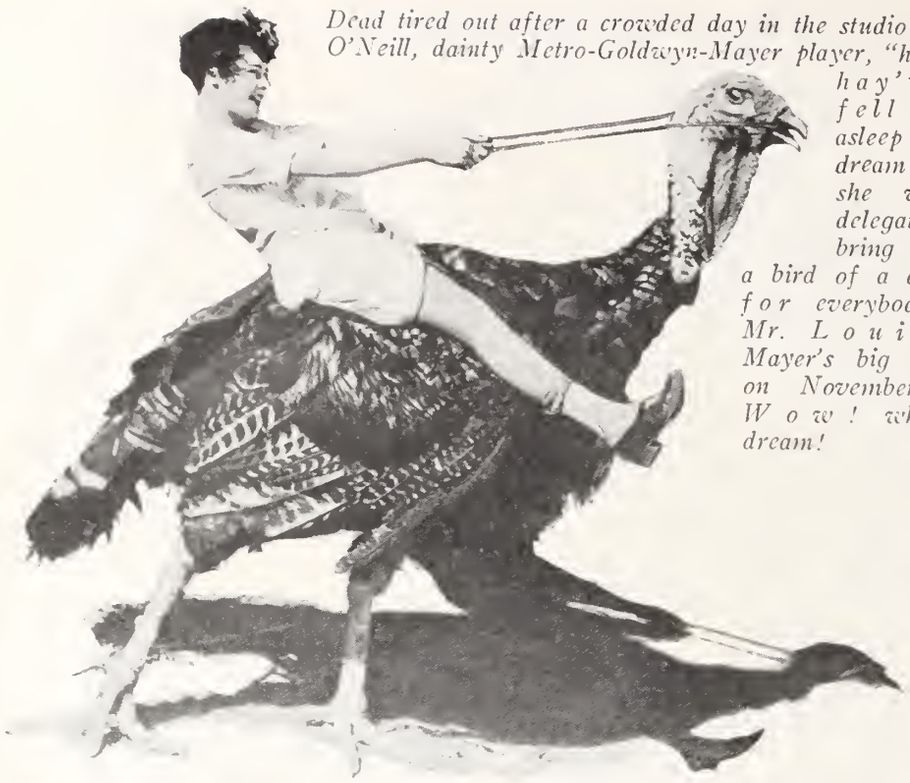
Tom Mix is now on location, working on the final stages of his fourth starring vehicle for this season, "The Best Bad Man," under the direction of J. G. Bylstone. The story is from Max Brand's tale, "Senor Jingle Bells."

In support of the modern Buffalo Bill are Clara Bow, Cyril Chadwick, Paul Panzer and the attractive Judy King. As in all productions this season, Tony, the wonder horse, plays an important part.

Signs with M.-G.-M.

Agnes Christine Johnston, well-known scenarist, has signed a long term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for whom she has done exceptionally distinguished work. Miss Johnson wrote the scripts for "Confessions of a Queen," and for Seastrom's "The Tower of Lies." Other successes adapted by Miss Johnston include "The Denial," Rupert Hughes' "Don't," and King Vidor's "Proud Flesh."

Syd Chaplin's current Warner Bros. comedy hit, "The Man on the Box," gives him many opportunities to register his splendid technique along laugh-making lines. Syd (center) was directed in this offering by "Chuck" Reisner, Charlie Chaplin's director and "gag" man for many years. "The Man on the Box" scored an instant success at Warner's Theatre, New York City, and was held over a second week.



Dead tired out after a crowded day in the studio Sally O'Neill, dainty Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, "hit the hay" and fell sound asleep — to dream that she was delegated to bring home a bird of a dinner for everybody in Mr. Louis B. Mayer's big studio on November 26. Wow! what a dream!

Maude Adams Enters Picture Field; to Appear in "Kim"

HERALDING the return of Maude Adams to public life and her advent into motion pictures in connection with one of the biggest screen undertakings in recent years, J. E. D. Meador, president of Meador-Robertson Pictures Corporation, announced before sailing for Europe that in association with Miss Adams his firm will produce Rudyard Kipling's masterpiece, "Kim."

John S. Robertson will direct the big production on its actual locales in "India" following the completion of "Queen Calafia," the first Meador-Robertson production which is about to be started in Nice, France.

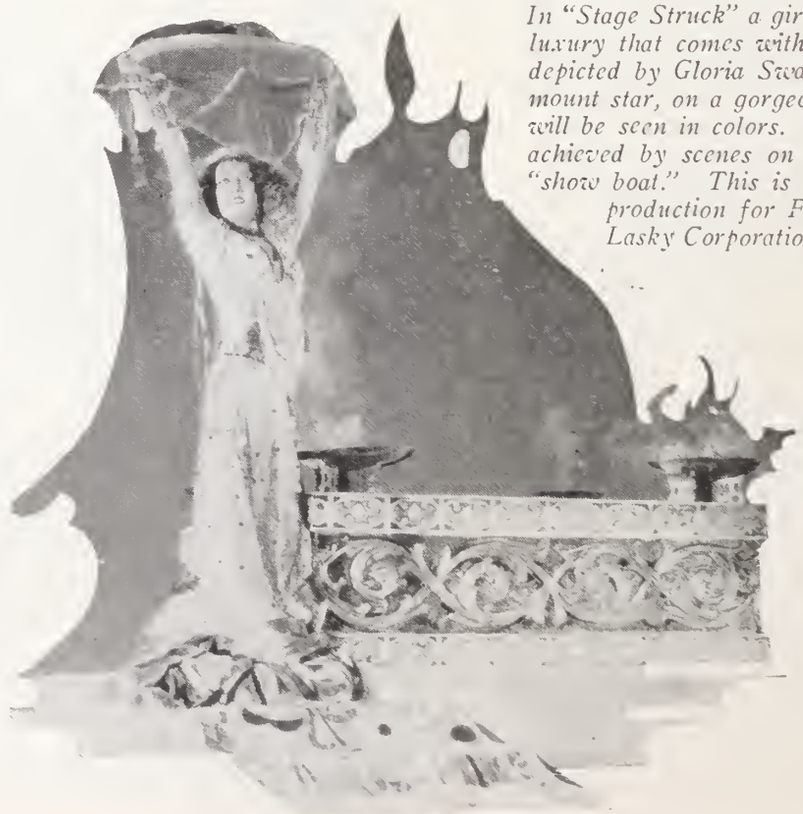
Miss Adams, Mr. Meador with Mrs. Meador, Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr., secretary and general counsel of the Meador-Robertson Corporation, and Mrs. Shaw Lovett, daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, were passengers on the S.S. Olympic that sailed Saturday, October 10, from New York. The producers will confer in England with Rudyard Kipling, who will actively assist in the production, and with Mr. Robertson, who is now abroad.

In the announcement from J. E. D. Meador, Mr. Meador stated that John Russell, celebrated novelist and screen writer, and Llewellyn Totman, Meador-Robertson scenarist, will be associated editorially with the production of "Kim."

While plans for "Kim" have been progressing many months, little inkling of them has reached the public, although it was known that for several years Maude Adams has been in possession of the screen rights of Kipling's greatest book.

"Two years ago," said Mr. Meador, "Miss Adams conferred with Mr. Kipling in England on the picturization of 'Kim,' and since that time she has been at work on plans for the production. I believe that 'Kim' will mark a new epoch in the making of motion pictures.

"Mr. Robertson is enthusiastic over the opportunities 'Kim' will afford him. For years he has wanted to do 'Kim,' and we feel that his association in the production with Maude Adams cannot help but result in one of the most remarkable photoplays ever made."



In "Stage Struck" a girl's dream of the luxury that comes with success is here depicted by Gloria Swanson, the Paramount star, on a gorgeous "set," which will be seen in colors. The contrast is achieved by scenes on an Ohio River "show boat." This is an Allan Dwan production for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Chaplin Film Goes Big

"The Gold Rush" Breaks Records in Pittsburgh; Big Advance Campaign

"Charlie Chaplin in 'The Gold Rush' opened today at our Loew's Aldine Theatre, Pittsburgh, breaking every Monday record in the history of the house," telegraphed Louis K. Sidney, division manager of Loew's theatres, to Hiram Abrams, president of United Artists Corporation. "All day long crowds stood in line waiting to get in. The picture went over great. Unable to handle the crowds and thousands were turned away. Look for a tremendous record breaking week."

An advance campaign consisted of fifty 24 sheets, 500 three sheets, 100 sixes, 1,000 ones and special cards and 15,000 heralds. Manager Sidney ran teaser and underlines two weeks before playdate and carried display advertising that caused much talk in the theatre centers.

In the lobby was a mechanical cut-out, driven by motor, showing Chaplin's walk, twist of the head and movements of the cane.

There was a tie-up with the Chronicle-Telegraph which invited 2,000 members of the "Tele Bird Club," girls' division, to a special showing on Saturday prior to the opening, and which was followed by a special showing for 2,000 boys of the same club the following Saturday, at which members of the Pittsburgh Pirates, national league baseball champions, also were present. This tie-up brought big publicity every day.

Another tie-up was with an ice cream concern which sent out 7,000 cards to dealers showing a cut of Chaplin, and reading "Try our latest, 'The Gold Rush Sundae.'"

Austin Added to Cast

Fox Films announced Jere Austin has been added to the cast of "Her Cowboy Prince," Buck Jones' fifth starring vehicle of the season, in the role of the bandit. R. William Neill is directing the picture, in which the lovely Helena D'Algy is the heroine.

Star Achieving Fame

J. Farrell MacDonald Rising Rapidly in Popularity Since "Iron Horse" Success

With "The Iron Horse," Fox Film Corporation epic on the building of the first transcontinental railroad, causing a sensation wherever it is shown, there is one actor whose popularity is rising by leaps and bounds and causing the public to ask: "Where has he been hiding all these years?"

The cause of this speculation is J. Farrell MacDonald, who as Corporal Casey, discharged Union soldier and gang boss, enacts one of the most humorous and lovable roles to be caught by the camera in a long time.

"Mac," as he is known to his intimates, is comparatively new to the screen. He knows all the trials and tribulations of the weary rounds of the casting offices and their long queues of employment seekers. He has tightened his belt many a time in lieu of supper.

Then along came "The Iron Horse" and the role of Corporal Casey, which, under the directorial wizardy of John Ford, became one of the outstanding characterizations of all time. And now J. Farrell has a nice juicy contract with Fox and he is kept busy every minute.

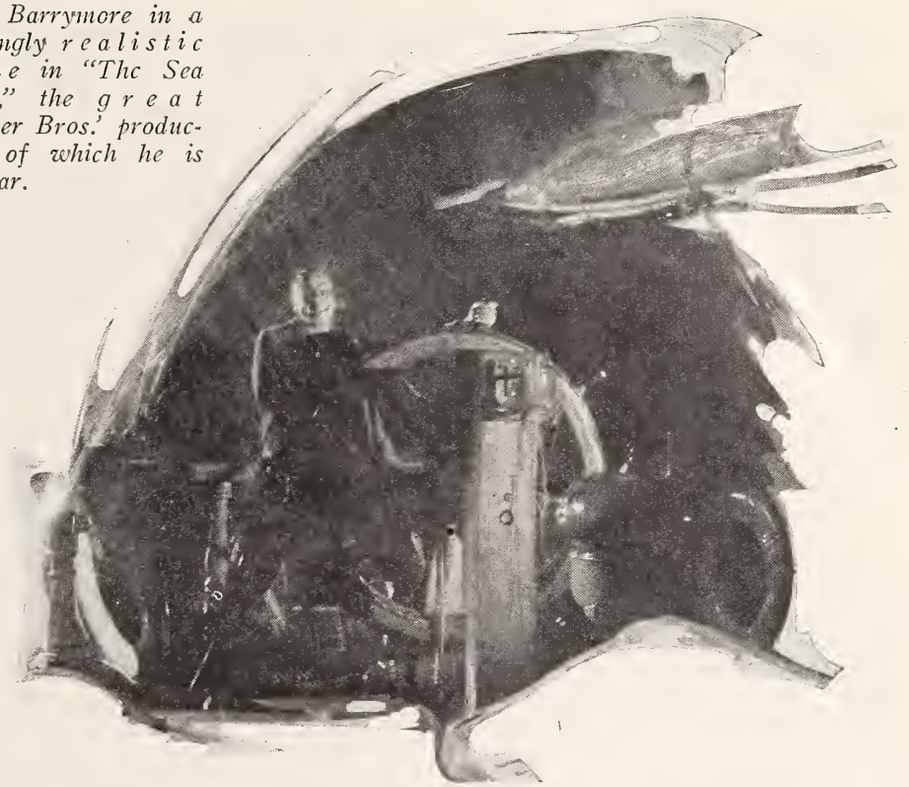
"Sky Rocket" Plans

Associated Exhibitors will not roadshow their super-special, "The Sky Rocket," Peggy Hopkins Joyce's first starring vehicle. General Manager John S. Woody desires to make this especially emphatic due to recent wholly unfounded reports to the contrary.

"Naturally with a picture as big as Peggy Hopkins Joyce in "The Sky Rocket" there would be a temptation to roadshow. It is for this reason that I want to assure many inquirers that Associated Exhibitors is first and foremost a picture organization and will continue to devote its best thought for the benefit and betterment of the motion picture exhibitor," Mr. Woody states.

"Under the Rouge" Scheduled

"Under the Rouge," one of the biggest productions on its 1925-26 program will be released by Associated Exhibitors on October 18.



John Barrymore in a thrillingly realistic scene in "The Sea Beast," the great Warner Bros.' production, of which he is the star.

Maurice Costello Chosen to Direct Daughter, Dorothy

MAURICE COSTELLO, first of popular screen idols, is to become a director, and the first star he will direct is his own daughter, Dolores Costello. The picture is "Maryland, My Maryland," a J. Stuart Blackton production.

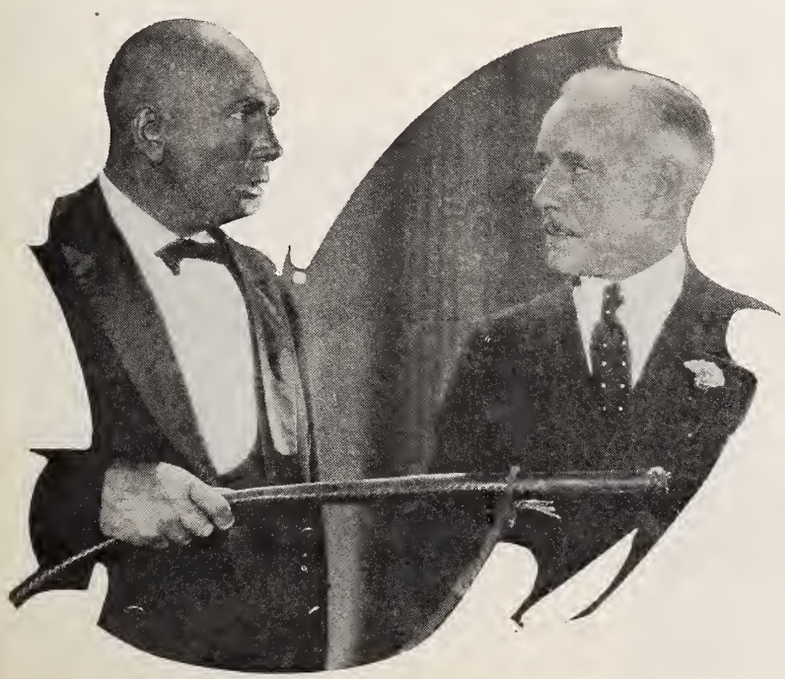
His engagement for this post adds another chapter to one of the most interesting romances in screen history. Costello was the "discovery" of Blackton when the latter was producing some of the earliest pictures made by the old Vitagraph organization in the pioneer days of the films. Blackton took him from a stage company in New York and Costello became the first leading man to arouse the enthusiasm of movie fans. He started work in pictures at $30 a week (salaries were small in those days) but scored such a triumph that the pay was soon raised to $40.

That was back in 1909, when Costello's daughters, Dolores and Helene, were scarcely more than infants. In the course of time Maurice retired from pictures and became an attraction on the vaudeville stage, never losing his popularity in that line.

The girls, meanwhile, were going to school and growing up. A few months ago, following in father's footsteps, they procured positions in motion pictures and, still following father, they plunged almost immediately into leading positions, though pictures have advanced far and it is much more difficult to obtain stellar roles these days.

And now Blackton, who was Maurice Costello's first producer, has selected Dolores Costello to play the feminine lead in a picture and engaged her father to direct. Costello admits that he never before felt so much pride or enthusiasm in accepting a position.

Production work on "Maryland, My Maryland," is to start almost immediately. Besides Miss Costello, John Harron, Otto Matiesen, Sheldon Lewis and Tyrone Power have been selected for the cast so far.



"Boss, this sure tamed me!" says Tom Wilson to Lewis Stone in the First National picture "What Fools Men."

Bader Returns From Trip

Dave Bader, who has been representing Carl Laemmle in the arrangement of Universal Theatre Parties, is back in New York after a ten-week trip.

Bader covered practically all of the middle west and went as far west as Denver. Some of the exchanges he visited on behalf of Mr. Laemmle were Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Chicago and Denver.

Power's Projector Plant Used In Managers' School Work

THE Paramount Managers' School spent three and a half hours in the Nicholas Power plant on October 6th as one of the sessions in the course which the students of this school are taking. The class, in charge of John F. Barry, director of the school, with Harry Rubin, Chief Projectionist of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion Theatres, was welcomed by P. A. McGuire, Advertising Manager of the Nicholas Power Company. Mr. McGuire referred to the phrase "Better Projection Pays" and briefly but forcibly stressed the importance of projection in his greeting.

Mr. McGuire said that he had expected Mr. Bart F. Greene, Chief Examiner for electricity and moving picture licenses in the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, City of New York, who, was unable to be present, but who authorized the following statement:

"Projection of audiences by proper enforcement of the law in the motion picture theatres of the City of New York is the duty of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. It is our duty to see that standard equipment is used, properly installed, maintained and placed in charge of competent projectionists. We are required to regularly inspect the equipment after installation and carefully examine all applicants for licenses to have charge of motion picture machines in New York City. In the course of a year about one thousand applications for licenses are made by men who have taken courses or who have had some sort of practical experience with motion picture machines, but in spite of this not much more than one hundred pass the examination. This is barely ten per cent. and indicates how exacting the requirements are.

"Managers and theatre owners do well when they employ capable men in their projection rooms and then give these men the fullest possible co-operation. Time and money are well spent which give the projectionist proper working conditions and first class equipment kept in good condition by proper repairs and replacements.

"Projection rooms are under weekly supervision by inspectors of the Department but we are glad to be of assistance to theatre owners, managers and projectionists and willingly give any assistance whenever called upon to do so. Managers should not wait until they are compelled to make repairs, as equipment kept in the right condition insures the safety of audiences, adds to their pleasure, reduces damage to film and increases box office receipts."

The class was then divided into two groups; one, under A. R. Schulze, of the Engineering Department of the Nicholas Power Company, was shown early models of Power's Edison, Lubin, Selig, Gaumont, and other projectors used in the formative period of the motion picture industry. The group under Mr. Wrede, of the Repair Department, was shown the projection room with three latest Power's Projectors and three modern types of lamps, Power's High Intensity, Power's Incandescent and Powerlite Low Intensity Reflector Arc.

Both groups returned to the auditorium of the Power's testing laboratory and Mr. Schulze explained the special features of Power's Projectors. The members of the class took great interest in Mr. Schulze's talk and considerable discussion followed.

Joseph Abrams, who has been installation man for the Nicholas Power Company for nearly fifteen years, then gave a demonstration of the three types of illuminants, High Intensity, Incandescent and Low Intensity, which were shown successively on the screen and then all three at the same time. It is believed that this is the first time these three types of illuminants have been shown on one screen at the same time. This was accomplished by superimposing the three lights upon each other but with a few inches of each extending on the side from the other so that the contrasting effect was clearly shown. Talks on repairs and replacements, a trip through the Power's factory, demonstrating how large an equipment it takes to properly and efficiently manufacture a modern motion picture projector, and other instructive matters, finished the session.

Weiss Opens in Philadelphia

Louis Weiss, managing director of Weiss Brothers' Artclass Pictures Corporation, announces that they will open a new exchange to handle the Artclass product in the Philadelphia territory.

The new exchange will be located at 253 North Thirteenth street, Philadelphia, and will be known as the Artclass Film Exchange, Inc.

"Little Annie Rooney" Wins Applause from Philadelphians

MARY PICKFORD'S 'Little Annie Rooney' is charming," said the critic for the Philadelphia Daily News when this United Artists Corporation release played the Stanley Theatre. "'Our Mary' is a tomboy hoyden, with more than her share of Irish deviltry, and she leads her 'gang' through reels and reels of fights over and through back fences."

"Mary Pickford has given us one of her old-time pictures," said the reviewer for the Public Ledger. "She has taken the hearts of the children again by storm. They laughed and applauded and sobbed. Neither were the children the only ones who laughed and applauded and whom we saw in tears."

"'Little Annie Rooney' is a good picture," said the critic for the Evening Public Ledger," and very much the type of picture Mary Pickford used to make. It has a remarkably dramatic story, with the humor of human nature allowed to be human naturally. There is bonafide thrill and excitement, and plenty of punch, especially as the film nears its climax. There is good acting in nearly every role."

"Annie Rooney's gang of small companions in Mary Pickford's 'Little Annie Rooney' is humorous," wrote the reviewer for the Evening Bulletin. "It is perhaps the greatest of this star's ability to act as a child with these children and she fulfills the requirements beautifully."

"'Our Mary' is just as charmingly youthful as she was a few years ago," said the Inquirer's critic, and 'Little Annie Rooney' is in all ways a charming picture."

Johnston Off to Coast

Will Spend Month in Conferences With Rayart Producers

W. Ray Johnston, president of Rayart Pictures Corporation, left a few days ago for Los Angeles and Hollywood, where he will spend a month in various conferences with Rayart Producers regarding the second groups of the different Rayart series for 1925-6.

He was accompanied by Dwight C. Leeper, vice-president of Richmount Pictures, who distribute the Rayart Product abroad and who is also affiliated with Harry J. Brown in the production of the Reed Howes and Billy Sullivan series for Rayart release.

Before leaving, Mr. Johnston stated that there were six companies shooting on Rayart product at the present and that his purpose of a visit at this time was for okaying of stories and casts for forthcoming productions to be started.

Begin on "Overland Trail"

Production of "The Overland Trail," a dramatic picture story of the Black Hills gold rush, has been begun at Universal with Albert Rogell directing. Jack Hoxie is the star, and is supported by a capable cast.

Ena Gregory plays the leading feminine role opposite Hoxie. Francis Ford is cast in the roles of the "heavy."

The cast also includes Marin Sais, Jimmy Kelly, William Malan, Ernie S. Adams, and Robert Milash.

"Skinner's Dress Suit"

"Skinner's Dress Suit," in which Universal is to star Reginald Denny will be the most costly farce comedy ever made for the screen, according to Raymond L. Schrock, general manager of Universal. The cast will include some of the best known players in pictures. Laura La Plante will play opposite Denny. William Seiter will direct.

Chicago Critic Praises Banks in "Keep Smiling"

TO be hailed as one of the uppest and comingest of the younger comedians, and the best next to Charlie Chaplin himself, by Carl Sandburg, not only the noted critic of the Chicago News, but the celebrated writer and poet of the middle west, falls to the lot of lucky Monty Banks, Associated Exhibitors' star.

In his signed review of "Keep Smiling," the latest Monty Banks release, the famous writer noted that the picture contained a much greater average of originality than the usual feature comedy, with a lively tale and a gusto of action throughout.

"The nearest competitor and best substitute for Chaplin," says Sandburg, "is important to the extent that he is now making pictures for the Monty Banks Picture Corporation which distributes through Associated Exhibitors.

"And their first and latest release, 'Keep Smiling,' shown this week as the feature at the State-Lake Theatre, contains an amount of originality much higher than the average.

"To begin with, there is a storm and wreck at sea that comes through big without any waste motion."

The story is that a boy, deadly afraid of the sea, who has to pretend to be a champion motor boat racer to win the girl he loves. He wins the race through a series of watery adventures.

Sandburg concludes with a hearty commendation of the cast, particularly praising Anne Cornwall and Robert Edeson who have principal roles.

The picture was equally well received by the other Chicago critics when it ran at the State-Lake.

In "Keep Smiling," Banks was directed by Gilbert W. Pratt and Albert Austin, and shared the stellar honors with Anne Cornwall. Robert Edeson played the usual magnate and Stanhope Wheatcroft, Naldo Morelli, and Syd Crossley comprised the rest of the cast.

Turpin Added to Cast

William Sistrom, general manager of Metropolitan Pictures, put another showmanship touch to "Steel Preferred" this week by supplementing the already strong cast of this production with Ben Turpin, the eccentric comedy star.

Turpin will be teamed up with Charlie Murray to supply a high quality of comedy relief in the extensively tense situations of "Steel Preferred," as portrayed by Vera Reynolds, William Boyd, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Long, Helene Sullivan, Nigel Barrie and William V. Mong.

"Steel Preferred" is being directed by James Hogan. It will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

Star and Director Guests of the Warners in New York

ERNST LUBITSCH, motion picture director of world wide celebrity, and Irene Rich, film star, both of the Warner Bros. organization, are guests of the Warners in New York City this week. They came from Toronto, where for several days the company producing the Oscar Wilde classic, "Lady Windermere's Fan," had been making race course scenes.

Officials and executives of the Warner company gave their guests a cordial welcome, the attentions extended culminating in an elaborate luncheon at the Park Lane Hotel, which was attended by representatives of all the newspapers and magazines in the city. Friends and admirers of the two, not connected with films showered many more invitations upon them than the visitors found it possible to accept.

Both Miss Rich and Lubitsch expressed themselves as well pleased with prospects in the picture industry and in particular predicted a big success for the forty specials comprising the Warner 1925-26 schedule.

With Irene Rich are her daughters, Frances and Jane, and her mother. The four leave today (Saturday, Oct. 17), for Europe, and the star will place the girls in a school in Switzerland. Her mother is to remain with them, Miss Rich returning to this country and proceeding to California to star in further Warner pictures.

Ernst Lubitsch was accompanied to New York by Mrs. Lubitsch. He has just completed the production of "Lady Windermere's Fan,"' which the Warners have set for release the day after Christmas. It will be remembered that the picture rights to this drama were long sought after unsuccessfully by film producers, and the trustees of Oscar Wilde's estate finally gave their consent to its screening only when assured that the direction would be in the hands of Lubitsch.

All the "shots"' for the picture were made at the Warner West Coast Studio, in Los Angeles, except outdoor racing scenes involved one of the longest trips ever made by a Warner production, but the unusual facilities extended in Toronto justified the move. Through special arrangements, Woodbine and other attractive locations in and about the city were utilized.

The welcome extended Miss Rich and Lubitsch in Toronto was a fitting prelude to that which awaited them in New York. Several social functions were arranged in their honor and the guests were interviewed by all the newspapers, American motion pictures gaining wider publicity throughout the dominion than they often receive.

Among Miss Rich's hostesses were members of the Daughters of the Empire, a woman's patriotic organization which plays a prominent part in the social life of the leading Canadian cities. About a hundred of the Daughters consented to participate in the race course scenes, under Lubitsch's direction, and then devoted the pay which they received as "extras" to charity purposes. They described the experience as a great lark.

Mr. and Mrs. Lubitsch also are leaving New York today, proceeding directly to the west coast where the director will prepare to start work on his next Warner production. He has every confidence in "Lady Windermere's Fan."

In coming to New York from Toronto Miss Rich stopped for a few days in Buffalo to renew acquaintance with old friends. There too she was showered with social attentions. She stopped also in Poughkeepsie and paid a visit to Vassar College, which her daughters will enter on the completion of their two years course in Switzerland.

Katherine Ray Signed

"Vanities" Beauty is One of "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," Robert T. Kane's Production

Katherine Ray, celebrated beauty of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," has been signed by Robert T. Kane to appear as one of the wives in "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," which Alfred Santell is directing for First National release.

Miss Ray recently caused a stir at the Atlantic City beauty pageant when Fay Lanphier and others entered in that contest protested on the grounds that Miss Ray is a professional. Miss Ray and Dorothy Knapp, of the "Follies," gracefully withdrew.

Following her withdrawal, every motion picture organization made a bid for her services, but Mr. Kane's offer interested Miss Ray inasmuch as the part assigned to her fitted her perfectly. She will appear as one of the wives in support of Ben Lyon, who also commands Blanche Sweet, Lois Wilson, Diana Kane, Dorothy Sebastian, Lucy Fox and Betty Jewel.

Float Wins Prize

Warner Bros. Represented in San Francisco's Diamond Jubilee Parade

A Warner Bros. float, bearing a replica of the Warner West Coast Studios, won third prize in the California Diamond Jubilee Parade, held recently in San Francisco, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of California's admission to statehood. The local exchange received a banner and spearhead in token of its victory.

The festival, under the auspices of the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, was the greatest held in San Francisco since the World's Fair. The newspapers estimated that a million persons witnessed the parade, which was five hours in passing a given point. The Warner organization was the only one in motion pictures to win a prize.

Morgan A. Walsh, manager of the Warner Bros.'s San Francisco exchange, entered this prize-winning float in the parade.

Patterson Edits Jaffe Film

Declares Production Suited for Any Type of Theatre

Frances Taylor Patterson, instructor of photoplay composition at Columbia University, editor of "Broken Hearts," a Jaffe Art Film starring Lila Lee, has just completed her work, and declares the picture adapted for any type of house.

"I cannot say whether 'Broken Hearts' is a great picture, but I do not hesitate to proclaim it a true life-film, one of the most realistic efforts ever produced. Big and small city audiences will like this picture, because it is of universal appeal. It is new without being revolutionary. There is the comedy relief which does not overshadow the main story, however," concluded Mrs. Patterson.

A SOLID and responsible Polish firm, "Auto-Orient-Film," K. S. Rymowicz, Nowowiejska 22, Warsaw, Poland, will take general representation for Poland, Russia and Balkans of American firms dealing with the film trade. First class banking references.

"The Ace of Spades"

William Desmond Stars in Universal's Thrilling Western Serial With Historic Atmosphere

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Judging from the pace established in the first three episodes the newest serial released by Universal should not only be welcomed by the regular serial fans but should prove thoroughly satisfactory entertainment for all who like fast moving Western stories.

William Desmond who has already won a big following in previous Universal features and chapter plays has the leading role in this picture and opposite him is pretty Mary McAllister with Jack Pratt and the old stand-by Albert J. Smith taking care of the deep-dyed villainy. Every one of these players as well as the other subordinate characters are well cast.

The title of this serial refers to the device of the gang of villains who terrified their victims by sending as a warning the ace of spades. There is an historic background to the story for not only is the action laid in Oklahoma at the time of the great land rush in 1889 but the plot hinges on the fight for possession of a French survey map made in the time of the great Napoleon which showed mineral deposits in that portion of the U. S. which comprised the Louisiana purchase.

The historical idea is further played up in the introduction which goes back to the time of the purchase of this vast territory from France and introduces such famous characters as Napoleon, Thomas Jefferson, Talleyrand and James Monroe.

The story proper is distinctly a Western of frontier days, with plenty of fights, daring stunts, fine riding, action, adventure, intrigue and romance. It has been excellently directed by Henry McRae and after the brief historical introduction there is not a single foot that is not crammed with action and excitement, with romance by no means neglected. It is just the sort of material that has proved its sterling worth with serial audiences and should certainly hold their interest and pep them up to a high pitch of enthusiasm.

Of course, there is the regular big stunt at the end of each episode with carried over suspense. The three first episodes contain a fight between the gang and a wagon train, the escape and ride of the heroine for help, the rescue of one of the party imprisoned in a cellar, the finding of an Indian treasure, hand-to-hand fights galore and such climaxes as the heroine in a burning wagon filled with gunpowder and pulled by runaway horses, her falling into a bottomless pit and hanging on a board projecting from the side and again her falling from a great height into angry swirling waters at the bottom of a waterfall.

Patrons who demand action will certainly find the answer in "The Ace of Spades."

"All Wool"

(Pathe—Comedy—One Reel)

This Hal Roach comedy has Earl Mohan. Billy Engle and Katherine Grant in the leading roles. Earl and Billy appear as tailors and Katherine is an actress who wanted to play in "Rain" but lost her umbrella. Tay Garnett directed. There is much good fun in this subject; in fact, it is a little above the average in comedies. There is good satire on life in the way the tailors treat their customers, and it's very funny, too. Of course, the actress gets all the attention and the patient customer's suit shrinks during cleaning, but there are novel twists and turns in the action, and excellent acting and make-up, to more than compensate for the routine story.—S. S.

"Closer Than a Brother"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

This latest Paul Terry creation in the Aesop's Film Fables series humorously presents the farmer's difficulties in getting rid of an unwelcome cat. He heaves it into the lake—and it returns and licks his hand. He ties it to a balloon—and soon it's back again. The subject is very comical.—S. S.

"The Adventures of Mazie"

First Chapter of New F. B. O. Comedy Series Promises Fine Box Office Stuff

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"The Adventures of Mazie," F. B. O.'s new comedy series of two reelers, not only gets off to a promising start with the first chapter, "Amazing Mazie," but it looks even better than its highly successful predecessors. It's wonderful entertainment, the sort of comedy that nobody can resist roaring at, excellently acted and produced. The stories by Nell Martin, published in the Topnotch Magazine, are great screen stuff, judging by this first installment.

With Ralph Ceder directing, again we find the familiar faces of clever Alberta Vaughn, Al Cooke and Kit Guard in the picture. Harry Kent, a goodlooking, well-mannered young man, succeeds George O'Hara as the hero and should be universally liked.

Mazie—so the story goes—is one working girl Heaven will never be called upon to protect. She seeks a job of George Dorsey, a young attorney without clients or cash, much annoyed by the landlord's demands for rent. So Mazie decides that to insure the job she must tame the landlord. The elevator boy and a process server listen to her siren song. The latter, posing as a big business man, gets jammed in the elevator between floors, with the landlord operating, and threatens suit. In the end the landlord is glad enough to engage Dorsey as his attorney and give him rent free, and Mazie gets her job.

The best scenes in this chapter are of the fracas in the elevator. The characters climb all over it while it is in motion, and the angling of the camera—some of the shots are from above the car and some from below—contributes to spectacular effects.

Doris Anderson did the adaptations.

"Nursery Troubles"

(Century—Comedy—Two Reels)

Edna Marian, "female tramp" in "Nursery Troubles" packs this two-reeler to the brim with real laughs. Alighting from beneath a freight Edna knocks over a cop. His pursuit of her takes up most of the first reel. She is a fast moving, vivacious and pretty creature and the tramp make-up seems to make her more cute. Edna applying for a job and outwitting a long line of applicants is another punch which this Century comedy possesses. But—we can hear them all over in every house exclaiming "Ah! the sweet things!" When the next episodes in this comedy—a day nursery—is shown. Plump babies, some with dimples and pudgy hands, brunetts and blondes, eating and sleeping—even a pickanniny with a cotton border around its chocolate face—come under the supervision of Marian in her new job. This Century, released through Universal, is sure-fire for any box office.—T. W.

"A Punch in the Nose"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

The story of this Hal Roach subject concerns a stranded "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe which finds itself near a sanitorium in need of employes. The manager allots various jobs to the various members of the troupe, and the fun begins. Many well known comedy players take part in the slapstick stuff, among them Lucien Littlefield, Al St. John, "Husky" Hanes, Jimmie Finlayson, Lige Conley, Kewpie Morgan, Al Hallet, Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whiteis and Dot Farley. It is quite a cast, you can see, and the players do well. But there seems to be little cohesion—just a collection of more or less funny stunts—and so the subject does not impress as much as its excellent cast would lead one to expect.—S. S.

"Baby Be Good"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Charles Lamont directed this Juvenile Comedy with a cast consisting of Big Boy, Bonnie, Buck and Ginger. Bonnie is introduced as a wealthy woman's daughter and Gilda Grey's only rival. The "society kids" have some fun in their swimming pool on her birthday. Then Bonnie escapes and joins the kids in the tenement district, becoming thoroughly covered with what they claim is "beauty clay." This second-reel scenes of the poor kids are the best of the picture. They show various ingenious contrivances rigged up for diversion, burlesquing the high-class contrivances seen at the fashionable swimming pool, and the kids have a great time with them. The subject will particularly please admirers of America's boyhood, being acted by some lively kids of both sexes.—S. S.

"Shootin' Wild"

(Universal—Mustang—Two Reels)

Pee Wee Holmes training for the big fight at a town fair has a novel sparring partner, one that should get roars of mirth out of the average audience. The partner is none other than a bull with boxing gloves tied on to his horns. A monster of fat is pitted against Pee Wee on the eventful day but "our hero" knocks him for the count immediately after he is spurred to the victory by a host of red ants which have been sprinkled over his back by a sleepy trainer. While the townsfolk are around the ring, "bad men" decide to raid the town. In front of the village store is a counter filled with fireworks. Pee Wee sets them off and the gang, believing they are being bombarded, flees back to the foothills. This Mustang moves along at a good rate and should be welcomed as good program material.—T. W.

Pathe Review No. 43

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

"Makers of Men" shows how West Point builds America's military man power. This was produced with the co-operation of the U. S. Military Academy and the New York Military Academy. "Fresh Air Tonic" is Pathecolor views of Mont Dore, a favorite mountain resort in France. "Sunlight, the World's Champion Producer of Energy," is one of Tolhurst's "Magic Eye" series and a truly fascinating microscopic study.—S. S.

"A Sweet Pickle"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This good Mack Sennett subject features dainty Alice Day and offers a cast including Barney Hellum, Alma Bennett and Jack Richardson. Arthur Rosson directed. Largely because of Miss Day, this maintains interest throughout and keeps the audience in a state of laughter. Furthermore, every once in a while there is a typical ludicrous Sennett touch that is the highest form of comedy and that will bring screams of merriment—for instance, a brief shot where a paperhanger is shown unrolling wallpaper while, behind him, the paper rolls together, following him across the hall. The story deals with Alice in a bakery. She delivers a birthday cake to a palatial mansion and is invited to become the fourteenth guest. Her arrangement of the gown loaned her is a strange and wonderful thing, and the guests sneer at her until the noble-minded hero sponsors her. Well, the usual romance develops and flourishes despite Alice's habit of always getting her train in the way. The film has a spectacular end with Alice clinging to a long hall carpet outside the window on the sixth floor. All audiences ought to like this one.—S. S.

Unusual Press Sheet

Every Word in Publicity Items for "Evolution" Already Planted With Big Town Newspapers

Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal Pictures Corporation, has just had prepared in connection with his feature picture, "Evolution," what he believes is one of the most unusual press-sheets ever offered.

The publicity stories therein have all met the best test of breaking into the metropolitan dailies of those cities where the film was pre-released. A tremendous number of publicity stories were prepared well in advance of the first showings of "Evolution." Only those that got by the film editors of the New York, Los Angeles and other first run towns have been retained for the press sheet.

Similarly, with the advertisements, the heralds, the teaser campaigns, the advance stories and the press reviews. Only those that the big showmen used have been retained. This means that every single item in the sheet from the first page to the last has met and passed the most critical standards, and that every bit of publicity therein should pass the film editor.

Urges Music Cue Sheets for Shorts

In a letter, dated October 13, addressed to the Editor of Moving Picture World, A. Fassio, Musical Director of the Albemarle Theatre, in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, New York City, urges the value of music cue sheets for short subjects.

The suggestion is one of inestimable value and Moving Picture World quotes from Mr. Fassio's letter, in part, as follows:

"Dear Sir:—I cannot help approving your stand regards giving the same importance in presenting to the public a short feature as is usually given to the feature. Not being either producer or exhibitor, my humble advice towards the practical exploitation of the short feature would not amount to much. But in one way the presentation of the short feature can he helped, if the producers or exploitation departments would furnish a cue sheet to the orchestra leaders, as is done in the case of the regular features.

"It can not be denied that the cue sheets are of great help in making a smooth and pleasant background to the features, principally in those cases where the films are used without any opportunity of reviewing them, and I will admit, if these cue sheets are used judiciously by the orchestra leader, why, then, do the producers of the shorter subjects, yea, even of comedies, neglect this opportunity? It surely can not be the few dollars spent for the making of a cue sheet."

Press Books on Chaplin Series

Useful Material on Four Chaplin Comedies Being Prepared by Pathe Exploitation Department

The exploitation department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is preparing elaborate pressbooks on the four Charlie Chaplin pictures which will be brought back to the screen under the banner of that organization. The first of the four productions to be released will be "A Dog's Life." Showmen will have for this picture working data which will be far more complete than the original pressbook on this Chaplin feature.

"Our pressbooks on the four Chaplins will be just as finished a product as if we were getting them out for his very latest picture," said S. Barret McCormick, director of exploitation for Pathe. "All our publicity stories, advertising and exploitation material will be brought right up-to-date and we will try and give the showmen some entirely new angle to work on for the promotion of these four famous comedies. The books we will get out will probably be the most elaborate ever produced for re-issues."

The release date for "A Dog's Life" has been set for November 22, Thanksgiving week.

Exhibitors who have learned of Pathe's contract with Chaplin, whereby half a million dollars was paid to the noted comedian for bringing back four of his best known productions, have shown a keen interest.

"Felix, the Cat" Cartoon Prologues to Be a Feature of Short Subject Month

PROLOGUES and presentations for short subjects have passed beyond the point of discussion, and have become a striking reality to showmen, as will be illustrated by the suggested novelty along this line now available to exhibitors presenting "Felix, the Cat Cartoons," drawn by Pat Sullivan, creator of Felix, and distributed by Educational Pictures, Inc.

Mr. Sullivan, the artist, working with Gordon S. White, Director of Advertising and Publicity for Educational Pictures, has devised a series of presentations and prologues to be staged in conjunction with the "Felix" cartoons. The idea will be given wide attention by alert showmen during "Short Subject Month," January, 1926.

With prologues rapidly being devised for all manner of lengthy features, it was merely a matter of time before the little features would be accorded a pre-screening presentation sufficiently novel to attract and hold the interest of patrons of the theatres. Messrs. Sullivan and White have achieved a striking success in their new adventure.

As the series of "Felix the Cat" cartoons are released by the Educational exchanges, exhibitors will find these prologues instantly available. Letters to Educational's home office indicate a keen desire on the part of many exhibitors to stage these prologues, one of the largest first run houses in the Northwest having closed for the service already. With the introduction of new cartoons, slight changes in the novel prologues may be made, and thus the series in each instance can be put over to a running start.

Theatre owners desiring to avail themselves of the "Felix, the Cat" prologues must first obtain permission from Mr. Sullivan, who holds the rights for such stage performances. But this permission will be forthcoming, without delay, through the plan devised and approved by Messrs. Sullivan and White. All that is necessary is for the theatre owner, after booking the cartoons, to write to the Educational home offices, in New York City, and a letter from Mr. Sullivan, embodying his permission, will go forward to the showman at once. Mr. Sullivan will give his consent to the performance in the theatre named by the exhibitor for a limited time, without the payment to him of any royalties.

This is a stunt that can be put on as an elaborate act, or as a review, and one that will cost very little aside from the expense of costuming the players used in the presentation. Three suggestions for this Felix Pantomime are presented herewith. With each, is a sketch giving an idea of the "Felix Walk," and other business for the unique little performance.

FELIX PANTOMIME—PLATE 1.

(This requires only one person dressed as a cat. This should be a person with some stage presence and ability at pantomime. The other parts are so simple that they can be disposed of with no difficulty.)

Scene: Suburban yard showing kitchen door and window.

Time: Early morning.

Enter FELIX plainly worried. Indicates hunger; walks around looking for food.

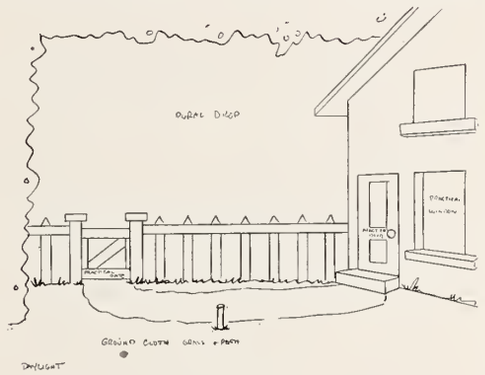

Plate No. 1

Hears steps approaching. Enter MILKMAN, who places bottle of milk at the door of kitchen.

FELIX exaggeratedly sneaks over to get the milk, turns to look all around first, then grabs for bottle just as the door opens and the cook takes milk inside.

FELIX register a "Curses" and goes back into the FELIX walk. Looks offstage, runs to get rope, which he strings across path to house. FELIX runs to door and faces BUTCHER as he enters. BUTCHER trips over rope, tossing package of meat into air in the direction of FELIX, who prepares to catch it. Package flies over FELIX'S head into the hands of the cook in the doorway. Exit cook and BUTCHER and FELIX goes back into walk.

COOK places prop chicken on window sill. FELIX sees it and sneaks over to get it. COOK appears in window and FELIX sneaks away. Tries again with same result.

FELIX thinks, exits, re-enters with pepper pot. Pantomimes trial of pot, sneezes, then shakes pepper into window, retreating across stage. Loud gasp and sneeze inside kitchen and chicken is blown into the hands of FELIX, who catches it and exits, triumphantly.

FELIX DANCE PANTOMIME—PLATE 2.

(This requires two dancers dressed as Felix and "His Girl Friend." They can be a man and girl or two girls. They should be professional dancers or, perhaps, students of a dancing school. This dance pantomime should be particularly attractive if well staged.)

Place: Suburban roof top or back fence, according to preference.

Time: Night.

Enter FELIX to keep tryst with white lady cat, who is obviously late. FELIX dances to show delighted anticipation, then impatience. Finally he relapses into the FELIX walk. Poses and sulks.

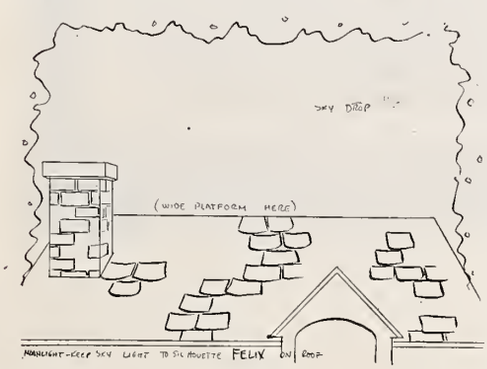

Plate No. 2

Enter white cat, who coquettes with FELIX. He refuses to be cajoled for a bit, then relents and pursues the lady cat, who dodges him in dance rhythm.

During the dance FELIX pantomimes love for her, to which she indicates indifference. FELIX proposes to her and receives a negative answer.

FELIX sulks and is teased into trying again, whereat he asks why she will not have him. She indicates that she wants a BIG cat of the go-getter, caveman type.

FELIX sulks, then thinks, nods and goes into the dance again. At an opportune moment, FELIX plucks off his tail (a stuffed club) slams the lady cat over the head, catches her in his arms as she falls, and dances off stage swinging her in the air.

COOK places prop chicken on window sill. FELIX sees it and sneaks over to get it. COOK appears in window and FELIX sneaks away. Tries again with same result.

FELIX thinks, exits, re-enters with pepper pot. Pantomimes trial of pot, sneezes, then shakes pepper into window, retreatng across stage. Loud gasp and sneeze inside kitchen and chicken is blown into the hands of FELIX who catches it and exits, triumphantly.

"Life's Greatest Thrills" Plays to Capacity in Brandt Houses

WILLIAM BRANDT, prominently connected with the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and the owner of three big theatres in Brooklyn, has just completed an unusual showing of the International Newsreel novelty two-reeler, "Life's Greatest Thrills" in his theatres, in which he featured the novelty picture above all parts of his programs. The experiment was so successful that several house records were broken. The crowds which flocked to see "Life's Greatest Thrills" topped those on record for some of the biggest productions ever made, Brandt reports.

Brandt's three theatres are the Duffield, the Carlton and the Bunny. In building up his program during the running of "Life's Greatest Thrills," he added an ordinary program five-reeler to his show and then put his entire exploitation campaign behind the International two-reeler. As a result of the success he had with this move, he characterizes "Life's Greatest Thrills" as "one of the biggest box-office attractions of the year." He expresses his surprise that other exhibitors have not taken advantage of the two-reel novelty for similar showings.

"Uncle Tom's Gal" Released

Burlesque on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Made Into Two-Reel Century Comedy, Starring Edna Marian

Century Film Corporation announces the release, through all Universal Exchanges, of "Uncle Tom's Gal," a two-reel Century comedy starring Edna Marian, and made as a burlesque on the famous melodrama, "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

It was directed by William Watson. Edna plays a triple role, that of Topsy, as well as those of Little Eva and Eliza. The story concerns the tribulations of a honkey-tonk movie company to film a version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in a rural setting. Edna is the farmer's gawky daughter with screen aspirations. How she gets mixed up with the company and takes the various female roles makes a hilarious comedy.

Mintz Had Successful Trip

Nat. L. Mintz, sales representative for M. J. Winkler, has just returned from a trip through the Middle West where he was successful in obtaining releases for the "Krazy Kat" and "Alice Comedies" series, now being handled by the Winkler organization.

Mr. Mintz, after spending two days in New York, is now in Boston assisting in the opening of the Exchange of the Short Reel Film Exchanges, Inc., at 23 Piedmont St. Boston, Mass. This exchange was established to handle the Winkler product exclusively and will distribute "Felix the Cat," "Krazy Kat," "Alice Comedies" and the "Reg'lar Kids" comedies.

Keystone Komedy Kops

Mack Sennett has brought the famous komedy kops, remembered for their antics in Keystone days, back to the screen in a new two-reel comedy entitled "Wandering Wifflies," a Pathe short feature release. Billy Bevan is the principal "kop" and is aided and abetted by Andy Clyde, Ruth Haitt and Kewpie Morgan. In the fun-film the old patrol and a new edition of "kops" do some brand new stunts. Del Lord directed and felt right at home in the undertaking. When the "Keystone Kops" were at their zenith, Del Lord drove the patrol wagon and supplied many of the thrills in the early Sennett comedies.

Grantland Rice "Sportlights"

J. L. Hawkinson, who produces the famous Grantland Rice "Sportlights" reels for release by Pathe, has left for Whitehall, Montana, where he will photograph scenes for a forthcoming sport picture of mountain and other outdoor scenes. Hawkinson will make his headquarters at the Montana Ranch Club near Whitehall, Montana. He expects to get some exceptional scenes of duck and bird shooting, lake fishing and also some big game hunting.

"Fighting Hearts," New F. B. O. Series, Ready for Production

PLANS are under way at the F. B. O. Hollywood studios for the production of "Fighting Hearts," a new two reel series by Sam Hellman, famous writer.

Actual work on this series will start as soon as the current "Mazie" series is completed.

There will be the usual twelve episodes of "Fighting Hearts" and F. B. O. announces that it will present a strong cast in the new series.

Still another Witwer series will also be produced by F. B. O., it is stated. The purchase was recently announced of Witwer's latest series "Bilgrim's Progress," which details the activities of a taxi driver in a big city.

Two reel production, it is reported, will continue to be an outstanding feature of the program at F. B. O. The Mazie series is now in the sixth episode with Jimmy Wilkinson and Ralph Ceder splitting the direction.

Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes

Pathe, Ltd., signed a contract this week with Edwin Miles Fadman, president of Red Seal, whereby it will take over for distribution in Great Britain the Ko-Ko Song Car-tunes, the animated series by Max Fleischer. Although only three of the Song Car-tunes have been released so far, their success has been instantaneous and the local directors of Pathe, Ltd., put in an immediate bid for the English rights.

GIVING A SHORT COMEDY SOME OF THE 24-SHEET.—The Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, swings into line in the new policy of getting the most out of a program without regard to the length of an item. Herschel Stuart figured that "His Marriage Wow" was worth its share of the big sheet space, and found it was.

Many Exhibitors Do Not Realize the Great Power Behind the Short Feature

By NAT. G. ROTHSTEIN
Director of Publicity Advertising and Exploitation for F. B. O.

WHY talk about a thing that's taken for granted. Why for one single minute question the power, worth and necessity of short features?

They are as necessary to exhibitors as air is to human life. That is—the right kind of air—which implies—the right kind of short features.

Short features are the flavor of the program, the dessert to the banquet, and as Herbert Van Loan would say they are the h'oduerves of the menu.

Ofttimes they actually prevent customers from walking to the box office and asking for their money back on account of the punk feature.

Thousands of people go to the movies to see the news weekly the short subjects and the novelties and if the feature hits, all right and if it misses they aren't sore, because they know the short features usually gives 'em some sure fire entertainment.

You might just as well shut up your shop as try to run your theatre without short subjects. That don't mean punk short subjects but good stuff. We take that for granted.

Times without number the big costly feature flops and the little oft despised short subject pulls the big flop out of the hole.

Yet not one exhibitor in a thousand understands the value and pulling power of his short stuff. He runs it as an "also ran,"—as a filler, as just so much excess baggage.

Yet it has been proven that given a good short subject series these pictures actually gross more money and more profits than some of the costliest features.

Look at B. F. O.'s "Fighting Blood" series. These were recognized by hundreds of exhibitors as real leaders and real pullers with the result that dozens of theatre owners played them up in electric lights, advertised them, exploited them, and got the crowds the money and the profits with them.

A program without short subjects look as sick as an actor without work.

Do you think a house could exist without short subject? If you think so, take them off your program for one week and see whether your patronage would whither.

Try to run your house on features alone and in one week you can close up shop and throw the key in the lake.

NAT ROTHSTEIN

I can name you a dozen short subjects right now that are issued regularly that can absolutely outdraw the biggest features.

You know which they are and so do I and so do thousands of exhibitors. F. B. O. has been and is today putting out a wonderful series of short subjects.

They fill a definite niche. They are as sure fire in their ability to draw patronage regularly as the biggest and best of features.

Yet how many exhibitors get behind these subjects. How many understand the big asset they have in short stuff.

How many theatre owners boost these gems of showmanship?

The day is coming when short subjects will be recognized by exhibitors the same as the features are today.

Those exhibitors who are wise will begin now to boost these gems in one and two reels.

Our company is putting forth tremendous efforts to create something different in the short subject field. We have gone so far as to get such costly writers as H. C. Witwer, known to millions and with a tremendous reader following to create material for short subject entertainment.

We have but recently engaged the famous humorist Sam Hellman of Saturday Evening Post fame to write the "Fighting Hearts" series.

We have also engaged the celebrated Nell Maryin of Top Notch magazine to create new and interesting material for short subjects.

We secure the best continuity skill, directorial skill and production skill to put into these short subjects the kind of entertainment that hits the vast majority.

Our comedies and our cartoons by Bary are examples of business building short stuff.

Other companies are likewise bending every effort to give the best they've got to build business for exhibitors on short subjects.

How long are exhibitors going to stall and wait until they wake up to the huge fact that in the present day short subjects they've an asset that is as big as features.

Echo answers—"How long."

Special Christmas Comedy With "Our Gang" Featured

"OUR GANG" is making a Christmas comedy under the direction of their popular director, Robert McGowan, on the Hal Roach lot where fun-films are made for Pathe release, and all the other units are quite busy with new pictures.

Charley Chase, directed by Leo McCarey, and Clyde Cook, directed by C. R. Wallace, likewise are working on new pictures, while Glenn Tryon, with Fred Guiol as his director, is preparing a new vehicle.

The Hal Roach two-reel comedy unit, an all-star idea expressed in two-reel length, is busy under the direction of James W. Horne. "Husky" Hanes, Martha Sleper, Jimmie Finlayson, Frank Butler, Vivian Oakland, York Sherwood, Fred Malastesta, and Acker, the monkey, are in the cast.

"The Devil Horse," directed by Fred Jackman, has been four months in production, chiefly in the states of Montana and Wyoming. The company, including Gladys McConnel, Yakima Canutt and Robert Kortman, besides Rex and Lady, are preparing to leave the Roach studios again on a trek to some other scenic locations to complete the elaborate feature, a story of Indian and pioneer days.

Half a dozen two-reel comedies are in the hands of the editorial department with H. M. Walker, title editor, supervising the cutting and titling.

Lillian Woods, Ziegfeld Follies beauty and player in many busical stage divertissements, is a new discovery of the Hal Roach studios. She is cast in Clyde Cook's current comedy, in which Mildred June, Cesare Gravina, Frederic Kovert, Fred Kelsey, Wilkie Mahoney and others have principal roles.

Katherine Grant, Hal Roach comedy beauty, has been absent from the studio for several days with an infection of some glands due to a bad case of toothache.

Excellent comedy roles which will give him a variety of characterizations are being planned for Lucien Littlefield when he returns to the Hal Roach studio, where he is under contract. Littlefield was loaned by Roach to William S. Hart for a role in one picture.

Sidney D'Albrook, well remembered for his playing of the role of Ambrose, the brother-in-law, in the "Spat Family" series made by Hal Roach, has returned to the Culver City studio and is playing a "crabby office manager'" in the new Charley Chase comedy.

Big Studio Party in Honor of Allene Ray, Pathe Star

A LARGE studio party was tendered Allene Ray last Friday by Pathe, in the medieval settings of "Bellamy Castle," erected at the Long Island studio, for the new mystery serial "The Green Archer." It was a gala affair, with several hundred guests attending, including motion picture writers of the daily, trade and "fan" press, as well as literary celebrities and executives from the Pathe galaxy and home offices.

The guests were transported from New York in a fleet of de luxe motor busses. Arriving at the studio they found themselves cast into an air of mystery. Following green arrows and green lights they ascended the stairway and stepped into the braonial dining hall of "Bellamy Castle." Here Miss Ray received, and poured tea.

Those who met Miss Ray for the first time found her to be an exceptionally charming young lady; a splendid hostess and genuinely idolized by all of her associates. Miss Ray is a Texas girl, and combines rare talent for acting with a type of blonde beauty that is rapidly bringing her to the high places in motion picture stardom.

After tea, came the shooting of scenes of the serial under the direction of Spencer Bennett. For the benefit of the guests the villains of the piece staged a wild combat in the "cabin of a coastwise steamer."

The largest set and the most massive of all was the huge hall of "Bellamy Castle" and here amid the olde tyme atmosphere a colored aggregation of jazz artists played the latest tunes for dancing. It was in this set that the Ned Wayburn dancers, the Misses Mildred Leisy and Ruth Laird, entertained with terpsichorean efforts.

While half of the party were dancing, others wended their way to the archery gallery in the studio annex. All of the "archers" had a good line on the bow and came within a few circles of the bull's eye. W. Adolphe Roberts, of Brewster Publications, triumphed over all others in hitting the bull's eye.

The crowning event of the party was the coronation of Miss Allene Ray as "Queen of serials." The star mounted the throne, and Burr McIntosh, who is Abel Bellamy of the serial, told the guests why her associate artists in the picture had decided they should give "official" recognition of the fact that Miss Ray has long been called Queen. Therefore, on behalf of the cast, Director Spencer Bennet placed the coronet upon the fair head of Queen Allene.

Motion pictures and stills were taken of the coronation and other events and will be shown at a future time in connection with previewing of "The Green Archer," which Frank Leon Smith adapted from Edgar Wallace's novel of the same name.

Members of the cast assisting Miss Ray in receiving the guests were Walter Miller, Burr McIntosh, Frank Lackteen, Walter P. Lewis, Jack Tanner, Ray Allan, William Randall, Stephan Grattan, Dorothy King and Wally Oettel.

"The Green Archer" company is now working on the sixth chapter of the new Patheserial.

Fox Launches Series of Comedies Based on Irish-Jewish Romance

AT last the screen is to have a series of comedies based on the romance of a Jewish boy and an Irish colleen. Always a pioneer, Fox Films has launched a series of eight Irish-Jewish two-reel comedies beginning with "East Side, West Side," which will be released Sunday, November 15. Thereafter the comedies will be released under the Imperial brand at the rate of one every eight weeks.

For years the doings of the Irish and the Jews have been sure-fire hits in vaudeville and musical comedy. Here recently the legitimate stage has found the portrayal of the romance, humor and pathos of these two great races decidedly successful, judged by both artistic and box-office standards. The Irish and the Jews, as well as all the other races, have found this theme irresistibly funny, and they have flocked by the millions to see the skits and plays presenting the joys and woes of inter-racial romance.

It has remained for Fox Films to adapt this subject matter to the screen. Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy have been engaged under long term contracts to portray the leading roles. Miss Luddy's laughing Irish eyes and blarney make her well qualified for the part of the heroine. She is a capable actress with experience in productions of feature length.

Georgie Harris was a Jewish comedian in London before he succumbed to the lure of the motion pictures. His first appearance with Fox Films was in "The Wheel," one of the John Golden plays, in which he appeared as Sammy Gensberg, jockey, salesman and philosopher.

"I'm a salesman, Nora, and a salesman don't need to be believed except when he's lying," says Georgie in the character of Sammy in "'The Wheel" as recorded in the titles written by Montague Glass, celebrated author of the Potash and Perlmutter stories.

"Windows and women should ought to be dressed—anyhow in the daytime," he says later. Some of the confidence and business acumen of his race is expressed in this one: "'I ride today in the steeplechase, and whatever you bet on him ain't a bet—it's an investment."

The best title writers available will interpret the wit and humor of the Irish and the Jews in the series. The intermingling of the two races as a result of the Irish-Jewish romance gives rise to hilarious situations. In "East Side, West Side" George Williams plays the Jewish father and Tom McGuire is the Irish father. Red Thompson is cast in the role of a crook.

Feelers sent out by the short subjects sales department of Fox Films brought back expressions of delight from exhibitors, "Why didn't you think of that before?" was the retort of one showman. "That's just what I've been wanting."'

JACK MULHALL AND HELEN Ferguson in the Pathe serial, "Ride 'Em, Cowboy."

HARRY LANGDON

Star of Sennett-Pathe comedies of the funnier sort, such as "Lucky Stars," "The White Wings Bride," "Horace Greely, Jr.," "Remember When," etc.

"Three-Reel" Langdon

Mack Sennett-Pathe Comedian at Work on "There He Goes"

Harry Langdon's first three-reel special comedy made by Mack Sennett, entitled "There He Goes," will be released by Pathe on November 29th and is sure to create a furore as its previews have shown it to be a continuous round of laughter.

Langdon is supported by Peggy Montgomery, Frank Whitson and others. Miss Montgomery is a Langdon "discovery." She has been in films less than two years. The comedian saw her in a picture at a preview and was so pleased with her vivacity and acting ability that he engaged her to appear opposite him. Harry Edwards, who has guided Longdon in a number of comedy vehicles, directed "There He Goes."

Hurd with Bray Studios

Earl Hurd, the famous cartoonist, creator of Bobby Bumps and other internationally famous cartoon characters is once again with the Bray Studios. Hurd achieved a tremendous vogue years ago when he drew Bobby Bumps for Bray. The Paramount organization released these pictures. He is now back again and the first subject he will work on is the third of the Unnatural History Comedies titled "The Camel's Hump." Walter Lantz will enact the leading role in this subject together with little Frankie Evans the child "find." Clyde Geronimi will handle the megaphone on this production. This novelty will be released early in November by F. B. O.

Comedy Team Repeats

Lige Conley and Estelle Bradley, who have appeared in a number of Educational-Mermaid Comedies during the past year, will be seen again in one of the fast two-reelers now in production under the direction of Stephen Roberts.

THE CLEVELAND NEWS

Kathryn Perry Stars in 'Helen and Warren' Film

Declared to Be Perfect Type for Title Role of Movie Presentation of Serial Story Featured in The Cleveland News.

BY HARRY O'ROURKE

SOME day, perhaps, there will arise in the motion picture studios a producer who will manifest the courage to present adaptations of strong stage plays without dragging the original vehicle down to unimaginative depths. When that day comes, if ever, the charming people who grind out our screen entertainment will, quite necessarily, have ceased heeding the persistent urge for happy endings to meet what they call "popular approval."

Showing manner in which The Cleveland News dramatic critic played up the Short Feature.

Short Subject Wins Reviewer's Approval Where Feature Fails

THAT the Short Subject has eventually come into its own, is once again evidenced—this time at Cleveland, Ohio—where a reviewer comments very unfavorably on the long feature picture, and was extremely enthusiastic over a Short Subject feature on the same program.

The critic, who happens to be one of the most astute reviewers in the country, devotes but a few brief paragraphs to his critique of the long subject, and almost an entire column to a short subject that seemed to particularly strike his critical fancy. A part of this revolutionary review follows herewith.

"Therefore the surrounding program in the Park is far more interesting than the feature film. The many readers of 'Helen and Warren,' the serial story being printed in this paper, are finding real enjoyment in viewing the first of a series of two reel productions based on that popular story by Mabel Herbert Urner.

"In selling the picture rights to her 'brain child' Mrs. Urner was a bit skeptical about the effect a picture version of her story would have on the readers. But according to those who have viewed and commented on the first of the series of 'Helen and Warren' productions, Katheryn Perry is almost a perfect type for the role. She is young, yet a little old-fashioned, lively yet with a quaint dignity and charm, easy to look upon, yet intensely and warmly human.

" * * * It is the humanness of 'Helen and Warren' stories which has brought their tremendous success, so it should be with Katheryn Perry in the 'Helen' role, and with Hallam Cooley playing 'Warren.' Both are intensely human."

The comedy he referred to is "A Business Engagement," the first of "The Married Life of Helen and Warren" series, produced and distributed by Fox Film Corporation, and which exhibitors everywhere hail as something entirely novel in the field of short comedies.

Unnatural History Comedy

Walter Lantz of the Bray Studios has completed the final scenes for the second of the new Unnatural History Comedies, a series of one reel subjects, in which the artist appears with his cartoon characters. This subject is titled "How the Bear Got His Short Tail." It is scheduled for release by F. B. O. for October 19th.

McHugh Again Stars

Jack McHugh, who played leading roles in several Educational-Jewish Comedies last year will again be seen in these comedies. He is being starred with Malcolm Sebastian in a comedy directed by Charles Lamont.

Roach and Sennett, Laugh Makers, Will Score Oct. 25

THE Pathe release program of short features for the week of October 25th is headed by two-reel comedies from the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett Studios, and also includes a chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West," a Hal Roach one-reel comedy, Pathe Review, "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables" and two issues of Pathe News.

"A Punch in the Nose" (Not a love story) is a two-reel Hal Roach Comedy with an all-star cast including such screen favorites as Lucien Littlefield, Al St. John, "Husky" Hanes, Jimmie Finlayson, Lige Conley, Kewpie Morgan, Al Hallet, Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whiteis and Dot Farley. The story concerns a stranded "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe who find themselves near a sanitarium that is badly in need of help. The manager gets jobs for his company and starts trouble for everyone and laughs for audiences. Jay A. Howe directed.

"A Sweet Pickle" is a two-reeler featuring dainty Alice Day and produced by Mack Sennett. In her new vehicle, Alice is employed in a bakery. But when she is called upon to act as delivery girl and take a birthday cake to a palatial mansion she enters upon a far different future. A banquet is in progress and only thirteen guests have arrived. Alice is invited to make it fourteen and accepts after much persuasion. Barney Hellum, Alma Bennett and Jack Richardson support Miss Day in providing the fun. Arthur Rosson directed.

"All Wool" is a Hal Roach one-reel comedy with Earl Mohan, Billy Engle and Katherine Grant in the leading roles. In this fun-film Mohan and Engle appear as trailors and Katherine Grant is an ambitious actress who wanted to play in "rain" but lost her umbrella. Tay Garnett directed.

"The Rustlers' Stampede" is the title of the fifth chapter of the current Patheserial "Wild West," which features Helen Ferguson and Jack Mulhall. In this chapter there is shown the outcome of the rodeo in which Jimmy Whitehawk, the hero portrayed by Mulhall, wins the contest for his punchers and the glory of the Osborne Ranch, of which he is foreman. Other events of this episode are a barbecue and a stampede in which rustlers make off with thousands of head of cattle. Eddie Phillips, Virginia Warwick, Inez Gomez, Fred Burns, and Dan Dix continue in their prominent roles. Robert F. Hill directed.

Pathe Review No. 43 is of particular interest, presenting: "Makers of Men," showing how West Point builds America's military man-power, which was produced with the co-operation of the U. S. Military Academy and the New York Military Academy; "Fresh-Air Tonic," Pathecolor views of Mont Dore, France's favorite mountain resirt; and "Sunlight, the World's Champion Producer of Energy," one of "The Magic Eye" series, showing how the microscope reveals the true nature of commonplace things.

"Closer Than a Brother" is the latest of the Paul Terry creations of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the October 25th Pathe release schedule.

"Hold Tight" Completed

Joe Rock has completed the third of the Blue Ribbon Comedies he is making for F. B. O. This production marks the return of Rock to the screen as a performer. He appears with Alice Ardell in the featured roles in this comedy which is titled—"Hold Tight." Joe Rock is well known as one of the two famous comics who made up the team of Montgomery & Rock which produced several hundred stunt comedies for the Vitagraph Company. This production was directed by Marcel Perez, himself a well known comedian and better known to film fans as "Tweedy."

15th Dinky Doodle Concluded

The fifteenth Dinky Doodle subject which F. B. O. is to release early in November has been placed in production at the Bray Studios. Walter Lantz, the artist creator of this character will appear together with Dinky Doodle and the other cartoon character, Weakheart the dog, in this subject which is to be titled, "Dinky Doodle in the Hunt."

MARGARET QUIMBY

Just as she is and as she will be in Universal's serial, "The Radio Detective," a Craig Kennedy story by Arthur B. Reeve.

Red Seal Product on Opening Program of Three New Theatres

AN unusual testimonial to the drawing powers of Red Seal Featurettes was rendered this month when three new theatres, all in the New York district opened with Red Seal product occupying an important place in the surrounding program.

The new Capitol Theatre in Newark, just opened by Fred Faulkner, a beautiful 1500 seat house, is playing one of Red Seal's "Film Facts," now in its third week as the main surrounding film to Chaplin's "The Gold Rush."

The new Inwood Theatre on Dyckman Street, New York, which gave its first performance on October 1, is playing a Ko-Ko Song Cartune, "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

At Dave Weinstock's opening of the Arcadia Theatre, 59th Street and Third Avenue, New York, honors on the bill went to another Ko-Ko Song Car-tune, "Swanee River."

In addition to these new theatres, many others in the metropolitan district are playing Red Seal, including the Rialto, New York, where one of the "Marvels of Motion" is showing. Fabian's Mosque and Loew's State at Newark are also among this week's users of Red Seal.

Beauties Added

Two new beauties have been added to the ranks of the players at Educational Studios. They are Winona Shirely and Amma Styers, both newcomers to motion pictures.

Miss Shirley is a cousin to Buster Keaton, her mother and Joe Keaton, father of Buster, being sister and brother. Miss Styers is of the celebrated Dominguez family, which once owned the land on which San Pedro, Long Beach and Torrence, Cal., are located and which included the famous Signal Hill oil fields.

SPENCER BENNET

The director of the Pathe serial, "Play Ball," is now directing the Pathe serial, "The Green Archer."

An "Our Gang" Week Cleanup for Kessler

Nyman Kessler, of the Atlantic Theatre, Atlantic, Mass., made a lot of money through the summer with Our Gang and other comedies, and he is not going to lose that advantage through the winter. He has found that a fast little comedy often will bring in more real money to the box office than a long feature, and so he nominated the week of September 7 as "Our Gang Week," and featured the Roach Rascals above the dramatic feature at the three days of that week.

For Monday he offered The Champeen, with Scars of Jealousy as an added feature. Wednesday brought The Big Show to top I Want My Man, while Saturday was a cleanup with A Pleasant Journey, topping My Son.

Mr. Kessler did not ignore his drama feature. For I Want My Man he admitted any woman for fifteen cents, provided she had her man along, while sons were admitted for the same sum on Saturday if they came with their mothers.

He knows that he can sell both the comedy and the drama, and that some will buy one who will not desire the other, so he offers both, getting all the money, but with the accent on the fun-making.

As a reminiscence of an earlier Our Gang release, Giants vs. Yankees, he offered a prize for a ball game between a Boy Scout troop and the Quincy school team on condition that the contest be known as the Our Gang game. That helped, too.

New Fat Men Comedy

Joe Rock is placing in immediate production the fifth of the series of Standard Comedies he is producing for F. B. O. "The Ton of Fun" as Joe Rock's trio of heavyweight comedians who appear in this series are collectively known, "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander will be supported by that famous screen comedienne Gale Henry. The directorial work on this comedy, the title of which is as yet not decided, will be in the capable hands of Slim Somerville.

ALL WET. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Charles Chase. A little bit better than many of this star's When that's said—all's said. Sunday, yes. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats), Kalona, Iowa.

ANIMAL CELEBRITIES. (Pathe-Sportlight). Pathe sure beats the field in sport stuff. This subject is very good as a "filler" and should please any type of patronage as there are no two subjects alike. Good appeal, yes, for Sunday. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BIG GAME HUNT. (Fox). One of Fox's new 1926 comedies, and a real one. G. A. Peterson, Folly and Cozy Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

BLACK GOLD BRICKS. (Universal-Neely Edwards). Bull's-eye comedies with this star are very good. Bert Roach and Alice Howell good as co-stars. One reel. Draw farming and town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

BLACKSMITH. (First National). Star, Buster Keaton. This is a dandy comedy. Had some very good comments on this one. They were laughing when it first started and for some seconds afterward. And what's a comedy for if it isn't to laugh at? This will sure bring the laughs. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes, for Sunday. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. THE COPS. (First National). Star, Buster Keaton. This is a very good comedy. You do the right thing when you sign up with First National for the Keaton comedies. You please the grownups as well as the children when you run these. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes, for Sunday. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

COURT PLASTER. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Neal Burns. Another GOOD one from this exchange. Lots of action. Print new. Yes for Sunday. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

CRADLE ROBBERS. (Pathe). "Our Gang." This is a good comedy as usual from the gang but I received a rotten print which spoiled it. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

DON'T TELL DAD. (Pathe). Another of Pathe's new comedies, and a real one. G. A. Peterson, Folly and Cozy Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

DRIVING FOOL. (Fox). A fair comedy that has enough comedy situations to put it over fairly well. Good tone, fair appeal. E. N. Prescott, Prescott Circuit, Union, Maine.

FAMILY ENTRANCE. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Charles Chase. We have run this star so often that he is getting to be "poison ivy" for us. He's all right for a while; but if you use him too often they will get tired of him. All right for Sunday. Fair appeal. Draw all classes, town 680. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats), Kalona, Iowa.

FIGHTING RANGER No. 12. (Universal). Star, Jack Daugherty. A very good serial if the balance of the chapters are as good as the first two. New stunts and plenty of hard riding. Prints good. Sunday and special no. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen merchants town of 450. Admission 15-30. William A. Simon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

GIRL PROBLEM. (Universal). Star, Arthur Lake. All of these one reel Sweet Sixteen series are good. Lake and his leading lady very clever as is Eddie Clayton, the heavy. Farmers, town of 110. Admisssion 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

ONE OF THE FAMILY. (Pathe). A one-reel comedy, not so good. Draw farming class and town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

PACEMAKERS NO. 10. (F. B. O.). Star, Alberta Vaughn. Still bringing the laughs. If you are not playing this series go after them strong. They are great business stimulants. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Very good audience appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

PAPA'S PET. (Universal-Neely Edwards). Very good one-reel comedy; Bert Roach and Alice Howell in it, also good. Draw farmer and town class, town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

PLAY BALL (Pathe). I am on the last episode and it's a real serial. I start in with "Wild West" next week and will be satisfied if it holds up as "Play Ball" did. I run the serial first in state on release dates. Prints perfect. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres, Hollis, Oklahoma.

PERMIT ME. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Cliff Bowes. Nothing to this one at all. Not a new idea in it, nor a good old one done over! Very poor and is wrongly named, as it is no comedy at all. Tone good but appeal poor. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

RED PEPPER. (Educational-Comedy). (2 reels). Star, Al St. John. This lad is good and he certainly can make them laugh when he is with his bicycle. Print good. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

RIDDLE RIDER. (Universal-Serial). Star, William Desmond. Just ran the second chapter, and if it continues as good as the first two you can go as far as you like on it. It will stand it. Good tone. No for Sunday. Appeal a hundred per cent. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

UNIVERSAL TWO-REEL WESTERNS. What I have had of them have been very good. Good tone, appeal 90 per cent. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

"Park Pets Outside," the Cry in Ilion, N. Y.

Don't say "skunk" to Whitney and Young, who run the Temple Theatre in Ilion, N. Y., and who have another theatre in course of construction. As the story goes, one of the little animals found his way into the new theatre and then forgot his manners. While this was bad enough, there was another and entirely unexpected chapter to come. An animal show was playing at the Temple. A resident of Ilion, with a pet skunk, came to the theatre, bringing his pet, thinking that he might sell it, as the show had one pet skunk. The rest of the story requires no stretch of the imagination, for the second skunk also misbehaved and with a crowded house at that.

With the Shine boys the big magnet that draws film exchange managers and salesmen from all parts of the state, the boys have dubbed Gloversville "Shineville." The name gives every evidence of sticking.

The Colonial in Monroe has been taken over recently by J. J. Dinber of Jersey City. The house has been run in the past by the K. and B. Amusement Company.

Tom Kennedy of the Lyceum of Champlain was along Film Row during the week and buying quite a lot at that. L. Shapiro of the Depot Theatre in Manchester, Vt., also was in town but forgot to bring along any maple syrup of change, booking among other things not less than six of the Pathe serials.

The past week brought a rather surprising change in the management of the Palace in Troy. Louis Saperstein, who was named as manager of the house only a couple of weeks ago, resigned during the week and there was a rumor that there had been a rather wordy disagreement with Julius Berinstein just before.

Because they wanted $100 for three seats at the world series, and the seats were in the fifteenth row at that, Chris Buckley of the Leland Clinton Square theatres in Albany contented himself last week with watching the score board and preparing for the opening of "The Iron Horse" at the Leland on Monday.

In order to secure the best in the way of amateur talent for the shows which he is putting on one night a week with the regular pictures, Jake Rosenthal of the Rose in Troy has had some cards printed which he hands to the amateurs, asking them to distribute them among other amateurs.

It looks as though Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, would not be heard from much this fall and winter in the bowling matches in that city. While pitching in a recent baseball game Mr. Stern strained his back so badly that he is attempting nothing on the alleys, despite the fact that a league has been formed among employes of the various houses in the Collar City.

Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, has conceived a notice which he is throwing on the screen, announcing coming attractions and stating that the biggest pictures are scheduled with no advance in prices.

Ben Apple, a former Troy exhibitor, who recently returned from Florida, is back in town. Judging from the fact that newspaper ads last week called attention to the fact that Mr. Apple would act as the Troy representative of a Florida land concern, it looks as though he would stay north.

John Maxwell, formerly of the Frontier Amusement Company in Buffalo, is managing the Liberty in Herkimer, now one of the Shine chain.

The past week saw Louis and Meyer Shine of Gloversville in New York, as well as Vic Warren of Massena. Bob Landry of Ogdensburg, one of the best known showmen along the northern border, has made up his mind that northern winters are a bit too severe, and has decided to go to Florida and of course enter the real estate business. The past week also brought to Film Row one of the old timers in the person of Eli Rosenbaum of the Hippodrome in Ogdensburg.

There was a private screening of "The Merry Widow" the other night, attended by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Farley and daughters and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Buckley.

William Shirley, who chases back and forth between Schenectady and Florida just as though it was but a few miles, left last Wednesday for Miami and remarked that he would not be back until he has made at least a half million.

A Zoological Issue

Each season of the year brings its problems for the exhibitor. This story has to do with a problem of the country exhibitor during the autumn. Ilion, N. Y., exhibitors aren't the only victims of visitations by those cute little black and white animals that city folks sometimes stroke and address as "kitty" then becoming sadder but wiser citizens.

A lone skunk, bored with life, wandered into the only picture theatre in Smethport, Pa., the other night, ambling through the doors just in time to "make" the second show. Somebody near the door spotted the animal and the news spread with extraordinary rapidity. Exits were opened and the theatre emptied with an alacrity that would have brought a glow of satisfaction to the heart of a fireman. The audience waited outside when, lo and behold, the skunk, still bored with life, strolled out of the theatre and went unmolested down the street. He had a kingly indifference for the insults hurled in his direction.

Should we call this issue of the "Spotlight" the zoological number?

The Regent in St. Regis Falls, run by F. W. Aldrich, will close for the winter on November 1.

Nick Dennis of Utica is planning to open the Auditorium in that city on November 2 with a program of pictures and Italian vaudeville. The city has a heavy Italian population and the idea should prove successful.

J. W. Carkey, manager of the Strand in Carthage, gave his annual fall fashion show this week in conjunction with the merchants of the village. He used "Sandra" as the picture.

Fashion shows appear to be all the rage in this part of New York State at the present time and there is hardly a week that from one to three houses do not announce one. The Shine boys are staging one this week in connection with a run of "Slaves of Fashion" at the Glove Theatre in Gloversville.

Picture theatres throughout Northern New York felt the effects of the veritable blizzard of last Saturday when snow fell in many places to a depth of several inches. The storm was accompanied by a gale of wind that kept thousands within doors in both cities as well as villages.

Bill Smalley of Cooperstown, is back from a visit to the Danbury fair. Frank Briggs has been placed in charge of the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, relieving Alex Sayles of some of the work in connection with the two Buckley houses in that city.

John Garry's tooth is still aching, according to last reports, a fact that brought Mr. Garry to Albany on Sunday. Mr. Garry is pretty busy these days with the Empire, playing such pictures as "Graustark" last week, packing the house, and with "The Iron Horse" slated for four days this week and "The Freshman" coming in November.

Two Pulaski houses were taken over during the week by Charles Gilmore of Syracuse and Oswego. In connection with the acqniring of the Temple, Mr. Gilmore annonnced that Jacob A. Youngs wonld be retained as manager, a position which he has held since the honse was opened last February. In taking over the Hohman Theatre, Mr. Gilmore said that there would he a new manager annonnced about November 1. F. H. Hohman, who has been handling the honse, will leave soon for an extended trip through the South, being accompanied by Mrs. Hohman. They will travel in a new house car, stopping wherever they please and remaining sonth until next spring.

Fred Mausert of Glens Falls is busily engaged in replacing the old church pews in his house with some up-to-date seats.

Seated behind the wheel of a brand new Paige car, Harvey Smith drove down from Wells one day last week and spent both time and money along Film Row. But, then, he has nothing on J. B. Harte of Bennington, who arrived in town with a new Packard, and what's more, is going to Florida right soon.

George E. Loomis has taken over the Savoy in Frankfort and reopened the house this week with "Let's Go Gallagher" as the attraction. This gives Mr. Loomis two houses in Frankfort.

Another representative of the gospel in Central New York has decided to operate a mation picture theatre this winter in the interests of his church. The latest addition is the Rev. H. H. Black of Central Bridge, who made two trips to Film Row this past week for booking purposes. Father Blais is making a success of the house he is running at Schroon Lake.

Connecticut Theatre News

Work has been started on a new theatre for Hartford, to be known as the Rivoli, at 1751-1759 Park street. The building will be of fireproof construction, seating 900, also three stories and six offices on the second floor. The street front will be of press brick and lime stone trim in Gothic style of architecture. The theatre will be equipped with a modern heating and ventilating system. A lobby forming the main entrance is 25 feet wide and furnished in marble and tile. The auditorium will be of octagon shape 25 feet high without galleries, and will have six exits in addition to the main entrance. The Rivoli Corporation of Hartford is the owner. Max Shulman of Hartford is president.

Lee J. Lewis has purchased the Palace Theatre at Greenwood, Ark.

Fire caused considerable damage to the Crescent at Little Rock, Ark., but the building was saved and no one injured.

James Boyd will open his Gem Theatre at Blytheville, Ark., in the near future.

R. E. Blouvet to Build in Le Roy, N. Y.

Le Roy, N. Y., is to have a new picture theatre. Ralph E. Blouvet, who has operated the Family Theatre in the town for many years, has purchased from Alderman Frank W. Syler the former Cleveland property at 51-55 Main street, which has a frontage of 80 feet and a width of 124 feet at the rear. Mr. Blouvet is consulting with architects on the plans, which call for two ground floor stores and office rooms on the second floor. The house will be modern in every particular and quite elaborate in interior decoration. Mr. Blouvet has been giving Le Roy folks a high grade of film entertainment for several years at the Family.

Plans have been filed with the Bureau of Buildings in Buffalo by the Farber & Yavno Holding Company for a new picture theatre to be erected at 2275-2285 Genesee street. The house will cost $30,000.

The Palace opened in Syracuse on October 5. The program is being changed daily. The capacity is 1,289. Music is furnished by a large organ. The house is at 2362 James street, corner of Stafford avenue.

Eddie Lazinski, manager of the Park Theatre, a north Buffalo community house, is sporting a new Buick roadster. When it rains, Eddie leaves his nice new boat in the garage and takes his dad's car to visit the film exchanges.

The Buffalo community theatre which, it was reported, was to have been built by Barney Vohwinkle in association with the Shea Amusement Company on Genesee street, will not have the Shea company behind it. Mr. Vohwinkle is expected to go ahead with the project himself.

Manager George T. Cruzen started his Saturday morning shows for children last Saturday at the Palace Theatre in Lockport and the youth of the Lock City turned out en masse for the event. Superintendent of Schools R. B. Kelley gave enthusiastic endorsmeent to the idea in a letter to Mr. Cruzen. The same class of shows are continuing with great success this season at the Eastman in Rochester. The admission price of 10 cents there is for adults as well as children. Last Saturday the feature was Laurette Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart."

Manager H. M. Addison of the Binghamton Theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., wants to know if there are any harmonica players in his city. If so, Mr. Addison is willing to offer cash prizes to the one who can play the best on Friday evening, October 16. So Binghamton is going to hear some real music that night.

House Manager Morris of the Regent Theatre, Rochester, tried an experiment this week and it was a big success. The experiment was Mark Daniels, baritone, formerly of Portland, Ore., and now a member of the Rochester American Opera Company. It came about in this way. Mr. Morris graduated to the managerial staff of the Regent after two years in the Regent Theatre. He knows about the various acts, musical and otherwise, which are used to vary that theatre's program. And he suspected that the patrons of the Regent might on occasion like a little of the same thing. So he sought out and found Daniels. Mr. Morris did not advertise what he was going to do. He simply had Mr. Daniels walk out on the stage and sing. But the audience wanted another number and got it and still another. Then folks began telephoning the box office to find out when Mr. Daniels went on and the innovation proved decidedly successful.

Mitchell Fitzer, and not Ben, as was announced, has taken over the new theatre being built in Kenmore, N. Y. The theatre will be one of the finest in Western New York and will be ready for the public soon after the first of the year.

Special Services Held In Cleveland Theatre

Two and one-half years ago a group of ten orthodox Jews, who lived in Cleveland Heights, found their number too small to establish a synagogue and the walk into Cleveland proper too long. The Mosaic law forbids riding on the Sabbath. To meet the situation, Jacob Makoff transformed the ball room of his home into a small but serviceable synagogue where now a larger congregation, thirty-five in number, gathers every Friday night and Saturday. However, when the recent holidays came, those wishing to worship with this congregation had grown to 500. Again Jacob Makoff came to the rescue of his fellow-worshippers and donated his theatre, the Heights, at Euclid avenue boulevard and Conventry road, Cleveland Heights, where the New Year and Day of Atonement exercises were held.

John A. Schwalm, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, has added an act of vaudeville to his regular picture program for each Thursday night.

Pincus Sets Records in San Francisco

Greater movie season has gone over with a bang at the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, and Manager Charles M. Pincus is busy keeping tally on busted house records. The first Sunday in October saw a new record set in this house when "The Freshman" was offered, and oddly enough the record it succeeded was also set by Harold Lloyd's "Hot Water." The football stadium scenes in "The Freshman" were filmed at the Stanford-California game here last fall and Manager Pincus had the University of California football squad and its famous trainer, Andy Smith, as guests of the house at the opening of the picture.

Nat Holt, manager of the California Theatre, San Francisco, celebrated his return from a vacation spent in Canada by directing the putting on of a special kiddies' show for newsboys, offering "He's a Prince," a Mack Sennett comedy and a Krazy Kat cartoon.

Henry Pincus, who has had wide experience in San Francisco picture theatres, has been made manager of Beatty's Casino Theatre, succeeding Herman Kirsten.

West Berkeley Theatres, Inc., has arranged to erect a 1500-seat theatre on San Pablo avenue, near University, Berkeley, Cal. The house will succeed the present Varsity Theatre and will be known as the New Varsity Theatre. R. A. McGinnis is manager of the present house.

Rex Midgley of the American Theatre, Oakland, Cal., who returned recently from a trip to New York, is arranging for the erection of a large picture theatre in that city, opposite the new Elks' Club.

The Appleton Theatre, Watsonville, Cal., has opened under the management of Markowitz Bros.

A picture house seating 750 is to be erected at Sunnyvale, Cal., by Thomas Belessis, who will also be its manager. It is to be known as the New Strand.

W. H. Laughead of the Westwood, Cal., was a visitor at San Francisco early in the month.

The Lurie Theatre, Oakland, Cal., for years operated by Alexander Pantages, but under other management for the past two years, is to be made a part of the Pantages Circuit again.

Work on the McNamara & Winkelman Theatre at Martinez, Cal., is to be resumed at once, the unfinished house having been purchased by West Coast Theatres, Inc. Work on this theatre commenced three years ago, but stopped with the death of John McNamara, the promoter, when about 60 per cent. complete.

War Cox and George Austin have arranged for the erection of a small picture theatre at Forty-sixth avenue and Irving street, San Francisco.

Crowds Flock to New Seattle Theatre

Of outstanding importance in Seattle was the splendid opening last week of H. W. Bruen's Arabian Theatre in the Woodland Park district. The house, a 750 seater, is the finest theatre in Seattle, bar none. It is a distinct "type" theatre, the Arabian colorings, decorations and atmosphere being well carried out. Two capacity audiences expressed their approval through loud applause on opening night and have returned frequently, judging by the outstanding lines. Mr. Bruen presented his friends on Film Row, the exchange managers, with Eversharp pencils as souvenirs.

Secretary J. M. Hone of the Washington state M. P. T. O. called a district meeting in Yakima during the Universal pictures party, taking advantage of the fact that all the boys would be assembled for that event. All were bidden to the big annual convention in Seattle on November 4.

Within sixty days Warner Brothers' new Egyptian Theatre in the University district will be opened. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Warner were in town last week and let complete contracts for decorating, lighting, seating, drapes, chairs, projection, etc., to B. F. Shearer, Inc., of Seattle. The house is a 1,200 seater and will be the largest suburban theatre in Seattle.

Louis Goldsmith, who for years has been one of Seattle's well known suburban exhibitors as the owner of the Society Theatre, which he recently sold to Mr. Ackles, has decided to have a whirl at the opposite side of the game. Louis is selling film for Deluxe Feature Film exchange, out of Seattle.

Putting over a cake as well as a show was what happened in Port Orchard, Wash., when J. A. McGill secured the co-operation of a local bakery in putting over "Drusilla with a Million." The bakery made him a number of cakes at less than cost, slicing each up into individual portions and placing in oiled paper envelopes. Every lady was given a piece of cake upon entering the community theatre. The house did capacity.

Ben Fey has added a large electric sign giving the name of his attractions, which has been suspended from the base of his big Renton Theatre sign, Renton, Wash.

New Arbitration Board In Kansas City

In line with the usual quarterly custom, a new arbitration board has been appointed in Kansas City. The exhibitor members, appointed by President R. R. Biechele of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, are: K. L. Darnell, Alamo Theatre, Kansas City; Frank Amos, New Diamond Theatre, Kansas City, and A. F. Gibbons, Prospect Theatre, Kansas City. The three distributor members, appointed by E. C. Rhoden, president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, are: Louis Reichert, Warner-Vitagraph; T. O. Byerle, First National, and M. A. Levy, Fox.

A meeting of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri has been called for October 13 at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City. The question of holding a semi-annual convention this fall and producer-owned theatres probably will be among the more important questions to be discussed. Sentiment among some of the exhibitors favors an annual convention instead of a semi-annual meeting. In that case the meeting would not be until next spring.

Fred Spear of the Orpheum Theatre, Kansas City, felt contented with himself last week, having been first to the newspapers with the fact that his theatre would carry play-by-play detail on the world's series, then "grabbing off" liberal space on a special theatre party arranged for "Big Bill" Tilden, Manuel Alonzo and other tennis stars who were competing in Kansas City. But in the meantime Earl T. Cook, manager of the Pantages Theatre, first-run house, successfully countered with a special entertainment for the First Baptist Church Business Men's Bible Class, while the Apollo Theatre, suburban house, set the pace with a fashion revue of Paris gowns.

"They say that competition is the spice of life but I disagree," asserted Barney Dubinsky of the Regent Theatre, Kansas City. "Since downtown building improvements have swept away two rival theatres in my block, I have had better crowds and had less trouble in buying films. That's that!"

Several changes of management in theatres in the Kansas City territory have been announced. Lee Jones, manager of Universal theatres in Atchison, Kans., has been transferred to Independence, Kans., where he will manage the Beldorf. Mr. Jones was succeeded in Atchison by A. R. Zimmer, who will assume charge of the Crystal and Royal. The Garden, Colony, Kans., has been purchased by T. A. Lauck from W. A. Bearce, owner of a chain of houses. The Robinson at Robinson, Kans., has been purchased by Charles Prikey from G. L. Rugg.

Among out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Hooper, National Theatre, Topeka, Kans.; W. H. Weber, Echo and Larkin theatres; Great Bend, Kans.; Lawrence Brenninger, Cozy and Crystal, Topeka, Kans.; A. R. Zimmer, Crystal and Royal, Atchison, Kans.; H. B. Doerring, People's, Garnett, Kans.; Harry McClure, Strand, Emporia, Kans.; Edward Peskay, Rivola and Penn, St. Joseph, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

A. E. Elliott is to manage the New Lewis and Elliott at Independence, Mo., which recently were acquired by Glenn Dickinson, owner of a chain.

A new player pipe organ has been installed in the Gauntier Theatre, Kansas City, Kans., owned by Dick Liggett, while H. S. Beardsley has had two new Simplex projectors installed in his New Regent Theatre, Oberlin, Kans., to be opened next week.

Denver's State Theatre Being Renovated

The new State Theatre of Denver closed on October 9 for two weeks to enlarge and raise the stage, installing still more lighting effects and remodelling the projection booth. The policy of the theatre in presenting acts with the usual program has met with such success that the management will equip the theatre with the necessity facilities to accommodate the largest and best acts that can be sceured. H. D. McBride, manager of the State, announces that a grand reopening will take place on October 24 with a show that will be even larger and better than has greeted the capacity crowds since its opening three weeks ago.

Jim Lynch, owner and manager of the Empress Theatre, Laramie, Wyo., will show real football enthusiasm for the Cowboy Team of the University of Wyoming. A benefit performance will be put on soon to raise funds to defray the part of the expenses of a ten-day tour which will be taken by all members of the Cowboy eleven when they play Montana State and Utah Aggies.

B. P. McCormick, owner and manager of the Rialto and Liberty theatres, of Florence, Col., and the Jones Theatre, Canon City, Col., was a visitor in Film Row.

The following theatres have reopened for the winter season: Princess Theatre, Olney Springs Col.; Kiowa Theatre, Kiowa, Col.; Sanford Theatre, Sanford, Col.; Ioof Theatre, Coal Creek, Col. Messrs. Lane and Schmid have taken over the ownership and management of the Princess heatre, Flagler, Col., and J. M. Cooke has become the owner and manager of the Crowley Theatre, Crowley, Col.

Among exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week were Ed Marquand, manager of the Isis and Longmont theatres, Longmont, Col.; Mrs. Lee Mote, Acme Theatre, Riverton, Wyo.; A. V. Wessels, Orpheum Theatre, Steamboat Springs, Col.; R. Murray, Eaton Theatre, Eaton, Col.

Ben Lyon and Mary Astor in Actionful Story Based on Mother-Love and Movie-Lot Angles

Reviewed by E. W. Sargent

Using two "sure fires," mother-stuff and the movie lot, "The Pace That Thrills" has only one possible classification. It's good audience stuff. Some months from now history probably will show that it was great audience stuff, for the story is all about a much maligned picture hero who lets a double do the dirty work; not because he is a coward, but because it takes all of his presumably large salary to get his innocent mother out of prison where she is serving a life sentence for the murder of her husband.

Having thrown plausibility to the winds in the major premise, the author and scenarist go ahead with no other thought than getting all they can out of the situations and they build up thrill after thrill to an auto racing finish in which the hero goes over the edge of the saucer, but wins the girl if not the race.

It's as punchy as a grudge fight and probably the fans will give small heed to the almost complete lack of logic. Paula Van Lorer, the chorus girl wife of a New York aristocratic dipsomaniac, threatens him with a pair of shears when he comes home in his usual condition and attempts to give his infant son a drink of liquor from his pocket flask. He wrests the shears from her and chases her out into the hall, where he falls down the stairs and stabs himself on the way. She is convicted upon the perjured testimony of the maid and butler and sent to Auburn. The child is placed in an orphan asylum, whence he is rescued by a director, who is using the asylum for a location.

Become a famous star, the boy, now known as Danny Wade, devotes his entire income to establishing his mother's innocence. To this end he dares take no chances on a layoff because of hurts, and even the newspapers blaze with the stories of his cowardice. To redeem his name he promises to go into an auto race, for charity, but his mother's hearing before the Board of Pardons comes the day of the race, and his testimony is essential to her freedom, so he risks a delo let him sprint to the track, where he starts four laps late, but is catching up with the leaders when structural faults develop in the saucer and he goes over the edge—not hurt so badly that he cannot go into the inevitable clinch.

This rather bald story has been cleverly developed to bring thrills, with a liberal sprinkling of comedy bits to lighten the tensity, and the result probably will highly please a majority of the fan patrons.

There is a fine sequence in a bull ring, a good boxing scene, a vivid cross country run and, of course, the swift movement of the race itself.

Ben Lyon does excellent work as the hero, and Mary Astor gives capital support. Fritzi Brunette is good in the opening scenes, but not convincing as the convict mother, and Tully Marshal brings a dry humor to the part of the picture magnate who feels that an unheroic hero is more or less of a liability. The others do not figure to any appreciable extent.

Sold to the picture fans as a picture of movie life, this story should please the majority and the others probably will enjoy the glimpses behind the scenes.

Newest Buck Jones Western Has Continually Mounting Action Working Up to Fine Finish

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

In his newest starring vehicle for Fox Film Corporation, Buck Jones in the character which supplies the title, "Durand of the Bad Lands," labors under the stigma of a desperado accused of nearly every crime on the calendar, nevertheless he arouses wholesome sympathy and the fans will be pleased when it develops that it is all the result of a ruse planned by the rascally sheriff and his gang to hide their own infamy.

Durand, deciding to move to Mexico sells his ranch and belongings to the sheriff and Pete, one of his henchman, uses Durand's regalia in commiting his raids. Durand returns and while preparing to vindicate himself, falls in love with Molly Gore who, with her invalid father, is struggling to make out on a small ranch. Molly spurns him but when he returns with three children, survivors of a raid on a wagon carrying gold, she begins to soften. Finally Durand vindicates his name, force Pete to confess implicating the sheriff and in a daring rescue of the banker's daughter kidnapped by Pete wins the banker's gratitude and of course wins Molly's love as well.

This picture starts off with considerable suspense, but from an action standpoint, ambles along for quite a while. During this period good human interest is being built up in painting the kindness and wholesomeness of Durand and overcoming the stigma cast upon him. In this, the three little kiddies aid materially. The action gradually gains momentum and the picture works up to a fast finish that should satisfy western fans and all lovers of fast snappy action. There is fine suspense where Durand enters Molly's home where the sheriff's men are in hiding and this is immediately following with a fast ride to the village, robbery of the bank by the gang, kidnapping of the banker's daughter by Pete, who hides in a mine tunnel and finally Durand's feat in going in unarmed and capturing him. Some of this is rather heroic and implausible, but it is all good peppy stuff.

Buck is his usual wholesome likeable self, good in the heroic stuff and exhibiting his quaint touches of humor. Marian Nixon is excellent as the girl, and the three little kiddies, especially the boy Buck Black as Jimmie, are very good.

While not his best, "Durand of the Bad Lands" is a good Buck Jones western that should please.

Fred Thompson, Popular Western Star, in Film Crammed Full of Action and Heart Interest

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

"Ridin' The Wind," F. B. O.'s latest starring picture for Fred Thomson, may prove a test of what kind of films are welcomed by small-town audiences. It presents a very popular western star and his intelligent steed, and an implausible story crammed with action and sob stuff.

This seems to be a case where the plot possesses too much wealth of material for the footage of the picture. Briefly, it is this: At the grave of their mother, little Jim Harkness vows always to care for his younger brother, Dick. Dick supposedly goes to college and there is a reunion of brothers only when they have attained manhood. Bandits have been ravaging the country, sought by Jim Harkness and Sheriff Lacy, whose daughter, May, loves Jim. Unknown to Jim, his brother is one of the bandits. After the brothers' reunion the bandits attack a mail car. Jim drives them off, captures his own brother and protects him. Dick later forgets his promise to go straight, and in seeking him Jim is captured by the bandits. Dick, now contrite, helps Jim to overcome them. Meanwhile, the bandit chief has kidnapped May Lacy and imprisoned her in a blazing barn. Silver King, Jim's horse, leads him to her.

This synopsis only hints at the wealth of incident in the story. Director Del Andrews plainly had difficulty in handling it within the assigned footage, and the result is not smooth action. There is heavy drama and then very good slapstick comedy and then more heavy drama and then sob stuff. And so on.

Thomson is always good despite the implausibility of the story and Jacqueline Gadson is satisfactory as the heroine. Lewis Sargent perhaps gives the best performance next to Thomson. Silver King is his inimitable self and Betty Scott is very good in a comedy part.

William Russell Is Star of Story Abounding In Prize Fight and Big Brother Atmosphere

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With the interest divided between the star in the role of a champion prize fighter and little Mickey Bennett as his little brother and most enthusiastic admirer there is built up a story which combines the sympathetic angles of the big brother type with the snap of the pugilistic area in "Big Pal" a Royal Production starring William Russell, released on the independent market by Henry Ginsberg Distributing Corporation.

Seeing Russell slugging his partner who has picked on a smaller chap, the girl gets the impression he is a big brute but when he saves her from a runaway she changes her mind and a warm friendship starts. The disgruntled sparring partner, thinking to get even kidnaps the boy and sends word that Russell must throw the fight which he agrees to do, but the kid's pal finds and frees him and with the girl the little chap arrives at the ringside in time for the hero to land the winning punch and clinch his hold on the girl's heart.

The atmosphere of the squared circle is effectively handled in the early scenes in the training quarters. Then follows the conventional devise of having the hero save the girl from a runaway. Most of the footage is used in building up the strong affection between the kid and his big pal and in this part which is lacking in real action, little Mickey Bennett gives an excellent performance and succeeds in taking the laurels away from the star. The imprisonment of the kid in a cellar by the cruel villain and his rescue by his pals follows familiar lines, as does the climax, the big fight with the appearance of the kid and the girl to spur him on at the right moment.

Russell is congenially cast and Mary Carr shines in a minor role as the mother with Hayden Stevenson thoroughly in character as the fighter's manager, Julianne Johnston is attractive as the girl but seems lacking in pep. Mickey Bennett is excellent.

With everything centering on the one big situation, the story is slight for the footage and drags considerably before the climax is reached. Kids, however, especially boys will glory in the little fellow's adventures and the climax will probably please the fight fans.

Florida River Famed in Song Used As Locale for Entertaining Heart Interest Melodrama

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Florida's most famous river, celebrated in song, furnishes the locale and title for an entertaining heart-interest melodrama, "Down Upon the Swanee River,'" which is being distributed on the independent market by Lee-Bradford Corporation.

The well-known song which evidently suggested the story is used only incidentally in the production, when an old negro wandering several thousand miles from home, hears it, becomes homesick and returns in time to save the heroine from death in its beautiful waters. The picture was actually filmed in authentic surroundings.

The plot concerns the elopement of a girl with a young doctor who is frowned upon by the community because, like his father he is an atheist. There is no real villainy the conflict being supplied by the opposition of the girl's father to this match which even goes so far as to have the doctor driven from town by a mob of hoodlums. There are several melodramatic twists including the wrongful accusation of the hero as a thief when he enters her home to get money to aid her scape-grace brother.

The interest diminishes and the action sags somewhat near the centre when the hero getting a job on a ship finds that the cruise will last a year and considerable footage is given to the wanderings of the faithful old negro servant and the plight of the girl.

Much of the story follows along familiar lines and a lot of the situations can be guaged in advance, but there are some unexpected twists as for instance where the chap in a typical villian make-up only figures to the extent of winning from the weak brother at cards. There is plenty of pathos and heart interest and a couple of stirring situations and the picture will probably entertain the average neighborhood theatre clientele.

The story is handled by a good cast headed by Charles Emmett Mack and Mary Thurman.

"The Vanishing American"—Paramount

Big Spectacular Production Rich in Human Interest and Sympathy Is an Indian Epic

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

At last the American Indian has come into his own—in Paramount's special production, "The Vanishing American" adapted from a story by Zane Grey, produced by the well-known action director, George B. Seitz, and interpreted by an excellent cast headed by Richard Dix, Noah Beery and Lois Wilson.

Based on the idea that races of men come and go, the strong overcoming the weak, but that the stage on which they appear for what is but a brief time in the world's history, that is the land itself, remains; this picture opens with what is really a prologue to the main and more personal narrative. This, and the general treatment of the story proper, makes it in reality an epic of the American Indian.

The early sequences are especially big and spectacular. Following out the broad theme there are at first glimpses of the prehistoric inhabitants of this country beginning with the basket weavers, then the slab-house men and in more detail the cliff dwellers. Here the action realy begins. Hundreds of persons are used in these scenes which depict a big community dwelling with the inhabitants grown lazy and then the coming of the Indians who wiped them out of existence. There is a stirring battle scene with scores of men swarming up the cliffs and engaging in hand-to-hand encounter and the air filled with flying arrows. This scene alone is as big as the climax in many spectacular productions.

Then is shown the coming of the white man, a handful of Spaniards and the interesting fact is brought out that they were able to subdue the Indian hordes because the Indians had never seen horses and believing them to be magic monsters considered the white men as gods. The scene changes to 1860 with the Indians finally subdued by the U. S. soldiers under the leadership of the famous scout Kit Carson. Here, too, is another big battle scene.

The action then jumps to a more modern period and is concentrated in the affairs on a reservation to which the few remaining Indians are confined. Here the personal story begins and around a direct descendant of the original chief is woven a romantic story of his leadership of his people in the face of injustice from the white man, and his own love for a white woman. Except in this character there is no playing up of the noble red man other than the showing of the way the Indians returned good for evil by volunteering during the World War. Here, too, occur big battle scenes and deeds of heroism on the fields of France. While the hounding of the Indian and the rank injustice of his treatment is made the real point of the drama the government itself is not blamed but rather the incompetency and crookedness and villainy of the agents.

Richard Dix is excellent in the leading role of the young Indian chief. With his strong features he proves an ideal type for the role even keeping up the illusion when in army uniform. His work throughout is very fine and he will surprise even his most ardent admirers. Lois Wilson in the opposite romantic role as the reservation school teacher, is all that could be desired, while Noah Beery is wonderfully effective in an ideal role for him, that of the oily, scheming vicious hypocritical government representative who used his authority to further his own dastardly schemes. Charles Stevens gives a sterling performance as a young Indian and Malcolm McGregor does good work as a young army officer.

From a production standpoint "The Vanishing American" is big and spectacular. It is interesting and instructive throughout and while the action slows down somewhat in developing the status of the Indian at present, a strong sympathy for the red man is established. As a whole we believe that this picture will provide pleasing and interesting entertainment for the majority of patrons. There are points about it which are liable to have a questionable effect on the box-office angle. First, does the public care for the prehistoric material? We believe they do particulraly when it is big and well done and American history as in this instance. Next there is the romantic angle to be considered. Here a ticklish situation is developed, with the romance between a white woman and an Italian. Many are liable not to care for this, even though the Indian is a wonderfully fine character. The culmination of this romance which is entirely logical is a compromise to public taste for although the love between the pair is strongly brought out, the Indian dies just at the finish and those who desire it can see an intimation of the girl's marriage later to the army captain. Another point to be considered is that there is considerable World War stuff. On the other hand, one of the outstanding fine things about the picture is the majesty and almost breath-taking grandeur of many of the backgrounds which show some of the most wonderful scenery in the world, that is the Grand canon of the Colorado.

We believe the questionable points will be more than overbalanced by the virtues of the production and that the general public will consider it a really big picture.

Leah Baird Returns to Screen Heading Fine Cast in Smooth and Pleasing Society Drama

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Leah Baird, who has been absent from the screen for sometime, during which she has prepared the continuity for a number of productions, reappears on the silver sheet in "The Unnamed Woman," an Embasssy Picture directed by Harry O. Hoyt and distributed on the independent market by Arrow Pictures Corporation.

The story is of the society type and concerns a young woman of the gold-digger type who snares a supposedly wealthy man into marriage which proves unhappy for both. A situation arises by which the wife is able to secure sufficient evidence for divorce when an innocent woman guest calls for help when a burglar tries to enter her room and she sees her husband in pajamas and dressing gown enter. This causes an estrangment between the guest and her own husband, but through the ruse of pretending to poison herself matters are straightened out, the chauffeur confesses the attempted burglary, the pair are reunited, the cad is soundly thrashed by the irate husband and the society pair decide to begin all over.

Harry O. Hoyt has smoothly directed this picture so that while there is nothing remarkable or strikingly original in the story it succeeds in holding the interest and should prove entertaining to the majority. There are some good dramatic moments and the suspense while never gripping, is maintained at a good level.

A cast of familiar players, including some good box-office names, does exceptionally good work, in fact it is the acting and direction as much, if not more than the story itself that makes this picture pleasing. Leah Baird gives a fine performance as the gold-digger and Wanda Hawley shows to advantage in the minor role of her pal. Herbert Rawlinson is up to his usual standard as the husband of the unfortunate woman who supplies the title. Katherine Mac Donald has never appeared to better advantage than in this role, and her performance of a scene where she takes just a little to much liquid refreshments will add to her reputation. John Miljan is excellent as the society husband, who is a cad acting with fine poise and finish a role of the Menjou type. It is by far the best thing he has done.

"The Unnamed Woman" should provide pleasing entertainment for fans of almost all classes except those who must have slam-bang action melodrama or hilarious farce comedy.

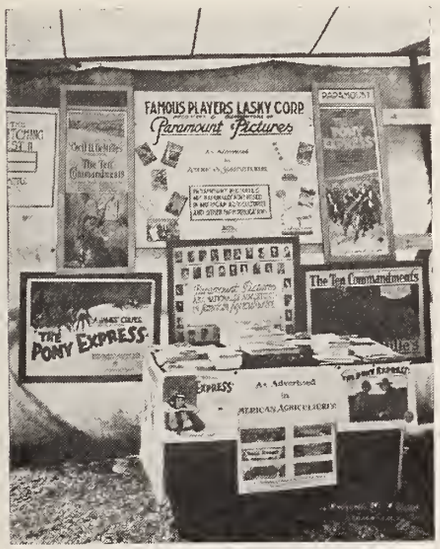
Syracuse Strand Gets Loan of Booth at State Fair for Ten Commandments

CLIFF LEWIS, publicity collector for the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., and Manager MacDowell, have been pulling another one.

They learned that the American Agriculturist, a farm journal, was to have an advertisers' exhibit tent at the State Fair. They knew that Paramount used the medium. And they were not forgetful that presently they would have The Ten Commandments to put over.



A Paramount Release

THE PARAMOUNT BOOTH

George Williams, Paramounteer for that district, had promised them the loan of number 752 chariot, used in chasing the Children of Israel into the Red Sea. They got him to get them in touch with the representatives of the farm journal, Ingalls and Kinne, and persuaded the latter that the chariot would make a fine ballyhoo for the exhibit.

Landed a Location

It did not take much argument to convince these men that an Egyptian chariot would at least be decorative in front of the tent, and permission was given them to park a float and distribute heralds. The heralds were distributed through the Paramount booth in the main display, as well as from the float; several thousand being given out.

Permission also was given to imprint the cards issued by the Agriculturist showing a map of the grounds with the tent plainly marked by an arrow from the race track enclosure. The original copy read: "Where the American Agriculturist tent is located." This was preceded by a "Follow the arrow," and followed by "See the Strand Theatre and Paramount Picture exhibits."

As the Paramount space gave most of the display to The Ten Commandments and The Pony Express, visitors to the tent were sold the idea that the Commandments was a big release. The float, which was parked outside the tent reached many more persons, and it was all done at a very small cost, if you do not add in the energy expended by Lewis and MacDowell in sewing up the deal. It took hustle to get the deal over in time, but it was put over for a row of standouts when the picture was shown a few days later, and the fair was written down as an asset and not as an excuse for a deficit, for the heralds also sold The Unholy Three, the current attraction, as well as the coming of the Commandments.

Trailed the Klan

Horning in on a circus parade is an old story. W. F. Brock, of the Strand Theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., trailed a Klan parade with a bally for Not So Long Ago.

A girl from one of the fashionable families was induced to ride in an old fashioned barouche directly back of the parade, and the blanketed horses advertised the play to more than 50,000 persons gathered to see the parade.

The girl, who looked the part, rode around town for several days, lunching at the hotels and touring the shops.

For Wild Horse Mesa, the second half of the same week, he used a mounted klansman in full regalia. No advertising showed as he came down the street, but the back of his robe was lettered for the Zane Grey story,

Aired Iron Horse With an Orchestra

Out in Milwaukee the Alhambra hit upon an idea for The Iron Horse that should prove useful to others who may wish to get radio advertising for their features.

In a 45 minute feature from WSOE the story of The Iron Horse was done to music, which lifted the curse and made a "production" out of an advertisement.

The announcer first told that an orchestra would play the Iron Horse March while he read the foreword. Then the band switched to Dixie while the opening of the story was told, and other selections, both orchestral and vocal were interpolated as the story progressed.

Various sound effects were employed, including the musketry rattle when the construction gangs were attacked, and finally the noise of a hammer on metal simulated the driving of the golden spike, with the band swinging into the Battle Hymn of the Republic.

Applause cards are numerous, and because it was something different from the usual bald advertisement, the radio dealers were persuaded to use their mailing lists to tell the fans what was coming.

Almost any musical director can frame up a program which can be carried out by a comparatively small band, and this dressing up will put a real punch in the air advertisement.

A Paramount Release

A TEN COMMANDMENTS CHARIOT AT THE SYRACUSE STATE FAIR

This is one of the exhibits which the Strand Theatre tied to the exhibit of the Paramount exhibit in the tent of the American Agriculturist at the New York State Fair. Quick work on the part of Manager MacDowell and Cliff Lewis got results.

Used a Local Cloudburst to Put Over Havoc

Used a Cloudburst to Tell of Picture

Taking advantage of a cloudburst which did considerable damage in the nearby town of Wenatchee, the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, hustled a cameraman out to the wreck to shoot a lot of stills, which were rushed through the developing room and presently posted in prominent locations along the business streets.

Of course the stress was upon the Havoc wrought by the storm, connecting with the present showing of that Fox picture at the Liberty, but most citizens were perfectly willing to be advertised to in order to get the first news of the catastrophe.

Brought Them to Havoc

It was quick work, and having seen the Havoc at Wenatchee, the majority came to see Havoc at the Liberty.

Urging housewives to avoid Havoc by buying ready-baked bread got 150,000 wrapper enclosures, and a business concern used "Avoid Havoc in your filing system" to sell their files and theatre tickets.

Army and Navy

When the battleship Arizona came into Seattle recently, the officers and men were invited to see As No Man Has Loved at the Coliseum, and they paraded to the house in a body. On another night the Marines from the Navy Yard came in parade, and the officers and men at Fort Lawton formed a third parade with the Legion, G. A. R., D. A. R. and the Boy Scouts helping along with mail campaigns.

For Drivers

One of the stunts of The Fool at Ottawa was a safety campaign in the shape of cards liberally sprinkled along the main roads with the copy: "The Fool takes chances. Slow down. See The Fool at the Regent. Now."

The signs were two feet square, on eight foot posts, white letters on red. It brought an unusually large automobile trade to the Regent.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

The show with Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q, Son of Zorro" was arranged to begin at 12 noon, 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10 o'clock during its one week engagement. This got in 6 shows on the day instead of 5 as usual, the performances with music at 2, 4, 8 and 10. The whole show took up 2 hours and 1 minute, of which the feature photoplay required 1 hour and 46 minutes. There was a Topical Review 7 minutes long and an atmospheric prologue running 8 minutes.

The orchestra opened each de luxe performance with a brief prelude lighted as follows: one dark eryth Mestrum flood from the dome on the orchestra and apron of the big stage. Foots and borders of large stage in blue; purple-spangled draw curtains closed across the small production stage and lighted by 4 arch spots of steel blue; amber foot lights on the small stage.

Following the brief prelude came the Topical Review which had as one of its chief scenes the attempts to raise the sunken S-51. There was a minute of silence and darkness during this and then taps was blown by a bugler.

The prologue consisted of a very elaborate Spanish garden set with a house and balcony to the right. Transparency backdrop was used showing a starlit sky and crescent moon. There was a vine covered wall running across the stage in front of the backdrop, giving the appearance of the garden scene in the feature picture. At opening three instrumentalists in Spanish costumes of the period were discovered, one being up-stage and the other two standing back by the big carriage gate. The violinist, up-stage, played "La Paloma," accompanied by the mandolinist and the guitarrist. Six members of the ballet corps then danced "Pearl of Iberia," after which "Lolita" was sung by an operatic baritone. At the chorus premiere danseuse, costumed as Mary Astor in the photoplay, appeared in the balcony of the Spanish house and the baritone sang the balance of the song to her. The lights for the opening number, "La Paloma," were amber, while the lighting for the second number, "The Pearl of Iberia" was steel blue. For "Lolita" the set was covered by straw floods from the booth while an amber spot from the projection room picked out the singer. The premiere danseuse was spotted by a white light.

Got Second Best on Unholy Three

With The Unholy Three for its first anniversary attraction, Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, wrote down the second best week in its year-old history. It's a good thing that it was not a third anniversary or the title might have crabbed it, but since it was the innocent first and not the unholy third, the smashing appeal of this unusual story got it over to the business it deserved.

Three weeks in advance a birthday cake was put into the lobby with an invitation to the public to come to the birthday party, and this cake was surrounded by autographed photographs of stars, and congratulatory messages from Marcus Loew and others. There was enough about the picture in this section to get over the idea that the feature matched the celebration.

A shoe store near the theatre was linked to an anniversary sale, with a display of stills, and a clothing store gave window space to oil paintings, but a distribution of 25,000 souvenir programs and heavy newspaper work did most of the selling outside the lobby.

Giggle Note

The banner billing at Loew's State Theatre, St. Louis, recently read: "Pretty Ladies in Natural Colors." Not in these days of rouge and lipstick!

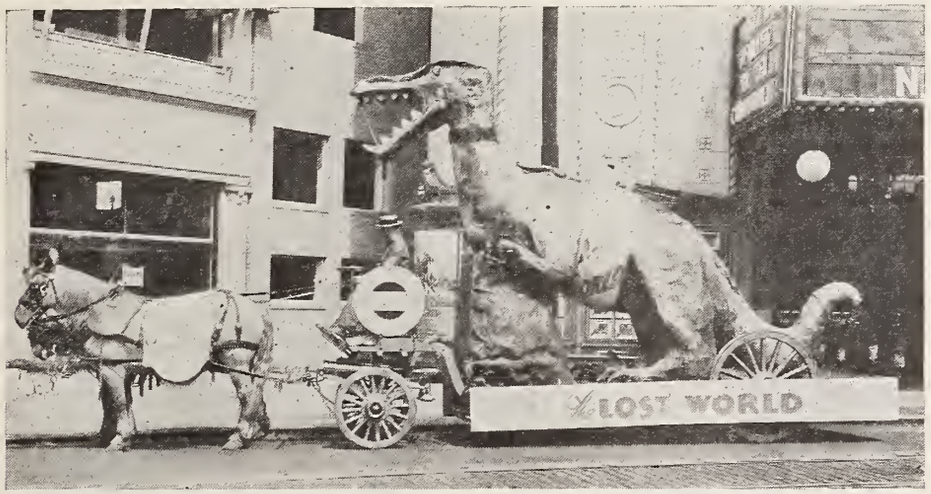
A DISPLAY OF EARLY IRON HORSES IN THE LIBERTY LOBBY, PITTSBURGH

Small models of the Rocket and other early models, including a miniature of the first train in this country, were used a week in advance of The Iron Horse in Rowland & Clark's Liberty Theatre. Huge buffalo heads and two cabinets of Indian curios supplemented this interesting display. Such exhibits are beyond the average house, but prints may be available.

Lost World Monster Blew Red Confetti "Fire"



A First National Release

THIS DINO WAS A REAL FIRE EATER

Rowland & Clark had this built to advertise The Lost World at the Liberty Theatre, Pittsburgh. It was fourteen feet long and a bellows was worked to blow red confetti from its mouth. This greatly multiplied the effect of the stunt.

A Don Q Outfit Did the County

Running on a published schedule, and sticking to the schedule, George T. Cruzen used a bus to put over Don Q. to all Niagara County at Lockport, N. Y.

The bus was of the "parlor" type, with seats for 34. The crew consisted of a band of 22 men, a ballyhoo lecturer, a poster, six bill passers and a utility man. Running on a fast schedule, the man would lecture on the beauty of the Palace Theatre and dilate on the merits of Don Q. Then the band would play again, and the outfit would move on.

Meanwhile the bill passers were busy, the poster was sniping his one sheets and the helper was getting window cards into all the stores.

The crew was back in Lockport at five o'clock, ready to give a wind-up concert in the business section.

The results showed the stunt to have been well worth while its considerable cost, since a handsome profit was netted.

Clever Handling to Sell Commandments

Macon, Ga., does not take kindly to week runs, but Montague Salmon made them like The Ten Commandments for that length of time, and did it with a very skillful campaign.

Appreciating the value of the picture, the posting service gave him stands for three weeks at a single week's rental, permitting him to display his 24-sheets in choice locations for twenty-one days. The city also permitted n extra large banner to be thrown across the street.

A special trailer was shown on a screen, the projection being from across the street. The trailer was cut into the middle of a short comedy which got more attention.

The American Express Company loaned a chariot and even made a special harness for the team, the chariot being the usual fore truck of one of its wagons, dressed in compo board. With a driver in costume, the chariot made considerable talk. A bannered truck worked the outlying districts.

One hundred letters were sent to ministers and others of influence, and considerable pulpit mention was gained while Mr. Salmon addressed the Lions Club and friends made similar talks to Kiwanis and the Exchange Club.

Mirrors were painted all over town and the lobby was dressed with cutouts and mounted paper, while the orchestra was augmented for the date.

The play made such an impression that one patron treated nearly a hundred orphans to the picture after he had seen it himself.

Seven Libraries— He Landed All

Rodney Bush landed 5,000 book markers on Rugged Waters when he showed the picture at the Galax Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. There are seven libraries in town, and he landed them all, a marker being put out in each volume issued.

For this lobby he had a lighthouse, and for a novelty he glazed the windows with scenes of the play. In the lantern were two baby spots trained on specially painted three sheets on either lobby wall.

He also used life preservers made by covering Ford tires with white cloth and then lettering, "S.S. Galax," with centre cards for the title.

Paged the Cops

Evidently working a political pull, Charles Finesilver, of the Roebling Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., got police co-operation on The Making of O'Malley.

The Clymer Street station is just across the street from the theatre, and the manager arranged to have the four o'clock rollcall of the outgoing platoon held in front of the theatre instead of the station house.

He added a ballyhoo man in police uniform, with a sign on his back. This man stood facing the platoon with his back to the watching crowd, and after the men were dismissed he paraded the nearby streets.

A Tall Beggar

Getting the smallest shetland pony he could get and having him ridden by the tallest man he could hire was C. T. Perrin's idea for Beggar on Horseback. When he rode the tiny pony across the stage at each showing the week before he got a big laugh. He wore a bathrobe and a silk hat that stretched his six feet by several inches. He carried a banner reading: "Beggar on Horseback. Next week. It's a scream."

DON'T TELL US TOM MIX ISN'T GETTING THE BIGHEAD

This cutout from the front of the Kings Theatre, St. Louis, proves it, doesn't it? Well, perhaps not, but it surely is a big head. This was built up from the 24-sheet on The Lucky Horseshoe. This is not all on the 24—you build up the hat.

Night Life in New York Had an Elevated Train

Stilted His Train For a Window Show

Skyline stunts naturally suggested themselves for use with Night Life in New York, but few managers have come across with as good a stunt as that worked by Ed. A. Zorn, of the Stratford Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y.

He not only made an exceptionally well handled scene, with what seems to be the Rivoli Theatre in the foreground, but he added an elevated road back of the first row of profiles and on this he ran a miniature train, which added greatly to the realism.

Got Best Window

The display was good enough to get into about the best show window in town, and it made so much talk that people felt that the picture must be as good as the display.

The photograph is somewhat dull, because the colors were made to suggest a night scene, but if you can follow these details you can get an exceptionally good display for any title relating to the big city.

THIS SKYLINE ON NIGHT LIFE IN NEW YORK HAD TRANS

Ed. A. Zorn, of the Stratford Theatre, Newburgh, N. Y., put a toy train on the elevated railroad shown in his window display, and multiplied by many times the attraction power of what otherwise would still have been a good display.

Sold Through Kiddies

Getting a new slant on Pretty Ladies, Warren Irvin sold this Metro-Goldwyn through child photographs at the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N. C. He arranged with a local photographer for the loan of about a dozen of his best child photographs and a large picture of a local kindergarten, with about 75 little girls.

This was placed in the lobby and labeled "Charlotte's future pretty ladies." In contrast there were four oil paintings of the picture. Many persons recognized their own youngsters or the children of some friend, and in the latter case hurried off to tell the mothers.

It drove in a lot of extra business on a title that in itself does not strongly appeal to women.

Anonymous Ads

A good stunt on "I'll Show You the Town" was worked in Omaha by the Sun Theatre. This was a two page co-op with pictures of the store fronts of the advertisers, but with all names carefuliy obliterated. The idea was carried in the streamer: "Ill Show You the Town—how well do you know it?" and the stunt was to name and locate the stores.

The pages were repeated in a few days with the names showing, for the benefit of those who did not take part in the contest.

Browning Repeats Real Estate Idea

Getting a real estate man to pack your theatre for you is coming along nicely, but to do that and then collect $60 for program advertising, as well, is doing even better.

That's Tod Browning, of the Olympia Thea- New Haven.

Recently he offered a lot in Florida as a prize in a contest. It went over so big that he persuaded a local realtor to name a new development "Paramount Park" and give him a lot. The real estate man did most of the advertising in the newspapers and went into the house program at regular rates, as well. And the park remains a permanent advertisement for Paramount, which is not to be laughed off.

The advantage to the realtor came from the fact that his development got a lot of free newspaper mention in connection with the contest that he could not have gotten with merely a real estate proposition.

The real estate stunt is a good one, but see your lawyer and avoid a lottery feature.

A Universal Release

A ENGLISH DISPLAY ON WINE FROM LIVERPOOL

This was planned by W. Peel-Smith, of the Trocadero, for the Universal picture, and the use of a real woman got them all staring, both at the girl and later at the picture. It helped to a record business. Photographed by the London Cinema.

Good in Texas

Pat McGee, of the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, stressed the historical value of North of 36, when he recently played this, and got a bulletin in each of the city schools, because this dealt with Texas history. It may be sold from the historical angle elsewhere, but it's worth taking a chance on. Ask for it, and if you get it, you've got it. Twenty banners and a seven-foot balloon helped to swell the receipts.

What Clever Agents Have Done With Book Cuts

Makes Big Appeal With a Stock Cut

Generally Ralph Ruffner goes across the page with his displays for the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., but for Never the Twain Shall Meet Ruff figured that the plan book cut gave him just what he wanted, so he took four down the page, putting the signature at the top, just above the title.

WITH A STOCK CUT

Ruff explains: "The first question on picking up the paper is 'What's at the Capitol?' It is instantly answered at the top of the ad, with further information for those who crave indoor sport." In other words, if you want to read more about the picture, you merely keep on, but most persons can be sold on the title and this typical cut. When you can get cut material such as this from the plan book, Ruff figures that the house artist can be better employed getting out lobby cards. It will be noted that in a reverse panel Ruff stresses the ticket books, which he calls script books. Ruff is too good a manager not to realize the advantage of getting out these books. He knows the patron will spend script more freely than he will actual money. He has to dig in his pocket only once instead of each time he comes to the box office. He feels that the money already has been spent, so the tickets do not cost him anything. Of course he knows better, but that is the sub-conscious impression, and even where you make a discount on the sale, you take in more money per person than you would on straight box office sales of individual tickets.

Plan Book Cut Is Framed Up Nicely

The Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D. C., makes good use of a plan book cut on The Street of Forgotten Men, the white space coming from the cut rather than from the layout. The title is put over in a clean cut reverse, the lettering being large enough to come through, but the sale is made on the top line and at the bottom where a reference to Brenon's production of Peter Pan also is worked in. The checkered rule is relied upon to separate the cut from the adjoining spaces. This does not work as well as would an extra column of white, but with space costing a lot of money, a four column break is too expensive, and the cut carries enough white to help out. Even the light shading at the left counts as white against the dark of the circle. With the usual form of lettering, this cut might fill the space too completely. The black circle is what makes this a good layout. The sales line directly below the cut might be improved upon. It is too general. It is one of those sweeping statements that doesn't mean anything in particular. "A tale of the cripple factory in a Bowery By-way" probably would have gained more interest because it was a reference to a specific fact, and "Bowery" means the underworld in the mind of the average man, though it has been years since the Bowery was what it used to be. It is a common trait to fill in with a sounding phrase, but unless a phrase really means something, it will not sell, and "the Strangest Romance of the Underworld ever told" doesn't mean much.

Characteristic Pose Is the Best Seller

There is nothing to the top cut in the display of the Century Theatre, Baltimore, on Lightnin'. That is excess baggage, and the space might better have been used to stretch out the material in the box directly to the left, but the cut below is not an illustration,

An Old Timer

Bert Jordan, of the Majestic Theatre, Memphis, got the loan of a 1904 Reo automobile for Not So Long Ago, and set it in the lobby with a pretty girl at the wheel. The girl got more attention than the car, but the car was her excuse.

Another girl in an old-time carriage was an excellent perambulator.

Small Size Cuts Let in Much Talk

Apparently Loew's theatres in Washington, D. C., have changed their ad proportion with the opening of the winter season, and have gone in for depth where last season they worked for width. The old linear border is retained, but commencing with the Greater Movie season the "Now on—let's go" slogan has been used top and bottom and between the two spaces. For The Unholy Three a greater proportion of talk than usual is employed. In one sense this is fortunate, for with fewer words an eight point might have been used, and an eight would have smothered the rather small cuts.

How the Other Man Advertised Your Features

USING SMALL CUTS

With the six point used the cuts seem larger, and can dominate the space without undue fighting. Much talk was used because the picture is so unusual that it requires more explanation to put it over. This is not a picture you can dismiss with "A wonderful romance of the underworld" or something like that. To get all the possible money you have to dig in and show them that it really is wonderful, and the best way to do this is with the explanation of the unique partnership. Most displays carrying so much copy would be apt to defeat the selling end, but we think that The Unholy Three is so different from the usual run that it justifies the extra words; not only justifies but demands them. By general rules this space is too crowded, but this is one of the exceptions which go to prove the rule.

Rotating Shows Used in Chicago

Balaban and Katz are circuiting their Chicago shows, sending the artists along with the film to the suburban houses, which explains this whirling device from the Uptown Theatre, Chicago. The bill used with The Unholy Three at the downtown opening is sent along and advertised as a complete program. Where the show has already been seen in the loop, an excess of sales talk is not required for the neighborhood houses, but even at that we think a one or two line boost for the Three would have helped to remind the reader that this was a downtown knockout. The type display is better than the usual Chicago effort for in addition to the title there is a lot of detail that is clearly readable because it is type-set and not hand lettered. The house is given almost a downtown space appropriation of a 70x2, but the attraction well deserves it.

A Metro-Goldwyn Release

WHIRLING THE THREE

Makes Art Design Without an Artist

Here is an ingenious adaptation of a stock cut to an art design with the printer pinch hitting for the missing artist. The display was arranged by C. Davis, of the Broadway Theatre, Reidsville, N. C., who modestly opines that he has done pretty well, considering. We'll second the motion. We think he has done very well. That central cut is a Paramount stock cut on Paramount Week. It has been cropped to let in a set of five panels, giving the five titles used on the week, and the work has been done in a small town newspaper shop. It probably took a lot of work to get the angled panels to stay put, but even the lock-up of the corners is reasonably well done, and a drawn design could have made no more of a flash. He puts a lot in a three nines and does it effectively. A lot of the big houses did not do as well.

HOME MADE ART WORK

Notches a Cut to Let in a Comedy

Using a plan book cut on The Coast of Folly, the Princess Theatre, Toledo, notches a cut to let in the comedy title. That four column cut extends across the space, but not all of it is essential and by trimming part and using rule work, a panel is created where the comedy and the prices are displayed without detracting from the effect and without intruding on the essential selling talk. At the top the circular portrait cut has been flattened a little to save space without the least detriment. The Princess usually does well with plan book material, but we think this handling is better than usual. It shows what can be done with material ready to hand if brains and a hacksaw are used. The selling lines in a condensed boldface are a little cramped, but this does not materially affect the value of the space as a whole.

Gave a Car

Because the local paper already had announced an auto race for boys, Clinton V. Sholl, of the Empire Theatre, San Antonio, had only to plan to ride in on this for The Lucky Devil.

He donated a small car, which not only gave him a lot of newspaper mention, but the display of the toy in a window was a further advertisement.

You can't buy three weeks' newspaper publicity for the price of a pedal auto.

Associated Exhibitors

INTRODUCE ME. (6,710 feet). Star, Douglas McLean. A comedy of the first rank. A good drawer. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Appeal, ninety per cent. Farmers and small town class, town of 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

F. B. O.

BOB CUSTER PICTURES. Play this star's pictures as they are very good. Prints always good. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

HIGH AND HANDSOME. (6 reels). Star, Lefty Flynn. A sizzling, peppy police story that is a good one; but one thing we would trade our suspenders to know is—WHY the change to "Mau-r-i-c-e?" Think we have enough dudes in the movies without our old friend "Lefty" pulling this dude name on us. My folks are wondering who in the Dickens "M-a-u-r-i-c-e" Flynn is. They think he's Lefty's brother. As to tone, appeal and Sunday—yes. No for special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

IF MARRIAGE FAILS? (6,000 feet). Star, Clive Brook. Here's a picture that I should have shelved. A big town theatre could have put it over, but it lost me money. My bunch wouldn't come in. Tone not so good. Appeal here poor. No, for Sunday or special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

LADY ROBINHOOD. (5,580 feet). Star, Evelyn Brent. GOOD!—and that's what all her pictures are. Her pictures always have good plot and moral. Print good. Good tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Sunday, yes. Special, no. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SPIRIT OF THE U. S. A. (6,312 feet). Star, Johnnie Walker. This is a good picture all the way through. It pleased my audience and made some of them think of what others had to put up with. Fine tone. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

STEPPING LIVELY. (5,317 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Very good action picture. Will please western fans. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TEARING THROUGH. Star, Richard Talmadge. Good picture. This boy is coming right along. Get good stories Richard and good direction and you will meet a popular demand. We are for you and want to see you head the list of action pictures. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

TEXAS BEARCAT. Star, Bob Custer. A very good western. Custer is making lots of new friends here. Tone, O. K. Good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (6,913 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. The last of the Thomsons, so far, and I will say the best of his pictures, too. We all like Thomson and his horse, Silver King, who makes a great hit with the kids. We are glad to hear that he is making more pictures. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 500. Admission 10-25. Jack Stanton, Movies Theatre (200 seats), Onamia, Minnesota.

Boys, these tips are contributed by us, exhibitors like yourselves, to help you pick the pictures that are most likely to please your patrons.

"It is my utmost desire to help my fellow man"—that's our motto. We play fair by you and by the pictures we have run.

You can help us in return for our willingly given tips. Send reports on the pictures you have used—especially late releases. "OUR GANG."

THUNDERING HOOFS. (6,913 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Good program picture. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farmers and merchants, town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (6,913 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. Fine picture. Silver King is sure some horse. Have played all Thomsons so far. Broke midweek box office records. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Farm class, town of 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

WHITE FANG. (5,600 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). A fair Jack London story with not much action until the last reel. I also have seen better dog actors, but this one is not bad. Anybody that likes snow pictures, why this one will do. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WILD BULL'S LAIR. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. One of the best westerns I have ever had in my house. The work of Silver King, Fred's wonderful white horse, was superb. Good tone, fine appeal. Sunday or special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, manager, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

First National

AGE OF DESIRE. (5,174 feet). Star cast, A fine picture. Good stars, good acting and a dandy story. All together makes a fine show. Don't be afraid to talk it up. Good clean picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, LaBelle, Missouri.

CHICKIE. (7,000 feet). Star cast. A picture that was well liked, with the exception of Dorothy Mackaill, she does not go here. Everyone wonders why she stays in pictures. Had a good number that had read the story from the papers that do not come regularly; quite a number of new patrons. Tone, O. K. Appeal, 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw college type, town 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

CIRCUS DAYS. (6,000 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. One of the best pictures we have had. Young and old enjoyed it. Tone, fine. No pictures should be shown on Sunday. Special, yes. Fine appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-35. F. L. Wadsworth, Jr., Airdome Theatre (300 seats), Tuskegee, Alabama.

ENTICEMENT. (6,234 feet). Star, Mary Astor. A good program picture that will please the average moviegoer; however, no special, and not a big one. Tone O. K. Appeal, 80 per cent. No as special. Draw industrial class, town of 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

IN EVERY WOMAN'S LIFE. (4,258 feet). Star cast. Very good picture from every angle. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. High appeal. All classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

KNOCKOUT. Star, Milton Sills. A good picture that everyone liked. Sills is getting to be a good drawing card here. Tone, O. K. Appeal, 95 per cent. Yes, as special. Draw from industrial community 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

LEARNING TO LOVE. (6,089 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. A mighty nice little picture of the comedy type. Gave excellent satisfaction. The star, however, no longer draws any business. Too few releases and not enough quality to those she has released in recent years. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Hardly suitable for special. High appeal. Better classes, city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star cast. Got razzed good here. Biggest disappointment in years. Killed by too much footage. Every scene dragged out too long. On seven reels would be good novelty. Tone O. K. Only fair appeal. Yes, for Sunday, possibly a special. Draw family and student class, town 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

NECESSARY EVIL. (8,307 feet). Stars, Ben Lyons, Viola Dana. A very good picture that pleased the entire audience. However, just the type liked in a college town—might not go so well in some of the smaller towns. Tone O. K. Appeal here 95 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw college type, town 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

SALLY. (8,636 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. Gentlemen, here is a picture. I have never seen a picture which gave such satisfaction as this one did. Everybody told me that it was great. It is a dandy picture. The color scenes are really beautiful. Tone O. K. Fine appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

SELF MADE FAILURE. (8 reels). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. Good picture with good moral. Audience seemed well pleased. Enough fun to hold interest. Tone, good. Special, yes. Fine appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-35. F. L. Wadsworth Jr., Airdome Theatre (300 seats), Tuskegee, Alabama.

SHORE LEAVE. (6,856 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. A very fine picture and one that should please everyone that sees it. Not the biggest thing he ever did, but one that you can recommend to all classes of patronage and meet them as they come out the door. Clean entertainment for everyone. Good tone. Appeal a hundred per cent. Sunday and special yes. Draw from industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

SHORE LEAVE. (6,856 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Very entertainig program picture. Not a big one. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

SINGLE WIVES. (7,308 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Good picture, a little above program schedule. Rental too high for this small town, had to raise admission to realize a small profit. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farm and merchant class, widely scattered town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SONG OF LOVE. (8 reels). Star, Norma Talmadge. Very good production. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw farm and merchant class, widely scattered, town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Ellte Theatre, Placerville, California.

SOUL FIRE. (8,260 feet). Star, Richard Barthelmess. Not his best by any means. Not the type of picture that is liked by the regular show goers of today. Did not draw at all. Had very good matinee, but poor night. Tone O. K. Appeal 80 per cent. Sunday yes, special no. Draw college type, town 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

TROUBLE. (4,800 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. Played this last fall, but it's still available. A very good picture which pleased all who saw it. Coogan very popular here, and draws a little extra business. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, 98 per cent. Farmers' town of 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

Between Ourselves

A get-together place where we can talk things over

"Is 'Ten Commandments' going over in the small town? My people want it, and I don't know what to do—I'm wondering if I can put it across."

That's what an exhibitor asked me on the phone. Well, he hadn't had time to catch up on this dependable tip department, so he phoned to get the dope.

That's one of the things I'm here for. To help the exhibitor.

And darned glad to do it—for you—by phone, wire or letter.

—VAN.

Fox

DESERT OUTLAW. Star, Buck Jones. A good fast moving western. If your patrons like westerns book this one. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, La Belle, Missouri.

DESERT OUTLAW. Star, Buck Jones. Fair, but not Buck's best by a long shot. My quarrel is with the story which is considerably on the dime novel, artificial order. Queer thing about this picture—I couldn't find it reviewed in either the Moving Picture World or Motion Picture News. In this picture Buck escapes from the sheriff but is handcuffed. According to the press book and one sheets he grinds the link of the cuffs apart by riding the bumpers of a freight and holding it against the car wheel—in the picture he uses a treadle grindstone. Tone fair. Appeal, cheap western. No for Sunday or special. Draw rural and village class, town 400. Admission 15-30. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (240 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

FOLLY OF VANITY. Star cast. A fair program picture. Neptune and his Court was fine, and the scenery beautiful, but that was only one third of the picture. Good tone. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HONOR AMONG MEN. Star, Sheldon Lewis. From the Richard Harding Davis story "The King's Jackal." A dandy good program picture. Fine acting in this picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre (250 seats), LaBelle, Missouri.

LIGHTNIN'. (8,050 feet). Star, Jay Hunt. A very good picture—that didn't draw as I expected. Taken from the John Golden stage play. Print new. Good tone. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

MAN WHO CAME BACK. (8,272 feet). Star, George Walsh. A splendid picture and well acted but it did not take here, lost money on it as Fox called it a super-special and charged accordingly. Good tone, appeal 70 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special, but not super-special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

ROUGH AND READY. Star, William Farnum. Consider absolutely unfit for showing: poor story; very bad photography—dark, blurry. Better pay for it and leave it in the can. Print good condition. Appeal?—they walked out. Draw all classes big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SHE WOLVES. Star cast. Another one of Fox's specials—good picture, but can't see where they get "Painted Lady." If they'd change paper and name (title), exhibitors would clean up with it. Draw town and country class, town 2,000. Admission 10-25, 10-35. G. A. Peterson, Cozy and Folly Theatres (502-485 seats), Hollis, Oklahoma.

TEETH. (6,190 feet). Star, Tom Mix. All of Mix's pictures go over here. Didn't get to see it but reports were good. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TIMBER WOLF. (4,809 feet). Star, Buck Jones. An extra good western. One of the best this star has made. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per-cent. All classes town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

TRAIL RIDER (4,752 feet). Star, Buck Jones. This is a hummer. Patrons said it was as good as a Zane Grey story. Tone yes. Appeal 75 per cent. Special no, Sunday yes. Draw from small town, 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma.

TROUBLES OF A BRIDE. (4,915 feet). Star cast. Can't understand where they got the title. Fair picture. I have lost money on every Fox special. Ran Fox week and lost heavily. Worst week I have had. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

TROUBLES OF A BRIDE. (4,915 feet). This is one of Fox's specials (?) and thank the Lord for me the last one. It makes one feel like a hi-jacker to run "lemons" like this one here. Tone yes. Appeal zero. Special or Sunday no. Draw from small town. 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma.

TROUBLES OF A BRIDE. (4,915 feet). Star cast. The title of this picture will fool you. It is an action picture from start to finish. Bill it as one and you will make some money. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Good appeal. All classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore Maryland.

WARRENS OF VIRGINIA. (6,000 feet). Star cast. Was substituted at last minute for Mix picture. Didn't hear any kicks, so it must have gotten by. Very good picture of Civil War days. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

Metro-Goldwyn

DENIAL. Star, Claire Windsor. Not much picture. Did not draw for me and a lot of people left before it was over. A program picture of the cheapest kind. All parts well played, but not a good story. Tone O. K. Appeal poor. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw college class, town 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi

MARRIED FLIRTS. (6,705 feet). Star, Mae Busch. Good picture for a certain kind of patronage, but not for the farmer boy or laboring class. Metro Goldwyn should make a few more popular type pictures suitable for Saturday shows. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET. (8 reels). Star cast. Broke all records on Sunday opening and held up very well, an excellently produced picture that will satisfy the most critical. Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET. (8 reels). Star, Anita Stewart. From the novel of the same name. Was supposed to be a big special, as I paid a special price for it. Nothing but a deep love story. Fair tone, poor appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

ONE NIGHT IN ROME. (8,885 feet). Star, Laurette Taylor. A very fine dramatic picture that pleased the few who came to see it. A relief from the ordinary run of dramas. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. High appeal. Better classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

REJECTED WOMAN. (7,761 feet). Star cast. A very good program feature: some very nice scenery. Print in good shape. No for Saturday. Good tone. Appeal 88 per cent. Sunday or special no. Draw all classes, town 680. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats), Kalona, Iowa.

SOCIAL CODE. (5 reels). Star, Viola Dana. Good for a one day showing. Ran it with short subject and novelty and it pleased. Print good. Good tone, not much appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

SO THIS IS MARRIAGE. (6,300 feet). Star, Eleanor Boardman: Fine. A very few came out but they highly complimented it. A good picture for any house. Eleanor Boardman becoming very popular here. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

SPORTING VENUS. (5,958 feet). Star, Mae Busch. A high class production but does not have a general appeal. Suitable for class trade, as most all the Metro product. Small towns haven't enough of the class of patrons to handle their product very successful. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, seventy percent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

UNHOLY THREE. (6,948 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. One of the best crook melodramas of this or any other year. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

UNSEEING EYES. (8,300 feet). Star cast. This proved to be a fine drawing card for me. Played one night only to good crowd. Everyone liked it. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class town of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

WILD ORANGES. (7 reels). Star, Frank Mayo. A good picture; it pleased all who saw it. Saturday, no. Tone none. Appeal 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 680. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats). Kalona, Iowa.

YOLANDA. (10,125 feet). Star, Marion Davies. A pretentious production of the costume variety. Rather well done but not so satisfactory to the audience, nor did it register much of a draw at the box office. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Fair appeal. Better classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Paramount

AIR MAIL. (6,976 feet). Star cast includes Lois Wilson. A wonderful town picture with great exploitation opportunities. I played this to a good house and, judging by comments, it pleased. Tone O. K. Fine appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw from town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. Star cast. The most unusual picture that I ever ran. I doubt whether it will please. I sure got plenty of complaints at the door. I'd be advised to stay clear. Paid too much money for it. Another picture that the public don't care to see. Tone O. K. Poor appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw town and country class, town 1,210. Admission usual 10-25. C. R. Self, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. Star cast. We just ran "Beggar on Horseback" and it is about the worst I have ever run and have been in business eighteen years. The audience clapped when the first show was over and ninety per cent. of them left (no matter how late they came in). I had advertised Greater Movie Season; they informed me that if this was a sample of the "Greater Movies" they understood why we were doing so much advertising to get business. James Cruze ought to be ashamed of himself for turning out such a picture and I'd think Paramount had a lot of crust to sell this as a special. My customers all went out after the first show to dig up some wine or "White Mule" to see if they could find out what it was all about. Thomas Berta, Rialto Amusement Company, Rock Springs, Wyoming.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE. (5,955 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A good society light comedy with Gloria wearing great clothes and doing some nice acting. One slightly risque scene, but it's a comic one. Fair tone, good appeal. No for Sunday, perhaps as special. Draw farming class and town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). Star cast. Fine program. Extra good appeal. Better play this picture. Tone good. Sunday, special, no. Appeal, 98 per cent. Farm class town of 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

CHANGING HUSBANDS. (6,799 feet). Star, Ray Griffith. A splendid picture that drew big crowds for me the two nights I ran it. You can't go wrong on this picture. Fair tone, good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, manager, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CODE OF THE WEST. (6,777 feet). Star, Owen Moore. A typical Zane Grey western, which means that it is one of the best western stories of the season. In fact, all Zane's stories are excellent. They always please here. Tone O. K. Fine appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town of 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

CONFIDENCE MAN. (6,500 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. A picture that pleased my good audiences for two nights. I think it one of the best Meighan pictures. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, manager, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

CROWDED HOUR. (6,508 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. First half of picture uninteresting but last part good war scenes. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw mixed classes, town 725. Regular admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

EAST OF SUEZ.. (6,821 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Absolutely the biggest and best picture of Pola Negri I have ever played. My people, before, seemed to shun Negri pictures; but they liked this one. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 10-25. Herbert Tapp, manager, Hippodrome Theatre (440 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

HOMEWARD BOUND. (7,000 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Played this last winter and gave excellent satisfaction. A good sea story in which Lila Lee gives good support. Tom is very popular here. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Sunday yes, special no. Draw farming and town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

LANE'S LADY LEAD

Helen Foster is "it" in Lupino Lane's "Maid in Morocco," for Educational release.

IN THE NAME OF LOVE. (5,377 feet). Star, Ricardo Cortez. Good feature, pleased majority. Good tone. Special no. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission twenty-five cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,933 feet). Star, Richard Dix. Good. Tone, good. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

LUCKY DEVIL. (5,935 feet). Star, Richard Dix. This picture went over the best yet of the newest forty; we had a little more business than usual. I know if they will get after it they will pack the house. The racing scenes will bring plenty of cheers from the house. Tone O. K. Great appeal. Sunday yes, special no. Draw town and country type, town 1,210. Admission 10-25. C. R. Seff, New Radio Theatre (250 seats), Correctionville, Iowa.

MADAME SANS GENE. (9,904 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Our Gloria fighting for the glory of France in the character of the devil-may-care Madame Sans Gene, the washerwoman of the great Napoleon when he was a poor artillery lieutenant, who, when he became Conqueror, elevated her to the rank of the Duchess of Dantzig This photoplay takes rank among our most ambitious film productions and portrays the Paris of the Reign of Terror. The photography is authentic in every detail as permission was given to reproduce the royal palace and historic objects used in the story. Gloria acts the role of the care-free laundress and well mannered Duchess with great eclat. Draw from country, and town of 3,000. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

MANHANDLED. (6,998 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Good Swanson picture, but no extra business. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Average audience appeal. Mixed class town of 1,728. Admission 10-30. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre (290 seats), Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

MANICURE GIRL. (5,989 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Good picture; not a feature but worth seeing. Good tone, fair appeal. Sunday yes. Draw farm and merchant class, widely scattered, town 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

NE'ER DO WELL. (7,414 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Good beyond all doubt but somehow didn't draw much. Tone, good. Poor appeal. Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. Griffith surely is a comedian. He is so different from the other comedians that he is becoming a great favorite everywhere. This picture is a scream from start to finish. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. This is a dandy comedy-drama. Pleased our audiences almost a hundred per cent, Good tone. Sunday yes, special no. Draw mixed classes, town 725. Admission, regular, 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

NIGHT LIFE IN NEW YORK. (6,508 feet). Star cast. Good. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS. (6,216 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Real class to this one and also has a moral which goes home. Tone, good. Average appeal. Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

RUGGED WATERS. (6,015 feet). Star, Lois Wilson. Only fair. Tone, good. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

SAINTED DEVIL. (8,633 feet). Star, Rudolph Valentino. A classy picture; his Spanish dance is great; one thing our audience is disgusted with, though, and that is gum-sucking movie kisses. Price too high on this as, for me, on all Paramount pictures played. Tone—too much drinking. Fair appeal. Sunday no. Special, yes, in small towns. Draw mixed classes, town 725. Admission, regular, 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

SHADOWS OF PARIS. (6,549 feet). Star, Pola Negri. Very good picture of the underworld type. Does very well for a change but didn't draw anything extra. Tone, good. Average appeal. Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (325 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

SHOCK PUNCH. (6,151 feet). Star, Richard Dix. This boy, Dix, is surely a comer. He is becoming quite a favorite here. This picture will delight his fans. It is a clean-cut little comedy-drama. The scenes on the top of the building are very thrilling. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from town of 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connecticut.

STREET OF FORGOTTEN MEN. (6,365 feet). Star cast. Good. Tone, good. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

THUNDERING HERD. (7,187 feet). Star cast includes Jack Holt. This is a very good picture of the olden day. Noah Beery does some very good acting. The buffalo stampede is great. Book this picture and make some money. Had a full house for two showings. Tone O. K. Appeal 95 per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 200. Admission 10-35. R. N. Rounds, Scenic Theatre (180 seats), Kadoka, South Dakota.

TRIUMPH. (8,297 feet). Star, Leatrice Joy. Didn't get to see this, but reports say it's excellent. Business awful on account of church services. Rod La Rocque, Leatrice Joy, Raymond Hatton and ZaSu Pitts said to be especially good. Eight reels. Tone, good. Sunday and special, yes. Appeal 95 per cent. Farmers' town of 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

VALLEY OF SILENT MEN. (6,491 feet). Star, Alma Rubens. Good picture of Curwood story. Interest well sustained. Tone, good. Appeal, good. Small town class town of 1,500. Admission 10-25. T. W. Cannon, Majestic Theatre (315 seats), Greenfield, Tennessee.

WAGES OF VIRTUE. (7,063 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A mighty fine Swanson picture and drew a nice crowd that thoroughly enjoyed it. Tone, good. Sunday, no, special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class, town of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan Indiana.

WELCOME HOME. (5,949 feet). Star cast. Too slow moving for the regular patrons. Some liked it very much, others walked out. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, fifty per cent. All classes, town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Krieghbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. A good western but rather draggy. Billie Dove forgot that she was in the desert and walked through the sand as if she were parading in Peacock Alley. Tone O.K. Appeal, 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

WILD HORSE MESA. (7,164 feet). Star, Jack Holt. By Zane Grey, and a one hundred per cent showman's picture. Jack Holt getting better right along, and my town certainly likes him. Good tone, appeal great. Yes for Sunday and special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

WILD, WILD SUSAN. (5,774 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Good comedy drama that went over big, and the box office showed it. Tone O.K. Appeal, 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

WORLDLY GOOD. (6,085 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. A good program picture. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, sixty-five per cent. Farmers and small town class, town of 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Reel Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

Pathe

BLACK CYCLONE. (5,038 feet). Star, Rex (horse). A great novelty picture, much better than "King of Wild Horses," and don't forget that was a very good picture. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Good appeal. Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

BLACK CYCLONE. (5,038 feet). Star, Rex, the horse. A wonderful picture which drew very big, the second night larger than the first. Advertised it with our personal guarantee, and it sure pleased. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Appeal, ninety-nine per cent. All classes, town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

FRESHMAN. (6,883 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Take every feature Harold Lloyd has made, put them together, count all the laughs, then multiply by ten and that will give you an idea of how many laughs there are in "The Freshman." Positively his best picture. Tone, one hundred per cent. Sunday, positively. Appeal, 200 per cent. Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

KING OF WILD HORSES. (5 reels). Star, Rex (horse). Wonderful acting by horse. Ran on a Saturday to good crowd and they liked it. Was a little afraid it wouldn't go over, but it certainly did. Every house should play this one. R. L. Nowell, Idlchour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

Principal

MINE WITH THE IRON DOOR. All star cast. A good western picture, and Harold Bell Wright's name will always get business. Not a big special, however, but will please. Tone O.K. Appeal, 90 per cent. Draw industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

BEYOND THE ROCKS. Star, Harry Carey. This is a good Carey subject, and where his other pictures have gone over, this one will also. A little above the average Carey. No

You can't run a car without gas and we can't give you dependable tips without co-operation.

A lot of whole-hearted, generous exhibitors are helping this service idea: the question is—as special. Appeal, 80 per cent. Draw industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

ARE YOU SENDING TIPS?

CHARLEY'S AUNT. (7,245 feet). Star, Syd Chaplin. Absolutely the best moving picture of modern times. A complete knockout with any audience. The man or woman does not live who will not be entertained by this one. It is a joy to be on door when playing this one. Tell 'em it's the best on earth. It will prove it. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

LET WOMEN ALONE. Star, Pat O'Malley. Not a bad picture but failed to draw. Suppose it was the title that didn't appeal. A good title means a lot to a picture. People do a lot of shopping for pictures, and you hear so many say that sounds good and in they come. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, fifty per cent. General class, town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

LOVE'S WHIRLPOOL. (6,028 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. This picture pleased a fine audience and I had many complimentary remarks on it. Good entertainment and a good cast. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

ROARING RAILS. (5,753 feet). Star, Harry Carey. This picture pleased my audience, which was greatly increased by the name of Carey. They sure like his westerns here. Tone, good. Sunday and special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

SILENT SANDERSON. (4,641 feet). Star, Harry Carey. Good western, but Carey is slipping here. No money at the box office from him. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, seventy per cent. All classes town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

TRY AND GET IT. Star cast. Nothing to it, not even good comedy. Stay away from it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, not a special. Fair appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

WANDERING HUSBANDS. (6 reels). Star, James Kirkwood. A very good picture of six reels and pleased a good crowd the two nights I ran it. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class town of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

United Artists

GOLD RUSH. (8,535 feet). Star, Charlie Chaplin. A right good show and holds interest all of the scant 9,000 feet. Ran six days in a 4,000 town. Rained most of the time and failed to break even. Tone O.K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw family and student class. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Universal

BUSTIN' THROUGH. Star, Jack Hoxie. Keep up the good work, Jack. While not as good as "White Outlaw," nevertheless it is a good one, so keep 'em coming, Jack. Yes for tone and appeal. No as special or for Sunday. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD. (7,268 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. When the old box office has that jaded, rundown feeling; when the landlord stands around wondering just when he can close you out to collect the rent; when life is just one darned thing after another—and then along comes a picture, and you get a hunch to jar loose and exploit it to the very limit—AND THEN the crowds fill up the joint to S. R. O. and then next day your patrons hunt you up and tell you it is the best show they ever saw, and the old box office peps up and you slip a few dollars in the bank—"Oh, boy! Ain't it a Grand and Glorious Feeling?" Tone, Sunday, special, yes. Appeal, 100 per cent. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre, Osage, Oklahoma.

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD. (7,268 feet). Star, Reginald Denny. Hard to say enough good things for this show. My patrons ate it up. Business doubled second day over first. Tone O.K. Sunday, yes, special, no. Draw merchant class, town 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (650 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

FAMILY SECRET. (5,076 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. Baby Peggy in comedies did not take here. Baby Peggy in "Darling of New York" and the "Family Secret" pleased my crowd. Good tone. No as special. Draw mill and farming classes, town of 1,000. Admission twenty-five cents. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

FOOL'S HIGHWAY. (6,800 feet). Star cast. No good. Nuf sed. Tone, nothing. Appeal here 20 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphi Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

HURRICANE KID. Star, Hoot Gibson. A good western Saturday picture. I did not think it was very good but it pleased our patrons, so I should worry. Fair tone. Appeal, 80 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw town and country class, town 1,800. Admission 15-25. O. G. Odell, Odelphia Theatre (400 seats), Hughesville, Pennsylvania.

MERRY-GO-ROUND. (9,175 feet). Star, Mary Philbin, heading star cast. This is a good love story, but picture most too long for the small town; lost money. Good tone. No as special. Draw all types, town 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

ROARING ADVENTURE. Star, Jack Hoxie. As Mae Tinee says, "There is hope for every would-be screen star." Minus personality and acting propensities, Jack sails through this one, and it is terrible. Tone O.K. Appeal for children. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

SADDLE HAWK. (4,419 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A slashing western that drew excellent business and sent them away satisfied, which is about all anyone could ask of any picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. High appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

SECRETS OF THE NIGHT. (6,138 feet). Star, James Kirkwood. A good program picture to be run as such. Appeal 75 per cent. No as special. Draw from industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

SIEGE. (6,426 feet). Stars, Virginia Valli, Eugene O'Brien. While this will not please the roughnecks it will register with the rest of your audience a hundred per cent. plus! The acting of Mary Alden is simply wonderful. Appeal a hundred per cent. Yes as to tone, Sunday use and as special. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

SPOOK RANCH. Star, Hoot Gibson. Did not like this myself—but the crowd ate it up, they liked it and made it a point to tell me so—so I should worry! Yes for town appeal and Sunday; as special, no. Draw small town class, town 300. Admission 10-25. Roy E. Cline, Osage Theatre (200 seats), Osage, Oklahoma.

STORM DAUGHTER. (5,302 feet). Star, Priscilla Dean. Better than average program picture. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

TAMING THE WEST. (5,304 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Hoot builds a picture to suit the farmer and laboring class, therefore, a good Saturday show. All of his westerns are good for this date. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. General class town of 3,600. Admission 10-20. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

TEASER. .(6,300 feet). Star, Laura LaPlante. A mighty good little picture with a good moral tone which will please both old and young. Good tone. Yes as to appeal and for Sunday. No as special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

TORNADO. (6,576 feet). Star, House Peters. Fine production. Storm scenes good. Couldn't get them out, but ones that came enjoyed it. It's worth playing. Tone, okay. Sunday, okay. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

UNIVERSAL COMPLETE SERVICE CONTRACT PICTURES. This Complete Service Contract is a money maker. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

Vitagraph

EMPTY SADDLE. Star, Pete Morrison. Not anything to this picture at all. Too slow and draggy, with no action at all. Lay off exhibition of this picture. Tone and appeal, none. No for Sunday or special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

GREATER THAN MARRIAGE. This is an excellent picture but a poor drawing card. The stars do not mean anything at the box office; however, it certainly will please all who see it, as it is better than many so-called specials. Tone O.K. Appeal, 90 per cent., not a special. Draw industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

RANGER OF THE BIG PINES. Star, Kenneth Harlan. A good picture for Saturday. The name will put it over. Sounds good, doesn't it? Picture just ordinary but will draw on date mentioned. There is much in a name. It is fifty per cent. often times, as is the case here. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no, appeal, eighty per cent. William A. Clark, Sr., Castle Theatre (400 seats), Havana, Illinois.

Do You Turn?

Have you got the habit of turning to "Little Pictures With the Big Punch" when you want to see what "Our Gang" says about the short subject they're playing?

If you haven't, acquire it quick!

This week the short subjects are reporting in "Straight From the Shoulder, Jr." which is incorporated in the other department named above to give you everything about the short pictures that pack the punch, all in one easy-to-get-at location.

Warner Brothers

BROADWAY BUTTERFLY. (7,705 feet). Star cast. A very clever picture of the flapper and Follies type. Willard Lewis fine as the "drunk." Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. All classes town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

HOW BAXTER BUTTED IN. Star, Matt Moore. A simple straight comedy that is good entertainment. Will not cause much talk but will please most everyone. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. Better classes city of 14,000. Admisison 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

KISS ME AGAIN. (6,722 feet). Stars, Blue, Prevost. Very clever comedy-drama that failed to pull on account of title. Pleased most all who did come. The direction makes it good. Tone O.K. Appeal, good. Yes for Sunday and special (with regard to above). Draw family and student class, town 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

LIGHTHOUSE BY THE SEA. Star, Rin-Tin-Tin (dog). They liked it immensely. Hardly as good as some others this great dog has been seen in, but a very good picture nevertheless. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. High appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro Arkansas.

MAN WITHOUT A CONSCIENCE. Got no place here. Failed to pull and heard no comments. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw student and family class, town 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

WARNER PICTURES. The Warner Lineup I have run this past year have been terrible so far. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

Independents

BANDIT TAMER. (State Right) Star, Franklyn Farnum. Boys, this is a knockout comedy western-drama, and when you run this lay off your comedy, you won't need it. Print new. Tone good. Very good appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

BLOOD BOND. (State Right). Star, Leo Maloney. Usual "blood-and-thunder" western but okay at this house, which caters much to that kind of an audience. Tone, okay. Sunday and special, no. Fair appeal. All classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-25. E. W. Collins, Liberty Theatre (500 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

CRACKERJACK. (C. C. Burr). Star, Johnny Hines. Not as good as his others; failed to get the laughs. Tone O.K. Fair appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw family and student class, town 4,000. Admission 10-25. R. J. Relf, Star Theatre (600 seats), Decorah, Iowa.

DOWN BY THE RIO GRANDE. (Standard). Star, William Fairbanks. Couldn't see anything to this one. Had little action and not much of that. Might be all right if you can buy it right. Tone, fair. Sunday and special, no. Fair appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

RIDIN' MAD. (State Right). Star, Yakima Canutt. This is a good western but it does not live up to the title. Play it and it will please your action fans. Print good. Tone and appeal good. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

SAND BLIND. (Arrow). Star, Ben Wilson. I think that he makes good action westerns and is also a pretty good actor. Did not have much of a cast, but Wilson is good. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Good appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admisison 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

SUPER SPEED. (Rayart). Star, Reed Howes. Here is a boy that Richard Talmadge will have to look out for. If he is as good in his other pictures as he is in this one, watch him step. Good enough for anybody that likes stunts. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admission 15-15.. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua, Ohio.

TOMBOY. (Chadwick). Star, Herbert Rawlinson. This isn't a bad comedy drama. Hasn't got much to it, but what there is of acting, Rawlinson does well. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. Good appeal. Working class city of 14,000. Admisison 10-15. G. M. Bertling, Favorite Theatre (168 seats), Piqua. Ohio.

Equipment—Presentations—Prologues—Music

Edited by Colby Harriman

Short Subject Presentations

THE short subject is taking its place in the sun. After a hectic existence, after years of experimentation in trying to find itself, the short subject is recognized as one of the most important units of any well-balanced program. Today we find an increasing interest in the method of presenting short subjects, not to relegate them to spots that are of unimportance, but to define their position in such a manner as to make them proportionately equal in the program to the feature picture. In some sections producers have been interested in the matter of arranging a prologue or epilogue with the short subject as the core. The short subject is ideal when one attempts to synchronize it with stage action. It has within itself a certain completeness and compactness which a feature should have to lend itself to prolonging. Scenic subjects have been successfully interpolated with orchestral features, and used as the background for dance numbers; prologues have been advantageously adopted both with music and song. The cartoons offer innumerable opportunities. The dramatic and comedy subjects are also unlimited. Producers will find that they have struck a responsive chord when they link a prologue, presentation or epilogue to a short subject. We are glad indeed that Moving Picture World offers us the opportunity to devise some novelties which may be used with various short subjects, and these will run in a series which we trust will prove beneficial to the men back stage.

BERNIE BECOMES FAVORITE

WHEN Ben Bernie and his orchestra first supplanted the big symphony orchestra at the Rialto Theatre some months ago, Hugo Riesenfeld's new plan of entertainment was viewed with skeptical eyes by many who considered the idea inappropriate for motion picture theatres. How could a jazz orchestra play accompaniment to dramatic pictures, they asked, and what would become of that huge audience of symphonic music lovers? Bernie himself understood the problem and now, after one of the most phenomenally successful seasons in the Rialto's history, points out that the orchestra is playing accompaniment for the pictures; the music lovers are still coming and in addition to it all a brand new patronage has developed.

If you have visited the Rialto recently, you know the interest in Bernie's inimitable performance. If you are a vaudeville fan, Ben gives you vaudeville. If you are a syncopation fan, Ben gives you syncopation. If you like classical music, Ben gives it to you in his own modern way. If you like orchestral accompaniment to your pictures, Ben serves it. Nothing has been lost in the change at the Rialto. On the other hand much has been added through the peppy personality of Bernie and the orchestra of young musician-entertainers. Every performance is a continuous wave of hilarity and unique variety.

CAPITOL INAUGURATES SCHOOL

MAJOR EDWARD BOWES announces the organization of the Capitol Theatre Ballet School. The school will be sponsored and maintained by the theatre, with Chester Hale, ballet master, as director. The active operation of the Capitol Ballet School will begin on October 19th. According to present plans, classes will be conducted daily from 9.00 to 10.30 in the morning on the Mezzanine of the theatre.

Mr. Hale will interview applicants at the stage door of the theatre each morning from 10 to 11 o'clock. No professional experience is necessary; applicants must, however, display a distinct talent for dancing. The only other requirement is that the applicant be 16 years or over.

The school will be conducted by Mr. Hale along the orthodox principles of the classical ballet school, and those dancers who prove to be of outstanding talent will be admitted to the Capitol Ballet Corps, and given an opportunity to appear in the ballets at the Capitol.

JOSEPH TURIN SCORES IN PROLOGUE

JOSEPH TURIN, tenor, has long been identified with presentation houses as one of the leading vocal artists. He is just completing a tour of the Fabian houses in New Jersey, where he has been featured in the prologue to the "Ten Commandments." Mr. Turin has been singing Kurt Schindler's arrangement of "Eli Eli," and his success in this old Hebrew song is history now. He has a voice of purity, rich quality and gratifying smoothness, and aside from the power of his voice, a personality which reminds one of Caruso, in fact, there is a remarkable resemblance which Turin bears to the greatest tenor the world has ever known. He is of small stature and stocky in build. His complexion is a deep olive, his eyes are large and black, and his smile is an outstanding feature. Seldom have we heard an artist who has proved such a sure-fire favorite with motion picture audiences.

FINSTON TO BOSTON

NATHANIEL W. FINSTON, who has been musical director at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, Ill., has been selected to conduct the large grand orchestra in the new Metropolitan Theatre in Boston. Mr. Finston has always been identified with the orchestras in the largest film theatres in the United States, having opened the Capitol Theatre, New York City. There will be fifty-five members of the Symphony Orchestra at the Metropolitan, and two leading organists have been signed to appear at the console of one of the largest organs ever installed in a motion picture theatre.

PERSONALITIES

CLARK ROBINSON, well-known art director and designer, returned to New York last week aboard the S. S. George Washington. Mr. Robinson has been in Europe, where he has been studying theatrical conditions. JOHN WENGER designed some beautiful settings for the "Bridge of Distances," Morosco Theatre, New York, and his previous experience in presentation theatres was reflected in the artistic lighting and colorful designs which characterized the settings. Mr. Wenger is to give a series of talks on Scenic Art in the Morosco Theatre in the near future. JOHN MURRY ANDERSON has been signed by Famous Players Theatre Department to supervise the various presentations and productions in the new Metropolitan Theatre, Boston.

Effective Sets Achieved with Fabrics

Moving Picture World Presentation Suggestions Devised by Colby Harriman

THE suggestions this week concern no particular subject but are offered as ideas to the producer who desires novel treatments with fabric stage settings. The six suggestions given herein can be achieved with one set of a certain color. For instance, a four-piece cyc or a split drop with two legs. Other fabrics can be used in the combination. These settings form a simple but effective background for song and dance numbers of a specialty nature and are particularly valuable in limited areas.

1. A drop tied on the bottom about six feet each side of center, the bottom brought together forming a taut line. A pedestal or urn placed at center. Through the V-shaped opening a gold or silver background highlighted with color can be used as a backing.

2. Four legs are used to achieve this effect; two legs hung together at center, one leg right and left leaving an opening between the center and end sections of about eight feet. The center sections should be fastened in the middle. Snap hooks should be sewn on the sides of the legs forming the opening. This should be adjusted at a place about 45 inches from the floor. The two snap hooks fastened forming the curve at the bottom of the opening which can be strengthened with a small strip placed horizontally just below the opening and attached to a standard which is screwed to the floor. Blue sky drop can be used as a backing.

5. Two fabrics hung on the battan and brought to the floor at extreme angles as shown in this sketch. A stairway placed back of the fabric at left in a manner to give the effect that the approach is on an oblique, the thickness piece shown in the drawing can be achieved by folding the fabric back and attaching it on a cyc arm to a set in the rear of the main battan.

6. Fabrics caught in scalloped folds which can be done with pinning or caught back with lash line. Platform placed in center upon which metallic cloth can be draped in folds.

Better Projection Pays

Brother Umphrey Is A Man of His Word

George L. Umphrey, writing from Leadville, Colorado, takes the projectionists of this country and Canada to task a bit sharply, as follows:

Dear Brother Richardson: It has been in my mind for some time to write to you. In fact I've started enough letters during the past five years to float a raft. The theatre is shut down for the summer now, though, so I came up here to visit my sister and rest and I'm going through with this letter or bust something. It will rest me to have it off my mind, for it will be doing my plain duty by you, and by the department which I have read regularly for ten or twelve years.

In the first place let me confess that for a long time I thought the department was the bunk, and that you were a hot air merchant. Like many another foolish man, I ensneered and lost few opportunities of tossing a bit of mud at you and your work. It so happened that I was in Austin, Texas, when you made that big trip. I was invited to be present as the guest of one of the Austin men, and it was only the prospect of a good "feed" and of seeing and hearing exactly how big a bull artist you were that induced me to attend.

Won Over

Well, I heard you talk that night, and I've been a "Richardson man" ever since. You certainly did tell us the plain truth, regardless of whether the audience liked it or not, and I made up my mind right then and there that the man who would stand up in front of a bunch of men and tell them the hard, unpleasant TRUTH, as you did that night, was certainly no coward, and that the man who could handle matters as you did on that occasion most emphatically was neither a "bull artist" nor a hot air merchant. And the thing that hurt was that we all knew the things you said WERE the truth, but the men were good sports and took it standing up, and shook hands with you afterward —which spoke well for us all anyhow.

The Reason

And now here is the reason for this, my first letter. Men, the projection department of the Moving Picture World and its editor, Brother Richardson, has boosted for projection, for better pay and for better conditions for the men engaged in it for more years than most of you have been in the business. It has roasted us many times, but my brothers, I believe that you all, deep down in your hearts, know and realize that every one of those roastings was richly deserved. Richardson has also roasted unions, BUT also he has done a very great deal FOR the unions. You might just as well deny the fact that water runs down hill as to deny that, but few of you know even a tenth of what he really has done to help the I. A. in years gone by.

At least on one occasion when the I. A. had failed, and the American Federation of Labor, with all its power, had utterly failed, the International President and the Executive Board called on Brother Richardson, and it was he who went down to Washington for the I. A. and, single handed and alone, secured the nulification of the famous "Work or Fight" order insofar as it applied to motion picture projection.

Don't Believe It?

You don't believe it? "Huh," as Richardson says, ask International President Canavan. He knows. And that order, which had actually been issued and made to include projection, but for Richardson, would have compelled every man of military age to quit projection and enter the army or take up some approved form of labor. I happen to know the facts in that case and it was Richardson and he ALONE who secured the nulification of the order.

The trouble with Brother Richardson is that he knows he knows his game too darned well, and don't seem to in the least mind tramping on sore corns, which usually are, in one way or another, corns of just pure laziness.

The Gall of Him

"Rich" demands—yes, confound him, he has the gall to DEMAND, instead of bowing, scraping and saying "please"—of us that we get a large sized hustle on and make good. He demands that we get down to brass tacks and really study the technical side of motion picture projection, and I SAY THAT HE IS RIGHT IN THAT! He says we owe the best there is in us to the motion picture industry, and I AGREE WITH HIM IN THAT. He says we owe the best there is in us to the exhibitor, and I AGREE WITH HIM IN THAT, and do so notwithstanding the fact that we have to contend with theatre managers and exhibitors galore who have no manner of appreciation of or for high grade, efficient work in the projection room.

But as to that latter, whose fault is it after all? Is it not cold fact that it is almost if not entirely our own fault that the manager and the exhibitor have no appreciation of us or our work? Have we, as a whole, made any sort of consistent, persistant effort to "sell" projection to the Manager or exhibitor? Have we not instead, both by our insistence upon the "machine operator" and by our lack of respect for or appreciation of projection as anything more than "running a machine," ourselves helped to bring motion picture projection into something very nearly approaching contempt?

Have we, as a whole, ever made the slightest effort to educate the manager and exhibitor up to the point where they will have some understanding of the many problems involved in efficient, high grade motion picture projection?

What Have YOU Done?

Have YOU, brother, taken pains to impress upon the theatre manager or exhibitor for whom you work the fact that YOU under-

Bluebook School Answers 363—367

Note: Brother Kuester, Brooklyn, New York, had answers in for the last list, but they arrived too late for use. I am sorry, because his answers to some of the questons were very excellent—so excellent, in fact, that I shall publish one of them, probably next week.

This set of answers will be short. That is they will mostly be confined to one answer to each question only. I have been away attending the fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineer.

Question No. 363—Practical question submitted by Edwin S. Schofield, Houston, Tex.: "Current eight cents per K. W. Screen surface same in both cases. Efficiency of lens system same in both cases. Screen in use ten hours per day. What will be the daily cost of illumination of two screen surfaces with equal brilliancy, one 12 ft. by 16 ft. and the other 14 ft. 3 in. by 19 ft.?

The following sent in creditable answers: Glenn G. Wallace, Muskegon, Michigan; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; W. C. Budge, Springfield Gardens, Long Island; S. F. Cooley, Manchester, New Hampshire; Richard Keuster, Brooklyn, New York; Charles C. Colby, Santa Fe, New Mexico; Ray Gnaegy, Paducah, Kentucky; G. L. Doe, Chicago, Ill.; and Thoreau, Clark and Richards. Vancouver.

After careful examination of them all I think Brother Wallace gave the best answer though Budge reasoned along much the same lines, and Gnaegy and Thoreau, Clark and Richards also gave very excellent answers. Wallace says:

Brother Schofield does not give us much information to work from, but examining Table 10, page 246 of Bluebook, we find that with his 12 x 16 foot screen he has an area 192 square feet in his screen surface and by increasing it to a 14.3 x 19 foot he would have an area of 270.75 square feet—an area increase of 78.75 sq. ft.

But basing the brilliancy of 10 foot picture as 100 per cent. we find that his present screen surface has a brilliancy equal to only 39 per cent. of a ten foot picture, amperage and optical system remaining the same. And the 14 ft. 3 in. x 19 feet screen his boss contemplates installing will have only 27 per cent. of the brilliancy of the 10 foot picture, a difference of 12 per cent. between the screen he now has and the one he wishes to install.

Thus it is easily seen that the cost of illuminating the 14 ft. 3 in. x 19 ft. screen will mean increasing the amperage 12 per cent., and as he is paying 8 cents per K. W. now, the cost of illuminating the larger screen will be just as if he was paying 18 cents plus 12 per cent. or a fraction over 9 cents per K. W. at the present time. He can easily ascertain his present consumption of K. W. by reading his meters, and thus give the boss the desired information by doing a little figuring.

Unfortunately time will not permit me to check over these figures as to their correctness. However, that is merely a detail. The answer conveys the idea. It sets forth a method, and that is what we are after. I think, though, that I should also publish friend Gnaegy's answer. Here it is:

As Brother Schofield failed to give amount of illumination desired, or type of light source, we will assume that fifty amperes through a straight arc will serve, therefore let 50 amperes at 110 volts through a rheostat be the illuminant, and since 110 V X 50 A equals 5,500 Watts, and 5,500 watts divided by 1,000 equals 5½ K. W. used per hour to illuminate a 12 x 16 foot screen surface, it follows that in ten hours this will mean a total of 5.5 x 10 equals 55 K. W. hours of electric energy consumed, and 55 K. W. x .08 cost per K. W. hour, tells us that the 12 x 16 screen costs $4.40 per day for illumination.

Referring to table 10, page 246 of the Bluebook (this is a Bluebook school remember) we find that a screen 14 ft. 3 in. x 19 ft. requires 19 per cent. more light than a surface 12 ft. x 16 ft. in order to have equal brilliancy, other things being equal.

By simple arithmetic we find that 17 per cent of $4.40 is 74.8 cents, or 75 cents in round numbers, hence since $4.40 plus $0.75 equals $5.15, that seems to me to be the answer. It requires 8½ more amperes of current, and costs 75 cents per day additional. Of course in this I am disregarding the possible fact that the crater of larger area might not actually function quite as efficiently, and merely accepting the question 'as is.'

Again, I say, that I have NOT checked over the figures. It is a matter of quick work to get this in the mails in time—I am still at the summer home, where it is cold, but anyhow quiet, and I am able to work without being continually interrupted.

Question No. 364—Practical question submitted by Messrs. Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia: "Using General Electric fifty ampere mercury arc rectifier, 110 volt terminals of an Edison 110 volt—220 volt three-wire system, Motion Picture projectors grounded to a water pipe. Two arcs are connected in parallel. While one arc is being used, carbons of the other separated, but the switch in a trouble lamp connected between either of the carbons to the projector will light. Is anything wrong? If so, what? If the lighting of the trouble lamp is not evidence of anything wrong, then why does it light?"

(Not very clearly worded, but I think what is meant is that when one arc is burning and the carbons of the other separated, if the trouble lamp terminals be touched to the projector frame and to either carbon of the working lamp, it, the trouble lamp, will light. —Ed.)

Doe says:

I am not very familiar with mercury arc rectifiers, but it seems to me that the lighting of the trouble lamp (always assuming that the editor's version of the question is the right one) would mean a ground, but that the ground might be in either one of the lamps. I am not certain as to whether or no a sccondary current from a rectifier would be able to "jump" the rectifier and return to the generator through the neutral ground, but I think not, because of the fact that only what may be termed half an alternation is taken from either side by the reetifier—or at least that is the way I understand the matter. (I am not certain about that point myself.—Editor).

However, what I would do is this: If the trouble lamp lighted under the conditions named, I would disconnect the ground wire of both projectors and test their lamps separately. By this means I would, of course, discover any grounds which might exist in either lamp. When any faults discovered had been remedied, and the projector circuits tested out clear, I would reconnect the ground wires, and if the trouble lamp did not now light, I would of course, conclude that that was that. If it did light well I would agitate my scalp with my finger nails, and get busy finding out for myself the why and wherefores of it, which same I do not at this time know.

I do not find any answer from Brothers Thoreau and Clark, but in searching I did find a reply from a Vancouver projectionist by the name of Richards, though no name appears on the paper. However, Brothers Thoreau and Clark, in a note accompanying their replies to questions 365 to 372 mentioned the fact that Brother Richards enclosed a set of answers with theirs, and that hereafter it would be Thoreau, Clark and Richards. Brother Richards' answer clears matters up. He sets forth the fact that the rectifier reactance is auto-transformer type, a fact which had slipped my memory, though under other conditions I would have taken time to hunt the matter up. He says: "The lighting of the trouble lamp under this condition would not necessarily show that anything was wrong. It may be due to a perfectly normal condition, because of the fact that rectifier reactions are built on the autotransformer principle, under which both the primary and secondary currents flow along the same wires.

This means that there is actual metallic contact, or connection between the supply system and the negative carbons of the lamps, and the projector frames being both grounded, there must necessarily be a connection between them through the ground.

As a general proposition the ground resistance is great enough to prevent the flow of sufficient current to light the trouble lamp, but in case the neutral is grounded to the same water system as are the projectors, the thing might happen. Brother Richards then proceeds at considerable length, involving a drawing, to explain the several complications, but I think the matter is made sufficiently clear as it is and, as I said, time presses and the clock hands go round relentlessly. He winds up with: "And now for the questions, in their order: No. 1—No, there is not necessarily anything wrong. No. 2—There might really be a ground. If not, then nothing. No. 3—It lights (assuming that there is no fault in the insulation) because the lamp filament bridges the lamp insulation, shorts out the rectifier tube and makes a connection through the ground to the supply wires."

I am not certain but that Messrs. Thoreau and Clark joined in this answer. In fact I think they did. You will find the thing illustrated in figure 187, page 523 of the Bluebook. Also in figure 196, page 543.

Question No. 365—What is the purpose of fuses?

Thoreau, Clark and Richards say:

The fuse is the principle protective device employed in electric light and power work. In its most simple form it consists of a piece of wire of a certin alloy designed to melt (fuse) at a comparatively low temperature. It is connected into the circuit so that all current flowing in that circuit must pass through it.

We know that in overcoming the resistance of conductors, electric current generates heat, and that this heat is proportional to the square of the current flowing, so that if we double the amperage we quadruple the heating effect.

While normally only lights and power apparatus consuming current not in excess of the rated capacity of the circuit conductors are connected thereto, still excess of current over and above rated capacity may be caused by accident in any one of several ways. There may be a ground or a short circuit which, if allowed to persist, might seriously overheat the conductors, or even seriously injure the apparatus attached thereto and it is to prevent this possibility that fuses are installed. They act as an automatic cutout, so that when current in excess of the capacity of the circuit flows, they are almost instantly fused (melted) by the heat generated in them, and thus all current flow is automatically stopped until the trouble is remedied, and excess flow of current is thus prevented.

Question No. 366—Explain figure 19, page 107 of the Bluebook, in detail, explaining just what happens when one of the fuses "lets go," and why it happens.

Gneagy replies as follows:

In figure 19 we see a set of elementary fuses. The circuit wires have been cut, and their terminals attached to fuse block terminals A A A A. These terminals have been mounted on base B, which may consist of any one of the various fireproof, insulating materials suitable for such a purpose. Between these terminals two lengths of "fuse wire" are placed, clamped under suitable binding screws, so that they complete the circuit, and all current flowing through the circuit must flow through these fuse wires.

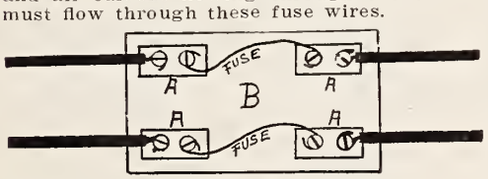

Figure 19.

The fuse wires are of an alloy which melts at a relatively low temperature as compared to copper. Usually it is an alloy of lead and tin. Such wires have a very high temperature co-efficient, which means that the temperature of the wire rises very rapidly when they are overloaded with current.

Should overloading occur by reason of rise of voltage, short circuit, ground or other cause, the fuse wires will, as soon as their normal capacity is exceeded, heat rapidly, and as their fusing point is relatively very low, they will melt, and thus automatically stop all current flow in the circuit long before the wires or apparatus can be injured through excess current.

Question No. 367—Will fuses carry more than their rated capacity?

Hanover replies thus:

Yes. The National Board of Fire Underwriters permits, or requires (I am not sure which) fuses to have a rating of only about 80 per cent. of their actual carrying capacity. This means that fuses will ordinarially carry 20 per cent. in excess of their marked capacity.

However, this depends somewhat upon age and conditions. Fuse wire will oxidize to a certain extent with time; also if confined, as in a cartridge fuse, where heat cannot radiate, a fuse wire of given size will carry less current indefinitely than it would if in the open air; also the heat of the surrounding atmosphere has something to do with the matter.

stand the characteristics of screen surfaces? Have YOU, who vociferously complain that the management won't provide necessary equipment, ever made any persistent, sustained effort to show and prove to the management that lack of proper projection equipment or repairs to equipment involves actual box office money loss and to prove it to them? As a matter of fact, ARE YOU WELL ENOUGH ACQUAINTED WITH YOUR PROFESSION, AS A PROFESSION, TO BE ABLE TO PROVE IT TO THEM?

Think it over, Brothers. I stand with Richardson because Richardson is absolutely right in his contentions, and he is right for the simple reason that he has made a study of it over a period covering many years.

Gentlemen, Brother Richardson was projecting motion pictures before a lot of you who sneer at him and his work would have been able to tell a motion picture projector from a corn sheller. He has labored long, hard and HONORABLY for you and for me. Don't you really think it is about time you laid down your hammer and stopped being a knocker? A knocker is, as you doubtless know, said to have a corkscrew soul and a water-soaked brain.

Outside the I. A. itself, Brother Richardson and the Moving Picture World are the two best friends we have got, or probably ever will have. I'm telling you that, and I've been through the mill in projection ever since 1899, making my living at it all but seven months of that time.

You're Elected!

Well, Brother Umphrey, if I ever feel in need of a champion, or of some one to defend me, I certainly will elect you, right off the bat.

When men say they are "Richardson men," what they really mean is that they believe in the things I advocate in this department, and in my books on projection. In other words they believe in progressiveness.

The opposition resents progressiveness, and some of them resent it very bitterly. One reason for this is that progress in the sense it is here used means WORK, and from their viewpoint entirely unnecessary work. Others, who are the more bitterly opposed, either know or fear that they could not keep up with the procession if it once really started to move forward.

But both kinds have the idea firmly fixed in their minds that if that d——d Richardson would just shut up, or die or something they could continue to dubb along, receiving the same money they now get, or maybe some small advance forced by the union, without any bother whatsoever. They feel absolutely NO pride in accomplishment. It is cold blooded FACT that their only interest is in getting the largest possible amount of money for the very least possible amount of work. They feel absolutely no loyalty to or pride in their profession. In fact they ridicule it being called a profession.

More Ammunition

I am well aware that this line of conversation will make no especial hit with men of that sort, but until such time as they wake up, or are forced out of the business, I am not in the slightest degree interested in what they think or don't think.

As a matter of fact, they are gradually eliminating themselves. The process is slow, because the advancement of exhibitors and theatre managers in the art of real showmanship is slow, but it has started with both the exhibitor, managers and projectionists, and will gather speed with time.

Many Interesting Papers Read at Meeting of Motion Picture Engineers

By F. H. RICHARDSON

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers held its Fall meeting at the beautiful Lakewood Farm Inn at Roscoe, N. Y., on the Binghamton turnpike about 125 miles northwest of New York City, on October 5, 6, 7, and 8.

The general idea of holding sessions at a country hotel is that while there will be plenty of good healthful amusement for the idle moments, there will not be the distractions which the great city offers to keep members from attending the business sessions of the Society.

For some reason which the writer is unable to fathom the attendance at this meeting was not up to the average, though the meeting was fairly generous in attendance and the attendance was composed for the most part of men who not only took a great interest in the proceedings but who also were capable of and did take part in the discussion of the many excellent papers that were presented.

Large Companies Should be Represented

I want to take this opportunity to point out to the large companies connected with the motion picture industry both in the manufacturing and the producing end of things, the mistake they make—I might say the vital mistake—in not having their organization fully represented. I would, with all the earnestness at my command, direct their attention to the fact that one of the greatest if not indeed the greatest benefit derived through the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is the meeting together—the bringing into personal contact—of the men engaged in the various phases of the motion picture work particularly in the engineering departments. If for instance men like Marcus Loew, Carl Laemmle and William Fox could and would attend just one meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers I venture the assertion that at no future meeting of the Society would their organization fail of adequate representation; and by "adequate representation" I mean representation by some of the best men at their command. These men could not fail to see the enormous benefit which would accrue to their own organizations through the interchange of ideas brought about through personal contact with the men of other organizations.

Society Dose Valuable Work

It was particularly noticeable that at least two or three of the large organizations which have heretofore been represented were either not represented at all at this meeting or only what we might term partially so by men who came and remained but a single day.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers has reached a stage where it is no longer necessary to present arguments justifying its existence. The enormous amount of work it has already done in correcting abuses, in improving methods and in standardization and other things, is a thousand times more than justification for its continued existence and its continued existence and usefulness will in large measure depend upon the use made of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers by the component parts of the industry itself particularly in the matter of adequate representation at its meetings.

The papers presented at this meeting were without exception of absorbing interest and great value. First there was "Washing of Motion Picture Film" by Kenneth Hickman. Dr. Hickman who confesses to being a native of London, England, made one of the best extempore addresses I believe the Society has ever listened to. He brought out some very surprising things relating to the washing of the hypo from films and showed, by slides, how a means had been perfected for actually measuring the speed of washing and the completeness of washing as the process of washing proceeded.

S. E. Shappard and S. S. Sweet presented a paper "Effects of Scratches on Strength of Motion Picture Film" which was well received and elicited considerable discussion.

I almost forgot to say that the president's address was a really masterly effort. President Jones presented it as the valedictory of his very highly successful administration during the past two years.

"The Importance of Village Theatres" was the title of a paper presented by the writer. This paper pointed out the value of the motion picture when well presented in villages which form the centre of farming communities, and proposed what was in effect the subsidizing of the village motion picture theatre with public moneys in order to insure a high-class entertainment.

J. H. McNabb presented a paper entitled "A New Camera for News Screen Cinematographers." This camera is automatic in its action and requires no tripod when using anything less than a three inch E. F. lens.

A very interesting paper was presented by L. C. Porter, Past President, entitled "A New Incandescent Spot Light" in which it is proposed to use a 100 ampere mazda lamp. Calm your nerves, however, for the 100 amperes are only 10.6 volts.

Educational Value of Pictures

A paper of exceptional interest was "The Questionable Educational Value of Motion Pictures" by A. W. Abrams of the New York State Department of Education. This paper provoked an almost two hour discussion but finally simmered down to the conclusion that the right procedure in visual education is the use of the still picture supplemented by motion pictures.

Earl J. Dennison presented a remarkably valuable paper entitled "Importance of Proper Splicing." The interest lay particularly in the large number of enormously magnified photographs of projector sprockets over which films having splices of various kinds were passing. Mr. Dennison is to be complimented for the excellent work he has done in producing the photographs. Mr. Dennison is with the Famous Players Lasky Corporation.

Clark on Theatre Management

Another paper of literally absorbing interest was read by Manager Clark (Unfortunately I failed to note Mr. Clark's initials), dealing with theatre management—particularly as to the various elements which go to make up a show with "pulling power." Mr. Clark stressed the necessity for diversity on the program and declared that a six or seven reel feature was much more to be desired than the longer ones. He asserted that almost invariably the eight and nine reelers could be shortened to seven reels with large benefit to the photoplay—in which conclusion I think we must all heartily agree. "Long on footage but short on ideas," was one highly pertinent remark made by Manager Clark.

Mr. Clark's paper served to emphasize the desirability of having at least one theatre manager prepare a paper for each meeting of the society, and it seems to the writer that the director and the producer might well be represented in the papers program as well. Certainly it could not but be beneficial to listen to the problems of them both, as THEY see them.

And so I could go on through a list of many other equally valuable papers every one of which was followed by more or less enlightening discussion and I might say that in all these meetings the discussion which follows is of as much value as the paper itself.

Several members brought their wives along or their wives came along to watch them, I don't know which. Anyway several of the ladies were present and enjoyed themselves horseback riding, bowling, etc. On Wednesday evening there was a dinner or banquet or whatever you want to call it, at which all members and the ladies were present and a generally good time enjoyed.

Officers Elected

The election of officers for the coming year resulted in:

Willard Cook of New York City, president; M. W. Palmer, Famous Players Lasky Corporation, Long Island City, vice-president; J. A. Summers, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J., secretary; W. C. Hubbard of the Cooper Hewitt Co., New York City, treasurer; R. S. Peck, Director of the Canadian Motion Picture Bureau, Ottawa, Ontario, and J. H. Theiss with the Dupont Company, Board of Governors.

Aside from the lack of adequate representation by a few of the larger companies, the meeting was in every way a success. The papers were very valuable and a lecture by Herbert E. Ives of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, New York City, on the transmission of pictures over telephone wires which was profusely illustrated even to the reproduction of the sound of the transmission as recorded on a phonograph record, was in itself of sufficient interest to have justified a visit to Roscoe even though there were nothing else to be gained by the trip.

The place of meeting in the spring is left to the decision of the members who will select the city by ballot after several names have been submitted by the Board of Governors.

A Two Reel Comedy

He was a book agent.

He came in on his feet and went out on his ear.

He was so unlucky that black cats trembled as he slithered by.

He had been stone broke so long that moss was gathering on the stone.

He met a million dollar girl, and was invited to invite her and nine other girls to dinner, and his wealth was fifty cents.

Just look over this one. It is full of gags and originality. It has the earmarks of a riot. These Graves comedies are getting better all the time, and they started good.

IMPORTANT ABOUT THE MERRY WIDOW

FOR YOUR INFORMATION

When we offered you "The Merry Widow" we told you certain things.

First we said: "Here is a great title."

We had for sale what is unquestionably one of the most famous titles in the world.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer knew it.

You knew it.

It's got a theatrical history that's studded with diamonds.

Entered as second class matter June 17, 1906, at the Post Office at New York, N. Y., under the act of March 3, 1879. Printed weekly. $3 a year.

We took that valuable stage property and made a picture.

"The Merry Widow" has been playing Broadway for nine weeks now at $2 top.

And it is important that you know the following.

Much as we praised it, much as we promised you about it, we even underestimated the production.

It's positively one of the greatest possibilities for real money-making you ever laid eyes on.

We tested it at Gloria Gould's Embassy Theatre.

From the very first the business mounted and it never quit.

They talked about it.

The romance of it, the charm of Mae Murray and the dashing love-making of John Gilbert caught on like fire.

Standing room only.

The talk of New York, and growing all the time by word-of-mouth advertising!

Get wise to what "The Merry Widow" can do for you.

We know that you know it's a great picture.

But it is important that you realize what a once-in-a-lifetime showman opportunity you've got.

A production that's a credit to the industry. And a credit to your theatre —and cash!

Metro- Goldwyn-Mayer has been giving you one hit after another.

And now comes "The Merry Widow."

The rest is up to you.

A Glorious Contribution to a Grea

FRANCES MARION'S career is an unbroken record of amazing screen successes. This remarkable woman has more sure-fire box office productions to her credit than any scenario writer in the industry. Her name to a picture is an assurance of the highest type of entertainment.

A list of the productions for which she wrote scenarios, reads like a blue-book of the screen's sensations.

And now comes "SIMON THE JESTER," her first production made for independent release on the great P. D. C. program.

A powerful, stirring drama of human hearts, human loves and human lives—with an Oriental flavor—this first independent Frances Marion Production is a worthy successor to the long line of successes which this brilliant woman has contributed to the screen.

Adapted by Miss Marion from a great story by the world-famous novelist, William J. Locke, "SIMON THE JESTER" is a Super Picture of Superior Merit.

Gentlemen:

I have just recently completed a three day run on HIGH AND HANDSOME with Lefty Flynn, one of the pictures of the new series.

I ran this picture with the opening of my Keith-Albee Unit Vaudeville, and I do not remember when I have ever received finer comments on a picture, Even more commented on the picture than on the Vaudeville.

If your company puts out product on a par with this first one, you are bound to land in the 100% column.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I recommend HIGH AND HANDSOME to my fellow exhibitors.

"There is real entertainment awaiting you at Warners Theatre this week. 'Red Hot Tires,' the feature picture, is a gay little comedy full of action and laughs. The story is refreshing and original; Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, about whom the tale revolves, are both at their very best. A zippy farce, this 'Red Hot Tires'."

WORLD
Founded in 1907 by J. P. Chalmers

Get a Mary Pickford, "J. D."

OVER in England, J. D. Williams as General Manager of British National Pictures, Limited, is heading a responsible movement to "secure for Britain her place on the screen."

Of the acceptance by American distributors and American exhibitors of worthy foreign-made pictures nothing need be said. It has been said so often that the only way it has been left unsaid is in a symphonic poem.

"J. D.," an able organizer, with years of experience not only in the United States, but in Australia and Canada, knows his British Empire, knows his United States. He knows what England, a nation of trade, thinks of the international influence of motion pictures on all lines of commerce. He undoubtedly has a healthy notion as to just where he is heading in.

We wish him success, and instead of marking editorial time on his enterprise, we should like, in a word of praise of one of Our Own, to give Mr. Williams and his English associates a concrete suggestion.

We have, within the week, seen Mary Pickford in her latest United Artists picture, "Little Annie Rooney." She might be billed in this production as "Little Mary Pickford in 'Little Annie Rooney.'" But the LITTLE, prefixed to Mary's name would be a misnomer.

"Little Annie Rooney" is a BIG picture, with BIG lessons to all who produce or exhibit pictures, to all who sit in judgment on pictures.

The critics who say, "This is what Mary Pickford did five years ago," are the very ones who, if "Little Annie Rooney" had been produced by a CONTINENTAL Long Hair, would have murmured, "What realism! What pathos! What art!"

As you know, Mr. Williams, over here we admire Continental ART. Over there they KNOW art and admire—just America.

From reports on public showings of "Little Annie Rooney," United Artists know that the return of Mary Pickford to childhood roles—the roles of her own picture childhood—is warmly welcomed. But that is not the half of it.

"Little Annie Rooney" talks in a language that is understood. It is the language of humble lives, humble aims. It is tinged, not with the glorious commonplace, but with glorious humility.

Over her entire picture career Mary Pickford has been the finest propagandist America has had on foreign soil. She is not only America's Sweetheart; she is the sweetheart of the world. And she has climbed to that peak by just such work as she inimitably does in "Little Annie Rooney."

The answer, Mr. Williams, is to GET A MARY PICKFORD. Go out into the highways and byways if necessary, and find a beautiful symbol of the best there is in the womanhood of the British Empire, a symbol to which not only the mind of Great Britain, but the mind of the world may readily cling.

You say in your article in the London Daily Mail: "There are many British actors, directors, scenario writers, technical experts, camera men, and others at present working in America who could be induced to come back home if proper and permanent facilities existed here for the making of British motion pictures."

True.

But the farther your British Mary Pickford is from the screen right now, and the NEARER she is to British soil, the better. Run a contest. Have all the dominions of the British Empire participate. Every British newspaper publisher who IS a Briton will back you.

Your Mary Pickford, when you find her, may not wear short dresses and long curls. Your living, acting SYMBOL may even be a sturdy English male, who wears good tweeds and smokes a good pipe. But get a symbol. Get MAN or WOMAN who stands for the things for which all the world admires a British subject.

Give Britain a peg upon which the world can hang its movie hat, "J. D." Get a Mary Pickford.

William J. Reilly

Pictures and

The Barnums of Today

IN the eyes of many, P. T. Barnum holds the belt for the catch-as-catch-can publicity championship of all time. Maybe. We do not believe that Barnum SOLD on a PERMANENT basis. He could crash in, but he could not do an encore. ANYBODY who works on the principle that a FOOL is born every minute generally runs into a Chinese Wall of WISE MEN sooner or later. We would rather play Abraham Lincoln's psychological horses any day in preference to P. T. Barnum's. And Lincoln, in all sincerity, believed that ALL of the people are not padded cell fodder all of the time.

Anyhow, Bailey put it all over Barnum as a showman. Bailey, as you know, was at one time an independent operator. It was in his circus that the first baby elephant was born in captivity. As an attention grabber in those days a baby elephant, born in captivity, was a baby World War. Barnum stood the rival attraction as long as he could. Finally he wired Bailey, "Offer you $10,000 for your baby elephant.—P. T. Barnum."

Bailey promptly 24-sheeted Barnum's wire all over the country. He simply reproduced Barnum's telegram, with this selling line: "This is what P. T. Barnum Thinks of One Attraction of the Bailey Shows."

The next year it was Barnum AND Bailey.

Bringing Barnum Up-to-Date

THERE are Barnums today. Plenty of them. But you will not find them in the circus business, or the legitimate theatre business, or the pickle business. You MAY find them, of a sort, in prize fighting game. But most of all, and best of all you will find them in the motion picture business.

Barnum worked with an unsophisticated public, with newspaper and magazine editors who wore high hats, mustaches, dog-chain watch charms AND a totally unsuspecting air.

The Barnums of today work with a public that is eminently advertising-educated and advertising-wise. The public today cuts its eye-teeth on advertising, rises to the clangor of advertised alarm clocks, eats advertised foodstuffs, goes to bed on advertised mattresses, and is finally buried by advertised "morticians."

The editors with whom the Barnums of today work are totally hard-boiled. They have no myths. They are an anonymous lot, in the first place. They have vast news gathering machines at their disposal. They hit hard and relentlessly. Do a "Barnum" with them. And try to repeat. You have simply stabbed your purpose in the back. That is all.

Putting It Over—All Over for M-G-M

THE Barnums of today are long-visioned but not long-whiskered gents. They operate on an imagination-capturing plane. BUT it is a PERMANENT plane. The men who sell cigarettes, motor cars, and mince meat to the public can well tear many leaves from the book of the exploiteers of the motion picture business.

FOR INSTANCE:—

Two trans-continental picture exploitation ships put into port this week. One, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Trackless" Train docking in Los Angeles. The other, the Universal "See America First" expedition, putting in at New York. The first crossed the country from east to west. The second, from west to east.

We are glad, in other pages of Moving Picture World to chronicle more fully the activities of these two coast-to-coast Messengers of the Movies. BRAND Movies.

On another page in this issue you will read of the trail the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer "Trackless" Train left, from Haverill to Hollywood, a trail of smiling Governors, of welcoming mayors, of snappy police parades, of happy exhibitors whose theatres were ports of call, of big, representative manufacturers before whose factories the Train did "squads right," of Good Roads Committees whose message the expedition carried, of Rotarians by the hundred, of magistrates by the score, of picture-goers by the million.

A "Trackless" Train that MADE TRACKS!

This is clean stuff. This is permanent good will. This is high class exploitation.

Marcus Loew, Major Bowes, Howard Dietz, Bill Ferguson and "Barry" Baremore are getting behind "The Big Parade," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer drama of war. They have a "Big Parade" already to their credit. The "Trackless" Train, captained by Eddie Carrier, on a ten-thousand mile march, certainly stood the heart of the country at Parade Rest.

Universal Smashes Cross Country

UP at Universal, too, they have modernized Barnum. A Universal "See America First" motor caravan logged its way from the Pacific to the Atlantic, angling in other waters. At every big stop it made, a beauty contest was staged under the direction of C. E. Holah, in charge of the Unit, and the winner was sent under contract to Universal City for parts in Universal pictures. Local movies were made for a local exhibition. The trip is ending up with a bang, with a go-getting beauty contest tie-up with the New York Daily Mirror.

Carl Laemmle, P. D. and Bob Cochrane, Paul Gulick, George Brown, Joe Weil, Henry Clay Bate and C. E. Holah have made themselves members of a new Interstate Commerce Commission. It is a commission for interstate consciousness of Universal product. Their honors sit well upon them.

This kind of trans-continental exploitation costs money. It is worth it. It has a huge DIRECT return and a bigger INDIRECT return. It strikes in high places. It warms up the cool spots. It is a mobile show window. It is of benefit to exhibitor, to the public, to official America.

Years ago, editorial comment on these cross-country pilgrimages would have read something like this: "See where two of the film companies are taking publicity junkets in automobiles from coast to coast. When will these fellows learn that the place to spend their money is in the advertising pages of the trade papers?"

Today, just as then, the ESSENTIAL investment in SALES CONTACT is trade paper advertising. It was, is, and always shall be the PRIMARY factor.

But delivering a picture to an exhibitor does not end the obligation of the producer, any more than the delivery of a carton of tooth paste to the retail druggist ends the obligation of the manufacturer.

Hand in hand, the trade paper and the producer MUST help the exhibitor sell the picture to the public..

It HAS BEEN a "MUST" for us since 1907.

We cannot get over too strongly how much we like the clean trails the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Universal caravans have cut across the continent.

A Good Reason for Being Late

THE other day an important engagement clashed with the showing of a complete program of Educational's short features. "All right," we said to ourselves, "we'll see part of the program for we want to see what Educational is doing. But we must keep that other appointment."

The PART of the program we saw was exactly 100 per cent of it.

And we told the chap who waited for us three-quarters of an hour exactly what happened. "Looking at short stuff?" he said. "It's a wonder you showed up at all."

Try to walk out on any part of this program: "Felix the Cat Trips Through Toyland"; Lloyd Hamilton in "The Movies"; "Wild Beasts of Borneo"; and Lupino Lane in "Maid in Morocco."

How long has it been since you have seen Lloyd Hamilton? Take a look at him now. Not a trace of custard. Not a single mud puddle. Not one brick thrown. Not a foot of police "chase." And what, say you, does a slapstick comedian do without these props?

The answer is, about Lloyd Hamilton: He ACTS.

The first great "discovery" made by the newspaper critics was Charlie Chaplin. Then they "discovered" Tom Mix. Watch them "find" Lloyd Hamilton. They will "find" him plenty if he keeps making movies like "The Movies."

Lupino Lane Is on His Way

EARL W. HAMMONS is presenting Lupino Lane in six Lane Comedies for Educational. The first, "Maid in Morocco" shows that Lupino Lane is the Joe Cook of pictures. An expert entertainer, a trained actor, a great gymnastic dancer, a good comedy personality—these are the qualities Lane brings to the screen. He shoots his stuff over fast. And his specialties are not dragged in by the heels. "Maid in Morocco" is handsomely produced. The scenic effects in this two-reel picture would do justice to a five-reel photoplay. Which brings up the question: After all, how long is a FEATURE Picture? Educational and the exhibitors it serves can expect big things from Lupino Lane. He is going to make a big name for himself in this business.

Pat Sullivan's "Felix" and Mr. and Mrs. Lou C. Hutt's "Wild Beasts of Borneo" rounded out the seven reels of entertainment that made us keep a decent citizen waiting for us forty-five minutes.

The program was presented as Educational's contribution to a season of Greater Short Subjects.

Moving Picture World is going to help you make January, 1926, the Show Month for SHORT FEATURES. You already know that January, 1926, will be SHORT FEATURE MONTH. Everybody at this end is getting plans into shape to let you in soon on the LONG and SHORT of it, particularly the LONG end of the LONG GREEN.

They're For You, Bob

SINCE Bob Welsh went over to head the advertising and publicity departments of Associated Exhibitors, we have forwarded to him a lot of mail that came to his old editorial desk. Bob told us to open all the mail and send the personal stuff to him.

Here's a personal note, however, that we are sending to Bob via the columns of Moving Picture World. It is a letter from L. O. Davis, President of the Virginia Amusement Co. of Hazard, Kentucky. Mr. Davis calls himself a "small exhibitor." He is not. He owns four theatres in Hazard, Lothair, and Combs, Kentucky.

Here's Mr. Davis' letter to you, Bob:

"Having been a constant reader of the WORLD for the past six years it is with sorrow that I learn of your resignation as editor of my favorite trade paper.

"Since the cycle of human progress is ever changing I sincerely hope that it is moving on to bigger and better things, finer deeds and greater accomplishments for you as you take up your new duties.

"I trust that Mr. Reilly will fill the position as ably as you have and I want you to assure him that what little support a small exhibitor can give, I stand ready to help him make the same kind of a trade paper of the WORLD that you have in the past.

"Again wishing you all the success in the world and trusting to meet you personally some day, I am,

Sincerely yours,

H. O. Davis,
VIRGINIA AMUSEMENT CO."

Reach out, Mr. Davis, and shake hands with Bob through his Triumphant Thirty Pictures. He is working now particularly on "The Sky Rocket."

They're for you, Bob, AND so are we.

What's RIGHT with the Movies

WHAT'S RIGHT with the movies? When you sell an exhibitor not on PROMISE but on on PERFORMANCE.

Warner Bros.' picture, "The Man on the Box," starring Syd Chaplin, has just broken all previous records at the Forum Theatre, Los Angeles. When you break at box-office record you are DOING something: It's success for the exhibitor higher than he has reached before.

"The Man on the Box" is The Man at the Box-Office at the Forum for a second week, the first picture ever held there for a second week. THAT'S reaching up, too.

When you ask WHAT previous record Warner Bros. broke with "The Man on the Box" and you find it is the record established by "Kiss Me Again," ANOTHER Warner Bros.' production—by Lubitsch—you can say again, THAT is DOING something.

What's RIGHT with the movies? SERVICE like that to exhibitors!

Buffalo Agog Over Rumors of Paramount and Balaban-Katz

BUFFALO theatre circles are all agog with discussion of rumors of new houses and the entrance of Famous Players-Balaban & Katz into the local field. The other night Buffalo newspapers received a telegram from the New York offices of the Paramount Theatre Department stating that arrangements had been completed for the building of a house at 622-36 Main Street, known as the Root property and which is owned by the McNaughton Realty Company, which is headed by Michael Shea. While many doubt that such a house will be built almost next door to the new Shea Buffalo $2,000,000 house now in construction, it is understood that if such a move is made it will be in association with the Shea Amusement Company. It can be stated, however, that the proposition is still in the negotiation stage.

It is possible, however, that there may be a new theatre near the Shea house, and it is understood that plans are all set for the Comerford-Fox interests to place a vaudeville-picture house in the new business building to be erected at 606-614 Main Street by Joseph and D. H. Coplon, work on which will start in February. This site is right at the corner of Main and Chippewa streets and in between Shea's Hippodrome and the new Shea house. There has been talk of Comerford and Fox getting together on a Buffalo house for several months. Difficulty in placing first-runs is believed to have hastened the deal so far as Fox is concerned. It is understood that $500,000 will be spent on the theatre part of the building.

Another Strand

Reports that the Mark-Strand Company will build another Strand on the old Browning-King store site in Main Street, directly across from Shea's Hippodrome, are emphatically denied by Walter Hays, vice-president of the Strand Company. The incorporation of the Buffalo Strand Corporation recently in Albany gave rise to this report. While no new house is contemplated at this time, Buffalo some day may again have a link in the Mark-Strand chain throughout the state.

Collins Compliments Wyoming On New Exhibitor Organization

AS an exhibitor who has tested the value of organization, I want to offer my congratulations to you and to the exhibitors of Wyoming in the formation of a state organization, which I see announced in current issues of the trade journals," writes Eli Whitney Collins, president of the Arkansas M. P. T. O., to James Lynch, president of the M. P. T. O. of Wyoming.

Urges Membership

"You will, I am sure, find this the greatest safety move you have ever made. Organization is absolutely essential to self protection.

"I hope that your organization will go a step further toward co-operative protection by allying yourself with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

"This, the only national organization of theatre owners, has done more for you than any other agency on earth. Through the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America you were relieved of the 5 per cent Film Tax, the Seat Tax, the 10 per cent Admission Tax and a few other minor items that make a gigantic whole.

"By allying yourselves with the national organization you increase your own strength at the same time you are strengthening the hand of every theatre owner in the country.

"Regardless of all the buncombe that has been spread before the world by distributor-inspired sources, it is to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that the exhibitor must look if he wants national protection.

"Your presence, together with the consequent dues, are needed at headquarters. Won't you complete your 'declaration of independence' by taking your place with us?"

Boston's Metropolitan Opens; Is Largest in New England

THE New Metropolitan Theatre at Tremont and Hollis Streets, Boston, operated jointly by Famous Players and the Keith-Albee interests, was opened formally on Friday night, October 16. The first regular performances were on the following day. Guests at the Friday night dedication of the 5,000-seat house, largest in New England, included exhibitors from all parts of New England and Adolph Zukor, Edward F. Albee, Jesse Lasky, Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Franklin, Charles E. McCarthy, Bessie Love, Thomas Meighan, Lois Wilson, Diana Kane, who in private life is the sister of Miss Love, and Harrison Ford.

The opening program consisted of the new Paramount picture, "A King on Main Street," International News, a stage presentation, "The Melting Pot," symbolizing the colonization of New England; Mitchell Brothers, banjo players in a specialty, and a sextette of accordion players. John Murray Anderson of Music Box fame is director of presentations for the Metropolitan. The 55-piece orchestra is under the direction of Nathaniel Finston. Arthur J. Martel is organist.

Seats One Price

Performances are continuous daily from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. All seats are one price as follows: Mornings until 1 p. m., 35 cents; afternoons until 6 p. m., 50 cents; evenings, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, 65 cents; Saturday evenings, Sundays and holidays, 75 cents. The programs will be opened on Saturday.

GOLDEN SUES METRO-GOLDWYN

The Metro-Goldwyn Distributing Company has been sued in the Suffolk Superior Court at Boston, Mass., by Edward A. Golden, who claims $250,000 in damages for an alleged breach of an agreement to employ him as manager. Mr. Golden formerly was manager of the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in Boston. He alleges in his suit that he was to receive a salary of $350 a week and 20 per cent of the gross receipts of more than $850,000 a year, beginning with August 1, 1924, and continuing until August 1, 1925. Mr. Golden asserts that he was discharged on March 1, 1925, causing a violation of the agreement.

Mr. Golden now is operating the Golden Distributing Company in Boston. He was one of the first exchange owners to resume solicitation of contracts in Connecticut.

LUNCHEON TO HERMAN WOBBER

Executives and department heads of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation tendered a bon voyage luncheon to Herman Wobber, district manager at San Francisco, on Thursday at the Hotel Roosevelt. Mr. Wobber sailed Saturday for a vacation in Europe. Attending the luncheon were: Adolph Zukor, Sidney R. Kent, Jesse L. Lasky, George W. Weeks, E. E. Shauer, Joseph Seidelman, Sam Katz, Harold B. Franklin, John D. Clark, Phil Reisman, Eugene Zukor, Walter Wanger, Mel A. Shauer, George Spidell, A. B. J. Frawley, M. H. Lewis, Charles E. McCarthy, Claud Saunders, Russel Holman, Sam Dembow, John Hammell and T. C. Young.

KLEY JOINS BANKING CIRCLE

Banking circles of Los Angeles have drawn a new recruit from the motion picture ranks in Fred Kley, general manager of the De Mille Studio, who has just been notified of his election to the Advisory Board of the Bank of America, Culver City Branch.

New Jersey Exhibitor Wins Jury Trial In Court Action Involving Arbitration

Varies Programs

Great variety is injected into the performances on a Saturday at the Westmount Theatre, Montreal, Manager Allen having adopted the policy of showing several different features at stated hours in order to build up the weak hours during the day.

Early on the Saturday afternoon, a program particularly attractive to children is screened. This is followed by the regular attractions.

Then again at 5.30 p. m. another program is again screened for the evening performances. This keeps various crowds of people coming all day Saturday. Special attention is paid to the announcing of the different hours at which the various shows are presented.

Chicago Firm Reports Presentation Plan For Big Houses

National Theatres Corporation, Chicago, plans a circuit of presentation houses. The productions erected at the Capitol Theatre by Francis A. Mangan and Albert E. Short will show there for a week and one more week will be added when the new Andrew Karzas Robey Theatre opens on the North Side and the new Ambassador on Division street opens on October 20.

St. Louis, Detroit and Indianapolis get the presentations next, with the Stratford bringing up the finale. One more week will be added when the Paradise at Washington and Crawford is completed next year.

With the promise of a theatre in Milwaukee and another in Cincinnati and Loop theatre plans in operation, the Cooney brothers will have a combination of several important theatres at the outset.

The Ambassador, opening Tuesday, the latest new Chicago cinema palace, is the first of a series of theatres to be erected by the M. & H. corporation. W. P. McCarthy, formerly associated with the Cooney brothers at their Chatham Theatre, is the promoter and builder of the Ambassador. A Mangan presentation, vaudeville and pictures will comprise the opening bill. A parade and other festivities was staged on Monday night, October 19th.

PROTEST FILMS IN ARMORY

The M. P. T. O. A. has protested against the use of a New York State armory for the exhibition of motion pictures in competition with a theatre owner in the same town. The protest is in the form of a letter to Brigadier General Edward J. Wescott and a copy was also sent to Governor Alfred E. Smith. The town is Kingston, N. Y.

Apollo Says "No," Wellmont Company "Yes," When Justice Asks If It's Test Case—T. O. C. C. Directors to Meet on Monday

By SUMNER SMITH

ARBITRATION still forms a source of lively news in the motion picture industry. It figured in no less than three incidents this week—a meeting of a delegation of New York State exhibitors with Will H. Hays, a meeting of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City and in the court case of Apollo Exchange, Inc., against the the Wellmont Company of Montclair, N. J., to enforce arbitration.

In this court action the defendant, represented by Norman Samuelson, who also is attorney for the New Jersey M. P. T. O., applied for a jury and the plaintiff strongly opposed the granting of a jury trial. To a question if it was a test case the plaintiff replied in the negative.

"If it is," Justice Proskauer announced, "'I will decide the fine points of the law and you can take it direct to the Court of Appeals."

When the negative reply was made the justice ordered a jury trial.

This action of the court is hailed with satisfaction by Joseph M. Seider, who has been especially active in arbitration work, and other high exhibitor officials. The plaintiff claims to have offered the defendant opportunity to select his own arbitrators in the controversy. This the defendant denies.

"That is the point on which the two factions split," said Mr. Seider. "When exhibitors are allowed to name their own arbitrators, a great forward step will have been made toward mutual agreement on the whole contract."

Mr. Grosvenor of Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft appeared for the plaintiff. Mr. Samuelson, for the defense, argued that the whole proceeding should be regarded as a test case, that the contract is illegal and the system of arbitration unfair, and that theatre owners whose signatures are on the uniform contract have signed under duress, because otherwise they would have to close their theatres for lack of product.

The proceedings began in court on Tuesday. Justice Proskauer reserved decision so that the plaintiff's counsel could decide if he would accept a trial by jury. If this was not accepted, the justice said, he would deny the motion to arbitrate. The plaintiff later favored jury trial. This has not yet been scheduled.

The defendant filed an affidavit drawn up by Mr. Seider which severely criticized the arbitration system. According to the maker, the contract was enforced by all members of the Hays organization in Greater New York though exhibitors protested vigorously. He declared that an independent exhibitor can't buy film without signing the contract. Another allegation was that the contract is used throughout the country and that distributors generally decline to do business except under its provisions. He especially cited the following clause—added to the contract, he said, without notification to exhibitors:

"This contract and each and every term and condition hereof except number of pictures, rental price and play dates herein specified shall be deemed amended, modified added to and-or abrogated by the terms and conditions of the proposed new Uniform Exhibition Contract if and when finally adopted and approved by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of Amreica, Inc., in so far as the terms and conditions of such new Uniform Exhibition Contract shall or may be inconsistent with or additional to the terms and conditions hereof, and the provisions, terms and conditions of such new Uniform Contract when so adopted and approved shall be deemed to be incorporated herewith to form a part hereof and to be binding upon the parties hereto."

Apollo's action was for an order to enforce arbitration on a contract signed H. H. Wellenbrink, president of the Wellmont Company, who sought to cancel when the exchange wanted to substitute "Her Marriage Vow" for "The Age of Innocence," a picture which the contract specified. Last February the joint arbitration board took judgment by default against the theatre company and the latter was put on a deposit basis, having to advance $1,500 in cash to obtain pictures from companies that are members of the F.I.L.M. Club. Mr. Wellenbrink made the deposit but declined to arbitrate or acknowledge responsibility, claiming that the substitution of "Her Marriage Vow" cancelled the whole contract, including the arbitration clause.

The T.O.C.C. gathering also talked contract, listening to Nathan Burkan, Assemblyman Bloch and others. Mr. Burkan criticized the Hays document. Copies of the latter were distributed and it will come before a meeting of the Board of Directors on Monday. Exhibitors seem to have little doubt but that the Hays paper will be rejected and a considerable liking for the Seider contract shown.

Leon Rosenblatt criticized distributors who do not guarantee, through contracts, a specific number of pictures within a certain time. One committee will demand playdates from First National and another demand from Paramount delivery of Gloria Swanson in "Conquered" and "The Vanishing American" to exhibitors who hold contracts for these two pictures.

INCORPORATIONS

The past week brought the incorporation of only five motion picture companies in New York State, the capitalization in almost every instance being low. These companies were: Woodside Amusement Company, Inc., capitalized at $5,000, with M. R. Weinberger, S. H. Posner and Jerome Weinstein, of New York City; Sidbill Company, Inc., $10,000, Sidney Clare, William Wolfson, New York City; Al Shayne, Freeport, L. I.; Springdale Dramatics, Inc., $10,000, B. M. L. Ernst, M. B. Cane, D. J. Fox, New York; the following two companies incorporating with stock at no par value: Richard Herndon-Allan Dinehart Corporation, Richard Berndon, Allan Dinehart, New York; Albert McGall, Orange, N. J.; Famous Players Realty Corporation, Erik Ludvigh, William B. English, New York City; Harold B. Franklin, New Rochelle.

The Winter Theatre Co., Akron, Ohio, is reported among the recent incorporations at Columbus, Ohio. The capital stock is reported at $10,000, the incorporators being Philip C. Austegan, Ike Friedman and others.

Missouri Theatres Safe from Special Film Tax

Picture theatres and other amusement places of Missouri will escape from the special 5 or 10 per cent. tax that Governor Sam A. Baker contemplated installing to provide a special fund for the maintenance of the public schools and high educational institutions of the state.

The Governor's conference will meet again in Jefferson City on October 19 to draft the proposed constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters of the state in November, 1926.

A sub-committee of the conference has drafted the proposed amendment. It will provide a 10 per cent. tax on cigars and cigarettes, a severance tax on minerals mined in the state, transfer of the inheritance tax fund from general revenue to school revenue, transfer of the present 5 cents per $100 property tax to the school fund and similar treatment for the foreign insurance tax. It is estimated these will net $12,000,000 annually for the schools and colleges, etc.

NEW BOSTON THEATRE OPENS

The new Keith-Albee Boston Theatre at Washington and Essex streets, replacing the old Boston Theatre, was opened to the public at 9:30 a. m. Saturday, October 10. The entire staff from the old Boston, including Charles Harris, manager, is in charge of the new playhouse. First run photoplays and vaudeville, continuous from 9:30 a. m. to 11 p. m. is the policy. There are nearly 4,000 seats divided between the orchestra and single balcony. There are orchestra and balcony boxes and balcony loges. The orchestra is under the direction of Charles Frank. A. D. Richardson is soloist organist.

The site of the old Boston Theatre will be utilized for the construction of a magnificent theatre building, including offices, as a memorial to the late B. F. Keith.

MISS LA MARR SLIGHTLY ILL

The rumors that Barbara La Marr is near death at a health resort in San Bernardino, Cal., are greatly exaggerated, according to Bert Ennis, speaking for Sawyer-Lubin. The information which he has received tends to show that she is suffering only a minor illness from overwork.

Marks Bros. Building Program Entails $20,000,000

"The procession of the years has brought a succession of new theatres and triumphs for Marks Brothers," declared Meyer S. Marks vice-president of the firm, in discussing the company's growth and its plans to spend $20,000,000 in expansion. Starting with one theatre, the Marshfield, sixteen years ago, Marks Brothers have grown steadily, year after year, until now they are destined to become one of the largest theatre concerns.

Their latest project is the Paradise, a beautiful $3,000,000 picture palace to seat over 5,000, which will be started soon at Madison near Crawford avenue. The Embassy will open soon, at Fullerton and Crawford avenues. It will seat 2,500 and is valued at $1,000,000. About a month after the completion of the Embassy, the Ritz at Laurence and Harding avenues will start in operation. It will seat 2,500 and will cost approximately $1,000,000.

The Waukegan, located at Clayton and Genesee streets at Waukegan, Illinois, will seat 3,000 and cost over $1,500,000. The building will also contain stores and offices and will be distinguished by a highly illuminated tower rising 200 feet above the street level.

A $2,500,000 outlay has been scheduled for the theatre at Sheridan road and Devon avenue, Rogers Park, a most desirable location for a theatre, with a depth of 208 feet and facing 215 feet on Sheridan road. It is designed in the Spanish Renaissance style of architecture. A giant broadcasting station is being planned.

Four more theatres will be announced soon.

TERMS OF THE THEATRE DEAL

Chicago statements supply the terms of the Paramount-Balaban & Katz theatre. They are taken from a statement to stockholders and follow:

"A ten-year agreement has been entered into under which all of the theatre properties of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will be vested in a new corporation. Stock of the new corporation will all be owned by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, but Balaban & Katz Corporation will manage and operate all of the theatres in consideration of a participation in profits.

"A second corporation will be formed which will be the medium of further expansion. Stock of the second new corporation will be owned equally by Balaban & Katz Corporation and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation."

ST. JOHN, N. B., HOUSE BURNS

The Empress Theatre, St. John, N. B., was destroyed by fire on October 15, when flames broke out in the projection room during a performance. There was only a small crowd in the theatre at the time. One near casualty was when Louis McCourt, the projectionist stuck to his post in an effort to subdue the flames with hand chemicals. In making his exit finally, he stumbled in the smoke and fell down the stairs, being rescued by firemen. The fire spread quickly through the whole structure. The building, which was owned by the City of St. John, was valued at $50,000.

PERSONALS

Major Alexander Grau from Berlin, one of the general directors of the UFA, has arrived with his wife. With him is Dr. Kaufmann of the UFA Scientific Department. Mr. Grau is especially interested in studying picture theatres over here, as the UFA screens her productions in more than 150 of her own large theatres in all parts of Germany and the organization of the theatre business is one of the more important parts of Mr. Grau's directorial work.

Max J. Weisfeldt, F. B. O.'s division manager in Minneapolis, is in New York for a short stay.

WARNER BROS. ISSUE ALL SOLD

Private financial interests have taken up an issue of $4,000,000 in three-year 6½ per cent. notes of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., through Goldman, Sachs & Co. in New York and Bond, Goodwin and Tucker in Los Angeles. The notes are held at 100 and redeemable at 105 and accrued interest in cash.

A. M. Botsford, who has resigned as advertising manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to head the advertising department of the new corporation to be formed to control the operation of the theatres alignea with Paramount.

The Rev. Jackson Dies; Ex-World Writer's End Sudden

The Rev. William H. Jackson, 62 years old, formerly writer of special articles on educational subjects for Moving Picture World, died on Sunday morning, October 18, at the parish house of the Oyster Bay Reformed Church, Brookville, Long Island, where he was pastor. He suffered for nine days from an ailment which physicians were unable to diagnose.

Two years ago fire destroyed the Oyster Bay church, an important landmark on Long Island, and this had greatly distressed the Rev. Jackson. Wealthy parishioners aided him in planning a new structure. Two weeks ago the cornerstone was laid. Five days later the Rev. Jackson suffered nervous exhaustion.

The funeral was held Wednesday morning in the uncompleted Oyster Bay Reformed Church in Brookville, the Rev. Elwy Lloyd of Brooklyn officiating.

Theatre Owners' Heads to Argue Tax Reduction

The theatre owners of America will be represented at the tax reduction hearing by the House Ways and Means Committee on October 24 at Washington, D. C., by a committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, consisting of R. F. Woodhull, president; Sydney S. Cohen, chairman, Board of Directors; A. Julian Brylawski, chairman, Administrative Committee, and Joseph M. Seider.

This new exchange will operate in the territory included in the usual division of Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

YEGGS GET MUELLER'S $1,000

Late on Sunday night, October 4, yeggmen broke into Billy Mueller's Jefferson Theatre, Jefferson City, and rifled the safe of $1,000 in receipts.

Skouras Bros. and Goldman Sign Operating Agreement

(By Wire to Moving Picture World)

ST. LOUIS, October 21.

AN operating agreement involving the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome, owned by Skouras Brothers Enterprises, and King's Theatre, William Goldman, owner, was filed with Recorder of Deeds Tamme in St. Louis Tuesday, October 20. A new corporation will operate these four houses. Spyros and Charles Skouras will hold 55 per cent. of the 1,000 shares of no par value stock and Goldman 45 per cent.

The agreement is effective within thirty days after the completion and opening of the Ambassador Theatre being erected by Skouras Brothers, and it runs for ten years. It was dated March 18, 1925, but was held up pending the outcome of a series of deals involving the purchase by Skouras Brothers of a block of St. Louis Amusement Company stock held by Harry Koplar and the settlement of Goldman's suit against Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatre Corporation and others.

It also provides that if the Grand Central is leased to Universal Pictures Corporation under arrangements heretofore made, Goldman shall receive 50 per cent. of the profits under such a lease. He will be paid $12,500 annually and Skouras Brothers $8,750 each for managing the four theatres.

The St. Louis Amusement Company have purchased the Mikado Airdome site at Hamilton and Easton avenues, St. Louis, and plan to erect a $1,000,000 theatre and apartment structure there within the next few months. The price paid for the ground is said to have set a new record for that section of St. Louis. In realty circles it is reported that the consideration was approximately $135,000. The site fronts 147 feet on Easton avenue by 200 feet on Hamilton avenue.

Spyros Skouras, president of the St. Louis Amusement Company, confirmed the report and stated that the new theatre will seat approximately 3,000. It will rank with the finest houses in the Central West and become a first-run theatre for that section of St. Louis, probably playing day and date with the Grand Central on many big productions.

Denig and Jacobs Do New Work for First National

Lynde Denig, well known through his long association with motion pictures and for several years a member of the publicity staff of First National Pictures, has been placed in charge of a special feature department which will include the handling of First National's trade news.

Frank Shields Jacobs has been appointed city editor of the department. Mr. Jacobs, a metropolitan newspaper man of fifteen years' experience and formerly night city editor of the Herald and Examiner in Chicago, will direct the gathering and dissemination of First National news much the same as he did in his newspaper work. Hence the title, which is an innovation in the motion picture publicity field.

Skouras Brothers A stock soared to new heights the past week, reaching $63.75. Sales of 110 shares of Skouras A and 20 shares of St. Louis Amusement stock were reported at the short session on October 17.

Paramount Pep Club Holds Inauguration and Banquet

More than 400 members of the Paramount Pep Club gathered in the Belvedere room at the Hotel Astor, Wednesday night, the occasion marking the installation in office of Palmer Hall Stilson as president, and Vincent Trotta as vice-president.

In tribute to Harold B. Franklin, the club presented the director of Paramount theatres with a silver token signifying his appointment as honorary vice-president. Those on whom this honor has been bestowed, in addition to Mr. Franklin, are Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Paramount, Sidney R. Kent, general manager, Elek John Ludvigh, treasurer, and Emil E. Shauer, director of the foreign department.

Following an eight course dinner, A. M. Botsford took the gavel as toastmaster. On behalf of the club, he presented the retiring president, Harry A. Nadel, with a set of golf sticks. Talks were made by Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players and honorary president of the club, Mr. Lasky, G. B. J. Frawley, Mr. Franklin, President Stilson and Vice-President Trotta.

Both Mr. Nadel and Mr. Stilson paid tribute to the achievements of the two former presidents, Eugene Zukor and Mel Shauer, whose efforts on behalf of the organization played such a large part in its rapid growth. Eugene Zukor is honorary chairman of the board of governors, the membership of which includes Mel Shauer, Agnes F. Mengel, Mr. Nadel, Irene Scott, Fred L. Metzler and Glen Allvine.

Arthur J. Dunne is treasurer of the club, and Sally McLoughlin, secretary.

A. M. BOTSFORD PROMOTED

A. M. Botsford, who for four years has been advertising manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, leaves this post on November 1 to take charge of the advertising department of the new corporation which will be formed to control the operation of the theatres now aligned with Famous Players throughout the country.

Russell Holman, who has been Mr. Botsford's assistant, succeeds him as advertising manager for Famous Players.

The department which Mr. Botsford will organize and direct will supervise all advertising theatres, and will conduct a comprehensive institutional campaign, the first of such campaigns of national scope.

INTRODUCING ADOLPH ZUKOR, 2nd

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Zukor are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Adolph Zukor, 2nd, on October 9. Both Mrs. Zukor and the baby are doing well.

New Contender Forces Crises in Detroit's Theatre World

The Detroit film trade is speculating on what effect the opening of John H. Kunsky's new State Theatre will have on the rest of the downtown first-run contenders. There are now five theatres within a few blocks of each other playing first-run pictures and the competition this fall has been unusually keen among them. What will happen when another big house enters the field and which theatres it will affect most is something that remains to be seen.

Many wiseacres in the trade see the closing of the Madison within a few months after the opening of the State. They point out that the Capitol, most recent of the Kunsky first-run theatres, has been drawing the bulk of the business for three years, while the Madison has been slowly diminishing its receipts, due to the fact that it is located directly across the street from the Capitol.

The Madison, too, is hit by a heavy overhead and its advantageous location makes it an ideal spot for the erection of a department store. In fact, it is rumored that one large department store chain has already accumulated enough leases in the block to control the erection of such a building shortly.

With the opening of the State, Detroit will have more first-run sets per population than any other city in the country. More than 135,000 seats are available to Detroit picture patrons at each first run performance given in the downtown section.

WORLD'S LARGEST THEATRE

Los Angeles is to have the largest picture theatre in the world, according to the announcement of Motley H. Flint, executive vice-president of the Pacific-Southwest Trust and Savings Bank, who has just returned from New York. He discussed with William Fox the plans for the construction of a theatre seating more than 5,000. It is also planned to have a theatre orchestra of more than 100 musicians.

The building, according to Mr. Flint, will be built by Los Angeles capital and leased by Fox.

It is planned to make the capacity in excess of 5,000 in order to make it seat a few more than the Capitol in New York City.

WAGE DISPUTE ADJUSTED

Differences between the musicians of Schenectady, N. Y., and the exhibitors over wages have been patched up with the result that the musicians have withdrawn their demands of several weeks ago for more wages. The wage scale for the next twelve months will remain unchanged. At the outset, the musicians employed in orchestras demanded a $2 a week raise per man, while organists in picture theatres, receiving $54 a week, asked for $90 a week.

SUNDAY SHOWS WIN

The people of Sanborn, Ia., have just held a special election and voted overwhelmingly for Sunday shows. The council said it would pass an ordinance banning Sunday shows if it could be shown by the special election that the people were against them. The returns of the election showed 137 for Sunday shows and 37 against. The Sunday shows will continue.

Schulberg Files Bankruptcy Paper

Benjamin P. Schulberg, producer, filed a petition in bankruptcy in the Federal Court of New York on October 21. His liabilities are $820,774 and his assets $1,420. The chief creditors named are as follows:

Standard Finance Corporation of Los Angeles, $300,000; Sol Fillin, $110,000; Standard Film Laboratories, Los Angeles, $90,000; Katherine MacDonald, actress, $60,000; Bernard P. Fineman, Los Angeles, $48,500; David Jaffe, for money loaned, $30,000; W. F. Selig, Inc., the Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Company, $25,000, and the United States Government, for income taxes, $2,300.

Mr. Schulberg, head of the B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc., issued the following statement:

"The indebtedness of $820,774, from which I am seeking relief by filing a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, was not incurred by me personally nor used in my personal behalf. It was incurred by Preferred Pictures Corporation and by myself as its agent in California. These obligations were assumed by me personally at the time Preferred Pictures Corporation (at the request of the Standard Film Laboratories of California, its largest creditor) went into the hands of an equity receiver.

"Since then I have made every possible effort to pay off this indebtedness from my personal earnings, but the attitude of certain creditors, in pressing me without giving me a fair chance to do that which I was under no actual legal or moral obligation to do, has left no other possible course open but to take this action."

J. G. Bachman, vice-president of B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc., said that Mr. Schulberg's failure to drag Preferred Pictures out of the hole has nothing, whatever, to do with B. P. Schulberg Productions, which remains a going concern, better financed than any other in the production field, and not in any way involved in Mr. Schulberg's failure insofar as Preferred Pictures are concerned.

Denver Managers Win In Dispute with Unions

Denver Theatre Managers Association of Denver is victorious in the controversy with trades craft unions over the new 1925-26 contract. The unions demanded 25 per cent increase in pay and a shorter working time, while the theatre managers insisted that the old contract be renewed for another year.

The State Industrial Commission of Colorado consented to act as the arbitration board on the promise that their decision would be final and the controversy ended. The arguments were set for hearing before the board on October 5 and the findings resulted in a renewal of the old contract for another year.

Urbana Showmen Lose Stiff Battle Over Sunday Shows

Urbana's two picture shows were dark on Sunday, October 18, because of a temporary injunction issued by the Champaign County, Ill., Circuit Court late Saturday. Circuit Judge Franklin H. Boggs will determine at the January term of court whether to make the injunction permanent.

In issuing his temporary injunction Judge Boggs stated there was not the slightest doubt that the legislature had given the right to city councils to regulate amusements and that under that grant of authority the council could prohibit Sunday shows.

Last August the managers of Urbana's two picture theatres discovered that the town did not have a Sunday closing ordinance and they opened their houses on Sunday. Immediately the reform element took to the warpath and insisted upon the enactment of a Sunday closing ordinance. The council voted such an ordinance. When the theatres opened for business on Sunday the managers were arrested. This time the police magistrate before whom they were tried held that the Sunday closing ordinance was class legislation. The city then took an appeal to the Circuit Court.

It is certain that Urbana people will have an opportunity to vote on Sunday shows next spring.

ALLENS RE-ENTER FIELD

The Allens of Toronto, formerly directing a great chain of moving picture houses across Canada, have re-entered the Montreal amusement field once more and will shortly open a brand new picture and vaudeville palace in the new Amherst Block at the corners of St. Catherine, Amherst and St. Timothee streets, Montreal. The business premises and the theatre are being built by the George Rabinovitch Investment Corporation of Montreal, the three structures being under lease for a long term of years to H. Allen, one of the members of the Allen family in Toronto. The new house, which is yet unnamed, will seat 1,800.

CANADIAN EXHIBITOR FINED

The Ottawa, Ontario, Juvenile Court opened an attack on several theatre proprietors in Ottawa on October 16 because of the habit of allowing unaccompanied children 15 years of age to enter their theatres, thus violating an Ontario statue. One exhibitor was haled to court, lectured and sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs or 10 days in jail. Magistrate Hopewell announced that he would raise the penalty for the next cinema manager found guilty on a charge of violating the juvenile regulation.

CONN. EXHIBITOR ACTIVE

John E. Panora, owner of the Winsted, Conn., Opera House, is ready to start building operations for his new theatre in Winsted. It will cost $125,000. According to the contract, the structure is to be completed in 120 working days. Mr. Panora will convert the Opera House into a large hall when his new house is opened. His building project is for the purpose of protecting his interests in Winsted. Mr. Panora also has theatres in New Milford and Plainville, and in New Jersey.

Press Heralds "The Vanishing American" As Superb at N. Y. Criterion Premiere

HERALDED by the press and the public as a picture so big in theme, so gripping in action and so colorful in conception that "one more visit" is not sufficient for a full appreciation of it, "The Vanishing American", Paramount's epic of the Indian, was given its Broadway premiere at the Criterion Theatre on Thursday night.

So enthusiastic was the andience, whose applause continually broke the silence instilled by the powerful dramatic sequences, and so generous in their praise were the critics on the New York dailies that the run of the production is confidently expected to extend over many months.

The critics, without an exception, recommended the production, this deserved praise standing as a tribute to Paramount, its production staff and its players, and to Zane Grey, who conceived the story from which this historical epic was adapted.

"One of the most beautiful and stirring things yet done in the films," was the opinion of Quinn Martin, of the New York World, who wrote: "There need be no secret of the fact that I am going to try to be a weekly patron of the Criterion for at least the next three months. In the broad colorful curtain which serves as its background, in the exquisite camera work that has gone into the photographing of its far flung scenes, and in the remarkably true reproductions of its characters there is more than any man may digest in a mere visit. 'The Vanishing American' is the finest thing of American history ever done in the cinema. Its action is swift and smooth. It moves with the speed of the wind and something of the power of a hurricane. And still I am inclined to say 'Hail to the Vanishing American, but not farewell.' The cinema, this cinema has made it so."

Mordaunt Hall of the Times viewed the picture as "an inspiring production fashioned with infinite pains. From a fleeting glimpse of the aborigines," he wrote, "one is taken to their skin-clad and painted-bedaubed successors, and then to the more interesting but slothful cliff dwellers. The battle scene is a work of art, as one perceives the primitive spears being thrown helter-skelter among the lazy mass of cliff dwellers. Here, in spite of certain short-comings in the actions of some of the characters, is a photodrama which is a fine accomplishment."

Harriette Underhill, of the Herald-Tribune wrote: "Accompanied by the usual crowds of curious, arc lights, first nighters, policemen and stars, 'The Vanishing American' appeared on Broadway last night. The crowds were so dense that the wooden Indian stationed outside the theatre was scarcely able to resist the onslaught. We cheerfully recommend this latest Paramount picture. Its scenery is magnificent, its photography superb, its heroine charming. Its cast is perfect."

Louella O. Parsons in the American holds the picture "worthy of our patronage. It is a superb piece of work, covering as it does the various periods from early cliff dwelling days down to the late war when the Indians marched to do their bit," she wrote.

Mildred Spain in the Daily News wrote: "It is like a full-throated war cry ringing down through the ages, this epic of the American Indian. A glorious moving picture that has caught the spirit of the Indian of today. Technically the picture is a marvel. Richard Dix scores a triumph. Noah Beery is the usual bland villain. Lois Wilson is effective as Marion. An impressive picture that is heartily recommended."

Dorothy Herzog wrote in the Mirror: "'The Vanishing American' awed an enthusiastic first night audience at the Criterion last evening. In its subject matter 'The Vanishing American' is a great, humane, romantic picture. In its photographic presentation it enraptures, for cameramen C. Edgar Schoenbaum and Harry Perry have acquitted themselves splendidly."

In the Morning Telegraph, George E. Bradley wrote: "'The Vanishing American' may be considered a personal triumph for Richard Dix and Lois Wilson. I believe Richard Dix is permanently established as a star of the first rank, due to his excellent performance, and Miss Wilson, perfectly cast, plays her role with wisdom and restraint and is, in fact, more interesting in this picture than in any the writer has witnessed in the past. 'The Vanishing American' is typically historical. Its appeal will last so long as the romance of the early days of this country lasts; it will be heralded by educators, scholars, mothers and fathers as one of the finest motion pictures of the day."

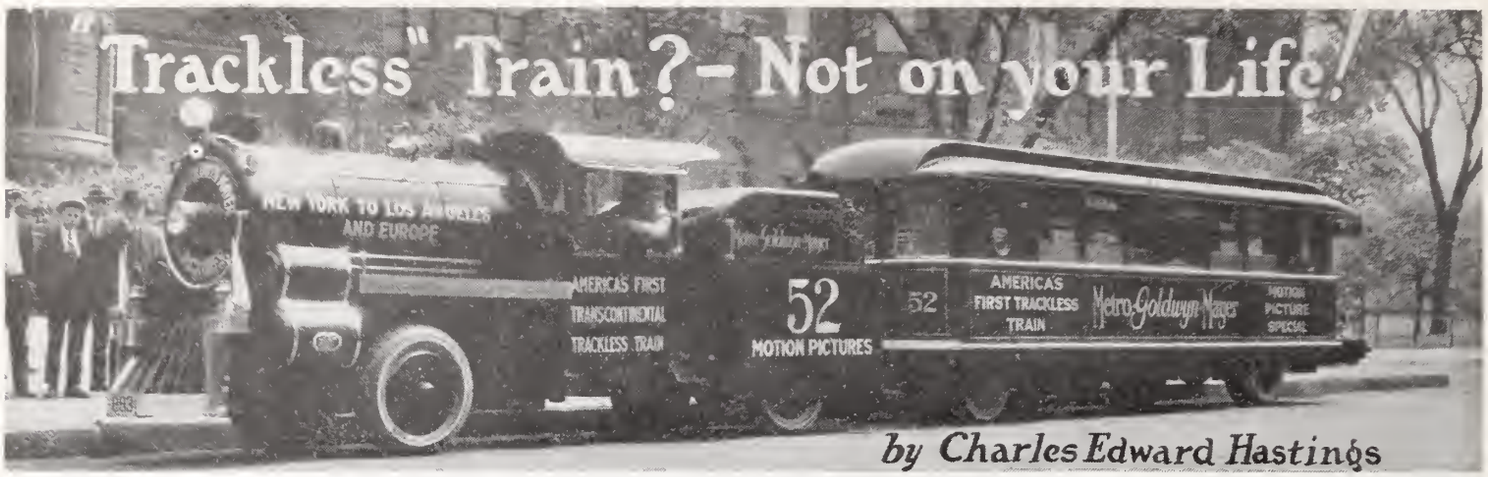
A prologue, beautiful and impressive in its simplicity, was conceived by Hugo Riesenfeld and Josiah Zuro. It consisted only of a living picture of an Indian and his mount silhouetted against a background of colorful moving clouds. As the curtains parted on this scene with the first strains of music a hush fell over the audience—then applause.

A brilliant audience attended the premiere. Directing the orchestra was Mr. Riesenfeld. The musical score for this production was written by Charles Wakefield Cadman, one of America's most popular composers.

"Dancing Days"

Alyce Mills completed this week her work as one of the featured cast in "Morals for Men" for which she was loaned by B. P. Schulberg Productions. She is now back on the Schulberg lot where her next acting assignment will be in "Dancing Days." This Preferred Picture will be made as the first of a series of productions to be directed by William A. Wellman for B. P. Schulberg.

"Trackless" Train?—Not on your Life!



by Charles Edward Hastings

"TRACKLESS" Train?
Not on your life!

With ten thousand, one hundred and ninety-one miles already chalked up on a trans-continental trip, in approximately one hundred and sixty days, visiting twenty States, the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer so-called "Trackless" Train has left tracks which motor history, publicity hounds and ballyhoo experts will not forget for many years to come.

This train, sponsored by M.-G.-M. officials, in charge of Conductor Eddie Carrier, and with Buddy Hooton "in advance," has held the attention of many millions of inhabitants of the United States, and Canada; millions of cards, pamphlets and buttons advertising the M. G. M. pictures have been distributed from the Train, and thousands of motion picture theatres have been directly benefitted by the appearance of this exceptional attention arrester. The caravan played a large part in the campaign for good roads.

The idea upon which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Trackless" Train was predicated was created by Major Edward Bowes, one of the Vice-Presidents of M.-G.-M., and the Director of the Capitol Theatre, New York City. The plan was put into effect, publicized and carried out by Howard Dietz, Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation of M.-G.-M., ably assisted by William F. Ferguson, Manager of Exploitation under Mr. Deitz.

Major Edward Bowes, one of the Vice-Presidents of M.-G.-M., and Managing Director of the Capitol Theatre, New York, creator of the "Trackless" Train.

Marcus Loew, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is to be congratulated for the splendid organization that brought out, built up and executed an idea that ranks second to none in the annals of motion picture exploitation.

The Train left New York City on May 7, and arrived in Los Angeles on October 14. That's your trans-continental stuff! There remains the trip up the Pacific Coast to Vancouver; South again through the national park highways to good roads and fair weather (or fair roads and good weather, as the case may be!), East through the Southern States and North, via Washington, D. C., to New York City and thence to Europe, for a prolonged tour of the Continent.

With three huge scrap books crammed with thousands of columns of newspaper stories and photographs, officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer know their "Trackless" Train has been wholly successful—a BIG stunt.

There can be no doubt about it.

Los Angeles Reception

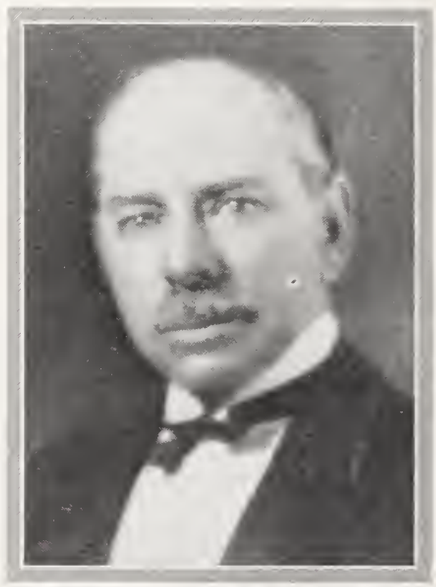
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Trackless" Train reached Los Angeles on October 14, and was accorded the biggest reception ever celebrated on the Coast. The special headed a parade of floats one mile long, blocking all traffic and drawing cheers from the thousands who lined the sidewalk along the fifteen mile route taken by the train. This route led through the busiest section of Los Angeles, through Hollywood and Beverly Hills, to the studio in Culver City.

The vehicle was met at the city limits by Mayor George Cryer and prominent city and county officials, including Boyle Workman, President of the City Council and I. Birnbaum, Chairman of the Police Commission. Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg, associate studio executives, and Edward J. Mannix, studio manager, rode at the head of the parade, which included floats from the studio, from Loew's State Theatre, from Grauman's Egyptian, from various West Coast Theatres and from the local exchange. A large military escort from Fort McArthur acompanied the parade, in which stars and players from the Culver City studios rode in their own machines.

This reception was typical of that accorded all along the route.

The plans for this remarkable good will expeditions were so carefully worked out that only a handful of persons, outside of the office executives, were aware of a "Trackless" Train until a few hours before its arrival in New York City, last May, from Indianapolis, where it was built.

The course of the "Trackless" Train about the streets and avenues of greater New York attracted hundreds of thousands, prior to its plunge into New England. Exhibitors along the line had been made aware of the ballyhoo, and in every city and town visited by "Buddy" Hooton, the advance agent, with his mobile wireless outfit, and Conductor Carrier's attractive train, the stage had been "set" for the big show.



Marcus Loew, President of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who has watched a simple suggestion grow into a tremendous fact—the "Trackless" Train!

En route, hundreds of exhibitors visited the train, rode on it, and were glad the train called at their theatres. Governors, Lieutenant-Governors, Mayors and city officials, rode on the "Trackless" Train and were photographed on the train. Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York State, and Governor A. Vic. Donahey, of Ohio, were particularly thrilled with their experiences on the sumptuous parlor car attached to the automobile "engine." In Canada, the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, visited the train, with a dozen officials of the Dominion, and this form of reception was the order of the day wherever the train went.

The "Trackless" Train visited Haverhill, Mass., the home town of Louis B. Mayer, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in charge of production at the Culver City studios of this company. Mr. Mayer is popular in Haverhill, and the whole town turned out to honor their distinguished citizen.

In Rochester, N. Y., the train visited the magnificent residence of George Eastman, on East Avenue, and the Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Eastman Kodak Company, was so pleased with the visit, that he insisted upon Conductor Carrier taking the "Trackless" Train down to Kodak Park, where, on the day following the visit to the Eastman residence, the many thousands of employees saw the novel sight.

In Detroit, Henry Ford visited the Train, and rode in the parlor car, expressing himself as immensely pleased with the general idea of publicity to be gained through this channel.

Incidents of this character were duplicated time and again, and are recorded in the official log of the trip as compiled by Conductor Carrier and forwarded by mail to the home office daily, as the trip progressed. "Bill" Parsons, the engineer (chauffeur) and motor expert, and Messrs. Rush and Holmes, shared Mr. Carrier's occasional heartaches. The crew turned bridge-builders in order to "carry on" when they met impassable roads. Between Monmouth and Davenport, Ia., during August a dirt road gave way and deposited the train in a ditch. Then the publicity experts and their crew worked for nine hours to put the train back on the road. AND THEY PUT IT BACK!

Muddy roads, which made travelling exceedingly difficult for the heavy transport, were encountered in Oklahoma and Northern Texas.

After leaving the New England States, the "Trackless" Train traversed New York State, East and West; visited Canada and returned to Buffalo; thence to Chicago and southwest to Iowa, and northeast to Green Bay, Wis., after which the train followed a due south course that brought them into Arkansas, Oklahoma, etc, and finally, by devious routes, into Texas.

"WHO'S WHO?" IN RE M.-G.-M.'S "TRACKLESS" TRAIN

Howard Dietz (center), Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation of M.-G.-M., snapped into it when Messrs. Loew and Bowes ordered a "Trackless" Train sent across county from New York to Los Angeles, to advertise "M.-G.-M.'s 52 for 1925-26. The train was ordered, delivered and despatched. That's that! William R. Ferguson (left), manager of Exploitation under Mr. Dietz, mapped out the course for the ballyhoo to follow, and covered himself with glory. Eddie Carrier (right), took the Train across the country. That's what we mean — TOOK IT RIGHT ACROSS! He and his "gang" built bridges, rebuilt roads, dug the Train out of ditches, and in other ways carried out the order: "Destination—Los Angeles." The job was so well done that M.-G.-M. executives will send the Train to Europe

Officials of the A. A. A. cooperated with the train officials, and other automobile organizations assisted at every point. Representatives of some of these organizations accompanied the train on comparatively new routes, thus aiding the party on their trip.

"Greater Movie Season"

During the month of August, when Greater Movie Season was crashing through to a successful campaign, the "Trackless" Train came in for a considerable amount of publicity, and proved a boon to thousands of theatre owners. Greater Movie Season advertising matter was distributed by the train crew, as well as the six-page folder, the colored blotters and the buttons advertising M.-G.-M. product and stars.

Back in the home office, Mr. Dietz was directing the destinies of the Train, while engaged in the thousand and one things at hand. He examined the daily reports sent in by Conductor Carrier; kept in touch with the Train, and "forwarded" it in more ways than one.

Upon Mr. Ferguson fell the brunt of the exploit. It was Mr. Ferguson who routed the caravan, and he made a splendid job of it. Everything was mapped out far in advance, allowance being made for "side trips" when M.-G.-M. sales executives requested it. We have seen some of Mr. Ferguson's sheets, prepared weeks in advance, and they are gems of accuracy, so carefully drawn that not a single hitch was encountered in carrying out the orders.

Bad Roads Encountered

The part played by the "Trackless" Train in the campaign for good roads cannot be overestimated. This work was undertaken in conjunction with the Government's agents, headed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, and reports on road conditions have been compiled. Arrived in Fort Worth Conductor Carrier found reports awaiting him regarding the "roads ahead" (provided he could negotiate the long run between Texas and Southern California) that were far from pleasing. In the home office, Manager Ferguson also was appraised of the condition of the roads through parts of Texas, Wyoming, Nevada, etc., and at the last moment it was deemed advisable to spare the train as much as possible by shipping it on a flat car from Fort Worth to San Diego, Cal., arriving in the latter City on October 12.

From San Diego, the train proceeded to Los Angeles, via La Jolla, Del Mar, Carlsbad, San Juan Capistrano, Tustin, Santa Anna and Annaheim.

Whaddeya mean—"Tracklesss" Train?

THE GOVERNORS OF NEW YORK AND OHIO, AND THE MAYOR OF NEW YORK CITY, VISIT METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S "TRACKLESS" TRAIN

Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York State, on the M.-G.-M. "Trackless" Train, in Albany, N. Y. (left); Governor A. Vic. Donahey, of Ohio, at the throttle of the "Trackless" Train, in Columbus, O. (right); Mayor John F. Hylan, of New York (center), salutes a brilliant "good will" and "good roads" idea.

Retake Delays "Broken Heart"

Jaffe Production Starring Lila Lee, Held Up For Necessary Changes

When a feller needs a lotta friends is in the sad hour when, his feature picture "completed" and scheduled for release, somebody comes along with a jolt like this:

"That can't go! We'll have to have a retake. Get those actors and actresses back, and build the set again!"

This is what happened to the Jaffe Art Film Corporation, producers of "Broken Hearts," directed by Maurice Schwartz and starring Lila Lee. Set for release October 25, it was discovered at the eleventh hour that in the man-hunting scenes, in which the fierce Cossacks pursue the hero, a fugitive from justice, an error in costuming had passed the eagle eyes of the editors, and the scene had to be done over.

When they went looking for the principal actors in the scene, they found them engaged in other studios, and a delay was experienced.

Now, a delay is necessitated in the release, and the October 25 date is indefinitely off.

THE POLICE IN BUFFALO ESCORTED THE "TRACKLESS" TRAIN

One of the largest celebrations greeting the M.-G.-M. train was in Buffalo, N. Y., where a large police guard escorted the novel train, and a large automobile parade followed, on a tour of the principal streets.

"Phantom of the Opera" Making History at Big City Premieres

EXCEPTIONAL reports were received early this week at the Universal Home Office concerning record-breaking opening of "The Phantom of the Opera" in various cities throughout the United States. They absolutely convinced Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, and other Universal executives, that in "The Phantom" that company has the greatest box-office proposition it ever released. Along with the striking reports from the various premiere showings, came additional reports from the Astor Theatre, New York City, and Aldine Theatre, in Philadelphia, where the picture continues to pile up astounding box-office totals.

The new openings were in the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D. C.; the Rialto in Los Angeles; the Broadway-Strand in Detroit; the Columbia in Portland; the Columbia in Seattle; the Rialto, Fort Worth; the Plaza, Sioux City; and the Majestic in Grand Isle, Neb.

The Washington opening was one of the most brilliant ever staged in the nation's capital. The management of the theatre and the Universal exploitation representatives vied with each other in making the affair colorful and in keeping with the unusual openings previously staged at the Astor in New York and at the Aldine in Philadelphia.

In the face of unusually strong opposition, the Washington opening established a record for that house. The police were needed to regulate the long box-office lines. The theatre reports that hundreds were turned away.

The Los Angeles premiere was equally as noteworthy. It was turned into a gala night for Hollywood, and the Rialto Theatre was the rendezvous for many of the prominent figures of the industry. Flood-lights illuminated the theatre front and still and movie cameras clicked as the screen favorites arrived. A broadcasting apparatus was used to announce the arrivals to the crowds inside and outside the theatre. The principal stars in "The Phantom" were present and were presented on the stage, amid great applause.

At Portland and Seattle the picture also opened to capacity houses and followed with sell-out days. At the Plaza, in Sioux City, despite a terrific wind, snow and rain storm, the picture topped by far previous records for opening days, while at the Majestic Theatre in Grand Isle, Neb., a 786 seat house, the theatre played to 2,289 admissions the opening day.

Manager James Carrier of the Broadway-Strand Theatre in Detroit reported to Universal that the first three days of his "Phantom" run was a series of capacity-plus showings.

O'Loghlin Succeeds Cohen

J. P. O'Loghlin, at present manager of Fox Film Corporation's Toronto office, has been promoted to the position of Canadian district manager, according to an announcement by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the Fox organization.

Mr. O'Loghlin succeeds Ira H. Cohen, who has been assigned to the Home Office as special representative with supervision over the Detroit, Indianapolis and Cincinnati exchanges.

Announces Cast

With the engagement of Forrest Stanley for the leading male role, Harry Cohn, head of the Waldorf Studios announces the following members of the cast which will support Dorothy Revier in the Columbia Picture "The Penalty of Jazz" her next starring vehicle. Tom Ricketts, Ethel Wales, Maude Wayne, Frank Wood and Erwin Connely.

"Man on Box" Changes Policy of the Forum in Los Angeles

WORD from the management of the Forum Theatre in Los Angeles states that the house policy had to be changed because of the big success of Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box" which had its west coast premier at that theatre last week. It has been the policy to change pictures each week no matter how big the business. But it seems so many persons were turned away on the opening week of the Chaplin picture that the Forum decided to hold it over. The telegram received at the Warners New York office follows:

"Man On Box" opened Forum Theatre Saturday night to tremendous business. Crowds packed the theatre and huge waiting lines outside broke house records. Picture will be held second week changing house policy for week runs."

First National to Make "Too Much Money"

Israel Zangwill's stage play, "Too Much Money," will be transferred to the screen this Fall by First National, according to an announcement by Earl Hudson, head of that organization's Eastern production units in New York.

"Too Much Money" will be made in New York under Hudson's supervision. Filming is expected to start within the next two weeks. Director John Francis Dillon is being brought from Hollywood to direct the picture. Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson will be seen in the featured roles.

M.-G.-M. Buys "Altars of Desire"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has acquired the motion picture rights to "Altars of Desire," by Maria Thompson Davies and will shortly assign the task of scenarization and adaptation to one of the staff writers at the Culver City studios.

"Altars of Desire" contains every element necessary to the making of a successful picture. Film rights have been eagerly sought by various producers and its acquisition by M.-G.-M. consummates a long series of negotiations. It will be filmed on an elaborate scale.

Mary Pickford Catches the Audience and Critics in "Little Annie Rooney"

MARY PICKFORD in her return to the harum scarum and hoydenish roles in "Little Annie Rooney," her current United Artists Corporation release, has captured the public and the critics of New York City, just as she brought movie patrons and reviewers to her feet in other cities where this new screen feature has been shown prior to its Broadway run.

"Little Annie Rooney" brought more than capacity business to the Mark Strand Theatre Sunday, October 18, and that the big audiences thoroughly enjoyed Miss Pickford as Little Annie and her return to the portrayals of the rough and tumble youngsters of twelve or thirteen years was emphatically demonstrated by many outbursts of spontaneous applause, ripples of laughter that spread all through the house, and sufficient evidence that the pathos of the picture struck home.

"'Little Annie Rooney' is a film in which Mary Pickford returns to the type of playing with which she made her beginning, which is, and there can now be little question about Mary Pickford at her best," said Quinn Martin in the New York World. "I have never seen her more youthful nor lovelier. She is as wistfully juvenile as she was ten years ago, and every inch as adorable. Often the crowds laughed at her; at least once they wept bitterly and noisily with her; and always they were intensely interested in her. This is the Mary Pickford of old, the Mary Pickford who is real—the one and only Mary Pickford. And that is about all that anybody could ask of her."

"'Our Mary' is not only giving the world and his wife what they want in 'Little Annie Rooney,' but she is demonstrating beyond the shadow of a doubt that she can look like a little girl ten years old," wrote Louella Parsons in the New York American. "I know 'Little Annie' is going to delight Miss Pickford's large army of admirers. It is the sort of character she plays so well, and in addition it has been most ably directed by William Beaudine. I cheerfully recommend this play to those who are shopping for pictures this week. Mary is back younger and more adorable than ever."

"Capitulating to the desire of the vast majority of her public, Mary Pickford returns to curls, short frocks and to the part of an East Side hoyden," said Mordaunt Hall in the Times. "'Little Annie Rooney' is delightfully filmed and Miss Pickford's characterization is emphatically pleasing. She looks smaller than ever. She makes Annie a lovable, wistful little creature. This charming actress has not changed perceptibly since the early days of pictures."

"In 'Little Annie Rooney' Mary Pickford is captivating as the little gamin," said the reviewer for the Morning Telegraph, Aileen St. John-Brenon. "There is lots of fun in this picture, and many laughs. Anything in which Miss Pickford appears is never boresome, and in this she is another of those lovable scamps which has endeared her to the public for years."

"Those who have been wishing for the nation's sweetheart in childish roles should be amply satisfied with "Little Annie Rooney,'" said Harriette Underhill in the Herald-Tribune. "We think there is not an actress on the screen who can do anything better than Miss Pickford can do it. Probably 'Little Annie Rooney' will make millions of dollars. Plenty of people are delighted with it."

"The kind of picture in which everybody wants to see Mary Pickford," said Rose Pelswick in the Evening Journal, "and she is seen in a role that is absolutely delightful. Mary looks amazingly young, and the 'gags' in the picture are uproariously funny. Don't miss it."

"'Little Annie Rooney' is Mary Pickford as you love her—human, natural, hoydenish, generous and loving—she's great," said Regina Cannon in the Evening Graphic, "Mary hasn't done anything half as good for a long time, and you'll like it. The story is cramful of heart interest, comedy, and tense situations. The tears follow laughter in rapid fire succession."

"'Little Annie Rooney' brings back to the screen—after an absence of more than a year—America's first widely popular movie star, Mary Pickford, and judging by the cordial reception with which she was received—well, she is still 'Our Mary' as of long ago," said the Moviegoer in the Sun. "From every angle the picture proved its worth. I should say that 'Little Annie Rooney' would entertain nearly everyone."

Fox Lists "Golden Butterfly" With Alma Rubens and Lytell

ALMA RUBENS and Bert Lytell head the brilliant cast with which John Griffith Wray, former Inc., director-in-chief, has started production of "The Golden Butterfly" on the Fox Films lot in Hollywood.

"The Golden Butterfly" is based on an original story by Evelyn Campbell dealing with a modern theme—the redemption of a girl whose conniving father has taught her the world owes them a living, and to get it, no matter what the price. Bradley King of the Fox scenario staff, has made the most of this dramatic situation in adapting the story for film use.

Miss Rubens, who played the role of a little American dancer stranded in Morocco in "The Winding Stair" under Mr. Wray's direction, will play the role of the captivating heroine, and Bert Lytell is the principal factor in working her redemption. Frank Keenan had just completed his portrayal of the aristocratic old Grandfather Grenfal in the Fox screen version of James Oliver Curwood's stroy of the Northwest, "When the Door Opened," and was at once selected to play the part of the conniving father.

Huntley Gordon has been cast as the villain of the picture, and Herbert Rawlinson has an important character role. Vera Lewis and Carolynne Snowden have been assigned to the two principal feminine roles in support of Miss Rubens.

Fresh from their success in filming "The Winding Stair," Miss Rubens and Mr. Wray have moved to completely new surroundings in "The Golden Butterfly," which is Mr. Wray's second picture under his contract with Fox Films. "The Winding Stair" breathes the romance of Morocco and the dash of the French Foreign Legion. "The Golden Butterfly" is filled with the pulse-quickening drama of a modern American city's underworld.

Completing "Joanna"

Edwin Carewe expects to finish photography on his next First National picture, "Joanna," H. L. Gates' widely syndicated novel, next week. He has made rapid progress on this production and expreses himself as extremely well pleased with the acting of Dorothy Mackaill,. in the leading role, as well as the performances of the rest of the cast which includes: Jack Mulhall, George Fawcett, Paul Nicholson, John T. Murray, Yvonne Carewe, Lillian Langdon and Dolores del Rio.

"Drusilla With a Million" Shatters Theatre Records

"DRUSILLA WITH A MILLION," the F.B.O. Gold Bond production which began its career so auspiciously at the Capitol Theatre, New York, playing to capacity audiences and winning the unanimous plaudits of the newspaper men, continues to shatter all records of past performance in the first run houses in which it is now playing. The production, which bases its bid for popularity on the fact that it is a "heart interest drama," is receiving unusually enthusiastic commendation from the press throughout the country.

During the run of the picture at New Bedford, Mass., Mira Dana, reviewing for the Standard, said:

"The Capitol Theatre was sold out for the two evening shows yesterday to crowds that re-acted demonstratively to every laugh-and-cry device in the show world. The picture was 'Drusilla With A Million'....Mary Carr gives a good performance as the sad, tired out little charity inmate . . . 'Drusila' will return two million plus to its discerning producers."

When the production ran at the Capitol, St. Paul, Minn., the Pioneer Press commented:

"In Drusilla With A Million" featuring that most estimable of screen mamas, Mary Carr, the Capitol has a knockout picture. Highly recommended. In fact, it is one of the remarkable pictures of the year."

W. D. reporting on the film during its run at the Terminal Theatre, Newark, N. J. enthused in the Star-Eagle:

"'Drusilla With A Million' featuring Mary Carr of 'Over the Hill' fame, is a photoplay that will set your heart athrob as the tale unfolds. The Rev. Dr. Henry R. Rose of the Church of the Redeemer, in addressing a movie audience recently, declared that the theatre-goer needs a touch of pathos with movie diet. This picture will furnish the emotion. Crowded with tense moments."

The Call, Newark, said: "Mary Carr in her present vehicle packed them in...at the Capitol Theatre, New York. The show shapes up well in paper. It will, for a great many fans, shape up even better on the screen. There a great many women and men who get a thrill out of shedding tears over a gray-haired, motherly woman. Mary Carr is all of that."

Praise United Artists Film

London Likes Griffith's "Sally of the Sawdust"

"'Sally of the Sawdust' makes you laugh with tears in your eyes," said the London Star, when this United Artists Corporation release was shown at the Empire Theatre, London. "W. C. Fields is the discovery of the year."

"Dashes of broad comedy, some of it as full-blooded as the old Chaplin-Keystone vintage," said the Evening Standard.

"A recklessly comic picture, lit with splendid humor," said the Sunday Chronicle.

"D. W. Griffith does, somehow, contrive to make people cry, and then make them laugh, and he does both in 'Sally of the Sawdust.'" said the Illustrated Sunday Herald.

"Griffith has given us a genuine comedy, sentimental at times as only Griffith can be, and full of the humor that is human," said the Referee.

"A film that will take a lot of beating. A real honest-to-goodness story with rich humor at every turn," said the News of the World.

"Its humor is good and plentiful," said the Observer.

"Griffith is a wizard of the humanities, and 'Sally of the Sawdust' is as clean and as refreshing as a gale from the sea," said the Express.

"'Sally' will rule the hearts of London picture-goers while she is with us," said the Daily Graphic.

"The most satisfying film entertainment from Mr. Griffith since he gave us 'Way Down East'," said the Daily Chronicle.

Warner Stars Borrowed

Warner Bros. stars and featured players appear to be in increasing demand from other companies, whenever their services are available. Announcement was made this week that the Warners have lent Kenneth Harlan to William Fox for the leading masculine role in "The Golden Strain." Also they have loaned Louise Fazenda to Famous Players-Lasky, to permit Miss Fazenda to play a featured role with Ernest Torrence and others in "Hassan," which is being produced by Raoul Walsh.

This dainty maid in Japanese costume is Sally O'Neill, who has been cast as "Mary" in the Edmund Goulding production of "Sally, Irene and Mary," for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, now in production.

CARL LAEMMLE, HEAD OF UNIVERSAL PICTURES, AND SOME PROSPECTIVE "STARS"

As a result of the selective competitions held in many cities throughout the United States, these five girls are now at work in Universal City, and if, during the six months of their contractual work they "make good," bigger things are in store for them. Mr. Laemmle is taking a keen, personal, interest in the effort to find fresh faces and new talent for Universal pictures. Emmaline ("Teddy") Criswell, of Milwaukee, is seen at the top, left; Vanna Carroll, of 'Frisco, at the top, right. At the bottom, left to right, are: Dorothy Gulliver, of Salt Lake City; FlorenceAllen, of Chicago, and Blanche Fisher, of Omaha. These girls, and many others, were selected through newspaper beauty contests, the judges being impartial residents of the cities in which the various contests were held.

Universal's Traveling Studio Unit Stages Beauty Contest in New York

UNIVERSAL'S mobile studio unit, the "See America First" tractor and trailer, which has been touring across the Continent during the last few months, arrived in New York City recently. It will film interesting scenes in and around New York for inclusion in Carl Laemmle's symposium of "See America First" pictures. It also is conducting a giant beauty contest in connection with the New York Daily Mirror, by which a young New York girl will be selected to go to Universal City, Cal., the big Universal studio plant, and learn to be a movie actress.

The tie-up with the Daily Mirror has developed into one of the greatest newspaper tie-ups ever recorded. More than 30,000 entrants already have been recorded. They come from all sections of the greater city and from all walks of life. Holah, who is conducting the contest from Universal's end, says that enough talent is being unearthed in this one contest to supply all the studios for five years.

The Daily Mirror-Laemmle Beauty Contest is limited to girls between 18 and 25 living or working in New York City. The winner will be sent to Universal City with all expenses paid, and will receive a six months' contract in Universal pictures at $50 a week. At Universal City she will go through a regular course of training by which to develop her screen talents and will get ample opportunity to become an asset to the screen.

In a number of cities, the See America First unit already has conducted these contests. The winners have been sent to Universal City and now are making rapid strides. The first contest was held in San Francisco. The winner, Miss Vanna Carroll, was adjudged the most beautiful girl in San Francisco. She was selected in connection with the San Francisco Bulletin.

As soon as she reached Universal City she was immediately cast in "Sporting Life," one of Universal's big Jewel pictures of the coming season. Later she took leading parts in two-reel westerns starring Ben Corbett and Peewee Holmes, and also did work in "The Winking Idol," an Adventure picture, and in a big western feature Universal is making.

The next contest was held in Salt Lake City in connection with the Salt Lake Telegram. The winner was Dorothy Gulliver, who is hailed by Universal executives as one of the biggest finds of the year. She already has played in good parts in "The Still Alarm," a new Universal-Jewel; in "The Winking Idol," "Two Blocks Away," another big Jewel, and in "Strings of Steel," a new Adventure picture.

A contest was held in Omaha, in connection with the Omaha Daily News. The winner in that contest was Miss Blanche Fisher. She has been at Universal City for more than a month now and has worked in various roles, among them, one with Charles Puffy in "White Cargo," a one-reel comedy; also parts in "Strings of Steel" and a big western feature.

Contests also were held in Chicago and Milwaukee, in connection with the Chicago American and the Milwaukee Sentinel. The Chicago winner was Miss Florence Allen, who is now at Universal City playing a small part in "The Radio Detective," a new Adventure picture. In Milwaukee, the winner was Miss Emmaline Criswell, who has arrived at the Universal West Coast studio and is cast for an important role in a new western feature.

There also were contests in Detroit, Toledo and Cleveland. The Detroit winner, Miss Grace Parent, already has established herself at Universal City by excellent work in "Two Blocks Away," a new Jewel production. The Toledo and Cleveland winners, Miss Irene

F. B. O. Announces Thirteen Productions for November

THIRTEEN releases, five of which are features and eight short subjects, are scheduled for release by F. B. O. during November.

The imposing program is headed by "No Man's Law," an Independent Pictures Corporation production starring Bob Custer. The handsome western star, who is making a second series of Texas Ranger pictures for the distributing company, will be seen in a fast moving action melodrama, replete with fights and thrills. "No Man's Law" will be released on November 1st.

A western film starring Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s "surprise" western star, who sprang instantaneously into favor with his first picture "Let's Go, Gallagher," has also been set for November 1st. The production is as yet untitled.

"All Around Frying Pan," based on the magazine story by Frank R. Pierce, will serve as Fred Thomson's next super-western, and will be distributed on November 8th. David Kirkland directed from his own continuity. Clara Horton, James Marcus, William Courtwright, John Lince, Monte Collins, Elmo Lincoln and Newton Barber support Thomson.

"The Last Edition," Emory Johnson's latest production, which he calls "a tribute to the profession of journalism," and which is listed as a Gold Bond picture by F. B. O. will also be shown to exhibitors on November 8th. "The Last Edition'" was written by Emilie Johnson, the mother of the young director-producer. The cast is headed by Ralph Lewis, with Lila Leslie, Ray Hallor, Frances Teague, Rex Leas, Lou Payne, David "Red" Kirby, Wade Boteler, Cuyler Supplee, Leigh Willard and Will Frank in support.

The second Texas Ranger production, starring Bob Custer, as yet untitled, will be shown on November 29th.

Eight short subjects are scheduled for November.

"'A Ton of Fun' in a Beauty Parlor," a Standard Fat Men comedy starring Fat Karr, Tiny Alexander and Kewpie Ross, the three fattest men on the screen, heads the list, and will be shown on November 1st.

The same day will see the release of a Bray Cartoon from the pen of Walter Lantz, as yet untitled.

On November 8th the fifth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" starring Alberta Vaughn will be distributed. No title for this two reel subject has yet been selected. In support of Miss Vaughn are Larry Kent, Al Cooke and Kit Guard, while Ralph Ceder is directing from the continuities of Doris Anderson. "The Adventures of Mazie" appeared in Top Notch Magazine and comes from the pen of Nell Martin.

The sixth Bray Cartoon, as yet untitled, will be distributed on November 15th, as well as "Hold Tight" a two reel Blue Ribbon comedy starring Alice Ardell, which Joe Rock is producing for Standard Cinema Corporation and F. B. O. release.

On November 22nd the sixth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be ready for exhibitors.

A Standard Fat Men comedy, as yet untitled, will be shown on November 29th, as well as a Bray Cartoon, also untitled.

Tiffany Film Opens Theatre

"Souls For Sables" the Tiffany Production featuring Claire Windsor and Eugene O'Brien has the distinction of having been selected to be the opening feature attraction for several new theatres. It was selected for the opening of the Broadway Astoria Theatre, L. I. and will also be the feature attraction at the opening of the Million Dollar Rialto Theatre in Paterson, N. J.

"The Other Woman's Story" First from New Director

WITH the release of the Preferred Picture, "The Other Woman's Story," B. P. Schulberg will introduce to the filmgoing public the work of a heretofore unknown director, B. F. Stanley who is said to have achieved remarkable results with this first megaphone assignment.

Mr. Stanley gained prominence first as a newspaper man and later as a writer of popular fiction. He convinced the producer that he possessed many original ideas on direction technique—a contention that appears to be well founded according to those who previewed "The Other Woman's Story" on the coast.

Mr. Schulberg believes his work will compare favorably with that of Marcel De Sano, another directorial discovery who received his first opportunity on the Preferred lot with "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work."

"The Other Woman's Story" is next on the release schedule of B. P. Schulberg Productions, Alice Calhoun, Robert Frazer, Mahlon Hamilton, Helen Lee Worthing, David Torrence, Riza Royce and Charles Clary are on the list of featured players.

Universal's Studio Unit Reaches New York

Franklin and Miss Mabelle Perry, respectively, have not yet completed their preliminary training, but will be put into parts in a few weeks.

Thus Universal is giving its student players real experience right from the start, in connection with their theoretical training, lessons in make-up and other studio customs. This method is said to be highly efficient and to bring out latent talent very quickly.

It is expected that the New York girl will be selected within two weeks. She will be sent to Universal City and put through a course of training after she appears in a special New York picture to be made against the backgrounds of New York's prominent sights and places. This picture will be for special release in New York theatres and will be of especial interest to New York picture fans. With the columns of publicity now running in the Daily Mirror, this picture promises to be one of the best exploited short pictures ever screened in New York. Universal has produced a local picture of this nature in connection with every contest, and its local showings have been feature days at the various theatres which booked it.

"New Commandment" Ready; R. T. Kane Lays Future Plans

ROBERT T. KANE enters the field of motion picture production with his own trade mark on two productions for First National release, both of which were designed especially for the box-office. As a result, the entire studio organization of the Kane units are congratulating Mr. Kane over his enthusiastic entrance into the field of the cinema "on his own," after several successful seasons as general production manager for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Naturally with this experience as a background and having more than successfuly turned out a tremendous volume of box-office merchandise for Messrs. Lasky and Zukor, Robert T. Kane still has the box office in mind when he organized his company.

He carefully selected his initial production, now complete, called "The New Commandment," adapted from Colonel Frederick Palmer's novel, "Invisible Wounds." Howard Higgin and Sada Cowan made the adaptation for the screen and handled their end in great style. Howard Higgin, who also directed, sets a new standard with the manner in which he has handled the general direction. Ernest Hallor and Art. Jacobson, at the cameras, have given the industry something new in photography with a new lighting that has something more than tone and composition.

The cast for "The New Commandment" includes Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Effie Shannon, George Cooper, Pedro De Cordova, Dian Kane, Betty Jewel, Holbrook Blinn and others. In this picture which, according to those who have already looked at the picture, Mr. Lyon and Miss Sweet are at their best in the tense love scenes. The comedy has been handled by George Cooper, and Higgin has injected unexpected thrills, including an automobile smashing through a crowded Parisian cabaret; an aeroplane bombing scene; an automobile chase through the Montmartre district; a huge tree falling on Holbrook Blinn; a sensational fight in the cabaret in which Ben Lyon and George Cooper handle a crowd of 1,000 extras and other box-office requisites. The sets were designed by Robert Hass, who has accomplished an artistic triumph all his own with the beautful sets.

With "The New Commandment" cut, edited and ready for the trade, Mr. Kane turned his attention to his second vehicle for First National release, selecting "Seven Wives of Bluebeard." It is an original story, suggested by himself and adapted by Blanche Merrill. The early "rushes" presage a box-office success because Kane has had embodied in the story many situations that make for box-office success.

The cast has been carefully picked, and he retains Ben Lyon and Blanche Sweet to head the cast. Alfred Santell is directing. Others in the cast are Lois Wilson, Dorothy Sebastian, Diana Kane, Katherine Ray, Lucy Fox, Sam Hardy and Andrew Mack. Santell, a fine director, is injecting some novel situations to make "Seven Wives of Bluebeard" sparkle with novelty from start to finish. He starts off with a Romeo and Juliet sequence and shifts to a newspaper office.

Mr. Kane is now planning his third production, to be directed by Howard Higgin. It will be "The Reckless Lady," from the novel by Sir Philip Gibbs. Kane obtained the story after spirited bidding against every producing organization in the business. He will screen "The Dancer from Paris," by Michael Arlen, and is lining up other box-office features to be announced later.

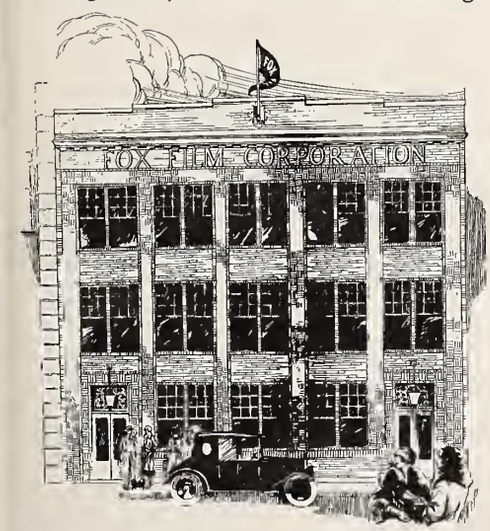
ROBERT T. KANE

Producer of "The New Commandment," for First National release, is now making "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," with several other big things "in the offing."

Denny Insured For Half Million

One of the largest insurance policies ever taken out on the life of a movie star, was signed by Universal, for Reginald Denny.

The popularity accorded Denny within the last year has risen to such sensational heights that Universal decided to take no chances. The investment made in purchasing stories, designing sets, reserving bookings and actual production plans, was so great that Denny's incapacitation would cause a serious loss to the motion picture company.



Beauty and utility will be combined in Fox Film Corporation's New York Exchange at 343-45 West 44th Street, the cornerstone of which will be laid on October 28. Senator James J. Walker, Democratic candidate for mayor, will wield the trowel. Officials of city and state, stars of stage and screen and 300 exhibitors from the metropolitan area will take part in the ceremonies.

M-G-M's "Exchange of Wives" Wins Praise from N. Y. Critics

HOBART HENLEY'S "An Exchange of Wives" has won exceptionally favorable notices from the Manhattan critics on opening at the Capitol Theatre in New York. Eleanor Boardman, Lew Cody, Renee Adoree and Creighton Hale are featured in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of the Cosmo Hamilton stage success of the same name, which has been adapted to the screen by Frederic and Fanny Hatton.

"'An Exchange of Wives' is just as hectic as the title suggests," writes the New York Evening Graphic. "No French farce that ever found its way from the Place de Theatre to the Gay White Way ever afforded more thrills. The treatment is extremely modern and there are several new and highly amusing angles. The clever titles add not a little to the fun. How Eleanor Boardman arranges the exchange of wives and later straightens out the tangle forms the plot of the highly amusing and well directed comedy."

"'Exchange of Wives' is spicy, daring and skates along the edge of suggestion as far as it dares and still keeps within censorial bounds," says the New York American. It amuses those who are married and helps those who are single to stay that way and be thankful. Lew Cody does an effective bit of comedy in his moments of trying to square himself with his wife. He always helps make my day in pictures of this kind, for as a flirtatious husband he has no equal. 'Exchange of Wives' is well done. Hobart Henley has seen to that by doing a very good directorial job."

"It's an amusing comedy," reports the New York Evening Journal, "Cody is a great comedian, and Eleanor Boardman does good work."

"Eleanor Boardman is attractive and capable as Margaret," remarks the New York Times. "Renee Adoree is efficient as the constant flirt. Lew Cody is at ease as John and Creighton Hale is effective as Victor.

"Probably one of the best farce-comedies ever turned out by any firm," testifies Variety, "made by a director who has inserted a laugh for almost every minute. It is rich, rare and as racy as you'd care to see. A sure-fire picture. It is a finely made film and reflects much credit on Henley."

Takes Columbia Output

With Canadian exchanges turning over a greater volume of the independent product than ever before, it is noteworthy to hear of the contracting by the Film de Luxe organization of Montreal of the entire Columbia output for 1925-26. At the head of Film de Luxe is Charles Lalumiere. Besides Columbia he is handling Banner productions and many others.

Astute Critics Agree

About 1,200 Not "Hard Boiled" Vigorously Applaud Syd Chaplin's Comedy

No theatre in New York or elsewhere ever resounded with louder shrieks of joy or peals of laughter than did Warners Theatre when 1,200 crippled children attended a special morning matinee showing of Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box."

The youngsters were present as guests of H. M. Warner. They were recruited from Bellevue Hospital, from the Hebrew Orphan Asylums and from Catholic and Protestant Institutions throughout the city. They came in busses, carry-alls and even ambulances, and some of the little unfortunates had to be carried into the theatre.

Once inside the kiddies had the treat of their lives, a fact which they acknowledged with enthusiasm. Popular songs were played on the organ, the child guests joining in the choruses. A Krazy Kat cartoon was shown and a special trained dog act delighted the children. Then came "The Man on the Box," when the enthusiasm of the holiday makers reached its climax. The kiddies agreed it was the jolliest morning they had ever experienced.

Curran Joins Columbia

A statement from the head offices of the Columbia Pictures Corporation announces that Barry Curran has been engaged as chief of the publicity department.

Curren, who formerly exploited Chadwick Pictures, resigned from this organization to join the Columbia forces, and will immediately begin a special advertising and publicity campaign on the 1925-1926 Columbia program. Under the direction of Mr. Curran the personnel of the publicity department has been materially increased to enable it to efficiently deal with the extensive plans outlined by Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn.

Intimate little snapshots of stars and directors "on the set" often give interesting sidelights on the picture, and here we have Rudolph Valentino and his director, Clarence Brown (right) photographed during the filming of a scene for "The Eagle," the star's first picture, for United Artists release. Vilma Banky is seated next to the star.

P. D. C. Production Units Go 22,000 Miles for "Shots"

WITHIN the past month the Producers Distributing Corporation units filming "Steel Preferred," "Rocking Moon," "Braveheart" and "Fifth Avenue" have traveled approximately 22,000 miles to make shots of especially selected locations.

Under the direction of George Melford, John Bowers and Lilyan Tashman at the head of a big supporting company and a large corps of technicians have traveled to Sitka, Alaska, for scenes in the Barrett Willoughby story "Rocking Moon."

Marguerite de la Motte with Allan Forrest and the members of the "Fifth Avenue" company, under the direction of Robert Vignola, made a trip to New York City for local atmosphere and background.

James Hogan took the all star cast of "Steel Preferred" to Pittsburgh for scenes in the big steel mills.

Alan Hale, directing "Braveheart," has roamed over all of the West Coast, from Washington to the Mexican border, with Rod La Rocque and the supporting cast which includes Lillian Rich, Robert Edeson, Tyrone Power and Jean Acker.

Before these productions are fully completed, the traveling for location trips will exceed twenty-five thousand miles, a distance equal to a trip around the world.

Far from the beaten paths are the sequences in Frances Marion's first production for Producers Distributing Corporation, "Simon the Jester," as may be judged from this "shot" of Cyril Chadwick and Billy Platt.

F. B. O. 1926-27 Plans

Twelve Specials and Six Star Series Part of Program

With the selection of "The Life of Theodore Roosevelt" as one of its chief presentations for the new season, as well as several other important subjects, F. B. O. is taking time by the forelock in a production sense. F. B. O. will have its entire 1926-27 program arranged before many more days, it was announced recently by J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of production.

While it is deemed best to withhold the titles of the various important productions to compose the new program, it is understood at least twelve special attractions will be made. There will also be at least six star series, including productions starring Fred Thomson, Maurice (Lefty) Flynn, Evelyn Brent, Dick Talmadge, Tom Tyler, Bob Custer and others. It is likely, moreover, that one or two other stars of first rank will also be engaged for a series of productions.

It is also announced that F. B. O. will continue to be active in the two reel film. As soon as the current "Mazie" series is completed, another series "Fighting Hearts" by Sam Hellman will be put into production. H. C. Witwer's "Bill Grimm's Progress," a series telling of the adventures of a taxi driver also will be produced.

Among the striking scenes in Paramount's "The Vanishing American" are the scenes showing the fighting between the Navajo Indians and the cliff dwellers. Richard Dix and Lois Wilson are featured in this exceptional offering

Hoffman and Sistrom Explain Need for Production Managers

THE exact status of the "production manager;" a comparatively new figure in the producing personnel of the studios, is something not quite understood by many people. To make this point clear, Milton Hoffman production manager for Cecil B. De Mille, and William Sistrom, general manager of Metropolitan pictures, explain the uses and the duties of production managers and disclose their value in injecting the "public viewpoint" into the making of pictures.

"The production manager," says Hoffman, "came logically in the wake of increased specialization. In the old days when directors were at the same time actors and even writers, functions overlapped. This was not good because while it gave the individual a general view of the whole field, the view was purely superficial.

"With the advent of specialists, came more intensive development of production and the deeper penetration and close study it entailed, so tied the directors and scenarists to their studios and their subdivisions as to disassociate them from the trend of the demand in the 16,000 theatres which ultimately consume our product.

"As a result these production specialists have welcomed the entrance into the ring of a "third party" whose chief value lies in his broad rather than specialized viewpoint; in his ability to understand the technical problems of both writer and director, and to merge into this knowledge his carefully maintained contact with the latest developments of public taste.

"You might call the production manager the mirror of sales realities to which directors and writers appeal for the commercial reflection of their inspirations. In the light of the present intense competition existing in our business, directors and writers have found that best results are obtained by leaving to others the close study of that complicated science; sales requirements.

"And also now we have the conference method of making pictures where the images of clever creative minds are measured closely with the latest laws of supply and demand.

"Perhaps I particularly enjoy the work of a production manager because it enables me to utilize a most valuable earlier experience as a film salesman. Certainly there is never-ending variety in this newly developed position of liaison officer between the two vital but totally differentiated sciences of film production and distribution."

William Sistrom, general manager of Metropolitan Pictures, adds an interesting sidelight to this technical discussion.

"The production manager," contends Sistrom, "has come to fill in motion pictures the place held in other business corporations by the 'outside-minded' member of the Board of Directors."

Kennedy Rounding Up Cast

Walter Tilford's Director in From Miami, Preparing for "Shooting Stars"

Lem F. Kennedy, the director, arrived in New York City from Miami, Fla., to be greeted by a snowless blizzard, and after he had thawed out sufficiently, at the Hotel Langwell, he tossed a light overcoat over his arm and began the rounds of the casting agencies to seek stars and players for Walter Tilford's forthcoming production, temporarily called "'Shooting Stars," to be filmed in the Tilford Studios in Miami.

"Shooting Stars" is from a Top Notch Magazine story by Hapsburg Liebe, whose "Suwanee River" was directed by Mr. Kennedy for Mr. Tilford. Mr. Liebe's stories have been used by many of the big stars for some of their best pictures.

When a representative of Moving Picture World found Mr. Kennedy at the Langwell, the latter was enthusiastic over the additions that have been made to the Tilford Studio, at No. 1311 South Miami Avenue, Miami. The studio space has been greatly enlarged, as has the laboratory, and with a stage 50 x 150 awaiting him, Mr. Kennedy is eager to round up his players and get back to "'warm weather," lots of sunshine and "work."

"Sea Horses" Is Dwan's Next

Allan Dwan's next production for Paramount will be "Sea Horses," adapted by Paul Schofield from a recently published novel by Francis Brett Young, it was announced by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of production.

Dwan is now cutting his latest picture, "Stage Struck," starring Gloria Swanson. Upon completion of this work the director will begin casting for the sea story.

One of the stimulating pictures among current releases is the F. B. O. special production, "The Keeper of the Bees," and Robert Frazer, the lead, is seen here in his role of the soldier.

TALKING OVER "BIG STUFF"

J. E. D. Meador (left) and John S. Robertson (right) have plenty of "big stuff" to talk about—Maude Adams—Kipling's "Kim"—and more to come.

Universal Has Big Program Now In Making at "U" City

WITH two large feature productions just finished, three about to be completed and six others to be put into production within two weeks, Universal is continuing with the biggest yearly program of features in its history.

Edward Sloman has just finished directing "His People," which is expected to create a great sensation when it is released this winter. Rudolph Schildkraut and Rosa Rosanova are featured.

Mary Philbin has just completed her starring vehicle, Stella Maris," in which she plays a dual role with Elliott Dexter opposite.

Three pictures are in their closing sequence. These are "The Midnight Sun," a Dimitri Buchowetzki production; "Two Blocks Away," a Harry Pollard picture, and an untitled Western being directed by Edward Sedgwick.

In the first Laura La Plante and Pat O'Malley are co-starred. "Two Blocks Away" features Charlie Murray, George Sidney and Vera Gordon, and in the western are Hoot Gibson and Dustin Farnum.

William Seiter will soon commence "Skinner's Dress Suit" starring Reginald Denny. Svend Gade will direct "Wives For Rent." "The Brute" with House Peters, "The Big Gun" with an all star cast, "The Perch of the Devil" starring Louise Dresser, and "Under Western Skies" starring Norman Kerry are others soon to start.

Activity In Casting

Players Are Being Selected for Two Warner Bros. Features

Several additions have been made in the last few days to the cast of "The Cave Man," Warner Bros.' picturization of the Gillette Burgess story, in which Matt Moore and Marie Prevost are to star. Phyllis Haver, Hedda Hopper, John Patrick and Myrna Loy are the latest to be added to the list.

Roy Del Ruth has been selected to direct "The Agony Column," Monte Blue's next starring vehicle for Warner Bros. Del Ruth lately finished "Hogan's Alley," in which also Blue is starred, with Patsy Ruth Miller playing opposite him.

To date the cast of "The Agony Column" includes, besides Monte Blue and Dorothy Devore, Charles Conklin, Myrna Loy, Helen Dunbar and Otto Hoffman.

Production Soon "In High" At First National's N. Y. Studios

AFTER several weeks of inactivity, production at First National's New York studios is expected to swing into high speed within a few days, according to an announcement by Earl Hudson, supervisor of this company's eastern production units.

"Men of Steel" will be the first picture to start. This will go into production between the 15th and 25th, according to present plans. The United States Steel Corporation, through Judge Elbert H. Gary, has agreed to co-operate with First National in every way and turn its vast interests over to the company for the filming of this picture. "Men of Steel" is to be a steel epic. Milton Sills wrote the original story and will be seen in the starring role. George Archainbaud has been selected to direct. Doris Kenyon, May Allison, Claude Gillingwater, George Fawcett, Victor McLaglen and John Philip Kolb will comprise the principal players. Hudson will supervise.

Meanwhile work is being rushed for the starting of a half dozen other pictures which will be placed in production as rapidly as space at the studios will permit.

In the cutting room are "The Scarlet Saint," which Director George Archainbaud recently completed with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in the featured roles, and "The Unguarded Hour," a Milton Sills picture.

Pressbook on Semon's Latest

Chadwick Issues Unusual Phamphlet on "The Perfect Clown"

The pressbook on "The Perfect Clown" starring Larry Semon, is the most unusual book ever turned out by the Chadwick Pictures Corporation. The picture, being one of the best comedies produced by Semon, called for a book that would tell the story.

"The Perfect Clown" is one of the funniest pictures in the annals of filmdom, and the book is not only a pressbook, but is also written in the comedy vein. Exceptional stunts, individuality and originality sound a new note in the line of exploitation and description. The scene cuts are invaluable for publication, and are uniquely tied up with jokes. Eight pages of interesting reading matter and honest-to-goodness news, will "put the picture over."

Instead of the usual semi-photographic reproductions for posters, a series of cartoon reproductions with snappy sayings make up the posters. There is also another series of cartoons for exploitation as: "The Perfect Clown Sez: A man who hides behind a woman's skirts, nowadays, is not a coward—he's a magician," or as an additional sign copy, "The Perfect Clown Sez: They're selling cross-word whiskey now—you drink it vertical and get carried out horizontal." These signs are accompanied by the cartoon of the funster himself, and are certain to pave the road to the theatre with laughs.

Ruth Roland Entertains

Ruth Roland entertained the members of her Charleston class with a very unique dinner recently. The main feature of the dinner, according to Miss Roland was that each guest provided part of the menu—each girl cooking her own "special dish." Biscuits were made by Priscilla Dean, salad by Mrs. Roscoe Arbuckle; spaghetti by Eileen Percy; "Texas" by Ruth Roland (Texas is a special dish of chile meat which Miss Roland learned to cook on a visit in Texas and so named it after that State) and rice pudding by Norma Talmadge. It seems there was nothing left for Constance Talmadge to cook, so she was elected to preside at the table. The dinner was voted a huge success by all the guests, especially the part they made themselves—in fact, the Charleston class was changed to "mutual admiration society" before the evening was ended!

Associated Exhibitors' "Triumphant 30"; Drive on Peggy Hopkins Joyce Picture

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS' thirty pictures for the season now have a title—THE TRIUMPHANT 30.

The first picture to be released under this smashing new title is "Counsel for the Defense," a thrilling melodrama of a small town and a keen girl lawyer. Betty Compson holds the stellar role, with House Peters and Rockliffe Fellowes, three big names added to the Associated Exhibitors' roster.

In addition to the scheduled thirty, several gigantic specials will be released, one of which is already completed and is "The Sky Rocket," starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce. None but the Capitol or the Strand will have the first run of this immense production on Broadway. Marshall Neilan directed.

The first eight pictures have already been released, among them some prominent successes of moviedom. These were "Never Weaken," starring Harold Lloyd with Mildred Davis; "Headlines," starring Alice Joyce with Malcolm MacGregor; "Keep Smiling," Monty Banks, with Ann Cornwall; "Manhattan Madness," Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor; "His Buddy's Wife," Glenn Hunter, with Edna Murphy; the great crook melodrama, "Under the Rouge," with Tom Moore and Eileen Percy; "Camille of the Barbary Coast," Mae Busch and Owen Moore; and "Fifty Fifty," with Lionel Barrymore and Hope Hampton.

Two Glenn Hunter pictures are scheduled for release in the near future. Pictures starring such well known players as Blanche Sweet, Ralph Lewis, Clara Bow, Percy Marmont, and many others of like calibre, in addition to other pictures by stars who already have appeared in the first eight, are in process of production.

Oscar Price, president of Associated Exhibitors, announces that not only the pictures for this season are enlisting the hard work and close attention of the studios and workers in his organization, but that plans for next season are being carefully made, and preparations for a program even more extensive and consisting of even greater productions are now in progress.

Authors whose work is especially adapted to the screen are being approached by Associated Exhibitors for the picturization rights to their novels, while the best scenarists are being employed to write photoplays for stars already engaged.

Associated Exhibitors Plan a Nation-wide Exploitation Campaign on "THE SKY ROCKET," the Sales Meteor Starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce

Twenty-four pictures already in production for the remainder of this season, together with the specials, and plans under way for the season following, comprise an extent of activity seldom surpassed in this industry, and is indicative of the renewed enrgy with which the reorganized Associated Exhibitors is attacking the work before it.

Under the new slogan, "The Triumphant 30," the pictures for the season will be offered to exhibitors by a sales corps stimulated for the occasion by better pictures than ever, and more extensive advertising and accessories backing them. John S. Woody, general manager, and Jay A. Gove, general sales manager, are enlarging the department and making the sales force one of the most dominant in the industry.

Paramount Companies Busy On Six Scheduled Pictures

MANNEQUINS and the latest dictates of fashions, the hot sands of the Mojave desert, the vivid color of Bagdad, the gossip of a small American town and the cactus of New Mexico furnish the locale and color for the five companies now busy shooting at the Paramount Hollywood studio.

The good looking girls with the good looking clothes are being directed by James Cruze in "Mannequin," Fannie Hurst's $50,000 prize story in which Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter, ZaSu Pitts and Dolores Costello are the featured players.

Scenes for "Hands Up," Raymond Griffith's starring vehicle under the direction of Clarence Badger, took the company in which Marian Nixon, Mack Swain, George Billings and Virginia Lee Corbin are the principal supporting cast, to the Mojave desert.

"The Golden Sin" is laid in Bagdad, so Raoul Walsh, the producer, is doing everything that is Oriental, with Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Greta Nissen and Louise Fazenda as the featured players.

Pleasanton, near San Francisco, furnished the small town locale for Pola Negri's next starring picture, under the direction of Malcolm St Clair.

"The Enchanted Hill" was in New Mexico in the story by Peter B. Kyne, so Irvin Willat took his company, of which Jack Holt, Florence Vidor, Noah Beery, Mary Brian and Richard Arlen are the featured players to the wide open spaces for the scenes of his picture.

Mildred Davis is hard at work with Victor Fleming preparing for her first picture since her marriage to Harold Lloyd and retirement from the screen nearly three years ago. "Behind the Front" is the title.

"The Freshman" Novelized

Book Tie-Up for Harold Lloyd's Latest Production

For the first time since Harold Lloyd began making pictures, a book tie-up is available to exhibitors playing one of the be-spectacled comedian's features. Grosset & Dunlap are issuing a popular 75-cent edition of Lloyd's latest comedy "The Freshman" and the book is selling big in bookstores, department stores, pharmacies and various other retail outlets throughout the country. The publishers have rented space in stores on both sides of the Colony Theatre, New York City, where "The Freshman" is doing record business, and are selling the book in large quantities.

The book has a handsome three-color jacket bearing a large close-up picture of Harold Lloyd dressed as the character he plays in the picture as well as text matter tying up with the picture. It is illustrated with eight stills from the production.

The novelization of "The Freshman" was made by Russell Holman, of the Paramount advertising department. Holman is not new at the game, having already written novelization of such motion pictures as "The Cheat," "The Story Without a Name," "Manhandled," and "Cobra." He is also a contributor to Life, American Magazine, McClure's and other publications. Being a graduate of Princeton University, he is familiar with the college background required in a story of the type of "The Freshman."

Aldine Gets "Phantom"

Stanley Company's Big Philadelphia First Run House Starts Universal Feature Soon

Jules Levy, Sales Director for the Eastern Division, reports that "The Phantom of the Opera" has been booked into the big Aldine Theatre in Philadelphia for an extended run. The Aldine is a long-run, advanced admission price house, operated by the Stanley Company of America. It is one of the most important theatres in the United States.

The deal was arranged by Levy S. Wittman, "U" Manager in Philly, and Al Boyd, vice-president of the Stanley Company. Upon hearing of the booking, Jules Mastbaum, now in Europe, cabled his gratification over the arrangement.

Boyd, after seeing a preview of "The Phantom," and after hearing of its extraordinary success in New York, characterized the picture as an outstanding screen achievement, and one which the Stanley interests will be proud to run in the big Aldine Theatre.

The picture will be put on in October.

Warner's Acquire "The Sap"

Final arrangements were made this week whereby Warner Bros. secured the picture rights to "The Sap," William A. Grew's play, in which Raymond Hitchcock scored a hit during a long New York run and which, in the hands of other companies, has since been repeating its triumphs all over the country.

The part which Hitchcock played, and which Edward Everett Horton is now portraying in what has become a notable run at the Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, will be taken by Matt Moore, the Warner star.

The play was bought for Moore's specific use, and production work will start as soon as he finishes "The First Year," for which he has been loaned to the William Fox organization.

ALLAN DWAN

"Gloria Swanson's director" deserves a special niche in Filmdom's Hall of Fame. He has directed the glorious Gloria in her best pictures. The list includes "Manhandled," "Her Love Story," "The Wages of Virtue," "Madame Sans Gene," "The Coast of Folly" and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation star's forthcoming picture, "Stage Struck."

Warners Open Cameo

City Officials Honor Guests in Gala Event in Bridgeport

The formal opening as a Warner Bros. house of the Cameo Theatre, in Bridgeport, Conn., was made a gala event to which the city government gave official recognition. Thousands of people packed State Street long before the time set for the first showing to start, and fifteen minutes after the doors were opened the entire orchestra section was filled.

Al Burdick, city clerk, introduced Mayor F. W. Behrens, who extended the city's congratulations to Warner Bros., George H. Dumond, general manager of all Warner theatres, who went from New York to Bridgeport for the opening, and Howard Foerste, the Cameo's managing director.

The interior color scheme of the Cameo is blue and gold throughout. As at all the other Warner theatres the usherettes are garbed in natty blue uniforms. There was an extensive floral display in the lobby on opening night, floral offerings having been received from Irene Rich, John Barrymore, Monte Blue, and Ernst Lubitsch, among others.

"Steel Preferred" Cast Complete

With the signing of Pat Harmon, Herbert Pryor and Ivor McFadden for important roles in "Steel Preferred" the cast of this Metropolitan picture is now complete. Pat Harmon is registering a current hit as the football coach in Harold Lloyd's "The Freshman." William Boyd and Vera Reynolds have the leading roles in "Steel Preferred" with Hobart Bosworth, William V. Mong, Charles Murray, Nigel Barrie, Walter Long and Helene Sullivan also prominently cast. James Hogan is directing.

Mrs. Griffith Writes Book

Wife of Famous Director in Charming Style Tells Story of Director's Rise

E. P. Dutton and Company have just published a book, "When the Movies Were Young," by Linda Arvidson (Mrs. D. W Griffith.)

Written in a reminiscent style by one who actively participated in the events that are chronicled, the book details events as well as intimate incidents in the motion picture activities of David W. Griffith from the beginning of his career with the old Biograph up to the crowning achievements of his picture activities.

The book is not, however, biography; rather, it is an intimate peep into the past, with its trials, its tribulations, its little delights and its many humorous happenings.

Motion picture fans should find the volume highly edifying and entertaining because of the many now famous stars whose beginnings and progress are blended in with the story: those in the motion picture industry should delight in the references to many known to them, in the reminiscences that will evoke a little chord of recollection. Names of picture folk are plentiful as must be the case in a book dealing with "Lawrence-David" and those who preceded, surrounded and followed him through his contribution to picture progress. It is a book that is very easy for both fan and old-timer in the industry to enjoy.

Semon Uses School Kids

In His First For Pathe, Comedian Has "Screen-Wise" Scholars

Larry Semon, who is directing as well as starring in "Stop, Look and Listen," his first feature comedy release for Pathe, used twenty-five children for the little "old red school house" scenes of this screen adaptation of the popular Dillingham musical play. Larry states that the children of Hollywood are becoming more and more screen wise. "They evidently have received excellent coaching from their mothers," he observes. This fact was evident to Semon when he attempted to get a close-up of himself and a group of children for the school house sequence.

The children were supposed to rush around the comedian as he sat on the floor. The scene was rehearsed successfully, but when the cameras started grinding, Larry was completely hidden from view by two little tots who stood up in front of him and took the close-up straight into the camera.

Ferenc Molnar to Write for M.-G.-M.

Louis B. Mayer announces that an agreement has been signed whereby Ferenc Molnar is to write three original stories for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Molnar is perhaps the greatest of living European dramatists. He has become famous in this country through such stage successes as "Liliom," "The Swan," "Fashions for Men" and "The Guardsman." Several of his plays have been filmed, but Molnar has heretofore written nothing directly for the screen. On the basis of Molnar's remarkable ability to create real characters and weave fascinating plots it is predicted that his stories for the screen will prove as sensationally successful as his plays.

Switching the Spotlight to the Exhibitor

Edited by Sumner Smith

Adirondack Forests Lure Exhibitors

Super-specials and their drawing power, day's receipts, overhead and a thousand and one things connected with the picture theatre of today have been supplanted in many instances during the past week in New York State with the opening of the deer hunting season in the Adirondacks. Exhibitors have shouldered their guns and are far in the depths of the forests, enjoying a few days' respite from business and eager to return with the first venison in their locality. Jack Matthews of Plattsburg, one of the best known exhibitors along the northern border, has been going over his high powered rifle in anticipation of the season's opening. Rae Candee of Utica is another ardent hunter, with his own camp where no doubt many of his friends will be entertained during the fall. Then there is Claude Wade of North Creek, exhibitor, hotel keeper and hunter, who has unlimbered his heavy artillery and has become so confident of his ability to bag one of the fleet-footed animals that he has gone so far as to promise venison to at least a score of persons.

After a person has banged away at a piano for nine straight years, playing the accompaniment for thousands of pictures, it is sort of hard to settle down to the routine of housework. All of which explains why Mrs. Vernon Brand, who was formerly Elsie Cunningham, and who was recently married, is back at the piano of the Crescent Theatre in Schenectady. Before the wedding took place, there was a shower, with Janet Noon, who formerly operated the Crescent, and Betty Feuer, the present owner, doing the honors.

Arthur Adams, who is associated with his sister, Mrs. Walton, in running the Happy Hour at Lake Placid, is back home from a very pleasant automobile trip with his family through Western New York. After looking over the state, Mr. Adams is now declaring that there is nothing anywhere near his own little village for scenery, friends and everything worth while.

All dressed up, but with a place to go, Jerry LaRock, who runs Fairyland in Warrensburg, arrived on Film Row during the past week, in a Buick and prepared to book several pictures. Of course, since they have stopped playing rummy up around Warrensburg, Mr. LaRock has been able to give more attention to his theatre.

Whenever anything goes wrong with the projection machine at the Highland Theatre, which is run by W. R. Seaman, of that village, it isn't necessary to spend a single nickel on an electrician. Mr. Seaman runs an electrical store as well as the theatre, and as an electrician he is a topnotcher.

The American Theatre in Schenectady, which is run by Claude Fish, dropped a nice little sum last Saturday night when something went wrong with the city's lighting system along the street where the American is located. No so much as a flicker from 7 until 10 p. m., and all who came received passes that were good for the next night. Of the pictures so far played during the last two or three months, "He Who Gets Slapped" has been the best audience-getter for the American. Mr. Fish was a pretty busy individual last week on account of the Shrine convention in Schenectady, he being a member of the Arab patrol.

Maybe it was the coal strike, but anyhow Julius Berinstein is now installing oil burners in the Colonial and Hudson Theatres in Albany as well as the Palace, in Troy. Coal or no coal, that's one less worry for Mr. Berinstein this winter.

Clarence Gardner, who runs the Pine Hills Theatre in Albany, is installing a brand new organ that will replace the piano and violin that have done duty so long in the exclusive residential section of the Capital City.

Two months ago, Jacob Feltman and his son, Alex, bought the Lincoln Theatre in Schenectady. They were green as exhibitors but business has panned out so well for them that they are now looking for a second house. The son handles the organ for he is a splendid musician and formerly played at both the Colonial and Hudson Theatres in Albany. Speaking of best bets, Mr. Feltman declared a few days ago that in running "Janice Meredith," he turned an ordinary Monday and Tuesday's business into a Saturday crowd.

Sure, Mike

Mike Kallet, who runs the Madison Theatre in Oneida, N. Y., has an alibi whenever business is exceptionally good and when by chance a film salesman drops in and endeavors to sell Mr. Kallet what is generally termed "the greatest picture ever produced." The film salesmen, and quite often it is the exchange manager himself, entering Mr. Kallet's theatre and noticing the crowd, remarks:

"Nice business you're doing, Mike."

Whereupon, Friend Mike, scenting a possible increase in prices, remarks: "Benefit."

This is intended by Mr. Kallet to convey the impression that he is splitting profits with some society or organization in Oneida, the members of which have been busy for weeks selling tickets.

But one salesman called Mr. Kallet's alibi.

"Benefit, did you say? Yes, for yourself."

The Feltmans are charging a 10 and 17 cent admission.

Once a politician, always a politician, and so W. W. Farley, of Albany, owning theatres in Schenectady, Catskill and Yonkers, never forgot for the moment that in New York state you can not vote unless you register. So last Friday saw Mr. Farley on his way to his legal residence in Binghamton, where as a good Democrat he registered and where he will vote on November 3.

Mrs. James Rose, wife of one of the best known exhibitors in this locality, is back home from the hospital, and the many friends of the young couple will be pleased to know that she is on the rapid road to recovery.

William Curry, who is now running the Victory Theatre in Cambridge, believes that there is such a thing as having one's patrons and neighborhood become fed up on pictures. And with that thought in mind, Mr. Curry is rather undecided as to the policy of the house which he has just taken over, and which he will probably run three nights a week rather than six. Mr. Curry explains by saying that he would rather have the public hungry for pictures instead of taking them as a matter of course.

Fred Mausert, of the State Theatre in Glens Falls, believes in the adage of live and let live. The townspeople know this to be a fact and they are giving Mr. Mausert their wholehearted cooperation and the theatre is doing exceptionally well.

Mike Tormey, whose theatre in Cadyville is known as the "Rustic," never seems to have any time to deal with film salesmen. In fact, Mr. Tormey declares that he had rather do business by correspondence than with what he terms "agents." And talk about being busy, Mr. Tormey just naturally slips out of his coat whenever a film salesman shows up and if he isn't up to his neck in work around the theatre, then he is busy in his ice cream parlor.

An old timer, Frank Braymeier, is back with the reopened Barcli in Schenectady. After the Barcli closed, Mr. Braymeier held two or three jobs and during the past summer had a concession in one of Schenectady's parks. No established policy has yet been adopted for the house. At present first-runs are being shown in an effort to catch up with releases booked for the Farley circuit. The house is getting 10, 15 and 25 cents admission.

Tom Thornton of Saugerties has three or four irons in the fire this fall, along with his theatre. He is selling a couple of makes of cars, and one night a week he runs vaudeville at his theatre.

"Ain't nature grand!" remarked Harry Hellman of the Royal Theatre in Albany, the other day, when he arrived at his camp on Crooked Lake. Even though Mr. Hellman had installed a radio at his theatre for the World Series, entertaining his patrons with both pictures and baseball, the fact that a new fireplace was being built at the camp proved the bigger magnet that drew Mr. Hellman from the theatre to the woods.

Innovations installed by Meyer Freedman at the Rialto in Schenectady have made such a hit with the fire chief of that city that other neighborhood houses may receive a visit from the chief. Mr. Freedman has put in quite a sum in modernizing the house, which is now one of the best residential theatres in the Electric City.

Since leaving the Schine circuit, Ben Davis has been making his home at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany. He was in New York City the other day and some announcement may be expected soon from Mr. Davis. Whatever happens, he will remain in some branch of the theatrical business.

The Rialto in Glens Falls, which was badly destroyed by fire several months ago, is scheduled to reopen on November 12, with a mixed program of vaudeville and pictures.

Michigan's President Hunting in Canada

A. J. Kleist, Jr., elected to the presidency of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, believes in physical preparedness. So he has gone off to Canada on a moose hunt, to be gone six weeks. His Pontiac theatres are in charge of George Wilbur.

After several changes of policy, George Sampson's De Luxe Theatre has gone back to straight picture programs. The De Luxe is one of the largest and most pretentious theatres on Detroit's East Side, but it has long been a problem. Vaudeville is to be eliminated after November 1.

George Harrison, who formerly owned the Harrison Theatre in Detroit, returned to the city the other day after several years' absence and leaped right back into the business here by purchasing the Martha Washington Theatre and its property. The deal is said to have involved $400,000.

J. C. Lasky (no relation to Jesse) is having plans drawn for a new theatre at Joseph Campau and Davidson streets, which will also contain offices and stores. He plans to have it ready for opening May 1, 1926.

Yeggs "Soup" Buffalo Theatre Safe

Yeggs pried open an exit door in the Broadway Theatre, a Buffalo community house, the other night, advanced on Manager Ben Wallerstein's office, "souped" the safe and escaped with the contents. When asked how much the bandits got, Ben replied, "I should tell how much business I do and get a boost in rentals." Saying which he polished up his 10-karat diamond and continued on his way.

J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y.; Charlie Hyman of Niagara Falls, William A. Calihan of Rochester, and Bill Dillon of Ithaca, will join Albany state organization officers in New York City on October 20 in a conference with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors to discuss arbitration and other matters.

The new 800-seat house which Farber & Yavno will build at 2275 Genesee street, Buffalo, will be named the Ambassador. The house will show pictures exclusively and feature a large organ.

William Calihan, formerly manager of the Regent, Rochester, is now a member of the Eastman executive staff. L. Morris has succeeded Mr. Calihan as manager of the Regent. Bert Caley, formerly a member of the Eastman staff, is managing the Piccadilly.

When the print of "The Iron Horse," which was scheduled to open at the Strand Theatre in Binghamton the other night, was burned in the baggage room at East Aurora, Manager H. M. Addison became much upset. So did Dave Cohn and Ned Kornblite, owners of the house. In fact, all three dashed for the phones, telegraph offices, etc., to get in touch with the Buffalo office of Fox. Officials there got busy at once, engaged Lieut. Donald F. Goold of the firm of McCurie & Goold, commercial aviators of Buffalo, and in a few hours had delivered another print of the picture to the Southern Tier city in time for the evening show.

The pending sale of the Grand Theatre, 8-10 Plymouth avenue north, Rochester, for the sum of $85,000, has been made public following the filing of papers to do with the transfer of the realty at the Court House. The prospective purchaser is given as the Schine Theatrical Corporation. The purchase of the property will involve the taking over of a first mortgage for $16,000 held by the Monroe County Savings Bank and a second mortgage for $42,000 held by the Fitzhugh Realty Company. At the present time, the Glove City Amusement Company holds a ten-year lease on the building which will expire July 1, 1934. The amusement concern is given the privilege of either renewing the lease for another ten year span, or purchasing the building at any time for agreed price of $115,000.

Al Beckerich, manager of the Loew State, Buffalo, put over a good one this week, when for the first time local street cars used ads on their stern and bow telling the world about the show at Al's house.

Michael Shea, head of the Shea Amusement Company of Buffalo, and Vincent R. McFaul, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, journeyed to Boston last week for the opening of the new Metropolitan Theatre in the Hub City.

Jack Stevens, formerly with the Schine Theatrical Corporation, as manager of houses down state, has accepted the management of the new Grand Theatre in Westfield, N. Y., operated by the Zicofe Corporation of Buffalo. He will also continue to book for the Elk Theatre, Buffalo, which house he has been managing of late.

Helen Kozanowski, sister of Hilda and Stanley Kozanowski, managers of the Rivoli Theatre, Buffalo, died last week. Helen had been cashier at the big community house.

Jack Muldoon will celebrate the first anniversary of the Academy, Buffalo, under his management by presenting three United Artists productions the week of November 9, "The Thief of Bagdad," "The Birth of a Nation" and "America."

John Amendola, manager of the Amendola Theatre, Niagara Falls, can vouch that there is side-splitting laughter in "The Freshman." John put the Lloyd picture on last week. On the opening day there was such a crowd that two men fainted, said fainting being hastened by the amusing situations in the comedy. But John has a big kick. He got a bill from one of the men for $10, which was the doctor's fee for bringing said patron back to his normal self.

Double Features Aid Fenway in Boston

The Fenway Theatre in Boston is finding an improvement in business since the start of the double feature policy. William P. Gray, head of the Paramount Theatre interests in New England, for some time has been in charge of the Fenway.

The State Theatre in Springfield has been reopened with a vaudeville and film policy.

James Moore, formerly assistant, has been named manager of the Olympia Theatre, Lynn.

David Perkins is a busy man these days, what with having two of Lowell's leading film theatres under his direction. These are the Merrimack Square and Strand, both Paramount houses.

Rolin H. Allen, owner of the Castle Square Theatre in Boston, died on October 14 at the Fenway Hospital.

Mrs. Marcella Driscoll, auditor for the E. M. Loew's Theatres circuit of Boston, is recovering from a serious illness in the Lynn Hospital.

Allan B. Newhall has a new auto. He is the managing director of the Mark Strand, Lynn.

A new theatre seating 2,100 on Broadway, Everett, will be ready for opening next June. Ground will be broken soon by E. L. Snider of Boston.

Andersen's Theatre in Mattapan has been redecorated and a new setting for the screen installed. The policy has been changed whereby vaudeville is presented the last half and on Sunday.

Apollo Theatre, Inc., of Boston has purchased the old Cobb Theatre on Washington street, Boston, valued at $56,800 and will erect a picture house. With the sale was included the Hotel Davis.

The Olympic Theatre, Washington street, Boston, formerly a Gordon house, has changed its policy to four shows daily with an orchestra at each show.

Mayor McPhetres of Lynn has appointed Francis P. (Tip) O'Neill chairman of the Lynn Theatre Censorship Committee for a term of one year. Mr. O'Neill has been press agent for the Olympic Theatre, Lynn.

Quincy Kilby, for many years treasurer of the Boston Theatre, Boston, suffered injuries about the head when he was hit and knocked down by an auto.

McDermit Leaves S. E.; Sasseen Succeeds

Col. George A. McDermit, district manager for Southern Enterprises, Inc., for Oklahoma and Arkansas, has resigned to engage in business in Washington City. Col. McDermit leaves behind a host of friends who regret exceedingly to see him leave. Mr. McDermit is succeeded by Charles Sasseen, manager of the Criterion Theatre at Enid, Okla., and former manager for the three Paramount theatres at Galveston, Texas. He comes to Oklahoma highly recommended as a first-class theatrical manager.

W. C. Robinson has resigned as salesman for First National at Oklahoma City to go back into the exhibitor business, and is succeeded by Horace Booth.

V. F Scott, manager of the Capitol and Ideal Theatres at Johnstown and the Amusu Theatre at Conemaugh, holds the record for sending the world's smallest telegram. Several days ago, Booking Manager McGreevy, of the Paramount exchange, wired Mr. Scott asking him which of two shows he wanted to use in one of his theatres for a certain week. The telegram in reply contained but one word—BOTH. So the Western Union is nine words to the good on that deal.

By the end of October Princeton, W. Va., will have three picture theatres—the Royal, which is being extensively remodelled by F. F. VanCourt, and the Dixie, which has been leased from J. L. Forkner by Little and Goodwill, who also operate the Palace on Main street. The Dixie is being enlarged.

Among the out-of-town exhibitor visitors to Pittsburgh's Film Row recently were: Wister M. Elliott, Vandergrift; M. Roth, Phillipsburg; Jack Marks, Clarksburg; B. E. Cupler, Washington; T. V. Barnes, Ellwood City, and Walter Silverberg, Greenville.

Chicago Theatre Anniversary October 26

The Chicago Theatre of Balaban & Katz will celebrate its fourth anniversary the week of October 26 with an elaborate anniversary program. A series of four settings and presentations are being arranged for the gala event. The executive officers of the circuit estimate that 20,000,000 people have entered hte Chicago Theatre since it was opened. This week, with "Her Sister From Paris," has been a record-breaker, as the every show has been sold out within an hour after the house opened each morning.

Another new theatre circuit for Chicago has been organized under the name of the Schooley Productions, Inc., with offices at 162 North State street. The principals are Edgar I. Schooley, A. O. Whitney and D. C. James. The new company will own, operate and lease theatres.

Cleveland Chain Asks For a Receiver

According to a movement now on foot, the Ohio Amusement Co., Cleveland, Ohio, operating a string of first-run neighborhood houses in that city, including the Lakewood, Garden, Five Points, Jewel, Denison Square, U-No, Savoy, Capitol and Knickerbocker, will be dissolved. Messrs. Schumann, Kramer and Fine, the original organizers of the company, have asked that a receiver be appointed and the firm dissolved on account of failure to agree on business policies. John Kalafat, Leo and Arthur Keller are the other members of the company.

Profound sorrow was felt among the trade and general public at the passing of John E. McCarthy at Akron, Ohio, recently. McCarthy, who was the surviving member of the famous old vaudeville team of John and Nellie McCarthy, operated the first picture show in Hamilton, Ohio, in 1904, opening what was then known as the Lyric Theatre in connection with J. Thomas Ward, who died a few months ago. McCarthy was an active member of the Theatrical Club of Akron, Ohio, at the time of his death.

Steve Manaf, owner of a string of picture houses throughout Southern Ohio, has secured the old city building at Steubenville, Ohio, and will soon build a theatre on the site at an estimated cost of $250,000. George Shafer, Wheeling, W. Va., theatre owner, originally was awarded the bid. It was contested and a verdict against him was handed down in Jefferson County Common Pleas Court. He agreed at that time to pay the city a yearly rental of $25,000 for a period of thirty-five years. Manaf's bid was $24,500 annually for a period of forty- years, the lease being awarded him by the Steubenville Board of Control.

Rose and Deardourf, owners of the Royal Theatre, Kenton, Ohio, have disposed of the house to Henry Pfeiffer, who also owns the Opera House in Kenton.

John Kleinfeld, Manatua, Ohio, has sold his Classic Theatre to H. J. Walters, owner of the Opera House in that place.

Manager Charles Frederick, of the old Gilger Opera House, Norwalk, Ohio, has changed the name of the place to the Moose Theatre. This was done after Frederick had thoroughly remodeled and redecorated the house.

The Arcade Theatre, Elmwood, Ohio, a suburb of Cincinnati, has been placed under management of Morris Epstein of New York. Percy Gerard, who operated the Idle Hour Theatre in the same suburb, has sold the place to Samuel Meyer of Cincinnati.

Grand in Baltimore Is Redecorated

The Grand Theatre on the block has been repainted and redecorated. This is one of the oldest houses in town and one of a chain of theatres controlled by Pearce G. Sheck.

Louis Rome has been spending his weekends in Philadelphia for some time and from all appearances he is about to set sail on the sea of matrimony.

Arthur Price has taken up golf and is spending most of his time digging up the ground at Clifton Park Links. The boys advise him to use a spade.

Burglars broke into the Clifton Theatre on South Broadway last week after they had robbed a clothing store whcih is next to the theatre. They spread twelve overcoats on the floor of the theatre, selected two of them and left the rest for the help.

Guy L. Wonders of the Rivoli Theatre is slowly recuperating from an injury to his leg which happened while playing golf several weeks ago.

William E. Stumpf, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland, reports the Greater Movie Season was a great success. Some of the houses have their lobby still dressed for the occasion.

A rumor has it that August Pahl, who operates the Monument Airdome, is contemplating building a 2,500-seat house at Monument and Rose streets, the site of his present theatre.

Harry Reddish of the Patterson Theatre is looking very prosperous of late and it is thought that the ponies have been running in his favor.

Peerless reflector arc lamps have been installed by N. C. Haefle Company in the Broadway, Capitol and Rialto. All of these theatres are controlled by J. Louis Rome.

Harry Wishkind, who owns and operates the Globe Film Service, a local exchange, has taken over the management of the Fairyland Theatre in Northeast Baltimore.

Take-a-Chance Week in Kansas City

Based upon the success of last year, the Newman Theatre, Kansas City's largest first-run downtown house, is making extensive plans for another take-a-chance week next week. A unique program arrangement of four pages has been issued, the front page being devoted to a list of famous men who "took a chance," along with the suggestion that it might not be amiss for the audience to also take a chance. Cuts of the stars in the picture, with their faces left blank, the ankles of other feminine members of the cast and a long series of question marks all add to make up an interesting and attractive medium of advertisement. This year's take-a-chance program, however, will be under the direction of Bruce Fowler, who is managing the Paramount-controlled house, and not Frank L. Newman, who is now managing three Paramount theatres in Los Angeles.

R. L. Willis, who is erecting one of the largest suburban picture theatres at Thirty-eighth and Main streets, Kansas City, took title to the building site last week. The property, 165x65 feet, was deeded by John B. Kassebaum to Mr. Willis. Mr. Willis is erecting the theatre to comply with the terms of a 25-year lease to the Blackstone Amusement Company, of which George Trinastitch is president. The lease, filed for record, calls for an annual rental of $16,500 for the first five years of the term and $18,000 a year for the remainder of the twenty-five years. Footings and foundation of the theatre already have been completed. The theatre will be a Spanish type building, designed by the architectural firm of DeFoe & Besecke, and will seat 3,000. An attempt will be made to have the house in operation by January 1. The Blackstone Amusement Company also operates the Isis Theatre of Kansas City. Jack Roth, manager of that house, also will be in charge of the new theatre.

While a thrill-producing western drama was being unwound on the screen in the Empire Theatre, Kansas City, Kans., Hyman Naster, owner, was in the box office counting the money. Then occurred the real drama. A negro bandit rushed up to the box office and, at the point of a revolver, obtained the receipts from Mr. Naster. Mr. Naster summoned the police and a running gun fight ensued, the negro, whom Mr. Naster later identified as the bandit, being captured.

So popular was the Charleston dance contest staged by the Orpheum Theatre a few weeks ago that Lawrence Lehman, manager, decided to duplicate the feat this week. And he was not disappointed, the increase in attendance being well worth the effort, he says.

When Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, opened the Circle Theatre, Kansas City, and started a "rush on the gate" with a 10-cent admission, he set a precedent. The Ellsworth Theatre, which has been closed since last fall and which is only a few blocks from the Circle, now has opened with a 10-cent admission. But here's the type of showman Mr. Eisner is:

"I hope the Ellsworth does equally as well as the Circle. There is no reason why it shouldn't. With a packed house at 10 cents any suburban exhibitor can afford to show good pictures. At least, I've found that to be true. More power to 'em."

"Like many other exhibitors we had neglected to take out our music license," writes Henry Tucker, owner of the Majestic and Tucker Theatres, Liberal, Kans., "so inspectors were sent out, reported infringements and we were assessed $500. After sending my lawyer to Topeka, Kans., to confer with Newell & Wallace, attorneys for the music society, we succeeded in getting the amount cut to $400, which we paid rather than stand suit. And just to think a few months ago we could have taken out a license for $85."

Mr. Tucker's reference to "a few months ago" alludes to the agreement entered into by the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri and the music society, in which members of the exhibitor organization received a 20 per cent. reduction on amounts levied. The M. P. T. O. K.-M., which recently waged a bitter fight against the payment of a music tax, has advised all its members to pay the tax.

New decorations for the interior, the installation of new vestibule partitions and other improvements are being made on the Best Theatre, Parsons, Kans., according to Walter Finney, manager of the Universal-owned house.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Rugg, Opera House, Troy, Kans.; Walter Finney, Best Theatre, Parsons, Kans.; Charles T. Sears, manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.

Seattle Breaks Ground For Huge Theatre

Ground has been broken for Seattle's new million dollar theatre at Fifth avenue and University street. Work will be rushed to enable the theatre to open next July. It will be the largest house on the Pacific Coast, seating 3,000 and having a stage 38 x 100 feet. It will be operated by the Washington State Theatres, Inc. The building exterior will conform with all ohter buildings of the Metropolitan Building Company group, from whom the ground was leased. It will be of cream brick and terra cotta trim. The theatre entrance will be on the Fifth avenue side near University street. The balance of the building will be divided into stores and offices, extending for an entire block. It will be eight stories high.

Heinie Turner of the Blue Bird Theatre, Missouri, Mont., was a Seattle visitor over the week-end. He was the guest of Jack Lannon, president of Greater Features, Inc.

Sanstrom and Davis, after renovating their Paramount Theatre in the Proctor street district of Tacoma, reopened with a formal ceremony and featuring their large new organ. "Black Cyclone" was the attraction. The house was thronged throughout the evening and many congratulations were received. Two weekly changes will be offered.

S. B. Hurst of the Vining Theatre, Ashland, Ore., has contracts out for the complete redecoration, draping, lighting and furnishing of his house.

L. J. Carter has taken over the Green Room Theatre, Plains, Mont., from F. L. Carter.

H. J. Irving, manager of the Mission Theatre, Georgetown, Wash., held a special guest matinee for children of the Catholic Parochial School during showings of "Romola."

Ray Grombacher's Egyptian Theatre, Spokane, recreated from the old Class A, has opened to excellent business. "Shore Leave" was the picture.

San Francisco Theatre Robbed of $2,800

The Union Square Theatre, 160 O'Farrell street, San Francisco, was robbed of $2,800 on the morning of October 13 by yeggmen who had in some manner learned the combination of the safe, or who were sufficiently expert to pick the lock. Entrance to the theatre was gained by forcing a second story window. The theory of an inside job is scouted by Manager Cecil V. Grissell, who declares that he alone knew the combination. This theatre was the scene of a spectacular hold-up several years ago, when it was known as the Hippodrome.

Charlse M. Pincus, manager of the Imperial Theatre, San Francisco, is still busy chalking up records for "The Freshman." This now holds the house record for a week, for an afternoon and for a day.

A fire, believed to have been caused by a cigarette dropped from the balcony to the main floor, did slight damage recently to the New Lyceum Theatre, San Francisco, operated by Lesser Bros.

A judgment for damages in the sum of $75,000 has been given Mrs. Ruby Bevo against the New York and San Francisco Amusement Company, and Basil Knobleck, an employe of this concern, which until recently operated the Strand Theatre, San Francisco. The defendant, who was a chorus girl with the Will King show, was made a cripple for life through the fall of a weight used to raise and lower scenery at the theatre. The principal stockholders in the defendant company are M. Lesser and M. L. Markowitz, well known exhibitors.

Wayland H. Taylor, formerly director of publicity at San Francisco for Famous Players-Lasky but more recently with the Will Hays organization, has returned and is now with Samuel H. Levin at the Metropolitan Theatre. In addition to handling publicity work he is building up an organization to handle the Harding, Roosevelt, West Portal and Balboa Theatres being erected by Samuel H. Levin.

Ed Miller of Williams, Cal., recently paid San Francisco's Film Row a visit, the first in two years. Other recent visitors have been Charles Fraler, Tracy, Cal.; W. C. Wheeler, of the Majestic Theatre, Willits, and Frank Purkett, of the Kinema Theatre, Fresno.

Jack Ryan has taken over the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Cal.

The Bay Shore Theatre, in the Visitation Valley district, San Francisco, has been opened by T. DeHay.

Lawrence Borg has been made resident manager of the Parkway Theatre recently opened at Oakland, Cal., by the Golden State Theatre & Realty Corp.

E. C. Cunningham has disposed of his interests in the Iris Theatre at Pacific Grove, Cal., and is devoting his attention to the house at Carmel.

H. W. Sherburne, manager of the U. C. Theatre, Berkeley, Cal., has arranged to resume the weekly kiddie matinees, featured by this theatre in the past. The proceeds of the matinee will be turned into the Scholarship Fund of the Parent-Teachers' Association.

Frudenfeld Now in Waterloo, Ia.

N. N. Frudenfeld, director of publicity for the World Realty Company's various theatres in Omaha for six years, has resigned and taken a position with the Frank Amusement Co., Waterloo, Ia. He will have charge of the Majestic at Cedar Rapids, Ia., a combination photoplay and vaudeville house, operated by the Frank Amusement Co.

The erection of the proposed new theatre of the World Realty Co. at Sixteenth and Douglas streets in Omaha has been deferred at least for a year or more, on account of some complications regarding the possibility of getting just the class of films desired.

J. O'Connor has bought the Alamo Theatre, New London, Ia., from Perkins & Martin. Mr. Perkins moved to Milwaukee, while Mr. Martin operates the World Theatre at Mineral Point, Wis. O'Connor is no newcomer in the picture business, as he operated picture houses in various places in Iowa before buying the Alamo.

F. M. Honey, who operated the Isis at Cedar Rapids, Ia., until he sold it to the Frank Amusement Co. recently, has purchased the building in which the Moon is housed at Tecumseh, Neb. The theatre is operated by L. M. Greene, who has a three-year lease on the building.

St. Louis

Charles Werner, St. Louis branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is convalescing at his home, 605 Clara avenue, from his recent illness. He underwent an operation at Mayo Brothers Sanitorium, Rochester, Minn., a few weeks, and it was very successful. Werner has been with Metro-Goldwyn for eleven years and he has been given six months' vacation with pay in recognition of his long and faithful services.

Pending the return of Mr. Werner, J. E. Flynn, district manager, has appointed W. B. Scully acting resident manager in St. Louis.

"Dad" Slocum, recently resigned from the local Pathe organization, has joined Producers Distributing Corporation and is assigned to the Southern Illinois, Kentucky and Tennessee territory. He replaces W. S. Haynes, who moves up to the Northern Illinois territory. Bill Sheridan, formerly travelled Northern Illinois for Producers, has resigned. He has not announced his new connections.

Jack O'Neil, former city salesman for Pathe, has resigned. His place will be filled by Andy Deitz and H. Stahler. Stahler formerly was at Indianapolis.

Denver

Seth Perkins, new district manager for Metro-Goldwyn, made his first visit to the Denver Metro-Goldwyn exchange early this week.

Freddy Newmyer, well known director for Harold Lloyd, was a visitor in Denver a few days ago.

Harry Lustig, division manager for Warner Brothers, has arrived from Salt Lake City and will soon leave for New York.

Canada

William Mitchell, First National manager in Vancouver, B. C., for some years past, has returned to Vancouver after a business trip to New York. He stopped off for short visits in Toronto and Winnipeg on his way back. At Toronto he consulted with officials of the Canadian head office of First National and at Winnipeg he met old friends whom he had known during a sojourn there of several years.

Albany, N. Y.

Charles Henschel, eastern district manager for Pathe, was in town for a few hours during the week while on his way from New York to Boston.

Herman Stern, Albany manager of F. B. O., is spending this week in New York, enjoying a vacation.

George S. Jeffreys, special Harold Lloyd representative has been in town closing up several places for "The Freshman."

The local Fox exchange has added another salesman in the person of Morris Simon, formerly of Rochester.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Talk about getting even. We hear that Jimmy Speer, former manager of the Buffalo Dependable exchange, has returned from Florida and is trying to sell exhibitors land in that boom country.

E. J. Hayes, former manager of the Buffalo First National office and recently associated with the sales staff of Producers Distributing and Bond Photoplays, has entered a sanatarium.

"Hub" Taylor, Pathe salesman, is getting out his snowshoes, shovel, boots, sledge and limbering up his Eskimo dogs for his winter explorations along the Southern Tier.

Harry Dixon and his F. B. O. sales force report business this fall breaking records at his office. Elmer Lux, booker, is working nights to keep the contracts up to date in the books.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Bond Photoplays exchange, is presenting exhibitors with "business boosters."

C. W. Anthony, who recently resigned from the Warner Brothers staff to accept an appointment as Associated Exhibitors' representative in Buffalo, is now out in the sticks acquainting exhibitors with his product.

Ohio

Louis Geiger, manager of the Cleveland F. B. O. office, has chosen Hollywood as the objective for his vacation.

Fred Schramm, city salesman for Producers Distributing has resigned.

The Cleveland Film Board of Trade has lost the only secretary it ever had, namely, Howard Christman, who served since organization of the board in 1922. He will join an eastern company in the near future.

George Kirby, who for five years has been in the booking department of Metro-Goldwyn's Cincinnati office, has taken service with F. B. O. exchange in Cincinnati.

Among the recent changes in the Paramount forces in the Cleveland territory is the transferring of Wm. Selman, salesman, from Canton to Toledo, Ohio. The Canton territory is now being served by R. H. Ramsey, who formerly handled Toledo.

Kansas City

Exchange activities were many last week. W. J. Morgan and C. D. Hill, general sales manager and district manager, respectively, were in Kansas City on a tour of the Middle West. Universal employees are jubilant over the fact that four of the five exchanges under W. E. Truog of Kansas City, district manager, finished among the first seven in the national sales contest during June, July and August. Earl Cunningham, Paramount explioteer, is hard at work arranging—so he says— "something special" on "The Pony Express." Sam Stoll, formerly with Universal, has joined the Paramount sales force in Kansas City, while Leonard Allison, former assistant bookkeeper at the Universal branch, has been made chief booker at the Universal Des Moines office, he being succeeded in Kansas City by Mark Gilbert. Charles T. Sears, former president of the M. P. T. O. Missouri and now general manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory, and Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, left for Independence, Kas., to take charge of the Buffalo Theatre, recently purchased by Universal. From Joe Silverman, president, down to the most humble employee, good feeling exists around the Independent Film Corporation's office this week, due to several big sales last week. Ned Depinet and F. J. McConnell, southern division sales manager and short subjects manager, respectively, for Universal, were busy business visitors.

Nebraska

Lee Marcus, new sales manager for F. B. O., who succeeds the late M. H. Berman, was a visitor at the Omaha office recently on a tour of the western exchange offices.

C. A. Schultz, branch manager for Vitagraph at Kansas City, Mo., has taken a position as manager for the Kansas City office of Producers' Distributing.

James Rogers, Omaha branch manager for Enterprising Distributors, underwent an operation at the Paxton Hospital at Omaha recently. He has returned to his desk much improved.

"Jimmy" Winn, branch manager for Educational and Premier Pictures, has gone to Des Moines, Ia., to become branch manager there. Leo Blank of the First National will succeed Winn at Omaha.

San Francisco

Carol A. Nathan, manager of the Universal film exchange, San Francisco, was hurried to the hospital recently and operated on for appendicitis. He is reported to have come through the operation in good shape.

J. R. Crone, manager of the old Mutual exchange at San Francisco years ago and now manager of the Douglas McLean Productions, was a recent visitor at his old stamping ground.

Herman Wobber, manager of the Pacific Coast district for Famous Players-Lasky, left a short time ago on a trip that will take him from San Francisco for several months. He will visit Europe before returning home.

J. J. Partridge, sales manager of the San Francisco exchange of Famous Players-Lasky, recently made a trip through the San Joaquin Valley and the Mother Lode district in the interests of this concern.

The splendid new exchange of the Producers Distributing Corp. at Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street, San Francisco, fitted up under the direction of Mark Cory, is now in smooth running order.

William J. Murphy, Metro-Goldwyn exploitation genius, has returned to his San Francisco headquarters from a long trip through the Pacific Northwest and is commencing work on "The Merry Widow," soon to open at the St. Francis Theatre.

George Knowles is acting as manager of the San Francisco branch of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., succeeding W. W. Kofeldt, who resigned after filling this position for five years to become the representative in Germany of the Producers Distributing Corporation.

Tom Mix and His Horse Tony Are Back Again In Actionful Story of the Great Outdoors

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Tom Mix' newest production for William Fox, while bearing the poetic title "The Everlasting Whisper" is a typical Mix type of picture, an actionful story of the outdoors. The significance of the title lies in the fact that Tom, cast as a lover of nature, likes to revel in its beauties and listen to the "everlasting whisper" of the wind in the pine trees.

Notwithstanding his poetic side, the role portrayed by the star is one that develops vigorous he-man stuff when the occasion arises. Tom appears as a prospector who falls in love with a society girl whom he rescues. Later the villain through a ruse gets her to a hotel and taking advantage of the situation tries to force her to marry him. Tom comes to her rescue and she marries Tom but confesses she does not love him. The villain's henchmen follow Tom into the hills and when they set upon him she comes to his assistance and realizes her love for him.

The acquaintance between hero and girl comes through the familiar device of a rescue from a runaway horse and the punch situations are built up along conventional lines but develop good snap and action. The most effective of these is the climax with the fight between Tom and the crooks at the entrance to a cave where a struggle occurs on a ledge of rock.

Alice Calhoun plays opposite Tom and there is sufficient romance to hold the interest, there is also a very effective scene in which Tony, the horse, figures, where he fights with wolves chasing them away with his heels. The action and vigorous outdoor stuff should make the picture entertaining for the majority of fans, although it probably won't be voted as one of Tom Mix's best pictures.

"The Midshipman"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

Ramon Novarro in Thoroughly Entertaining Story of Life at the U. S. Naval Academy

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Produced under the supervision of the U. S. Navy Department and filmed in authentic surroundings at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, "The Midshipman," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture with Ramon Novarro as the star, should please the majority of patrons and rate as a first-class box-office attraction.

The action concerns Midshipman Randall, whose father was a naval hero. Randall and Ted, a lower classman, become fast friends and Randall falls in love with Ted's sister, who is also sought after by a wealthy idler, who frames a situation which means expulsion for Randall by having a girl go into the guard room while he is on duty. Ted gets caught in the trap and after a struggle between love and duty Randall reports Ted. The scheme is exposed by Tex, another middie, who hates Randall but sticks by him on account of the navy. A warship chases the wealthy villain who has kidnapped the girl, and Randall arrives in time to get her back safe for the graduation exercises which are followed by an immediate wedding.

The "plot" of the picture is slight, serving mainly as a background on which to build up a lot of amusing and very entertaining sequences dealing with the life of the chaps during the years when they are in the naval academy preparing to become officers in the navy. Director Christy Cabanne has made an excellent job of this, playing up the humorous angles, and not forgetting the human interest. For instance, the rowing lesson the Severn, the dancing lesson, the scene in the mess hall, the hazing by the upper classmen and especially the sequences where the hero, to help out his friend Ted, gets his pals to fill Ted's sister's dance card. He believes the girl is homely and she turns out to be a beauty and they all have the laugh on him.

The story moves along at a smooth, easy pace until the big climax when it gets quite melodramatic, but this is toned down a bit by not showing the fight between the hero and villain but covering it with a subtitle. Novarro does excellent work both in the straight and the humorous scenes and looks fine in uniform. He should make a hit with the girlies. Harriet Hammond is very attractive as the girl and Wesley Barry does well as a young middie. Crauford Kent gives a good performance as the villain.

The high morale, excellent discipline and fine traditions of the navy are played up and the picture is an excellent boost for the naval service. It will make a lot of boys want to become middies. And it is thoroughly pleasing entertainment as well.

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists

Back in a Kid Role, "Our Mary" Pickford A Hit in Appealing and Amusing Story

Maybe among the millions of Pickford fans there were some who were unkind enough to intimate that the real reason for Mary appearing in pictures like "Rosita" in grown-up roles was because she had reached the stage where she could no longer preserve the illusion in kid parts. Well, before we go any further we want to say that they were all wrong Mabel, for in "Little Annie Rooney" her newest production for United Artists, she perfectly impersonates a mite of a girl and at no time looks to be a day over twelve years old.

The title will bring to mind, especially to the older patrons, a tremendously popular song of a generation ago, the action, however, is entirely modern and the only use made of the song is when the kids in a rival gang taunt her and arouse her Irish fighting blood by yelling "Little Annie Rooney Is My Sweetheart." This famous line takes on a different meaning when used by the "right" party.

No attempt has been made to make this a "big" picture in the sense of lavishness or spectacular settings. It is not that kind of a story, just a simple little story of a poor little girl of the tenements. But it is a "big" picture just the same, big in its heart interest, its pathos and humor, its warm sympathy for this little girl in her sorrow, and admiration for her spunk when she gets out and fights the kids who taunt her. For after all, the "bigness" of a picture depends on its entertainment value, not how lavish are its sets but how much will it please and "Little Annie Rooney" spells E-N-T-E-R-T-A-I-N-M-E-N-T for the millions.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Mary appears as the little daughter of a big friendly policeman on New York's East Side who spends a large proportion of her time fighting the kids who taunt her, and otherwise getting into mischief. One night at a gang dance the usual fight occurs. Mary's father rushes in and is accidentally killed. This sorrow changes Mary and she and her brother are determined on revenge. The brother is told that Joe, whom Mary admires, fired the shot and he "gets" him but learning that another gangster is guilty, Mary and the gang of kids turn the murderer over to the cops. Mary goes to the hospital and consents to blood transfusion and saves his life. Later we see the lad as Mary's sweetheart running his own trucking business, and her brother as a traffic cop.

"Little Annie Rooney" is a picture that plays to the heart rather than to the eye, but those familiar with tenement life in a big city will admire the wonderful accuracy of the settings and the remarkably truthful atmosphere with which Director William Beaudine has invested this picture. Everything is true to life. For instance, anyone who has been to a "tough" ball can easily believe that he is attending another one while watching the ball scene in this picture.

The picture opens with Mary leading her little pals in a street fight with a rival gang who throw sticks and stones at each other. Possibly some patrons will think there is too much of this and that the "story" should get under way earlier, for it is a bit late getting started. But this interim is filled with bits of humor, fine character touches and the building up of effective atmosphere.

Characterization, heart interest, humor—are the big points of this picture. Wonderful is the only word to describe Mary's work and she is aided by an exceptionally well-selected cast most of whom are kiddies. Of these, little Spec O'Donnell as a Hebrew kid is great, and Spec figures in several bits that are comedy whizzes. You will feel a tug at the heart in the scene where Mary waiting jubilantly for her father's return on his birthday learns that he has been killed, and there won't be many dry eyes when Mary gives her blood to save her sweetheart and then asks the Doctor when she is doing to die.

Your patrons have been clamoring for the Mary of old, the romping kid Mary that they love, and that is just what they will get in "Little Annie Rooney" which has all of the ear-marks of a picture that will please millions.

"Flower of the Night"—Paramount

Pola Negri Gives Best Performance Since Coming to America, in Hergesheimer Story

Pola Negri contributes an unusually fine and sincere bit of work in "Flower of the Night." She makes a deep impression in spite of a story almost impossibly heavy in the Hergesheimer fashion. Evidently the tale contained so much detail that in cutting it down to a reasonable length the motiving has become lost, or else the author, in an effort to overcome his tendency to long-windedness, has himself cut so close to the major facts that he has no room for explanations or preparations to gain interest for his plot and his people.

Yet he had the makings of a fine plot, the story being laid in the early days of California, and hinging upon the resentment of the original Spanish settlers at the intrusion of the American gold-hunters. Don Geraldo has lost the mine which enriched his forbears, and shuts himself within his ranchero. His daughter, Carlotta, yearns for freedom and excitement.

She steals off to a ball given at the mine. When her father threatens her with death she replies that it is his own fault. He realizes that perhaps this is true and kills himself. She goes to San Francisco, where Luke Rand, of the Vigilantes, becomes infatuated by her beauty. He promises to get the mine back for her if she will yield to his demands. Stung by the contempt of John Basset, the mine owner, she assents, but recants when it becomes apparent that this probably will lead to Basset's death. She saves him when he is beseiged by the Vigilante posse, and Basset kills Rand when the latter comes to claim the fulfilment of her promise.

There is plenty of material here for vivid action, and Paul Bern has left none of these opportunities pass. There is a fine sequence of a Vigilante hanging, vivid scenes in the San Francisco dance halls, as well as the dance at the mine, and the fight works to a splendid climax, yet the story lacks real grip because the author has not won real interest in either his heroine or her sweetheart. In the course of the story she is directly responsible for the death of three men. There is too much blood guiltiness upon her head and hands.

Youcca Troubetzkoy does little to gain interest but he is stilted in his own right, and shows no personality. Warner Oland does well as the villainous Rand and Joseph Dowling plays the Don with Castillian dignity.

Miss Negri has done no better work since she came to this side of the Atlantic. She is natural and convincing, though at times unlovable. She does not show the traces of overaction that have marred some of her other roles. It is a pity that so fine a performance should be wasted upon so poor a character. Evidently she has not lost the fire which made her "Passion" a thing to be remembered, and Paul Bern has done much to develop and exploit her ability.

He has done more than this. He has contributed a fine piece of direction, and his handling of the colorful situations does much to make the story acceptable. "Flower of the Night" may not be an outstanding success, but it is not without its audience appeal. It should give greater satisfaction than any of the recent Negri plays.

Emory Johnson Supplies Excellent Box-Office Picture Full of Action and Heart Interest

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Emory Johnson's "The Last Edition," an F. B. O. picture, is a great attraction both from the standpoint of that technique and plausibility of story which critics like to talk about and—what's more important—from the standpoint of box office merit. Properly advertised, it ought to make real money for exhibitors, for it has a gripping, human story, ascending drama and a most interesting, though brief, insight into the conduct of a city newspaper.

Every player in this picture is perfectly cast and each one makes the most of the strong characters assigned him. Ralph Lewis is splendid as the composing room employe and Lila Leslie very appealing as the heroine. In fact, the whole cast is so generally good that it isn't necessary to dig adjectives out of the dictionary to describe their work.

Luck passes by the press tender and gives promotion to a young man. A reporter on the paper is in love with his daughter, and his son gets a good job with the district attorney. Now the plot begins—a real plot. The reporter is running a gang of bootleggers to earth. They "frame" the boy in the district attorney's office and prepare to wreck the newspaper plant. This happens just as the paper is going on the streets with a front page story about the arrest of the press tender's son. The press tender is arrested, charged with the act, but the reporter uncovers the plot, the bootleggers are arrested and everything ends happily.

This picture presents some stunning scenes of the burning building and the fire department playing streams of water on it. These are realistic in the extreme and ought to give every movie fan a real kick. The scenes of fist fights and the agility of the reporter in scaling roofs to obtain evidence also lend picturesque touches to the picture.

Throughout the drama are interspersed "bits" showing the real operation of a big newspaper plant, from the office of the editor down through the reporters' room and the linotype room to the press room. These are treated briefly as backgrounds for action, so they do not check the flow of drama. They will be wonderfully interesting to people not "in the know."

Emory Johnson is to be complimented on this production. He turns out consistently good audience stuff. Here he has story, acting and highly interesting backgrounds.

Incidentally, while not particularizing on the individual players, it ought to be noted that Ada Mae Vaughn, a sister of Alberta Vaughn, contributes a striking bit as a stenographer. If there are any more sisters in that Vaughn family they ought to be put on the screen.

Latest Jack Hoxie Western Has Good Story, Plenty of Action and Splendid Backgrounds

Reviewed by Sumner Smith

Jack Hoxie offers his followers another very interesting picture in "Hidden Loot," a Universal Blue Streak Western photographed in Arizona. The vehicle gets off to an impressive start with views of the Arizona desert where it adjoins Death Valley. The story begins with action in the rescue of the heroine by the hero when her horse seems to be running away with her.

Villainous ranchers in the employ of the girl and her brother have stolen money. Circumstance allows Hoxie, as the hero, to see them hide it. With the aid of his horse and dog he spirits it away and hides it himself. As he is a mysterious stranger in that neighborhood, the ranchers seek him as the thief. In the meantime the girl is convinced of his honesty and aids him in evading them. In the end, after escaping death several times, Hoxie is disclosed as president of the cattlemen's association, long on the trail of the bandits, and also as successful suitor for the girl's hand.

It is a good story with plenty of incident and in a majority of ways it has been well handled by Director Robert North Bradbury. But it does seem that more might have been made out of the mystery attaching to Jack Hoxie.

The action is good, the plot action rapid and the backgrounds splendid. The dog and horse especially appeal, since their stunts in aiding Hoxie show almost human intelligence.

Buck Jones Excellent as Lazy Chap in Fine Human Interest Story Directed by Borzage

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

In the William Fox production "Lazybones" Buck Jones' fans are due for a big surprise not only in the type of role he plays by the excellent way in which he puts over a character that is different from anything he has attempted before.

Instead of his usual vigorous he-man Western role, we see Buck as just the opposite, a lazy shiftless smalltown fellow whose only interest is his love for Agnes whose sister Ruth has been ordered by her stern mother to come home and marry the village swell. It develops that Ruth has married a sailor who was lost at sea and being unable to prove her marriage is afraid to tell her mother. Buck learns her story and out of the goodness of his heart adopts the baby and keeps the secret, although he loses Agnes. This baby, Kit, grows up into a charming woman and when Buck, a little white at the temples, returns from the World War and prepares to declare his love for her he learns she is in love with a younger fellow and he sacrifices his own happiness again to bring about her marriage to the other fellow.

The story opens about 1900 and there are scenes at a couple of later periods extending up to the close of the war. Notwithstanding this episodic nature the interest is held throughout due to a smooth scenario, excellent direction and fine acting. The best of this contributed by ZaSu Pitts as Ruth. Her emotional work is superb and during the time she is on the screen she walks away with the picture. Emily Fitzroy in a typical role for her, that of the stern unyielding mother, is remarkably good. Jane Novak is fine as Agnes and Madge Bellamy

"Lovers in Quarantine"—Paramount

Bebe Daniels Has Type of Role That Suits Her Best in Highly Amusing Farce Comedy

Reviewed by E. W. Sargent

Throwing all probability to the four winds, the scenarists have contrived a fine broad farce for Bebe Daniels out of one of last season's stage successes, "Quarantined." Where plausibility and entertainment clash, plausibility emerges from the fray a poor third in a two-party fight, but you are laughing so heartily that you do not care. "Lovers in Quarantine" is a first class vehicle for Bebe Daniels, carrying much more of a plot than her last offering. The story is carried right to the end and yet it never is permitted to intrude on the possibilities for comedy. Rather it is made to yield the situations on which the comedy action is hung.

The plot is very simple. Engaged to an African explorer, Pamella Gordon grows tired of the wait and arranges to marry Mackintosh Josephs. Blunt, the explorer, turns up unexpectedly two weeks before the wedding. Pamela prefers him to the high-tempered Josephs, but she dreads a scene and arranges to elope to Bermuda with Blunt. Meanwhile, to throw Josephs off the track, Blunt is told to make violent love to Diana, the hoydenish younger sister. Diana believes that Blunt really loves her, locks Pamela in her room and goes to the boat under the chaperonage of her aunt. Blunt does not discover the deception until the second day out, Diana being secluded in her cabin with a fake illness.

When he does discover the substitution, his contempt for her rouses her fighting blood. With the aid of her sister's clothes she captivates Blunt, intending to wring a confession of love from him and then throw him over.

But the passengers are put in quarantine and events move so rapidly that when Pamela comes along she is a day too late. Diana has won.

As Blunt is supposed to have been married before starting, the situation is a delicate one, saved only by the presence of the aunt, and the complications are developed with artistic speed until the story gets moving so rapidly that there is a slight sag at the climax, where the action is straightened out. Very little time is lost in developing the premise and from there on the action builds steadily up.

The comedy ranges all the way from true comedy to the broadest sort of slapstick, as when Diana's necklace is hooked into the curve of Blunt's cane, and she follows him about the deck of the steamer on her hands and knees. This is preceded by a wild chase about the decks.

There is plenty of downright horseplay all the way through, with an alteration to really fine light comedy, as when the nearly starved Diana almost claims the tray of food her aunt is trying to smuggle in to her. Blunt, on guard at the stateroom door, sets it beside a seasick passenger, who heaves it overboard in disgust just as Diana is about to claim it.

Miss Daniels carries the bulk of the action and is seen at her hoydenish best. The role suits her and she makes the most of her every opportunity. Edna May Oliver is a good support as the aunt, and Harrison Ford is excellent as Blunt. Alfred Lunt makes all he can of the small part of Josephs, and the remainder of the cast is competent, though little more important than the backgrounds.

Much of the action takes place on the steamer on the trip to Bermuda, with some fine shots on the island itself, chiefly at the quarantine station, where the supposed bridal pair draw the only bungalow.

It is thoroughly good entertainment and should develop a strong audience appeal. You do not have to puzzle out the laughs. They are made so clearly apparent that they hit home, hard and fast. Structurally it is a decidedly better play than "Wild, Wild Susan."

"The Other Woman's Story"—B. P. Schulberg

Flashbacks Used Effectively in Building Murder Mystery Story Starting with Trial

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Under the intriguing title of "The Other Woman's Story," B. P. Schulberg is offering a murder mystery drama enacted by a capable cast which should prove good average entertainment for the majority of patrons.

The story concerns the murder of a young wife's lawyer just as she is suing for divorce. Her husband is blamed, and the circumstantial evidence against him is so strong that he is convicted. His business partner, whom the lawyer seeks to present in an unfavorable light as "the other woman" believes him innocent and succeeds in locating a woman who was hidden in the lawyer's apartment. Through this woman's story the guilt of the wife is established and the husband is freed to find happiness with the "other woman."

Through the device of starting the picture with the murder trial, the entire story is brought out by placing the different witnesses on the stand and building up the series of events leading up to the murder by means of flashbacks. This increases the suspense and proves dramatically effective as the spectator is kept in the dark to a considerable extent and the mystery element is strengthened. At the same time this method seems to slow up the action due to the court details and the large number of witnesses introduced to add their bits to the story.

The mystery element is carefully hidden and although the idea of keeping the presence of the third woman a secret until after the case goes to the jury, is quite theatric and there are other situations that do not seem to ring true, for instance the fact that neither lawyer pays any attention to evidence brought out by several witnesses as to the probability to another person having been secreted in the room, the picture does develop considerable tenseness and a good element of mystery together with quite a lot of drama and it will probably prove an interesting attraction for the average patron. Further cutting, however, would make it a more absorbing story and increase its entertainment value as certain scenes have been included that do not advance the action.

The cast, headed by Alice Calhoun as the wife, Robert Frazer as the husband, Mahlon Hamilton as the lawyer and Helen Lee Worthing as the other woman is uniformly good.

Blanche Sweet in Melodramatic Sea Story That Has Emotional and Thrilling Climax

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With Blanche Sweet in the featured role, First National is presenting a romantic sea melodrama, "Why Women Love," adapted from a stage play "The Sea Woman," by Willard Robertson, and directed by Edwin Carewe.

Molla, the daughter of a sea captain, is loved by Rodney and they plan to marry on her return from a voyage with her father. The vessel is burned at sea and Molla believed to be dead; however, she was rescued from a sea of blazing oil by the lighthouse keeper who dies from his injuries, and in gratitude vows to look after his daughter. Rodney finally learns she is alive and comes for her but she refuses to go with him until she has found the man who wronged the girl. The girl turns on the gas in the lighthouse to destroy both herself and the villain and soon the building is in flames. The girl is rescued but dies and Rodney seeing the flames returns to port and takes Molla in his arms.

The earlier reels of this picture give the impression that it is going to be a human interest romance of the sea, in which the drama results from the fact that the girl is left at the lighthouse and the hero is sailing away believing her to be dead. There is in this part a strong element of sadness and tragedy, with the plight of the girl and the death of the lighthouse keeper, and it is accented by the betrayal of the young girl. At this point, however, the action begins to quicken and with the situation arising from the attempt of the girl to blame her shame on an innocent man and her attempt to kill herself and her real betrayer, followed by the burning of the lighthouse, the story becomes lurid melodrama of the type that delighted the gallery patrons in days past.

Blanche Sweet registers in a strongly sympathetic role, Robert Frazer is pleasing as her sweetheart and Dorothy Sebastian gives a good performance as the other girl. The atmosphere of the sea and the ruggest coast is well maintained.

There is an excellent scene showing a rescue from the sea when it is covered with blazing oil, and with its combination of an emotional and thrilling climax it ought to satisfy the most ardent melodramatic fans.

Lowell Sherman Stars in a Colorful Story of Affairs of Wealthy Russian Grand Duke

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

Following his appearance in the stellar roles of a number of successful stage plays during the last few seasons, Lowell Sherman is being presented by Warner Brothers as the star of "Satan in Sables" a story dealing with a wealthy Ex-Grand-Duke in Paris.

Pictured as a man of fantastic wealth, this Russian nobleman is noted for his affairs with women on whom he lavishes money but not affection, spurning them when his ardor cools. One of these gets revenge by winning the love of the nobleman's unspoiled and innocent young brother. In the meantime a poor young girl crosses the nobleman's pathway and he falls really in love with her but circumstances cause him to doubt her and he humiliates her. The boy when he learns the truth enters an auto and dashes to his death. Thoroughly chastened, the nobleman gives up his past life and finds the poor girl waiting for him.

The story is melodramatic and improbable. There are a number of lavish scenes and it has been well directed by James Flood who has given the action a certain verve and snap that interests. There is a glamorous atmosphere of lavishness surrounding the story and a number of the sequences are pleasing.

Lowell Sherman imparts an impressive dignity to his role and acts with fine finish in the bigger moments although inclined to pose and gesture too much at other times. Despite the lack of sympathy for the role you cannot help but feel a bit of a fascination for a man of this type. Pauline Garon is excellent as the little Apache girl and acts with pleasing vivacity. John Harron gives a good performance as the younger brother.

Notwithstanding the implausibility of the story and its lack of realism or sympathy for the star, there is a certain charm that will probably make it pleasing entertainment for a large number of fans.

Jane Novak Gives Fine Performance in Role of Nurse Who Takes Place of an Erring Wife

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell

With Jane Novak and Niles Welch in the leading roles, Arrow Film Corporation is offering on the independent market "The Substitute Wife" a Whitman Bennett production directed by Wilfred Noy.

The title appropriately describes the story which is based on the idea of a nurse taking the place of an erring wife to allow her to go away with the man she really loves. This seemingly impossible situation is accomplished through the fact that the husband is accidentally blinded on his wedding night and the wife resents his show of affection as she has married him for his money. The voices of the two women are identical. In the course of the story the self-sacrificing nurse learns to love the husband and is responsible for an operation that restores his sight. He learns of his wife's perfidy and there is a strong intimation that he will eventually marry the nurse.

This idea is highly implausible, but with a few minor slips it has been rather smoothly worked out by Director Noy in such a manner that the story while never convincing manages to hold the interest, although the action could be speeded up somewhat by further cutting. Much of this is due to the consistently good work of Jane Novak in the title role. Her performance is sincere and sympathetic. Niles Welch gives a satisfactory portrayal of the unfortunate husband, Mario Majeroni makes the minor role of a surgeon stand out and the other roles are capably handled.

For patrons who are willing to overlook the far-fetched idea on which this story is based, its handling will probably prove interesting and it should rate as a fairly good program attraction.

A Department Devoted Exclusively to the Pictures, Short in Footage But Long in Drawing Power

"Dangerous Curves Behind"

Eddie Cline directed this Sennett all-star comedy. The story concerns small town folk who become victims of a young chap who booms real estate values. The players are Ruth Taylor, Jack Cooper, Joseph Young and William McCall. This subject introduces faces not particularly well known to patrons of comedy and it will be interesting to watch their development under the tutelage of Mack Sennett. In this comedy they do fairly well, so that it ought to please most audiences as the story and the situations are good and rendered distinctive by the Sennett touch. It is all slapstick stuff but the somewhat leisurely movements of the players at times slow up the action.—S. S.

"Better Movies"

(Pathe—Comedy—Two Reels)

This is another of those inimitable "Our Gang" comedies produced by Hal Roach and directed by Robert McGowan. The children find a deserted studio and proceed to stage their own thriller. At first a tin can camera suffices; then a little rich boy in the neighborhood supplies a real movie camera, and the action of the bunch is really registered. Later, they run off a show successfully—with titles upside down and exaggerated acting—until adults break it up. This is an excellent subject, with the familiar faces augmented by Martha Sleeper as the vampiest of vamps and "Husky" Hanes in a good role. It is barrels of fun from start to finish and ought to prove a prize drawing card in any theatre, whether catering to adults or children.—S. S.

"A Goofy Gob"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

This is the second of the series featuring the stage comedian Billy Dooley, who again appears as a "dumb" sailor and he certainly succeeds in looking and acting the part to perfection. An ensign is secretly engaged to the captain's daughter and Billy offers to hold him out by taking the ring back to the girl who is at a girl's school. He gives it to the wrong girl and there is a lot of excitement in the institution until Billy gets the ring back and delivers it to the proper party. There is some corking good comedy in this picture. One of the best things is where Billy, who is unable to whistle, is praised for his success in trying and he says it was the boat, not him, that whistled. In fact, his inability to whistle is responsible for a lot of good comedy. In one scene he buys an assortment of whistles and stands outside the window to attract the girl, and is mistaken for a fish peddler, a postman, etc. There is also a good sequence where he poses as a dummy in the gymnasium. This picture should prove a good laugh-maker for all classes of patrons. The sub-titles are snappy and clever, the action is fast and the situations amusing.—C. S. S.

"The Boundary Line"

(Universal-Western-Two Reels)

This two-reel Mustang featuring Fred Humes is built around a dispute over the boundary line between two ranches due to the boundary stream changing its course. A villainous foreman complicates matters and the dispute is settled by Fred, grandson of one party, marrying the grand-daughter of the other rancher. There is familiar Western action but the main thing in the picture is the way the two old Civil War veterans scrap with each other, and keep up their old enmity at every opportunity. This idea is by no means new and is rather forced for effect but it adds an element that takes it out of the cut and dried wsetern style. Of moderate entertainment value.—C. S. S.

"Wild Cats of Paris"

(Pathe—Cartoon—One Reel)

This latest "Aesop's Film Fable" from the pen of Paul Terry is another example of clever humor. The farmer visits Paris and gets the thrills of a lifetime, particularly in the Latin quarter.—S. S.

"Slippery Feet"

(Educational—Comedy—Two Reels)

Educational's newest two-reel comedy starring Bobby Vernon is based on the idea of a rival causing the hero to pose as a noted burglar to fool a masquerade party and then having the real burglar turn up. Of course, this results in a general mix-up with the real burglar being mistaken for the fake one and vica versa. There are a lot of farce comedy complications and a good quantity of slapstick. Although this idea is a familiar one it has been amusingly handled. There is a laughable sequence preceding the mix-up where Bobby dances with a very large woman who flings him all over the place. Bobby also does several impersonations, which gives his rival the idea of the burglar masquerade. There is plenty of fast-moving action and the picture is good for a number of laughs. Your patrons should enjoy it.—C. S. S.

"Transients in Arcadia"

(Fox-Comedy Drama—Two Reels)

Here is another one of series which William Fox is making from O. Henry's excellent short stories. Characteristic of this author, there is a wealth of human interest and a good point to the story that comes as a real surprise to those who are not familiar with it. A shopgirl who longs to marry a millionaire poses as a titled aristocrat and visits a fashionable resort hotel where she has trouble with crooks who are after her pearls. A swell chap comes to her rescue but she turns him down. Back in the shop she is lamenting her loss when a delivery man enters and proves to be the swell young fellow who was also masquerading. The story is decidedly entertaining and there are a number of amusing situations. It should please the majority of patrons. Mary Akin as the girl and Hugh Allen as the fellow both do good work.—C. S. S.

"All Abroad"

(Fox—Comedy—Two Reels)

One of the new Fox series of comedies based on Mabel Herbert Urner's stories of "The Married Life of Helen and Warren." Warren is called suddenly to Europe and leaves Helen behind. The trip is called off but Helen's friend has persuaded her to hide on the boat. Warren hastens to the ship on a rum-running tug, arriving as Helen is taken off in the pilot boat. Revenue men chase the tug and Helen and Warren are again landed aboard ship but there is a mix-up as Warren's partner is occupying the stateroom. Kathryn Perry and Halam Cooley are excellent in the leading roles. This is a fast-moving comedy filled with amusing farcial situations that is good for a number of smiles and should prove thoroughly enjoyable. It is all good peppy fun, even if a little improbable.—C. S. S.

"The Jail Bird"

(Winkler—Cartoon—One Reel)

By means of a clever combination of photography and cartoon work little Alice cavorts with her cartoon cat and a turtle. The trio steal a pie and are chased by a dog cop and finally landed in jail and made to break stones. By the aid of a bird the dog escapes and learns to fly and finaly rescues Alice. Walt Disney, the cartoonist, has his characters do a lot of highly impossible stunts which prove to be quite amusing. It is fully up to the standard of the series and if anything a little more imaginative than usual.—C. S. S.

"Felix the Cat on the Job"

(Educational—Cartoon—One Reel)

This Pat Sullivan cartoon deals with the trials and tribulations of Felix after he stows away on a vessel. Discovered, he has to work his way scrubbing the decks until a miracle saves him during a storm. Reaching a lighthouse safely, Felix gets revenge by ingeniously (and fantastically) diverting hordes from the lighthouse to the ship. It's very good fun.—S. S.

"Pathe Review No. 44"

(Pathe—Magazine—One Reel)

This presents three subjects—"The Old Man of the Sea," depicting the monotonous life of a Japanese fisherman; "Feminine Farmers," Pathecolor views of women tending farm animals in a "manless" town in Switzerland, and "Plundering the Sea," a camera record of the Arcturus Oceanographic Expedition, released in co-ooperation with the New York Zoological Society. Of these interesting subjects it seems that the last named will have the most appeal. It is the most picturesque and it has had liberal space in the newspapers.—S. S.

"A Taxi War"

(Universal-Comedy-Two Reels)

Good opportunities for Eddie Gordon to demonstrate his ability as a contortionist and tumbler are afforded in this two reel Century Comedy in which he is starred. The action opens with Eddie twisted up like a pretzel inside a pillow slip masquerading as a pillow. Non-payment of room rent develops trouble with the landlady and the two boys have a time getting out. They are taxi drivers for rival companies and try to steal each other's business. The other chap plants a bomb in Eddie's cab but his own gets caught on the tire chain and both are blown up. It is not as laughable as some of the earlier Eddie Gordon comedies but should prove fairly amusing for his fans and slapstick admirers in general.—C. S. S.

"The Invisible Revenge"

(Short Films—Cartoon—One Reel)

At last dimmutive Jeff succeeds in getting the best of tall overbearing Mutt. In this cartoon, distributed by Short Films Syndicate, Jeff succeeds in getting hold of a solution that will render a person invisible. He fools Mutt by pouring the liquid on a little negro and Mutt is scared when he sees a suit of clothes dancing around apparently with no one in them. Mutt discovers the deception but Jeff pours some of the stuff on himself and becoming invisible is able to kick and trounce Mutt to his heart's content. A clever bit shows the dancing of a Hebrew dance, the Charleston, and other distinctive steps by a pair of empty shoes. This is so well done that the dances are easily recognized. A clever and amusing Mutt and Jeff cartoon.—C. S. S.

"Knicknacks of Knowledge"

(Educational—Novelty—One Reel)

As usual in this series of Lyman H. Howe's Hodge Podge various items of interest from all parts of the world have been brought together and interspersed with cartoon work. The result is a reel that is up to the standard of the series from the standpoint of instruction and entertainment. Among the subjects are, washing the windows of the Woolworth building, this is treated in a humorous way; two kinds of "peelers," cotton picking in Peru, Chinese junks, Niagara and Victoria Falls, New Zealand natives working themselves up to a frenzy by making faces, and a cartoon cyclorame of the earth.—C. Hiers Back at Studio

Walter Hiers returns again to the Christie studios the last week in October. Hiers, nationally known screen luminary, was forced to stop work recently due to a severe injury suffered while making a scene. At first it was thought that amputation would be necessary to a few injured fingers of his right hand, but now Walter is out of all danger and is ready to go on with his next production.

Start and Finish Together

Bobby Vernon and Billy Dooley, Christie comedians each started production on their current vehicles the same day and each finished the same day. While their next stories are being prepared, Dooley will hie himself to a neighboring golf course and Bobby will visit Catalina Islands where he hopes to land a "Yellow Tail" or Tuna which will enable him to become a member of that famous Tuna Club for which the Island is internationally famous.

KIT GUARD

The F. B. O. comedian looks funny any time you look at him, but when he dons a comic attire, he's ridiculous. In support of Alberta Vaughn as "Mazie," in F. B. O.'s series of short features, Kit is scoring some of his best hits.

ONE REEL EVERY WEEK

Short Features Should Get Prominent Place in All Theatre Advertising

By ELMER R. PEARSON
Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

IN discussions of adequate advertising and exploitation for the Short-Subject emphasis is more likely to fall on individual cases or proper presentation than on any general discussions of the subject. We would like, however, to indulge in one generalization because it lies back of and is vitally connected with the entire campaign of short-subject advertising.

After all, no great amount of advertising effort is put behind any commodity unless it embodies selling points worthy of being exploited. Just because a bit of screen entertainment happens to be one of two-reels is no more justification for its being featured in the advertising copy or the marquee lights than is the greater length of the more favored feature. The short-subject must embody qualities worthy of special attention if it is to be given more intensive advertising by the exhibitor, and it is the purpose of this present discussion to show that our short-subjects embody just such requisites.

It is no secret that until a few years ago the production of short-subjects as a class of screen entertainment was conducted in a rather cheap way. The short-length producer, if he were to survive at all in the face of feature competition, had necessarily to limit costs in every department. The cream of the acting, directorial, and story-writing professions gravitated towards the feature field where both compensation and recognition was better and quicker. In the past few years this situation has been almost reversed. On the Mack Sennett and Hal Roach lots today, just to cite two examples, there are names of feature importance in every department of the studio operations. In fact, many members of the stock companies on both these lots have been recruited directly from the dramatic and feature fields. Nor is the matter of quality talent restricted to stars and featured players. Both Mr. Roach and Mr. Sennett have combed filmdom and gone out into the field of the dramatic stage and vaudeville to recruit established players for their supporting casts. Good stars do better with good supports and this has been especially manifest in the comedy output of both these studios.

ELMER R. PEARSON

The same care that has been exercised in the selection of player talent is applied to the directorial, camera, and lighting departments. Many of our short-length comedy directors are receiving higher salaries than their associates in the feature field. The cameramen and other technical experts on the comedy lots are the equal in experience and craftsmanship to similar groups employed at the feature studios and include acknowledged leaders in their professions. It can be stated without fear of contradiction that our comedy studios are turning out in two-reel lengths what are truly features in every sense of that term—features in casts, in direction, in production effects, in lighting and photography. And with the added advantage of compressing the entertainment into briefer length and thus making possible greater program variety.

What has been said above in reference to the two-reel comedy output emanating from the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett Studios is equally true of our other short-subject units on the Pathe program. Newspaper reviewers in various parts of the country have recently complimented editorially the higher standards of story values, acting, direction, and production effects found in our recent Patheserials. Such single-reelers as the Grantland Rice "Sportlights" and the "Stereoscopiks" have also won an unusual measure of editorial endorsement because of their entertainment appeal. Such established short-subject product as the "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," and our Pathe Review and Pathe News have become fixed units on theatre programs throughout the country, their permanency attesting eloquently to their pulling power at the box-office.

After all unless advertising of short-subjects pays the exhibitor, everyone knows he is not going to adopt it as a permanent policy.

There have been so many theatres whose short-subject advertising has been an outstanding success, a few of whom have taken the trouble to tell us and the trade journals about it. Thus we know we are not asking the exhibitors to advertise short-subjects for our sake alone but because it will pay them at the box-office.

Theatre-owners are being urged to increase the space devoted to short-subjects attractions in their "ad" copy, poster and lobby displays and lights, not because of any partisan bias in behalf of the short as opposed to the feature-length production, but because we know that inherent in the short-subjects are found the qualities of feature entertainment plus variety that properly advertised will win increased patronage at the box-office.

Children are the best advertisers of something they like, that an exhibitor can have. They carry the message of enthusiastic satisfaction to their associates and elders as can no herald or advertising copy.

We all know how bored they are with the average lovesick feature. Therefore, at least for the opening day of an engagement, the less said about a feature of that kind and the more prominently one plays up the comedies and shorts, the more certain will be the juvenile attendance, followed, of course, by the attendance induced by their word-of-mouth advertising which has no equal.

Weiss Bros. Declares Intention to Enter Short Subject Field

IT has been rumored about for some time that Louis Weiss intended to enter the short subject field in his production and distribution activities for next year. When interviewed as to such a possibility he admitted that the rumor had been correct. Mr. Weiss stated as follows:

"We do expect to distribute a program of short features in the coming year. We have, for some time, been making tentative arrangements with a number of people with a view towards the production of several series of two reel comedies and also several action serials. The public is beginning to appreciate the fact that a large part of an evening's entertainment at a motion picture theatre is made up of short features.

"Wtih the right kind of activity the exhibitor will also come to the realization of the true value of the short subject and will give it the proper place on his program. The short feature needs just as much attention to its make-up as the biggest feature ever produced and we expect to put our brand on only that kind of material whether it be two reel comedies or serials.

"We will make further and more definite announcement of our future plans as they materialize."

Big Water Polo Game

A water polo game with highlights of comedy will be the feature of episode No. 7 of F. B. O.'s new "Mazie" series based on the Nell Martin magazine stories. Alberta Vaughn is being starred and Ralph Cedar directing. Two famous West Coast teams of swimmers will take part in the game which will be staged in the big tank of one of the Los Angeles clubs.

Next Fat Man Comedy

"Look Out Below!" is the title Joe Rock has given his current Standard comedy featuring the trio of rotund funsters, "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander. In any event this will be the working title of the little fun feature which is being directed by "Slim" Summerville, the elongated megaphone wielder.

Arthur Trimble is the "Buster Brown" here and Doreen Turner is little Mary Jane in "Educating Buster," in the Century-Universal two-reel series. "Petey," the canine comedian, has the role of "Tige."

New York Notes, From Red Seal

Harry Fogarty, Red Seal's popular salesman, is down with a touch of pneumonia, but his host of friends will be glad to know he is on the road to recovery.

Red Seal Featurettes are on every opening bill when new houses open. Inwood, Boston Road, Arcadia, Broadway Astoria, and the Manor in Brooklyn are conspicuous examples.

Leo Bucher's new Boston Road Theatre in the Bronx opened last Friday with Red Seal's Ko-Ko Song Car-Tune and Marvels of Motion in prominent spots on the bill.

The S. and S. Broadway Astoria opened last Saturday with a Red Seal Ko-Ko Sing Car-Tune on the program.

Charles Goldreyer's new Manor in Brooklyn is opening Thursday with two Red Seal features: a Ko-Ko Song Car-Tune and Film Facts.

Exhibitors throughout the N. Y. territory are congratulating Harry Bernstein, Red Seal's manager, on his short features. They are well satisfied with his product.

Lois Boyd in Fat Men Comedy

Another "baby star" has been annexed by Joe Rock, producer of fun films. This time it is dainty little Lois Boyd, formerly a member of the Christie, Roach and Sennett pulchritudinous aggregation. Miss Boyd will be seen in support of "the big three" of screenland—"Fatty" Alexandre, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fat" Karr in Rock's next Standard comedy. "Silm" Summerville has been retained to direct the little feature which has not yet been titled. Gale Henry will have the feminine lead.

A lot of you remember Ken Thompson, of the M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin. Used to shoot in tips. He's doing it again—on those business building short subjects—sent a whole lot in this week. When you report your features won't you please shoot in tips on the short subjects too? Thank you all, folks. VAN.

BELOVED BOZO. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Ralph Graves. Pretty good comedy with many laughs. Graves seems to please the majority of the crowd, while the rest want nothing but Sennett specials or "Our Gang" comedies. Draw all classes, town 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

CURSES. (Educational-Comedy). Al St. John is fully as good as he was in the Fox comedies of a few seasons ago and this one is an absolute wow. A burlesque of a serial, in three episodes, with the most clever subtitles. It sure is a feature in itself. Maybe for Sunday. Draw all classes, town 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

THE DARE DEVIL. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Ben Turpin. About as funny as they make 'em. If you want some downright good laughs buy a few of this Turpin boy's stuff and sew your buttons on good and tight. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

FLAPPER FEVER. (Arrow - Comedy). Star, Bobby Dunn. Another would-be comedy. Bobby Dunn is good at times, but this comedy is punk. Print new. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

FRENCH PASTRY. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Bobby Vernon. Bobby is keeping up his reputation established in his former star comedies with this one. A dandy burlesque on how the late war was fought. Tone and appeal good. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

GREAT CIRCUS MYSTERY. (Universal-Serial). Have just run the third chapter in this serial. Surely have the kids coming. For several years I did not run serials. If the crowds continue to come I will conclude that I have been missing something. Good tone. Draw mill and farming class. Admission 25 L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

HALF A HERO. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Lloyd Hamilton. One of the best Hamilton has made in this new series. It had our audiences in an uproar at some of the gags pulled off. A satisfactory comedy. Tone good, appeal great. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

IDAHO. (Pathe-Serial). This is a good western serial but it's not as good as "The Net." Tone good. Draw all types, town 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

IRON MULE. (Educational-Comedy). (2 reels). Star, Al St. John. Any one who ever viewed "The Iron Horse" will never say that "Iron Mule" was taken from it; this comedy is fair. Sunday, yes. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

KID SPEED. (Educational-Comedy). (2 reels). Star, Larry Semon. A good slapstick comedy that did please. Print new. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

LOOKING FOR SALLY. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Charles Chase. Chase always has been good with me, as he is in a class by himself. This is a real laughable comedy. Good print. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER. Star cast. Very scary comedy that kept the house in an uproar. It'll make a wooden Indian laugh. Get it, gang. General class, town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

OUR GANG COMEDIES. (Pathe). These "Our Gang" comedies are good as a novelty and they please, but here, somehow or other, do not seem to get many laughs. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

PERILS OF THE WILD. (Universal-Serial). Star, Joe Bonomo. Not much action in this serial to put it over. Also, star not very well known here. Fair tone and appeal. No for Sunday. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

ROLL ALONG. (Educational-Comedy). Star, Jimmie Adams. A Christie two-reel blackface comedy. Quite unique. This ought to please about everybody immensely, especially if it can be accompanied with Southern hoe-down and clog music, and so on. Tone O. K. Appeal universal. Yes for Sunday. Draw rural and village class, town 400. Admission 15-30. E. L. Partridge, Pyam Theatre (240 seats), Kinsman, Ohio.

SHOULD LANLORDS LIVE! (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Arthur Stone. He sure knows how to get the laughs and he gets them in this one all right! As good as you can buy anywhere. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

SNAPSHOTS OF THE UNIVERSE. (Educational-Magazine). This might have been good, but it was all shot to pieces in taking bum film out, so it would go through the projectors. Punk print! Tone O. K. Yes for Sunday but poor appeal on print. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

TEN DOLLARS OR TEN DAYS. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Ben Turpin. Another Turpin wow. There would be something funny about this cross-eyed comedian if he never moved an eyelash. We hope, in the way of comedy, he never sees straight again. Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

THE MAN PAYS. (Pathe-Dippy Doo Dads). A one-reel comedy that started out well but turned out to be raw. The kids who saw it will never believe in The Stork again. Hal Roach ought to be shot. Draw from town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Missouri.

THREE BASES EAST. (F. B. O.-Series). Although in only two reels and one episode of a series, this little gem of a picture has one of the best baseball climaxes ever shown on the whitewashed burlap. The suspense was great and you should have heard 'em yell when George O'Hara tapped the old pill out for a homer! O'Hara is great and we are certainly sorry that he will not appear in other series to be released by F. B. O. Good tone, very good appeal. Sunday, yes. Draw general class, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

THREE FOOLISH WEEKS. (Pathe-Comedy). Ben Turpin in another, funnier than ever; but one should see "Three Weeks" in order fully to appreciate it. Went over the heads of some here, as we did not show "Three Weeks." Kenneth W. Thompson, M. W. A. Hall, Hancock, Wisconsin.

TWO WAGONS, BOTH COVERED. (Pathe-Comedy). Star, Will Rogers. In order to appreciate this one should see "The Covered Wagon" first. It is a very good production, done in regular Rogers style. Village and rural class. Kenneth Thompson, M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin.

UP ON THEA FARM. (Fox-Comedy). Star, Lee Moran. Good thrill type of comedy that made 'em gasp. Some funny scenes, too. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Pathe News to Celebrate Fifteenth Anniversary of Its Foundation

ONE of the most significant and outstanding events in the history of the screen is the tribute paid the fifth estate by the large and representative list of distinguished men, headed by Vice-President Dawes, who have accepted invitations to attend the dinner marking the fifteenth anniversary of news reels, which will be held under the auspices of Pathe News at the Hotel Plaza in New York on November 14.

The list of illustrious men who have announced their intention of paying tribute to the news reel on November 14th, includes, in addition to the Vice-President of the United States, such notables as the Honorable Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy; Honorable Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior; Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican Ambassador to the United States; Baron Ago von Maltzan, German Ambassador; Ralph O. Brewster, Governor of Maine, Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York; E. Lee Trinkle, Governor of Virginia; United States Senator Coleman DuPont; United States Senator Royal S. Copeland; Thomas A. Edison, noted pioneer film inventor; Chauncey Depew; Owen D. Young; Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; W. W. Atterbury, Pennsylvania Railroad; P. C. Crowley, New York Central Lines; William Greene; President American Federation of Labor; Dwight F. Davis, newly named Secretary of War; Mayor James M. Curley of Boston; Frank D. Waterman, Republican Mayorality Candidate for City of New York; James J. Walker, Democratic Mayorality nominee for City of New York; Dr. L. W. Rowe, Director-General of the Pan-American Union; Franklin Adams, Counsellor of the Pan-American Union; John Olive LaForce, Associate Editor of the National Geographic Society, and Melville E. Stone, Counsellor of the Associated Press.

The United States Navy will be represented by Rear-Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, Commandant of the First Naval District; Admiral Robinson, Chief of Naval Operations; Rear-Admiral W. A. Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics; Admiral Leigh Palmer; Rear-Admiral William S. Benson, retired; Major General John A. Lejeune, Commandant Marine Corps; Captain Walter Gherardi, Aide to the Secretary of the Navy; and Mr. T. V. O'Connor, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board.

The Army will be brilliantly represented by Major General John L. Hines, Chief of Staff; Major General Mason M. Patrick, Chief of the Air Service; Major General Charles P. Summerall, commanding the Second Corps Area, which includes New York City.

A special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad has been chartered by Pathe News to convey the cabinet members, ambassadors, and other prominent officials to the dinner. This train will leave the Union Station in Washington at one o'clock on the afternoon of November 14th. It will return the following day. Two floors have been engaged in the Hotel Plaza for the convenience of the distinguished guests.

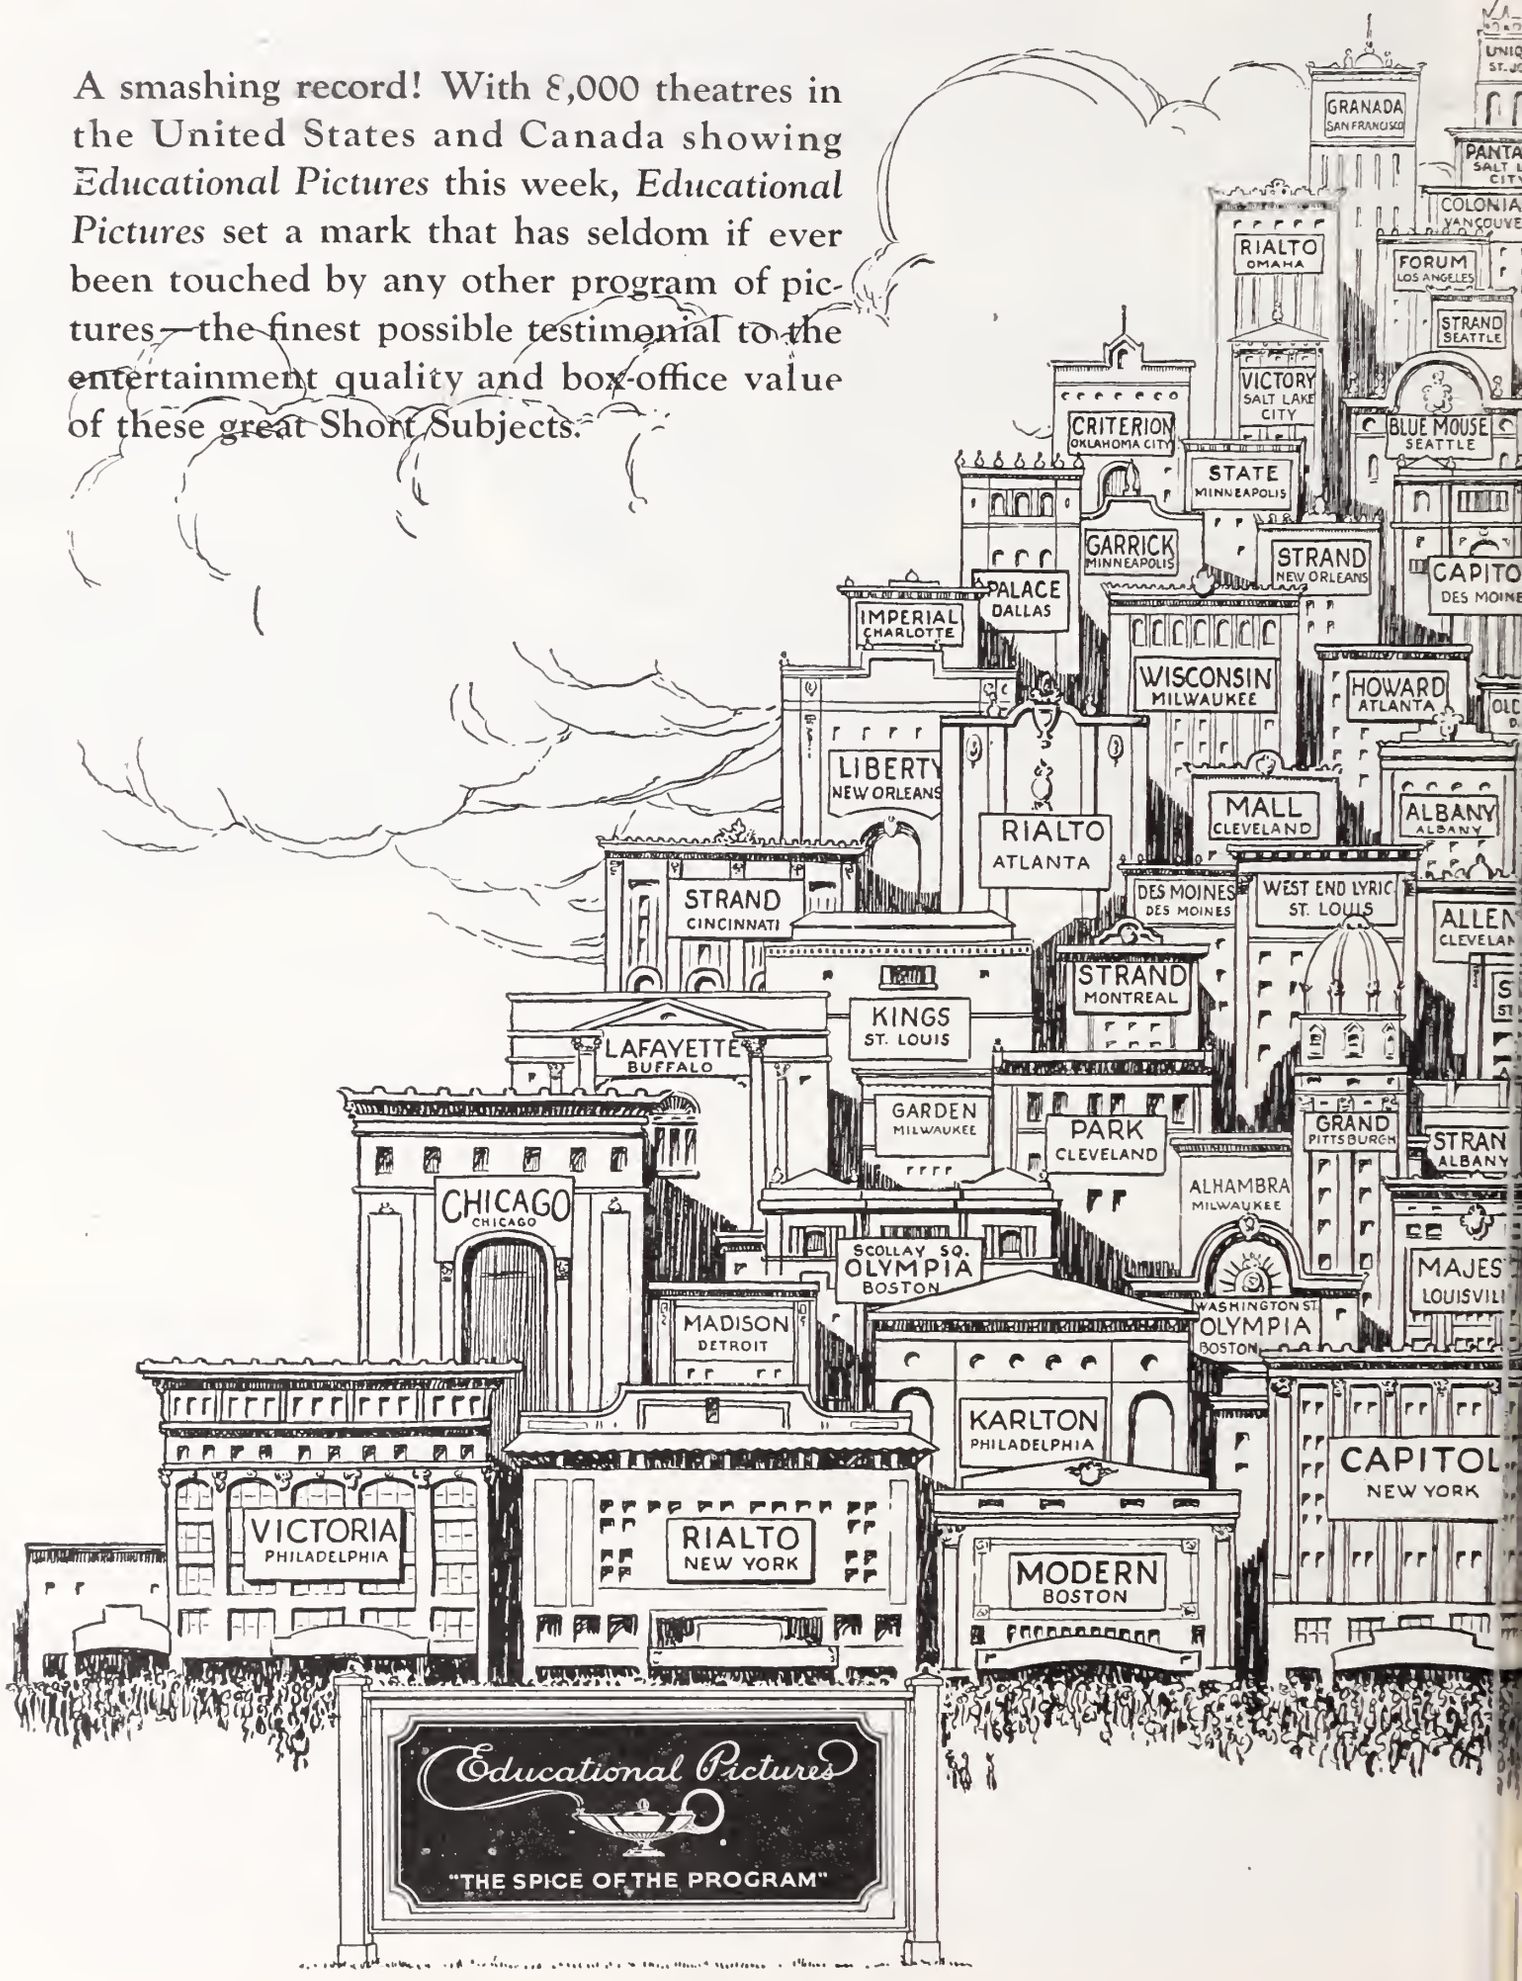
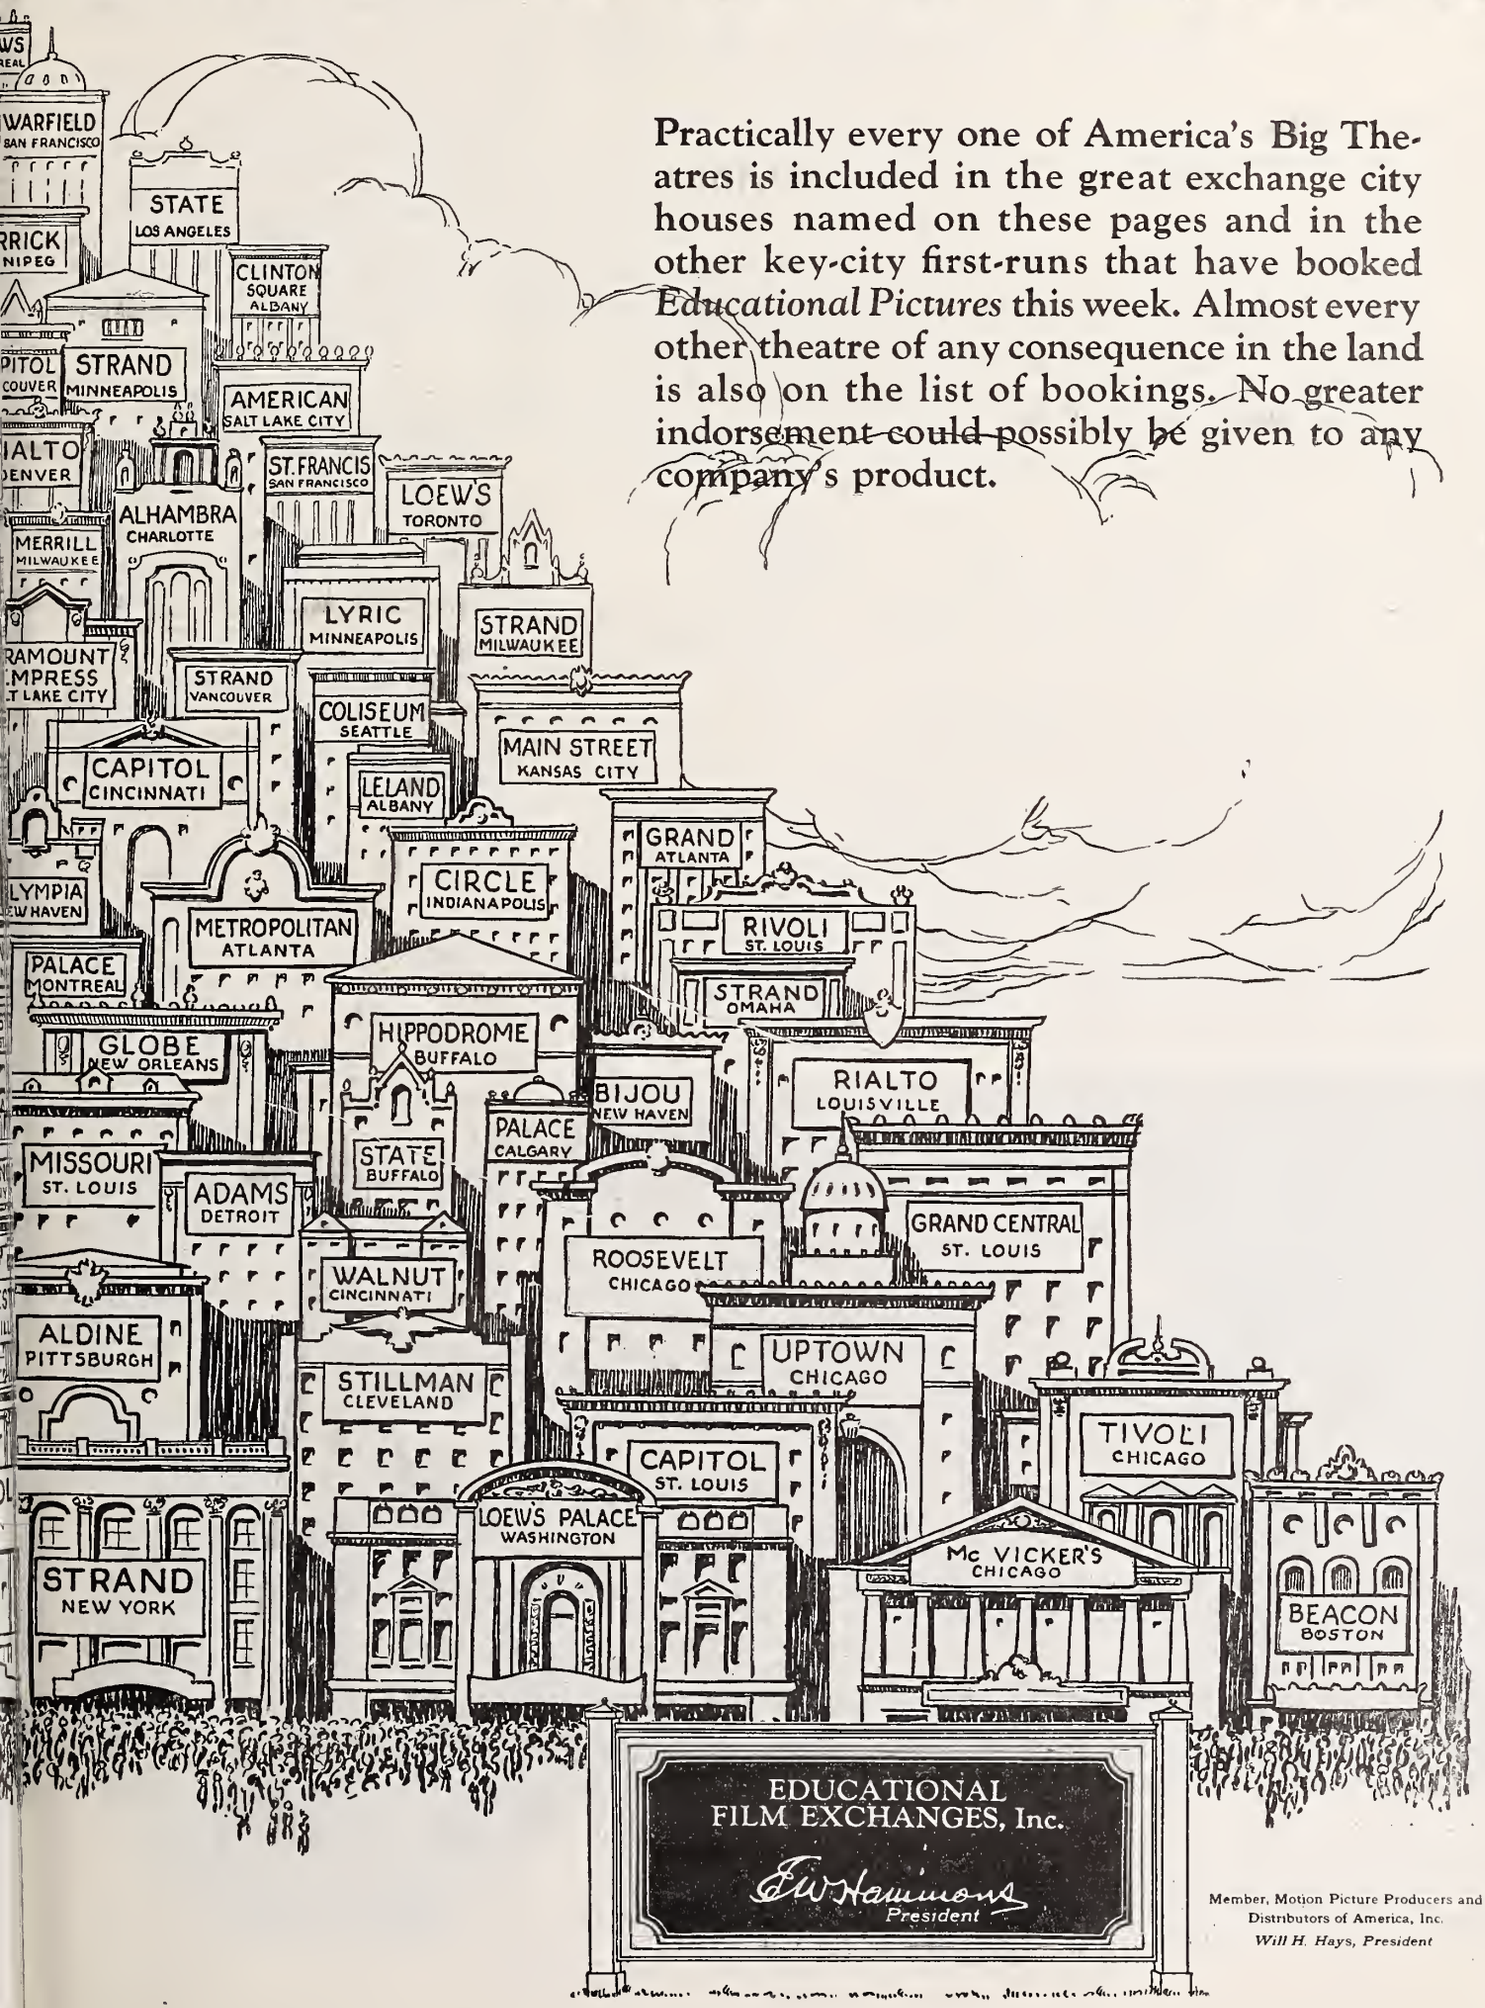
8,000 Theatres Are Showing

A smashing record! With 8,000 theatres in the United States and Canada showing Educational Pictures this week, Educational Pictures set a mark that has seldom if ever been touched by any other program of pictures—the finest possible testimonial to the entertainment quality and box-office value of these great Short Subjects.



Educational Pictures This Week



Practically every one of America's Big Theatres is included in the great exchange city houses named on these pages and in the other key-city first-runs that have booked Educational Pictures this week. Almost every other theatre of any consequence in the land is also on the list of bookings. No greater indorsement could possibly be given to any company's product.

Philadelphia Theatres Use Tie-up on Short Feature

THE Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia, has just put on one of the most interesting and most effective tie-up displays that has been engineered on a two-reel subject in a long time.

When the Victoria recently booked the Educational Pictures Special, "Wild Beasts of Borneo," the adventure picture made by Mr. and Mrs. Lou C. Cherry, in the darkest jungles of Borneo and the Settlements, House Manager Cherry was an opportunity for an excellent tie-up with the Biddle Pet Shop. The pet shop furnished wild animals and birds, including chimpanzees, mandril monkeys, cockatoos and mackaws, which were arranged in a cage on a raised platform in front of the theatre. Palms and palmettos were set about the lobby to lend the desired jungle atmosphere.

Crowds were to be seen gathered about the stage at all times during the display, which had the added advantage, for the theatre, of being arranged at the theatre instead of at the store, which is so often the case in tie-ups with stores. While, of course, the Biddle Pet Shop got ample credit and attracted much attention to itself, the crowds gathering to look at the animals and birds were within a few steps of the box-office, and during the showing many persons could be seen to stop at the cage and then turn to the box-office to buy tickets.

"Oh Buster" Hailed as a Great Two Reel Buster Brown Comedy

"OH BUSTER," the third Buster Brown Comedy, the unique two-reeler series being made for Universal release by the Century Film Corporation, has been received in the East and is hailed by Universal executives and sales heads as the best Century Comedy ever turned out. It is regarded as sure proof that the Buster Brown Comedy series will take second place to no brand of comedies during the coming season.

There has been great elation at the Universal home office over the success of the first two Buster Brown Comedies, "Educating Buster" and "Buster Be Good." The third is regarded as so far superior to the first two that Julius and Abe Stern, officials of the Century Film Corporation, now realize that they have a knockout series in the Buster Browns and have wired to the Coast to spare no pains nir expense to hold them up to the standard set by "Oh Buster."

Representatives of the Loew Circuit in and around New York City previewed "Oh Buster" shortly after its arival in the East and immediately booked it for a run over the circuit, totaling 126 days. The comedy also is scheduled to play at an early date in a number of big first-run theatres throughout the country, including the Forum in Los Angeles, the Granada in San Francisco, the State in Milwaukee and the State in Buffalo.

A series of lavish settings is a notable detail of the Lupino Lane-Educational comedy, "Maid in Morocco," a two-reeler, in which the comedian is said to be at his best. While expense in production seems to be climbing all the time, it would appear that, in this instance, Earl Hammons, president of Educational, has told Lupino to "make the picture"—regardless of the cost.

Thornby Signs with Christie

After an absence of nearly two years, Robert Thornby returns again to the studios in the capacity of director.

A few years ago, the genial Bob appeared before the camera as a comedian—and he registered immediate success. With each succeeding vehicle his circle of fans and admirers expanded by leaps and bounds. He recently signed with the Christie Film Company to make a series of comedies for Educational release, and his first assignment will be the Neal Burns unit. Since Thornby was a former screen comedian, his effort since his return is being anticipated with keen interest.

Pathe News to Celebrate Its Fifteenth Anniversary

with a representative of this paper, Emanuel Cohen, editor of Pathe News, announced that the dinner at the Hotel Plaza is intended to emphasize the importance of the fifteenth anniversary of news dissemination by motion pictures.

"Twenty-five years ago the flickering and uncertain cinematograph showing the horse-drawn fire engine responding to a fire aroused a wave of enthusiasm," declared Mr. Cohen. "Ten years later science had eliminated the eye-tiring, uncertain and cloudy projection of moving pictures. Charles Pathe was the pioneer in the news film field. He was the first to perceive the miraculous possibilities of the motion picture camera as the world's most accurate reporter. It was then that the first attempt was made to organize a world-wide news film service.

"The development of the ordinary camera into motion picture portrayal has made the African jungles almost as familiar to the peoples of the world as the Strand in London or Broadway in New York. The news film has reached every corner of the world during the last fifteen years. The news film serves millions of subscribers in the farthest corners of the world. It speaks the universal language. It reaches all grades of mentality with the same perfection of accuracy. It has become the most accurate reporter of news and events that the world has ever known. It has ceased to be merely an entertainment. It is now an institution. It is to emphasize and honor this achievement that the dinner is tendered."

8,000 Theatres in United States and Canada Book Educational Pictures

ALTHOUGH there has been no announcement, advertising or exploiting of a special "Educational Week," Short Subjects bearing the Educational Pictures trade-mark are playing 8,0000 theatres in the United States and Canada during the week of October 25 to 31. The total number of bookings runs several thousand higher, but complete reports on these figures have not, of course, been received from all the Educational Exchanges.

E. W. Hammons' big Short Subject organization is setting a mark for theatres served in one week which has seldom if ever been touched by any other program of motion pictures.

Practically every big first run theatre in every exchange city, as well as almost every first run in the other key centers, is included in the 8,000 theatres in this country and the Dominion that have on their programs for the week one or more subjects from among the comedies, novelties, news reel, specials and other one and two-reel pictures bearing the Educational Pictures trade-mark. The balance of the theatres in the list comprise most of the theatres of any real consequence in the land.

There has beeen no anouncement of, or plan for, a special week such as those often exploited by various companies in the past. The setting of this remarkable record came about in the normal course of Educational's business. As part of Educational's consistent national advertising program, the advertising and publicity department laid out an advertisement for the October 31 issue of The Saturday Evening Post which would name the biggest of the theatres showing Educational Pictures that week, so that the motion picture fans could see that these Short Subjects were to be seen in the foremost houses of all the big cities. Since ads for the Post naturally have to be completed several weeks in advance of publication date, the sales department was asked to report as early as possible the biggest first bookings for the week. This request was tranmitted to the exchange, and immediately the response began to come in, listing the big first run houses among the Educational accounts that were booking one or more Educational pictures for the week.

So great was the enthusiasm aroused throughout the whole sales organization by the unexpectedly fine early returns on the biggest houses, that the sales force spontaneously extended its efforts to the smaller theatres in an effort to make as early a report as possible to the home office on the bookings for the week. With still a number of late bookings to be reported, the returns have already established the week of October 25 to 31 as the greatest in the history of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

"Everyone at Educational is immensely gratified by the showing for this big week," said Mr. Hammons, "If we had advertised an 'Educational Week' for months ahead, and for a long time concentrated the efforts of our entire force on making a record, advertising and exploiting the venture in advance, we could not help being pleased with the returns. But when such an achievement is made without any of this advance ballyhoo, and simply through the spontaneous enthusiasm of the salesmen in the natural course of business, then we are doubly pleased.

"The immense number of theatres represented in the bookings for the week of October 25 is, in my mind, the finest endorsement any company could possibly receive.

"Our Gang" and Mack Sennett Comedies Head Pathe Bill

TWO-REEL comedy honors on the Pathe short-feature program for the week of November 1 are divided between the Mack Sennett comedians and Hal Roach's "Our Gang" troupe. Other screen entertainment on this program includes a chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West," a Grantland Rice "Sportlight," a Biblical film—"The Sea of Galilee," "Topics of the Day," one of the Paul Terry "Aesop's Film Fables," Pathe Review, and two topical issues of Pathe News.

"Better Movies" is the intriguing title of the "Our Gang" comedy produced by Hal Roach and directed by Robert McGowan. The famous kiddies find a deserted studio and proceed to stage their own comedies and thrillers.

"Dangerous Curves Behind" is a Mack Sennett all-star comedy directed by Eddie Cline. This fun-film concerns small town folk who become victims of a stranger-land-boomer who starts realty values skyrocketing. Ruth Taylor is Nell Purdy, the storekeeper's daughter; Jack Cooper is Bertie Badger, the banker's son; Joseph Young is the stranger and William McCall is Nell's father. This two-reeler gives the Sennett comedians a sure-fire fun vehicle.

"The Diamond Girl" is the title of the sixth chapter of the Patheserial "Wild West," which features Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson.

EDDIE GORDON SIMPLY CAN'T STOP FLIRTING

The Century comedy star of "Crying for Love" is seen, here, hugging the maid while the Amazonian bride glares at him. One of Eddie's most successful laughing hits!

New "Sportlight" Release

"What Price Touchdown?" is the timely Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. Mr. Rice shows in this reel the course of sprouts the big college teams must go through before they are ready for a game. With its particularly timely appeal, this subject gives exhibitors an opportunity to bill it as a special short-feature attraction.

"The Sea of Galilee" is the third of "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" series and reveals scenes of Christ's early ministry. This series in addition to being both educational and entertaining, is particularly adapted for showings during the Christmas season.

Pathe Review No. 44 presents three subjects of wide appeal: "The Old Man of the Sea," an adventure of a Japanese fisherman; "Feminine Farmers," Pathecolor views of a manless town in Switzerland; and "Plundering the Sea," a camera record of the Arcturus Oceanographic Expedition, released in co-operation with the New York Zoological Society.

"Wild Cats of Paris" is the latest of the "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," the reel of press humor, and two issues of Pathe News complete the November 1 schedule.

Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, Offers a Fine Idea for Anniversary Celebration

ACE BEERY, of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, made a distinct contribution to anniversary stunts when he planned for the observance of the ninth birthday of Robert Lieber's widely known theatre.

New birthday stunts at this late day are like new hairs on the top of a bald man's pate. This is distinctly new, and it is well within the reach of any manager who can afford a few sheets of cardboard or even wrapping paper. From this humble form it can be run up, as the purse permits, to the really enticing display shown in a cut on this page.

This cut is practically self-explanatory. It is merely a display of huge birthday cards, in this instance done in colors and ornamented with fanciful designs and sketches.

Vary the Sentiment

There is shown a lack of variety in the sentiments. There are two "congratulations," two "Many Happy Returns," and three "Congratulations on Your Birthday" with two "Good Luck and Continued Prosperity." There should be a greater variety in the expression of good will, since they are supposed to come from the different First National stars.

Another improvement, where time permits, would be the use of portraits of each star, but the main idea is a capital one, and should prove useful to every manager who marks the anniversaries at his house—and the manager who overlooks this is missing one of the best bets at his command.

If you work far enough ahead you can not only get the portraits, but you can get actual autographs, to be enlarged by the pantograph.

But the main point is that this provides a new and spectacular idea. It was used on only one side of the Circle's foyer, but in a smaller house it can be made the entire decorative scheme. If your artist is limited in his ability, you can get most of the decorative material from the paper hangers' sample books, using the border material and the large-figured designs.

Other Features

The other side of the Circle lobby was occupied by an unusually good tableau from The Lost World, the underlined attraction. This showed a scene on the plateau with three-dimension monsters and pigmy humans, to give contrast. Graustark, the current offering, was a superstition of the marquise. It is almost a superstition with Mr. Lieber to use one of the Talmadge sisters for his anniversary attraction, and naturally Graustark was selected for the ninth observance.

In addition to this feature he presented The Great Train Robbery, for the sake of contrast, the accompaniment to this picture being played on a piano purposely out of tune, and Only a Bird in Gilded Cage was sung, with slides, to give the prologue atmosphere.

Beside this, clippings from old news reels, including the San Francisco fire and the Coronation of King George, were offered to mark the passage of time.

On the modern side the orchestra gave Tschaikowsky's Marche Slav and a pianist gave a classical program, including a duet with a duo-Art piano for the second part.

Wanted Old Men

Getting a new idea, H. M. Thomas, of the Capitol Theatre, Manitoba, got a lot out of a help wanted advertisement.

He took a two tens in a the classified section calling for old men who could sing, dance or play musical instruments for a prologue to The Gold Rush.

"I am not going to put you on the stage to be laughed out," the copy read. "I want to reproduce a regular old fashioned mining camp dance hall. That's one place where sheiks, cake eaters, etc., are out. Don't come around and tell me you can put on grease paint make-up and look like an old man. I want the real thing."

The advertisement ran for several days and everyone was talking about the stunt, with the result that the prologue got almost as much attention as the Chaplin play.

Broadcast Laughs

American exhibitors have frequently used the radio to relay the laughter at a comedy to the pedestrians, but London has done even better. It has made the laughter a part of a radio program, getting space in a majority of the newspapers printed in Great Britain, where it was announced as "Interlude of laughter. Ten minutes with Charlie Chaplin and his audience at the Tivoli Theatre."

The moment selected was that in the tremulous cabin, which does everything but loop the loop. The broadcasting was timed to get this section of the picture, and it was preluded with the announcement that the station was trying "an interesting experiment of broadcasting the storm of uncontrolled human laughter inspired by the only man in the world who can make people laugh continuously for five minutes—Charlie Chaplin."

Naturally, the newspapers took this up as a novelty and carried mention the following morning, with the result that the stunt had a double baaelled kick.

With this precedent, who will work it over here? It's a whizzer.

A First National Release

A NEW IDEA FOR BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS FROM THE CIRCLE

For the ninth anniversary of the Circle Theatre Indianapolis, Ace Beery used huge greeting cards from First National stars on one side of the lobby, with a scene from The Lost World to advertise the underline, Graustark being the current attraction.

Use College Boys for The Freshman Ballyhoo

Rah Rah Boys Are Lloyd Pluggers

If you want to do a real cleanup on Lloyd in The Freshman, you cannot do better than to follow the Colony Theatre's work on the New York premiere.

For a week in advance a sight seeing bus, with a load of twenty-five near-freshmen was run up and down Broadway, bannered for the play and with the boys singing and cheering. It woke up even Broadway, which is used to strange sights.

They helped to get advance work which resulted in the police reserves being a permanent standout at the Colony the opening Sunday night.

The boys should have uniform sweaters, or at least the same sort of freshie caps, and should be given a little preliminary training in cheer work. If police regulations permit, it is a good plan to halt them at prominent points for an apparently impromptu concert.

The New York bus carried a cutout from the 24-sheet on the top, but you don't have to use a bus. Any old truck will serve.

Local Beauties Are Slaves of Fashion

Putting over a Beauty Contest at the Palace Theatre, Petersburg, Va., it was announced that the photographs of the winners would be sent the Metro-Goldwyn casting director at Culver City.

You can have three guesses as what the casting director did with the photographs, but it gave the house a fine contest in which some fifty local girls participated, and it put over A Slave of Fashion to unusual business.

A local store was tied to the idea and also contributed a fashion show which was worked in its own store, as the beauty contest had the theatre stage.

Both stunts were suggested by Norman Pyle, a Metro-Goldwynner.

Production Hints from Edward L. Hyman

Managing Director, Mark Strand Theatre, Brooklyn

"The Lost World" was the center of a program at the Brooklyn Mark Strand Theatre which had the Mark Strand Topical Review and 5 musical presentations. The entire time of this show was 2 hours and 11 minutes, of which time the feature itself took up 1 hour and 44 minutes. The review ran its accustomed 8 minutes and the presentations required 19 minutes.

Each of the 4 deluxe performances on the day was opened by Lilly Kovacs, solo pianist of the orchestra, in a concert arrangement of "Dixie" by Manna-Zucca. Miss Kovacs occupied a place with the musicians of the orchestra, the piano being placed to the left. The lights for her number were: foots and borders of large stage blue; flesh spot on soloist from the dome; Nile blue Mestrum flood on the orchestra from the dome; lemon and orange spots crossing on ceiling drapes from the sides; purple spangled draw-curtains closed across the production stage and flooded by 4 steel-blue spots; 2 green spots on the mirror mosaics vases on the windows at either side of the orchestra stage. Four minutes for this number.

An artistic interpertation of the song "Longing" (Fibich) was the second presentation. This was done by a lyric tenor and 4 members of the ballet. The tenor sang the song through once and then it was taken up by the dancers and concluded with a pantomime as the tenor finished the second verse. The set was an elaborate French garden and the properties include sun-dial, stone bench and banks of flowers. The tenor was in black velvet knee breeches and jacket and the girls in old French wide hoop skirts with powdered wigs. Each dancer's costume was different color. The lights: all lights used in the preceding number on the large stage remained for this; on the small stage green foot lights were one-half; overhead spots of steel-blue and side spots of lemon. This number also took 4 minutes.

After the Mark Strand Topical Review came a novelty interpretation of the selection "Normandy." This was done by a lyric soprano and 4 girls. The scene was a large Dutch set row with transparent windows. To one side was a Dutch flower stand. At the opening the lights in the windows of the houses were visible. The singer and the girls were in typical Dutch costumes, the girls being dressed as boys. The singer went through the number one time and was taken up as a dance by the 4 girls, and finished with a second chorus by the singer to which the girls also danced. The set was lighted by light blue floods from the projection room, with blue foots and borders on the small stage. This number also took 4 minutes.

Harry Breuer, xylophonist playing from the orchestra did the "Hungarian Rag."

Breuer's solo took 3 minutes.

"Oh How I Miss You Tonight" was put on as a duet number immediately preceding the feature picture. A black cyclorama was used, in front of which, on one side of the stage, was a lady's boudoir and on the other side a man's library. At the opening the stage was dark and gradually an amber spot from overhead dimmed up on the soprano who was seated on the day-bed in the boudoir. This spot and a floor lamp immediately behind the singer were the only lights used. All else was dark. The soprano went through a verse and chorus and then her lights dimmed out as an overhead spot dimmed up on the tenor on the opposite side of the stage. He went through the second verse and at the chorus was joined by the soprano, both singers coming up stage center for the finish. This number took 4 minutes.

TWO DON Q RIDERS WHO PUT OVER THE FAIRBANKS PICTURE IN PROVIDENCE AND WEST VIRGINIA

The rider of the pinto was the perambulator for the Keith-Albee Theatre in Providence, R. I. He also worked in a stunt whereby a local paper gave prizes for the best answers to questions about Providence history, a stunt originated in Boston by the same management. The other rider, less busy, merely perambulated the streets of Huntington, W. Va., for the Strand Theatre.

Black Cyclone Six Sheet Makes a Striking Set

A Paramount Release

HERE'S THE RIGHT SORT OF LOBBY FOR BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK

It was designed by Jean Windenstein for the Princess Theatre, San Antonio, Texas. The lower balloon carry such lines as "It's nutty, but it's nice." "No horses. No beggars. Just laughs, laughs, laughs." It gets the idea over nicely.

Crazy Perambulator Told of The Beggar

Knowing the title to be misleading, Jean Windenstein, of the Princess Theatre, San Antonio, Texas, put out a perambulator who paraded the streets in a bathrobe and a silk hat. In one hand he carried a Japanese umbrella and in the other a stick with a horse's head. A sign about his neck explained: "If you think I'm crazy, you ought to see The Beggar on Horseback, with Everett Horton, at the Princess."

This backed up an exceptionally good lobby, as shown in an adjoining cut, with vari-colored balloons painted on the flats. Many of these carried explanatory talk and cutouts from the ones pasted up.

The centrepiece was Horton on a hobby horse, painted in profile above a still frame.

The chief value of the display, however, was the balloons, and for these they used every color they could mix and as many circles as they could well get on. It made capital selling.

Foolish Costumes For Girl Ushers

Costumed ushers are good only when they are used the week in advance of the show. It may help the color to dress them for the showing, but there is little advertisement. Jensen and Von Herberg dressed the ushers at the Strand Theatre, Seattle, in harlequin dress the week before the show, and supplied them with back signs for The Fool. They came out on the sidewalk only to get photographed.

A Fox Release

THE FOOLISH USHERS

The chief outside flash was the large painted sign on top of the marquise, facing the direction from which most of the patronage comes. Because of the traffic flow a sign on the opposite side would not mean much, so only one was used.

Large and Small

Recently the use of the "I'll Show You the Town" stunt from the Universal press book was reported from San Francisco, prizes being offered for the best lists of points of interest.

Now Berlin, N. H., reports similar success with the best description of Berlin. If the stunt will fit the two extremes, it should work well in between.

Parked the Sign

When Scottsbluff, Neb., started to repave the main street, all vehicular traffic was diverted, but Billy Ostenberg, Jr., got permission to erect a banner 5 by 16 feet, telling that Tom Mix in "The Rainbow Trail" was at the Orpheum. This offset the fact that the autos were barred from the theatre district, and got the crowd.

Fined for Crowding

A locally made brontosaurus got so much attention for The Lost World in San Antonio that the manager of the Palace Theatre was fined for over-crowding his lobby with the standout.

A Pathe Release

A SHADOW BOX ON THE BLACK CYCLONE FROM SAN FRANCISCO

The display is seven by nine feet, and the animals are cut from the six sheet, while the backing is an old scene repainted. The sage and rocks cost only the cartage, and the entire display represents a minimum of labor.

Had an Elevated Train Night Life in New York

Serpentines Told Of Cabaret Play

Emphasizing the cabaret feature of "Night Life in New York," D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., made a two-plane front for his theatre. The front was a cubist effect in many colors, with a waiter apparently leaving the supper room, which showed on the back plane, through the arch. This arch was the entrance through which all patrons passed, and the novelty of walking right into the display seemed to appeal to them.

Instead of the usual throwaway, Mr. Faunce had 3,000 rolls of serpentines printed up, each banded with a paster giving the house and title and the names of La Roque, Dorothy Gish and Ernest Torrence.

These were distributed the previous Saturday by two attractive girls who worked the downtown district. Now and then a serpentine would be thrown out to attract attention. A supply cart followed the girls to keep the baskets filled.

YOU ENTERED THE CAFE TO SEE NIGHT LIFE IN NEW YORK

That was the beauty of this lobby display from D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Syrand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala. He carried out the cabaret idea with serpentines, distributed the day before the opening, banded with the title of the play.

Rural Notices

Cliff Lewis, of the Strand Theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., writes that during the Summer he has worked up a list of some twenty newspapers in small towns adjacent to Syracuse whereby the theatre publicity is carried in return for a weekly pass.

Manifolded press notices are sent out and each is accompanied by a pass for two. The editor puts the theatre on the mailing list and this list is checked up each week.

The idea is an old one, but surprisingly few theatres seek to reach out with this simple scheme.

The majority of the out of town passes will be used in the afternoon, in most instances, when there is plenty of room.

Rocked Gloria

With his side panel still frames on The Coast of Folly, J. P. Harrison, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Forth Worth, Texas, used a larger center panel showing Gloria in the surf. The figure was separately mounted and an eccentric shaft bobbed her up and down in the water very realistically. The lettering on this panel was lighted by flashers, which helped to get attention.

This was banked by a display of rare sea shells loaned by the University from its collection.

Ties Chicago to Clothing Stunt

Bruce Godshaw is a new man on the staff of Universal's Chicago office, and just to get himself on the map he has been pulling a big stunt in connection with a well known clothing store and Perils of the Wild.

Thirty-five Chicago houses were given three suits apiece as prizes in an essay contest with a choice of three topics:

"Why do boys prefer to come to The Hub for their first long pants suits?"

"Would you rather wear long trousers or knickers? Why?"

"If The Hub organized a boys' club would you like to belong? What entertainment would you suggest?"

Each contest was tied to the house and the Lubliner and Trinz houses, with few exceptions, were back of the scheme. Just to make it interesting to the kids, each boy gets a 48-page book of sporting statistics and radio dope.

All he has to do is to shove an essay at the doorman of any of the houses on the opening day of the new serial, which fixes the picture in his memory, and naturally, since he is right there, he gets a ticket and goes in, though he does not have to.

A DISPLAY OF ZANE GREY NOVELS HELPED TOM MIX

George Rea, of the Grand Theatre, Columbus, Ga., got the local book store to make a splash with Grey novels, featuring Riders of the Purple Sage in which Tom Mix was starred. It added the Grey rooters to the Mix fans for a goodly total.

Good Tips

Because there was a race season on at Evensville, Ind., Charles Glickhauf, Metro-Goldwyn man, got out tipster envelopes with "The Judges' One Best Bet" on the outside and the advice that Dixie in The Dixie Handicap was the soft spot for "wise" money at the American Theatre.

This is the first fake tip to shoot in since racing started up this way last spring, but it always is good.

Hourly Sales Are Made Sales Aid to Lightnin'

A First National Release

SIX YOUNG "INDIANS" WHOOPED UP THE SCARLET WEST

Dave Morrison, of the Rex Theatre, Greeley, Col., hired the horses and gave the boys a pass to the show to ride whooping through the streets with cardboard pennants, telling of the attraction. He also worked a page of co-operative ads.

Hourly Sales Idea Help to Lightnin

The old "hourly sales" idea was the bi stunt for Lightnin' when it played the Tem ple Theatre, Toledo. The largest depart ment store announced a week of such sales but announced it as "Lightnin' sales," and t jazz it up made it a half-hour period.

Several days in advance a large cloc face was put up over the main entranc to the store with the announcement tha one department of the establishment woul be "struck by Lightnin'" each half hour Clock faces at each department told the tim when that particular counter would b struck.

Promptly at the half-hour all goods wer cut to one-third of the marked prices, prob ably after a mark-up, and at the end o the half-hour the marked prices again pre vailed until the following day.

To keep things moving, an orchestra wa engaged and a light lunch was served fre to patrons between twelve and one with th idea of holding the women in the store al day to take advantage of the successive sales.

The store profited by the sales made i the non-bargain hours, and in the genera jazzing up it was able to give its newspaper and store window advertising. The Temple got credit for the idea—and the bargains.

Generally these hourly sales are held only in the mornings, to bring out early shoppers in the dull hours, but this all-day stunt brought them flocking in from the suburban towns.

Ties Demonstration Up to Rugged Water

Bert Jordan, of the Majestic Theatre, Memphis, was down on the river front and noticed a demonstration of a new life-saving suit. If you fall off the dock or off a boat, all you have to do is to blow up your coat and pants (it is a one-piece suit) and float on down to New Orleans.

The Mississippi is pretty placid, and so is the Ohio, but Jordan figured that the suits would be just as good in Rugged Water, so he made contact with the demonstrator and the exhibition was moved from the levee to the lobby of the Majestic, where they had larger crowds if less water.

The display included two suits, one of which was worn by a man, who showed how it worked. The other was stuffed and was on the job when the demonstrator was taking a recess.

It not only sold the Paramount picture, but it got so much attention for the suits that the pleased demonstrator gave Jordan a suit for his very own.

Now all Bert has to do is to make a tie-up with some steamship line, get a ticket to Europe and make the trip in entire safety.

You may not have a chance at a pneumatic suit, but you can tie up to life preservers or swimming wings. The stunt helped Jordan to exceptional business.

Dog Show Boomed The Snow Country

It's been a long time since we told of the last dog show, but Earle Settle remembered the idea and worked it for Tracked in the Snow Country at the Palace theatre, Muskogee.

He put up the prizes nominally offered by the Times-Democrat for the dog most nearly resembling Rin-Tin-Tin, for largest, smallest, prettiest and homeliest dogs, a dollar to each, and a free ticket to each entrant.

This was before school opened, and it brought a parade of several hundred dogs, the contestants reporting at the newspaper office and marching down the main street to the theatre, where a special showing was given them.

The publicity given by the paper brought out large crowds to watch the parade, and the spectators learned all about the picture from the banners they carried. As a snow picture listened pretty good in Oklahoma just then, the business hit into the snow country mark, too

Shared Birthday

Anyone whose birthday fell within the week the Empire Theatre, Montgomery, Ala., was celebrating its own anniversary, was invited by H. C. Farley to be guests of the house at either The Lucky Devil or Black Cyclone.

One of the guests sent a handsome basket of flowers to the theatre and others sent cards and letters, proving that the goodwill stunt got over.

Illustrated

A Fox exploitation man seems to be the first to build up on the school lecture on a film subject. When As No Man Has Loved came to the Globe Theatre, McKeesport, Pa., he showed the principal of the high school ahead of the engagement. Then he dug out some lantern slides and the principal gave an illustrated lecture to the pupils on the Hale story, and, incidentally, the picture.

A NICE DISPLAY ON IN THE NAME OF LOVE FROM SUMTER

John Hannon, of the Rex Theatre, Sumter, S. C., used two large and five smaller hearts, red with white lettering, to dominate his lobby. The large ones carried cutouts of Greta Nissen, and the smaller ones merely lettered sales talk.

This Commandments Shadow Box Sold

A Novel Display on Commandments

Once more D. Roscoe Faunce, of the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., comes to the fore with a good lobby display. This time it is The Ten Commandments.

He made a large flat of the two tablets and broke through the centre for an irregularly outlined shadow box in which stood a figure of Moses cut from the lithographs.

The figure was clothed in fabric and crepe hair replaced the printed whiskers, both of which waved in the not too violent breeze from an electric fan.

A lightning flash was worked by cutting into the background with a pair of jagged flashes, covered with translucent material and lighted from the rear by flashers.

A light blue spot was thrown on the face of the figure, with a darker blue on the body and still darker globes for the rest of the illumination.

Set back of a wire screen, (which Mr. Faunce finds better and more durable than scrim), the display possessed a strong and impressive appeal.

Two tickets were sent each minister, and one of the original chariots was loaned for a perambulator.

Fighting Ranger Uses Kid Events

A festival in the city park at which various games and races were staged for the children was one of the means used to double the usual receipts at the Grand Theatre, Centralia, Wash.

Fifty prizes were given in various events and free lemonade was liberally handed out, all to advertise "The Fighting Ranger" at the Grand.

Another stunt was a parade of about 500 children, impersonating various Universal stars and play characters. There were fifteen ticket prizes for this, and the parade interested almost everybody.

And for two weeks before the first chapter a Shetland pony, the prize for a voting contest, was used to give sample rides to his prospective owners.

Sells Serials With Old Penny Tickets

A combination of the "penny ticket" and farmers' matinee ideas was worked by the Strand Theatre, Elizabethtown, Ind., to put over the first chapter of Universal's new one, The Fast Express.

Joseph W. Springer, the manager, sold his tickets to the local merchants for a penny each, and got enough in to break him even on the show. The merchants gave tickets with each purchase of ten cents or more, and every youngster in town saw the opening of the story.

It would have paid to have given the tickets to the merchants, as has been done many times before, but Mr. Springer figured that a trade-getter was worth something to them, and they would handle the tickets more carefully if they had to pay something for them.

The result was not only that he got his rental back, but he got a more careful distribution and the stunt got more for the picture than if there had been a free distribution.

It lifted the curse of the "free" ticket, and that means a lot.

Spirited Front a Help to Don Q

You don't find D. Roscoe Faunce sitting down and figuring that a big title should sell itself. He knows that the stronger the title the better chance he has to advertise big, and he spread himself on his lobby on Don Q, when he got that for the Strand Theatre, Birmingham.

Most of his lobby displays are fairly small and depend upon animation or other tricks for their big appeal, but for the Fairbanks picture he built a compo board gallery that ran across the entire upper half of his lobby opening, with a stairway to the ground level. On this Don Q fought two soldiers who seemed to be pursuing him up the stairs, while the heroine leaned over the balustrade and anxiously watched the outcome of the unequal struggle.

The balustrade was decorated with shields and crossed battle axes, with the star lettered on one and the title of the play on the other, while an antique lantern added to the decorative effect.

With this lobby to do most of the selling, he used about his usual billing and newspaper space and got packed houses at a minimum cost per patron.

Gave Air Rides

If you wanted to soar through the clouds down in Galveston, Texas, Eddie Collins made it easy for you.

He effected a deal with a commercial aviator, flying at East Beach, to throw out 5,000 discount cards, entitling the holder to a $3 ride for only $2, the text reading:

"A treat from the Queen Theatre. This ticket and $2 will give you an airplane ride. Come to East Beach. The Queen pays $1 of your ride."

The reverse advertised Night Life in New York, and the plane carried a banner that was seen by thousands as the machine took its short flights along the beach front. It sounded like a lot, but it didn't cost much.

Putting Over Havoc With a Different Appeal

Chicago Opening For Lloyd Comedy

The Freshman was put over in Chicago with a 100x3 at the Roosevelt Theatre, and while there is a lot of talking in the space, a nice arrangement and the use of all type make it possible to get it all without effort.

THE CHICAGO FRESHMAN

That wedge shaped panel gives three divisions for talk, and permits much to be said without apparent crowding. Where space is held at a high rate, it is essential to make the best use of it, and this art work permits more to be done than could be accomplished in four times the space with the usual layouts. If you cannot command the services of an artist you can get much the same effect with a stock cut and rule work. It is not the drawing, but the arrangement which counts. We particularly like the clean effect of the eight point leaded Roman, which makes it possible to read without effort. Even the full face lines are all upper and lower, to make certain that every line will get attention. It is a model of compact legibility.

Advance Work

Giving a special kid matinee on Wild Horse Mesa, C. T. Perrin, of the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Col., announced that he had 100 Harold Lloyd Freshman skull caps to be given the children while they lasted.

The sidewalk was packed with children long before the advertised time of opening and Perrin not only put over the matinee but got 100 perambulating ads for The Freshman.

Odd Styles Mark Havoc Campaign

Putting over Havoc, Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, goes to open letter style and different appeal. The first of these was an open letter from the manager in which he makes a nice point in his suggestion that Havoc will be to the screen what What Price Glory has been to the stage. He frankly admits that it has a war background, but offers the difference as the reason for putting it forward. It is a well written, straightforward appeal for patronage that

ARE YOU TIRED OF "JUST A MOVIE"
Then Here is the Picture You Have Been Waiting For!
Every once in a while there comes along a photoplay so unusual and so finely produced that it marks another milestone in the progress of the art of motion pictures. Such a photoplay is "Havoc" which has a story of more dramatic value and more gripping than any picture yet produced.
I believe the time is now come for an intelligently directed and correctly presented photoplay with a World War background. "Havoc" is destined to occupy the same position on the screen that "What Price Glory" now holds on tbe regular stage.
"Havoc" will have its premier in America at the Palace on Sunday. I can heartily recommend this picture to all those who like a thrilling story well told and superbly acted. At least two new stars will be made by the public in appreciation of the splendid acting shown in this picture.

gave the advertising campaign an excellent start. The other display shown here is a single column in actual size. This is a better layout than one in which the space is equally divided between the two sides. Massing the white space at the top and left gives much more display than would come from a centered type panel, and it gets attention because it is different. Centering the type would have given a usual display. This is unusual because it is put down into one corner. It gets more attention than with the other treatment. This is an excellent idea for any title not requiring too much text. Note how the display is confined to the house and title. It gets over on the first glance, but each other section of the space does its individual selling after attention has been gained.

it would be in a smaller town. The space in the city papers costs more, and most advertisers feel that they get the most for their money if they jam the space with all the words the space will contain. Mr. Adams knows that if he can get more attention with white space or some light attractor, he is buying the utmost publicity, so he presents his arguments in few words and gets attention for those words with the remainder of the space. It is not profitable to jam a thousand words into a small space if it is neither seen nor read. Mr. Adams uses sixteen words of selling talk. We doubt if he would have done as well in sixty. If you cannot afford a staff artist—and few houses need them—see what you can do with rule work, routing and white space. You'll be surprised if you never tried these devices.

Plenty of Cut to Help Get Interest

first chance at the reader and sells the idea carried out by the cuts. The result is that you come down to the details all ready to be argued into going. You are sold to all practical purposes, but you merely want to know just what it is you are buying. It is all done in a little more than three nines, which is hardly a spendthrift proposition, and yet no more could be done in a full page, so it would be useless to enlarge the space. It is ample just as it stands. Those American spaces generally are.

All Type Layout is Good in Pittsburgh

This three tens on The Ten Commandments is from the Olympic Theatre, Pittsburgh. In most aspects it is a nice type layout and something that could not have been expected of Pittsburgh a few years ago. Now good type displays are not infrequent, though often most theatres revert to very clumsy hand lettering. This might be improved by setting the cast in upper and lower case. Seven lines of all caps do not give any prominence to the names. That section of the space is about a fifty per cent loss. the matinees in order to avoid the night crowds. This is in a five point and is too small to be caught. And yet that means a great deal more to the sale of tickets than the large display for the underline, which is a week away. It would have been very much better had the matinee appeal been set in a letter to take in that entire space. There is time enough to sell next week's show later on, or at least it could have been carried in a couple of eight point lines.

Borrowed Model

As soon as he learned of the Shenandoah disaster, Barry Burke, of the Palace Theatre, Forth Worth, Texas, borrowed a large sized model of the air ship from a local man, knowing that the news reels would be along presently.

As soon as the Pathe News came along, he set the model in his lobby, with the motors running, and the stunt brought more money to the house than did The Coast of Folly-Burke is the sort of showman who knows where he can get things when he wants them.

Makes White Space Strengthen a Cut

Making exceptionally good use of white space, the Victory Theatre, Denver, used 200x4, or more than fourteen inches down the page for Black Cyclone, and about half of this is white space broken only by "Rex" and a double line leading to the completion of the title on the other side of the space. This gives a play-up to the cut that would not be possible were the space more crowded, and after the hit of the first Rex picture we think that the drawing sells better than text. The automobile has not yet killed the inherent love for a good horse and Rex will sell himself on his portrait alone. A Blonde Beauty for Hoot Gibson

Hooking to the personal appearance of Alfhild Larsen, proclaimed the prettiest bobbed-haired girl in Pittsburgh, the Cameo Theatre declared she had been engaged to appear in conjunction with Spook Ranch because Hoot Gibson was the handsomest cowboy in the pictures.

She was paraded before the engagement as the feature of a string of Flint cars, loaned by the local agency, and on the Sunday before the picture opened, she went to a local flying field and took a flight in a blue and white striped bathing suit, throwing out passes and otherwise doing things to engage the public attention.

A Universal cameraman was at the field to take pictures of the crowd, and these and shots of the crowds along the line of the parade were featured as part of the Cameo program.

It made almost as much of a stir as the selection of the Atlantic City's Miss Pittsburgh, though it did not cover so extended a period. A girl in a bathing suit is pretty good advertising any old time.

Boys, these tips are contributed by us, exhibitors like yourselves, to help you pick the pictures that are most likely to please your patrons.

"It is my utmost desire to help my fellow man"—that's our motto. We play fair by you and by the pictures we have run.

You can help us in return for our willingly given tips. Send reports on the pictures you have used—especially late releases. "OUR GANG."

Associated Exhibitors

EAST OF BROADWAY. (5,783 feet). Owen Moore as a typical Irishman in a very interesting comedy-drama of the "cops." Picture is of the better class of program offerings and is of the kind that appeals to whole classes and families. With ordinary advertising the picture did good business to satisfield patrons. Suitable for Sunday. Special, no. Print good. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

YANKEE CONSUL. (6,148). Star, Douglas MacLean. A very good comedy that drew well and pleased well. Plenty of laughs and heart interest through seven rcels. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Print fine. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

F. B. O.

BLOODHOUND. (4,800 feet). Star, Bob Custer. Just a good program picture about the Mounties. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,000. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico.

FIGHTING DEMON. Star, Richard Talmadge. A very good comedy action picture, full of pep and keeps them interested all the time. Good tone. Sunday, yes, special, no. Draw miners and railroad element, town 3,000. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico.

GALLOPING VENGEANCE. Star, Bob Custer. This proved to be a very ordinary western, and this star is quite new for me, business was off; lost money. No tone. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, fifty per cent. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

ISLE OF HOPE. (5,500 feet). Star, Richard Talmadge. Fine action picture of South Seas. Good tone. Appeal 95 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw farm class, town 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

LILIES OF THE STREETS. (7,216 feet). Star, Virginia Lee Corbin. Very good program attraction. Holds interest throughout. Print new. Good tone, fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

ON THE STROKE OF THREE. (6,757 feet). Star cast. Just a good program picture, which we paid for a special. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Hardly suitable for special. Ninety per cent. audience appeal. John Cleva, Jr., Enterprise Theatre, Glenalum, West Virginia.

ON THE STROKE OF THREE. (6,757 feet). Star, Kenneth Harlan. Very good as a program picture and pleased a fair attendance. Print good. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

ON THE STROKE OF THREE. (6,757 feet. Star, Kenneth Harlan. We had a radio singer in person on with this feature, which helped out the receipts considerably, therwise I am afraid it would of been a oor box office bet. It was a fair picture ut nothing to rave about. No tone. Sunay, no. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. . E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, 'ennsylvania.

THAT DEVIL QUEMADO. (4,720 feet). tar, Fred Thomson. Another good Thomon picture that went over in great shape. 'homson and Silver King are taking fine ere and everyone seems to be well pleased. one, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Apeal, ninety per cent. General class town f 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

THAT MAN JACK. (5,632 feet). Star, Bob Custer. The kind of western we have been wishing for. Bob Custer will create a big following with "That Man Jack," and if there is a western fan that does not like this one, he is a hopeless case. Action from start to finish and a whopping good story. The riding by Custer brought forth many words of praise. More like this, F. B. O., and Bob Custer will push some of the big western stars for first place. Fair moral tone. Fine appeal. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

THUNDERING HOOFS. (6,913 feet). Star, Fred Thomson. This star is always good, never had a bad one. Silver King is a drawing card at my theatre. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. Laborers and farmers town of 343. Admission 15-30. J. M. Patterson, Little Gem Theatre (250 seats), Hunter, Arkansas.

WHITE FANG. (5,600 feet). Star, Strongheart (dog). On a two day showing this picture pulled more business than any dog picture we have run. Therefore Strongheart has proved he can outdraw "Peter the Great," "Rin-Tin-Tin" or "Thunder." He certainly made our box office happy, and that is what we all want. Book and boost. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

WILD BULL'S LAIR. (6 reels). Star, Fred Thomson. Didn't see this personally, but reports were very favorable. Especially so, the one from the box office, which had been in declining circumstances for some time. It's too bad other producers can't get away from their ingrown dignity and give us a real honest-to-goodness western once in a while, without trying to disguise it with nonessential frills and insipid advertising. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Exceptional appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, special, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

First National

ANNA CHRISTIE. (7,631 feet). Star, Blanche Sweet. Very good picture. Good appeal and moral. Not suitable for Sunday. Special, yes. Mixed class town of 2,500. Admission 20-35. F. L. Wadsworth, Jr., Airdome Theatre (300 seats), Tuskegee, Alabama.

BOY O' MINE. (7 reels). Star, Ben Alexander. Rental too high. Good picture. Not enough profit in it for here account high rental. Good tone. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

CHRISTINE OF THE HUNGRY HEART. (7,500 feet). Star, Florence Vidor. After reading the adverse criticisms on this one I considered I had a lemon for my Saturday night show. However, I did a fair business on it with no walkouts, and had some people tell me the next day that it was fine. Tone, none. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

ENCHANTED COTTAGE. (7,120 feet). Star cast. Rental too high. If you book this picture be sure to see it first. I think it a lemon. Ridiculous story, no meaning. No entertainment value. A piece of cheese. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. No appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

ETERNAL CITY. (7,800 feet). Star, Barbara LaMarr. A good production with elaborate sets, but rental too high for this small town. Forced to raise admission to realize a small profit. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Fair appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

FLIRTING WITH LOVE. (6,926 feet). Star cast. Same thing, rental too high. Raised admission and then not enough profit. A good picture if it was sold right. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

FLOWING GOLD. (8,005 feet). Star cast. An excelent production when it first saw the light of day, but times have been hard since, if the print was any criterion. And we had the nerve to charge special prices, too, which makes it all the worse. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. General appeal. Rural class, town of 300. Admission 10-30, special, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

GALLOPING FISH. (6 reels). Star cast. Somewhat ridiculous in spots, but acceptable as a novelty offering. I'm beginning to hedge somewhat on my statement, some time ago, that film service out of Albany was generally satisfactory. About 200 feet of film duplicated in this print and about fifteen per cent. of the film missing. Sometimes I think we exhibitors are fish, even if not the galloping kind. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. General appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, special, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

HER HUSBAND'S SECRET. (6,190 feet). Star cast. Just an average program picture that should please the average movie goer. Don't boost this one too big. Appeal 75 per cent. No as special. Draw industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

HER NIGHT OF ROMANCE. (7,211 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. A good comedy picture which pleased the better class, but Constance has no drawing power here on account of having made too many lemons. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,000. Admission 10-35. Giles Master, Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico.

HER SISTER FROM PARIS. (7,255 feet). Star, Constance Talmadge. One of the best pictures this star has ever made. It is a little risque, but nothing to offend sensible people. It will please a hundred per cent. Yes for Sunday. Draw from industrial town, 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

HUSBANDS AND LOVERS. (7,883 feet). Star cast. Good offering. Rental too high for this small town. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

HUSBANDS AND LOVERS. (7,883 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. Personally I liked this feature very much. Lewis Stone with Florence Vidor as his charming young wife were fine,

Lew Cody as the lover great. The title means nothing at the box office, consequently poor biz. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Good appeal. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

IF I MARRY AGAIN. (7,401 feet). Star cast. One patron said, "That picture is one of the best I've seen; it's the kind of picture that one is willing for one's mother to see." Other good comments were heard. "If I Marry Again" is a clean picture. Some flirt is not trying to steal a young wife from her husband as is the case in nearly all other productions. Give us more like this, First National. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Strong appeal. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

JEALOUS HUSBANDS. (6,500 feet). Star, Earle Williams. This picture went over big and had the largest Saturday night crowd that I have had for a long time. Bought this picture right and made a little money on it. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, ninety per cent. General class town of 600. Admisison 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

JUST A WOMAN. (6,365 feet). Star cast. A very fine production that pleased all. Didn't draw, but no fault of picture. Tone O. K. Appeal, ninety per cent. O. K. for Sunday. R. L. Nowell, Idlehour Theatre, Monroe, Georgia.

LIVE WIRE. (6,850 feet). Star Johnny Hines. This comedy-drama registered more laughs for an eight-reel picture than anything else I have run. Johnny certainly lives up to the fifty-seven varieties! as he has that many, and many more laugh getting gags in this picture. Step on this one. W. F. Loibl, Chimes Theatre, Cedarburg, Wisconsin.

LOST WORLD. (9,700 feet). Star cast. Novelty with a capital N. Every Tom, Dick and Harry had his own idea of how it was made, and they came back the second time to prove their assertions. It's a cleanup. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday. Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

LOVE'S WILDERNESS. (7,057 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Just a good picture, not a business getter. The fact that I made amateur night with some classy talent helped put it across for me, without that the picture would of lost me money. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal sixty per cent. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

MADONNA OF THE STREETS. (7,501 feet). Star, Nazimova. Good offering worth seeing. Rental too high for this small town. Admission raised to realize a small profit. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

MAKING OF O'MALLEY. Star, Milton Sills. Another outstanding triumph for this ever-popular star. One of the best picture plays we have screened this year. Some said they liked it better than the "Sea Hawk." Splendid tone. Appeal, ninety per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 1,500. Admission 10-40-50. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

ONE CLEAR CALL. Star, Milton Sills. Another fine picture from First National. The title seems to be a little weak, but at that it went over in good shape. Some said it was one of the best pictures ever shown here. Buy this one and advertise it, and you will make some money. Tone, fine. Sunday, yes. Special, Yes. Appeal, one hundred per cent. General class town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

PAINTED PEOPLE. (5,700 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. After playing "Sally" about a month ago, I expected that we would show an increase in our business on "Painted People," but the reverse happened. The picture was mighty good, just built for entertainment, and Colleen should have better support from our patronage. I'm not ready to give up yet on Colleen Moore, and am going to play "So Big" soon, and hope that the response will justify using the later releases. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. General appeal. Rural class town of 300. Admission 10-30, special, 15-40. Charles W. Lewis, I. O. O. F. Theatre (225 seats), Grand Gorge, New York.

Between Ourselves

A get together place where we can talk things over

H. H. Hedberg says, on the top of a report blank—in one of the chatty little notes that I always like to get—"Keep after the slackers—FORCE them to report."

Well, that would be great—but it isn't necessary...They're not slackers they're just busy chaps. When they get the time they stick by us.

You of the old guard remember when we first started out together in building a dependable tip department—we used some postal cards to get the reports in! Well—

Kenneth Thompson, of M. W. A. Theatre, Hancock, Wisconsin, has just sent in a batch of those—THAT SHOWS THE BOYS REMEMBER AND COME BACK WHEN THEY CAN.

Dig up the blanks you've dropped in a drawer. Prove to Hedberg that you're no slackers. Stand by "Our Gang" and they'll stand by you. VAN.

SCARLET WEST. Star, Robert Frazer. A sincere effort on the part of the director to produce a picture of historical interest. This picture will not satisfy the "blood and thunder" western fans, but the better class will consider this a rare treat. Besides the love interest, there are some perfect reproductions of Indian attacks that should be seen by every school kid. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

SILENT WATCHER. (7,576 feet). Star cast. Good picture. Forced to raise admission to realize profit. Even then the profit was too small. Rental too high. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Good appeal. Farmers and merchants town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

SINGLE WIVES. (7,308 feet). Star, Corinne Griffith. Dull, slow-moving drama with the timeworn plot of the husband devoting more time to his business than to his young wife; of a slick lady-killer endeavoring to steal the wife's affections; of an accident which reunites the about-to-be divorced couple. Patrons didn't fail to say it was too slow, and Corinne won't last long if she stars in many more like this. Can't recommend it for towns like ours. Fair tone, poor appeal. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw small town class, town about 1,000. Admission 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

SO BIG. (8,562 feet). Star, Colleen Moore. I can only add my praise to Colleen Moore's wonderful acting and interpreation of the different roles which she handles superbly. Business great. Story run as a serial in one of the local papers here and the church people took it as a benefit picture and certainly did enormous business getting a top figure of fifty cents. Box office well pleased. This star is made for our people, and will be waiting for her next one, which is "Sally." Mixed class town of 2,900. Admisison 10-25, 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

TALKER. (7,861 feet). Star, Lewis Stone. A very good picture but for some reason it "flopped." Al Hamilton, Rialto Theatre, South Norwalk, Connecticut.

THOSE WHO DANCE. (8 reels). Star, Blanche Sweet. One of the best action pictures we have run. People were interested through the entire eight reels. A first class action picture. Tone, good. Special, yes. Appeal, eighty-five per cent. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, La Belle, Missouri.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN. (6,910 feet). Star cast. We sure knocked them off with this one. A house record breaker. Try it and see. Play it up big and make some money. Tone, good. Sunday and special, yes. Appeal, eighty per cent. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre, LaBelle, Missouri.

WOMAN ON THE JURY. (7,231 feet). Star cast. Excellent picture. Wonderful acting and a very interesting story. Good action. Good clean story. You can't go wrong on this one. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Appeal, eighty-five per cent. Town of 1,000. Admission 10-25. C. C. Golden, Missouri Theatre (250 seats), LaBelle, Missouri.

Fox

CYCLONE RIDER. (6,672 feet). Star cast. This is a very good melodrama and crammed full of action. An ideal picture for Saturday audiences. This fellow, Reed Howes, will make a hit with your audiences. Boost this one and it will please. Tone O. K. Appeal, ninety per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw industrial class, town 6,000. Admission 10-30. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

EVERYMAN'S WIFE. (4,365 feet). Star cast. An attraction commonly known as "a weak sister." Fair tone. Question appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town of 1,500. Admission 10-40-50. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

HEARTS OF OAK. (5,326 feet). Star, Hobart Bosworth. This is undoubtedly the best picture of the past six months for us. A real, human New England coast story with thrills and everything to make a regular Fox film. Had best house in months and they went away satisfied. Good tone. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. No for Sunday, yes as special. Draw all classes, town 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

IRON HORSE. Star cast headed by Madge Bellamy, George O'Brien. We played this picture a week to capacity business. It is a wonderful picture and should go strong wherever played. Pleased our patrons a hundred per cent. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

TIMBER WOLF. (4,809 feet). Star, Buck Jones. This is Buck's first out of 1925-26 group, and it cost me more because it's supposed to be big—there isn't any bigness to it—just a good program action picture. Tone okay. Good appeal. No for Sunday or as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

WINNER TAKE ALL. (5,949 feet). Star, Buck Jones. Would have been better in five reels, as over a thousand feet was taken up in "society" stuff. While this picture was greatly enjoyed, the fans were not as enthusiastic over it as others of Buck's pictures. The prize fights were good, but the Jones fans want the old boy in hard riding, shoot-'em-up, fast action western stories. Fair tone, good appeal. Here suitable for Sunday; no as special. Draw general class, town about a thousand. Admisison 10-25 to 15-35. H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Metro-Goldwyn

BREAD. (6,726 feet). Star cast. This is a good picture but title doesn't bring them in; we lost money on it; those who saw it were pleased. Good tone. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town less than 1,000. Admission 10-30. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

GREAT DIVIDE. (7,811 feet). Stars, Alice Terry, Conway Tearle, Wallace Beery. This proved to be a good drawing card for our theatre; two nights at advanced prices. The stars certainly play their parts well in this picture. Wallace Beery can't be beat as a villain. Tone O. K. Good appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town less than a thousand. Admission advanced. G. H. Perry, People's Theatre (250 seats), Cloverdale, California.

HE WHO GETS SLAPPED. (6,613 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. This, one of the biggest pictures of last year, proved to be one of the biggest flops for me this year; on a two-day run did not take in film rental on it. The picture was good, the acting wonderful, title very bad. People asked what feature I was running with this comedy. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, yes. Fair appeal. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

LITTLE ROBINSON CRUSOE. (6,216 feet). Star, Jackie Coogan. A good program picture that was spoiled by a badly cut print. Attendance was not up to the average, but not because of any fault of the picture. Local fairs always hurt attendance in the fall. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Print poor. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

MAN AND MAID. (8,307 feet). Star cast. A good picture that pleased the colloge boys and girls. Rental too high, as not a special. Elinor Glyn story is what draws here; however, did not do a good business. Played it on the same day the University had a show and they got the business. There should be a non-theatrical in every town so the regular houses could close as some of the Exchanges prefer to sell them. See how the Exchanges would then come out selling each town twice a week. Great business on their part. Draw college class, town 2,100. Admission 10-25. R. X. Williams, Lyric Theatre (345 seats), Oxford, Mississippi.

NAVIGATOR. (5,600 feet). Star, Buster Keaton. This picture gave very good satisfaction. Should please anywhere. Good tone and appeal Yes for Sunday and special. Draw town and country class, town 900. Admission 10-30. Chas. L. Nott, Opera House (450 seats), Sutherland, Iowa.

NELLIE, THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL. (7,000 feet). Star, Claire Windsor. Metro-Goldwyn picture that is not new, but is a dandy melodrama. It also has a good cast, including Claire Windsor, Mae Bush, Edmunde Lowe, Raymond Griffith, Lew Cody and Hobart Bosworth. A good program picture, that drew well and pleased the patrons. Sunday. yes, special, no. Print good. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

PRAIRIE WIFE. (6,487 feet). Star, Dorothy Devore. This was a real nice show that was appreciated by everyone present who had read Mr. Stringer's book. Not a great deal of action but a different angle than the usual western story helped the picture, though the title is bad. Good tone. Appeal, ninety per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town of 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

SCARAMOUCHE. (9,600 feet). Stars, Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro, Lewis Stone. These head the splendid cast in this story of the French Revolution. In spite of the all too apparent lack of enthusiasm on the part of the picture-going public, whenever a costume picture is advertised, "Scaramouse" drew exceptionally good houses and pleased the greater part of the patrons. It is too long; that is the only fault I can find with it. My theatre is not equipped with a "chaise longue" for each patron, so they get tired when the feature runs over seven or eight reels. Suitable for Sunday. Special, yes. Print excellent. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

SILENT ACCUSER. (6 reels). Starring Peter the Great (dog). A very fine melodramatic picture. Best dog picture I have played. Picture drew well and pleased everyone. Paper is very good on this subject. Suitable for Sunday but not a special. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

THE SNOB. (6,913 feet). Star, John Gilbert. There is some good acting in this picture. It is a good program picture, but not what some of the exchanges try to make you think it is. Good tone, fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25,14-35. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre (569 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

WHITE SISTER. Star, Lilian Gish. Very good. Held the interest through two miles of film, so it must have been good. Sunday and special, yes. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

WIFE OF THE CENTAUR. (6,586 feet). Star cast. Four days to good business. Picture was not liked very well. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

Two Weather Reports

Gosh, fellows, I'm wondering if we hadn't better get the Weather Man to start sending "reports." He's gone and molluxed things all up by sending the wrong can of heat one place and the wrong super-feature cool wave to another. Let the boys tell you 'bout it.

"The summer rush is over and everything is so quiet it is distressing. OH, FOR SOME OF CALIFORNIA'S MUCH ADVERTISED BALMY WEATHER for the coming six months!" Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

"We are JUST GETTING OUR FIRST COOL SPELL. Had to use fans up until last night (Oct. 8). HOPE THE 'COOLTH' WILL STAY WITH US as we need some extra patronage." H. H. Hedberg, Amuse-U Theatre, Melville, Louisiana.

Paramount

ADVENTURE. (6,002 feet). Stars, Tom Moore, Pauline Starke. If they like melodrama, give 'em this one for there's a kick and a punch for every foot. A South Seas adventure, with red-blooded action and colorful photography. Tom Moore and Pauline Starke sure put it over and especially Pauline, who is always good. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are screams of buffoonery and will "just kill you a-laughing." Sure fire for your moviegoers. Draw from tourist town, 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

ARE PARENTS PEOPLE? (6,586 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. A domestic drama that hits home and it will especially appeal to married people. Well cast. A dash of the risque adds enough spice to make it interesting. Tone O. K. Appeal 75 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

BEGGAR ON HORSEBACK. (6,874 feet). Star cast. For the highbrows. It's comedy, but the name doesn't signify it. Our easily pleased patrons kicked on this one and we don't blame them. Tone O. K. Appeal 30 per cent. Sunday yes, no as special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

BLUEBEARD'S EIGHTH WIFE. (5,950 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. This is a real good picture. Goes over good. It's worth the money. Good tone and appeal. Yes Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 806. Admission 10-20. W. C. Herndon, Liberty Theatre (250 seats), Valiant, Oklahoma.

CITY THAT NEVER SLEEPS. (6,087 feet). Star, Ricardo Cortez. A very interesting picture which drew a good crowd. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Good appeal. Town and country class town of 1,800. Admission 15-25. Herbert Tapp, Hippodrome Theatre (480 seats), Sheridan, Indiana.

COAST OF FOLLY. (7,007 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. Gloria in a dual role—playing the parts of mother and daughter. Much better than "Madame Sans Gene." Print new. Good tone, pretty good appeal. Maybe for Sunday, no as special. R. A. Preuss, Arvada Theatre, Arvada, Colorado.

CODE OF THE WEST. (6,777 feet). Star cast. The Zane Grey pictures are about the best pulling pictures I can buy. Good tone. Draw mill and farming classes, town of 1,000. Admission twenty-five cents. L. E. Parsons, Parsons Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

COMING THROUGH. (6,522 feet). Star, Thomas Meighan. Fine program picture. Hands you a nice thrill. Fine story, good appeal. Tone, good. Sunday, yes, special, no. Appeal, ninety-five per cent. Farm class town of 150. Admission 15-30. Robert W. Hines, Hines Theatre (150 seats), Loyalton, South Dakota.

CONTRABAND. (8,775 feet). Star, Louis Wilson. This one went over good on a Saturday night for us. It is a program show, with some good rube comedy work in it by Raymond Hatton. Good tone and appeal. Not a special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

CROWDED HOUR. (6,508 feet). Star, Bebe Daniels. Just a program picture but fair enough. Did usual midweek business without extra exploitation. Tone, okay. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Fair appeal. Better classes city of 14,000. Admission 10-35. E. W. Collins, Grand Theatre (700 seats), Jonesboro, Arkansas.

FEMALE. (6,776 feet). Star, Betty Compson. A fair program picture—that's all. No for Saturday or Sunday. Tone none. Appeal 70 per cent. Special no. Draw all classes, town 680. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats), Kalona, Iowa.

GOLDEN BED. (8,584 feet). Star, Rod LaRocque. Best picture we have had in some time. Large crowd, well pleased. Pretty and good moral. Tone, fine. Special, yes. Fine appeal. Mixed class town of 3,000. Admission 20-35. F. L. Wadsworth Jr., Airdome Theatre (300 seats), Tuskegee, Alabama.

GUILTY ONE. (5,625 feet). Star, Agnes Ayres. Just something to run—that's about all it is! Tone and Sunday O. K. No for special. Draw merchant class, town 3,300. Admission 15-30. P. L. Vann, Opera House (650 seats), Greenville, Alabama.

LOST—A WIFE. (6,420 feet). Star, Greta Nissen. Have you boys booked Greta Nissen yet? Hurry, for she's great, and both the men and the women rave over her. This is a splendid story of a gambler's wife who tries to break him of a weakness for roulette—and succeeds. Adolphe Menjou puts it over as usual. Be sure and get this one. Draw city and country class. town 3,000. Admission 10-30. George W. Walther, Dixie Theatre (500 seats), Kerrville, Texas.

LOST—A WIFE. (6,420 feet). Star, Adolphe Menjou, with Greta Nissen. Here not much to this picture; only a fair program. So, do not promise anything much. Tone, none. Not much appeal here. Sunday or as special, no. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

MADAME SANS GENE. (9,904 feet). Star, Gloria Swanson. A wonderful picture, but will go over the heads of most movie fans. Not a picture for small towns, but consider it the best picture she has made for some time. Good tone, fair appeal. Yes for Sunday and special (with regard to above). Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

MERTON OF THE MOVIES. (7,655 feet). Star, Glenn Hunter. For a comedy feature it is good. Hunter is good in this one. Pleased about eighty per cent. Saturday picture, just fair. Tone none. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw all classes, town 680. Admission 10-25. Jack Schneider, Kalona Theatre (300 seats), Kalona, Iowa.

NIGHT CLUB. (5,721 feet). Star, Raymond Griffith. Absolutely the best comedy-drama I have used in a long time: Griffith does some wonderful acting here. Consider him one of the best comedians of today. Yes as to tone, for Sunday and as special. Good appeal. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20. D. C. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (6,943 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. Use this one on a week day and not Sunday (if that happens to be your big day.) People don't care for hoop skirts and minuets, especially when accompanied by a weak story. Tone O. K. Appeal 50 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw mixed class, town 1,300. Admission 10-30. Pace & Bouma, Rialto Theatre (300 seats), Pocahontas, Iowa.

NOT SO LONG AGO. (6,943 feet). Star, Betty Bronson. A good picture of old New York showing the first horseless carriage which is original. Ran this as benefit for parent teachers association. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. All classes town of 3,700. Admission 10-30. Kreighbaum Brothers, Char-Bell Theatre (800 seats), Rochester, Indiana.

PATHS TO PARADISE. (6,741 feet). Stars, Betty Compson, Raymond Griffith. This was an excellent comedy feature and I believe Griffith is made. But why, oh, why! did they ever tack such a title on this otherwise fine show? Betty Compson was good also. Good tone, very good appeal. A family picture but not a special. Draw better class, town 4,500. Admission 10-20. C. A. Anglemire, "Y" Theatre (410 seats), Nazareth, Pennsylvania.

SWAN. (5,889 feet). Star, Adolphe Menjou. Positively not a small town picture. It will go way over their heads. The scenes and so forth are wonderful, but the plot is too dull and complicated for the average fan to follow. Menjou's work saves it from utter ruin. Tone O. K. By above, appeal fair. Yes for Sunday, no as special. Draw from small town, 3,000. Admission 15-25-35. T. L. Barnett, Finn's Theatre (600 seats), Jewett City, Connectiut.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. This is the greatest picture ever made and will do a wonderful buiness anywhere if handled right. It beat "The Covered Wagon" for me. One has to give Paramount too much for here, but it is a picture you should play if you do not make a cent on it. It's a masterpiece. Good tone; appeal a hundred per cent. Special and Sunday, yes. Draw from industrial class, town 6,000. L. O. Davis, Virginia Theatre (600 seats), Hazard, Kentucky.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast, Good. Fine tone. Sunday, no. Good appeal. Town of 9,237. Admission 10-35. H. V. Smoots, Vine Theatre (600 seats), Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

TEN COMMANDMENTS. (11 reels). Star cast. One of the best features we have had the pleasure of showing. Pleased a hundred per cent. A picture everyone should see. Advertised, will certainly bring in everyone. The moral in "The Ten Commandments" is very fine and we are sure that everyone who has the pleasure of seeing it will be benefitted. Famous Players sure delivered a knockout when they produced this one. Good tone, fine appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw mixed class, town 1,800. Admission 25 cents. Fred S. Widenor, Opera House (492 seats), Belvidere, New Jersey

AMERICAN VENUS

Fay Lanphier, California girl, was crowned "Miss America" at the recent Atlantic City bathing beauty pageant; now she has been signed by Jesse L. Lasky for a role in the Paramount picture, "The American Venus," being produced at the big Long Island studios

Pathe

CALL OF THE WILD. (5 reels). Star, Buck (dog). A dandy dog picture, but about one reel too long. Buck, Jack Mulhall and Walter Long in cast. You'll make no mistake in booking it. Good tone. Yes for Sunday. In small towns might be a special. Draw farmer class, town 110. Admission 10-25. M. B. Russell, Benton Community Theatre (120 seats), Benton City, Misouri.

FRESHMAN. (6,083 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. The best box office bet Lloyd ever made; sure a knockout. This broke all box office records for the last three years, including "The Covered Wagon," for attendance. Don't be afraid of it. Audience appeal a hundred per cent. Suitable for Sunday and as special. E. W. Fischer, Rialto Theatre (500 seats), Oakdale, California.

HOT WATER. (6,000 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Not quite up to the Lloyd standard. It will please everyone, but just misses being on a par with other offerings of this comedy producer. Appeal, seventy-five per cent. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw all classes, town 1,500. Admission 10-40-50. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. We missed this picture for Thursday night, account of late shipment of reels from exchange, therefore was dark. On Friday night. It pulled fair business and pleased about eighty per cent. Picture old but print was good. A. E. Andrews, Opera House, Emporium, Pennsylvania.

SAFETY LAST. (6,400 feet). Star, Harold Lloyd. Harold Lloyd in a Pathe comedy that means satisfied patrons who enjoy sheer fun. This is but the second Lloyd Picture I have played, but will sure buy the rest, for the Lloyd features are the best of their kind. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

Producers' Dist. Corp.

BEAUTY AND THE BAD MAN. Star, Harry Carey. This is a fair program picture that can be used for a week end. There is some good action but it lags in all parts. Fair tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, city 15,000. Admission 10-25, 15-35. Ed. Malhiot, Monarch Theatre (569 seats), Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada.

CHORUS LADY. (6,000 feet). Not so good here. Paper, attendance, picture, everything, was terrible. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

TROUPING WITH ELLEN. An ordinary picture of theatrical life that did not draw any new faces and failed to attract many fans. Helene Chadwick is very good as Ellen, but needs more of a story to make her popular. Suitable for Sunday but not a special by any means (although you might get that impression if you knew how much Producers got from me for it. Print good. Guy S. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

United Artists

AMERICA. (12 reels). D. W. Griffith prod. It is good, all right; but it is too long by three reels. If Mr. Griffith could string the Revolution out that far—thank Heaven the story was not contemporaneous with the Hundred Years' War! Picture drew well on one of the stormiest nights of the year. The print was fine. Paper is very good. Suitable for Sunday and yes as a special. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

A WOMAN OF PARIS. Chaplin's personal direction. Same old dope in a new wrapper. Tone, none. Sunday or special, no. Draw all classes, town 1,500. Admission 10-40-50. E. L. Wharton, Orpheum Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Montana.

DOWN ON THE FARM. Star, Louise Fazenda. This is a good Mack Sennett feature comedy, and everyone seemed to be well pleased. Had several good comments on it. A comedy program like this makes a change and people seem to like it. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. General class town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

IRON TRAIL. (7 reels). Star, Wyndham Standing. A Rex Beach story of the Great Northwest and a good picture, but for some reason didn't seem to take very well. Pictures of the North have always gone over big here, so can't account for the appeal on this one. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, sixty per cent. General class town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

IRON TRAIL. Star cast. Old, but just the kind for the small town, action, thrills combined with some real scenes of the Alaskan country. Tone, good. Sunday, rough. Special, no. Appeal, eighty per cent. John Cleva, Jr., Enterprise Theatre, Glenalum, West Virginia.

ONE EXCITING NIGHT. (11 reels). Star cast. Another old picture that did a nice business for me, and is the only long picture I have played that did not tire the audience all out. It is sufficiently exciting to hold interest throughout. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

ORPHANS OF THE STORM. Star, Lillian Gish. An old picture that was new to this town. Drew very well and pleased eighty per cent, Lillian and Dorothy Gish are very good, but they might have ended their separation in the eighth reel and every one would have been happier. It is much, much too long. Print good. Sunday and special, yes. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

Universal

BUTTERFLY. (7,472 feet). Star, Laura La Plante. Well acted picture, but not the kind for my town, as they don't care for society pictures. Some would not sit it out. Fair tone, poor appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw farming and town class, town 600. Admission 10-30. H. W. Batchelder, Galt Theatre (175 seats), Galt, California.

FAMILY SECRET. (5,076 feet). Star, Baby Peggy. This show took good, both with the kids and with the older people. Good tone. Appeal 90 per cent. Yes for Sunday, no as special. J. N. Blanchard, Lone Rock, Kossuth County, Iowa.

FIGHTING AMERICAN. (5,251 feet). Star, Pat O'Malley. A program picture that will get by if they are looking for some entertaining nonsense. Tone, okay. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, 60 per cent. Farmers and merchants, town of 600. Admission 10-25. H. P. McFadden, Real Theatre (200 seats), Natoma, Kansas.

K—THE UNKNOWN. (8,146 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. This feature dragged some at first but it soon got into its swing and held the interest of the audience to the finish. I distributed heralds from Universal that have a letter K cut into pieces for a puzzle; gave passes to the first six to solve the puzzle. Lots of interest and a good attendance. All seemed pleased. Good tone. Draw mill and farming class. Admission 25. L. E. Parsons, Parsons' Hall (325 seats), Marcellus, New York.

LET 'ER BUCK. Star, Hoot Gibson. Good western story. Plenty action. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, no. Appeal, good. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

LORRAINE OF THE LIONS. Star, Patsy Ruth Miller. Had the best Saturday house on this that I have had for a long time. Action of animals in this best I have ever seen. Consider this a real picture. Fair tone, good appeal. No for Sunday, yes as a special. Draw rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats, Glasgow, Missouri.

PHANTOM OF THE OPERA. (8,404 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. An unusual offering, gruesome but interesting. Wonderful photography. A picture that makes them talk. If you can buy it right play it, as I believe it will make good anywhere. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Special, yes. Good appeal. Farmers and merchants, town of 1,650. Mrs. J. B. Travelle, Elite Theatre, Placerville, California.

PHANTOM OF THE OPERA. (8,404 feet). Star, Lon Chaney. When they tell you that this picture is bigger than "The Hunchback" they are wrong, as this picture contains too much impossible stuff; but it is a good picture and a moneymaker if you buy it right. But I wouldn't want to get carried away by this, as there are plenty of good pictures on the market just as good if one will put forth the same effort to exploit them as he will do on this one. Good tone and appeal. Yes as a special. Draw miners and railroad class, town 3,000. Giles Master, Strand Theatre, Gallup, New Mexico.

ROARING ADVENTURE. (4,800 feet). Star, Jack Hoxie. A real, honest western picture with lots of fights and action. All Hoxie's new pictures are better. Believe they are giving him better stories. Good tone and appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

SIEGE. (6,426 feet). Star, Virginia Valli. This sure is a good picture; pleased here 100 per cent. Acting of both stars good. Mary Alden getting better in each picture. Buy and boost it. Good tone and appeal. Yes for Sunday and special. Draw from rural community, 1,500. Admission 10-20-30. I. I. Kennedy, Electric Theatre (350 seats), Glasgow, Missouri.

SPOOK RANCH. (5,147 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. Two days to good business. Just an ordinary western. Newspaper gave it fair reviews. Draw general class, city 35,000. Admission 25-35. C. D. Buss, Strand Theatre (700 seats), Easton, Pennsylvania.

"I have been wrong not to send reports," is the feeling of Charles Morel, Star Theatre, El Dorado, Arkansas.

But he is a good scout. Feeling that he had delaped, he made up for the delay by sending in tips.

It's one thing to feel that you ought to send reports: it's quite another thing to admit you've been wrong: and it's still another to get into action and do something about it.

How about YOU?

TAMING THE WEST. (5,304 feet). Star, Hoot Gibson. A fine Gibson picture; has the long wanted action. Draw from town 3,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

Vitagraph

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN. (6,803 feet). Star, Anita Stewart. Very nice picture. Anita is good, but not as big as we expected. Have seen much better dog actors. Tone, good. Sunday, yes. Hardly suitable for special. Admission 15-25. John Cleva, Jr., Enterprise Theatre, Glenalum, West Virginia.

BEHOLD THIS WOMAN. (6,425 feet). Star, Irene Rich. A good picture in seven reels. The few who came out to see it pronounced it very good. I paid too much for it, so lost money, but no fault of the picture. Tone, good. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, 75 per cent. General class, town of 600. Admission 10-25, 15-35. W. C. Snyder, Cozy Theatre (265 seats), Lamont, Oklahoma.

BETWEEN FRIENDS. (6,900 feet). Star cast. Lay off this one. Nothing to it. Tone, none. Sunday and special, no. No appeal. Laborers and farmers, town of 343. Admission 15-30. J. M. Patterson, Little Gem Theatre (250 seats), Hunter, Arkansas.

CAPTAIN BLOOD. (10,680 feet). Star cast. A special picture that was very disappointing at the box office. It failed to draw and did not please the majority. It is too long and there is too much repetition and similarity of action to hold interest. Paper not very good. Print was okay. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

LOVE BANDIT. (6 reels). Star, Doris Kenyon. A fairly good melodrama that departs from the usual northwestern stuff in some scenes and is pure bunk in others. Will pass with a roughneck audience. Fair tone. Appeal 85 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

ON THE BANKS OF THE WABASH. Mary Carr in a picture suggested by the popular song of several years ago. Picture is old, but the print I received was in fine shape and as I bought it very reasonably and drew a good house I class it as a good buy. Suitable for Sunday. Special, no. Guy C. Sawyer, Town Hall, Chester, Vermont.

Warner Brothers

FIND YOUR MAN. (7,300 feet). Star, Rin-Tin-Tin (dog). First Warner and first Rin-Tin-Tin and it pulled pretty good for a Monday show. Story is a northwestern lumber camp affair from a slightly different viewpoint than usual and dog pulls big if advertised right. Fair tone. Appeal 85 per cent. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, town 3,500. Admission 20-30. Henry W. Nauman, Moose Theatre (700 seats), Elizabethtown, Pennsylvania.

Independents

COWBOY PRINCE. (State Right). Star, Ashton Dearholt. A very poor attraction; no sense to it. Better look at it before you book it. Print new. Appeal very poor. No as special. Draw all classes in big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

FIGHT FOR HONOR. (State Right). Star, William Fairbanks. Railroad story with lots of action. Some of the scenes were a bit faked, especially where the engineer crawls out on pilot and picks up the girl from in front of his fast moving train. It can't be done. She simply flies up in his arms. Business was good and picture good. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, 70 per cent. Mixed classes, town of 2,900. Admission 10-25, 15-30. A. E. Andrews, Opera House (500 seats), Emporium, Pennsylvania.

HIS OWN LAW. Star, Wesley Barry. A very good western. Barry is well cast. Draw from town 1,500. Admission 15-25. E. C. Bays, Globe Theatre, Buena Vista, Virginia.

LET HIM BUCK. Star, Dick Carter. You can get by with this for a one-day show. Don't be surprised if you hear a few squawks. Print good. Fair appeal. No for Sunday or special. Draw all classes, big city. Stephen G. Brenner, Eagle Theatre, Baltimore, Maryland.

PASSING OF WOLF McLEAN. (State Right). Star cast. Good western with plenty of action. The boy plays a good part. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, 90 per cent. Laborers and farmers, town of 343. Admission 15-30. J. M. Patterson, Little Gem Theatre (250 seats), Hunter, Arkansas.

TERROR OF PUEBLO. (State Right). Star, Art Mix. Very good program western. Tone, fair. Sunday, no. Special, no. Appeal, 75 per cent. Laborers and farmers, town of 343. Admission 15-30. J. M. Patterson, Little Gem (250 seats), Hunter, Arkansas.

The Theatre of To-Day

Equipment—Presentations—Prologues—Music

Edited by Colby Harriman

Why Is A Divertissement?

THE word "divertissement" has been applied to a presentation especially when the production was devised and mounted in a simple but artistic manner. The word has also been applied to a group of short stage features. For many months we have been making a canvass of producers to find a better name for the productions in a motion picture house, other than "presentations." That word is too general. It is now used to embrace the entire program, even the picture, and when we come to a rock bottom analysis the word means nothing. There should be a word which would convey to the layman an immediate identification of the present form of production work. Unless he is a patron of the motion picture theatres there is a possibility that he will not know what you are talking about when you say "presentations." There should be a definite title such as melodrama, musical comedy, pageant, etc.

Scores of names have been submitted to us, some are good and might be considered, while others are worse than the present title. During the interim, the word "divertissement" seems to be the only solution and even that word is not sufficient. However, it means a little more. It does give the idea of a diversity, which should be a marked characteristic of the productions. The word "prologue" is satisfactory, because it has a definite meaning and a positive spot and method of application and treatment.

The presentations must be of a diversified nature. The program must have within itself the elements of the classical and the popular, the artistic and the tawdry, dignity and buffoonery, in short, an attempt must be made to offer novelties and stage attractions that will strike a responsive note in people of all ages and classes. The ingenuity of the producer is tested to the extreme in the production of such a program, but "divertissements" are the popular things, the productions offered to act as a break between film action, to plough the ground for an atmospheric note and theme to be introduced at a later period. Today, the demand is for novelty. Artistic scenes and "high-brow" subject matter is all right but to safely inject it in the programs, a novel method must be employed by the producer. The best must be camouflaged with scenery, lighting effects of an original interpretation, or "they will yawn and walk out on you." To produce a consistent program of "divertissements" it behooves the producer to concentrate on one word "novelty," then he will find that he has also achieved another step, that of diversity.

HERSCHEL STUART F-P PRESENTATION DIRECTOR

HERSCHEL STUART, managing director of the Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, has been selected as the director of the presentation department in the re-organized theatre department of Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Stuart, who will arrive in New York this week will open his headquarters with the main office about November 1st. The program of presentation and prologue productions is an auspicious one as announced by the organization and with the vast amount of experience which Mr. Stuart has had as a producer and a manager, makes his appointment a happy selection and a guarantee of efficient operation.

RUBBER STAGE EFFECTS

RUBBER has been successfully introduced as a stage effect by Max Reinhardt in his production "King Lear" in Vienna. Reinhardt desired to give the idea that the scenery and characters should look like stone. He commissioned Ernest de Weerth, the stage designer, to give the actors, as well as the settings and costumes, the appearance of sculpture. De Weerth experimented with many mediums, but finally hit upon rubber. Even the armor and shields used in the play were rubber. The actor's hair was greased and painted gray to carry out the idea. In the costumes the stone effect was obtained by pleating one fold and painting the next. De Weerth, is an American by birth.

NEW ART SUGGESTIONS

PARTICULAR attention is called to the number of photographs, etchings, etc., now appearing in various art magazines relative to the Exposition of Decorative Arts, which is now being held in Paris. Never has there been such a collection of unusual decorative designs as permeates the entire show. We find that a "new art" has gained a place in which to freely express itself, and the Modernists, Futurists, Cubists anud Expressionists have been given the opportunity to spread. The various designs are adaptable as stage settings and the producer who wishes to be in the vanguard will find scores of suggestions in the many photographs of this unusual Exposition.

PAPER STAGE SETTINGS

MAX MANNE, who has successfully devised stage settings of crepe paper at the Rivoli and Rialto Theatres, New York City, has offered a medium to other producers, which will not only give the illusion of a painted drop, but the cost of constructing the scene is far below the price of the scenic artist. Following this work, another producer has been successful in using wall paper and has achieved some marvellous effects with panels, borders, etc. We are always interested in securing data on any scenic novelty.

Moving Picture World Presentations

Devised By Colby Harriman

THANKSGIVING time offers innumerable opportunities for elaborate stage settings. These settings are dual in their purpose, that is, they form a suitable background for the action and create an appropriate atmosphere for the season. The three suggestions which we are offering are varied, and may be used as settings for full stage action, or as backgrounds for song or dance numbers.

PLATE 1. This scene depicts a rural motif in a semi-fantastic style. The barn can be painted on a drop, or it can be constructed of flats with profile at the top cut to give the effects of the gables. A rail fence can be used as a masking row extending from right to left, and in the foreground shocks of corn, pumpkins, etc., can be distributed. Branch of a tree upon which fruit is attached is hung from a battan on extreme right. The lighting treatment should consist of a mellowness, the ambers, rose and purple highlighting the back drop, and in contrast to the vivid red of the barn and the yellow and orange of the foliage in the foreground, the barn should be painted a gray. Characters can make their entrance from back of the shocks of corn if desired.

PLATE 2. Here is a background for a song number of this particular season. A drop with a triangular opening is hung in one. A set piece painted and cut out to represent a sheaf of wheat or grain is placed in two. A sky drop with clouds painted upon it is used to back. The sheaf of wheat (the set piece) should be large enough to fill the opening as outlined in the sketch. The lighting should be from the sides with canaries, orange, amber and dark amber predominating in the foreground, with rose, purple, deep blue and green in the background.

PLATE 3. An exterior motif which may be used as a background for the injection of the Pilgrim and Indian idea. Back drop painted with clouds and distant horizon is augmented with a cut wood drop or sapling set trees down in one. An autumn sunset should be suggested with the lighting treatment. Set trees may also be cut out of compo-board and backed with a battan hung with foliage border. This is a simple way to achieve the same effect as that of a cut drop. It should be remembered that in all autumnal settings the rich warm colors should predominate, not only in the pigments but in the lighting treatments as well. It is the most colorful season of the year and reds, purples, orange, ambers and yellows predominate. Green may be used as a highlight with an occasional injection of deep blue.

Is your theatre under this "New" Management?

A sign neatly displayed over the entrance to a theatre in which a new Simplex Projector had just been installed advised the public that the theatre was "Under New Management."

The Simplex Service man in that district dropped in to inquire as to policies of the new management.

"We have only one policy," said the manager. "That is a social one. We consider ourselves hosts to the whole community in which our theatre is located. Through the columns of a local newspaper we issued an invitation to this community to be our guests. It was a social invitation. We said nothing about the pictures we would show, nor about the prices we would charge. Just an invitation similar to ones used in social life.

"We believe our theatre has a definite place in the social activities of this community. We, as the hosts, are responsible for the comfort and pleasure of our patrons and we give as much consideration to their pleasure as any good host would give to the entertainment of his guests. We won't give our patrons broken chairs to sit on, and we'll pay as much attention to the manner in which pictures are presented as a hostess would pay to the dishes on which she serves refreshments.

"As evidence of that you will notice we have just installed new Simplex Projectors. That's our guarantee to patrons that pictures will be presented in the best possible manner." I said our policy was entirely social. It is—but we've found it excellent from a business standpoint too.

It has been proved many times that better projection draws so much more patronage to a theatre that the cost of the new equipment is soon paid for out of increased earnings.

Let us tell you what can be accomplished through the better projection obtained from Simplex Projectors.

Take a slant at the this. It was sent in by several motion picture projectionists, some of whom merely laughed, while some used language which scorched the paper. It appears on the cover page of an advertising sheet sent out by the manufacturer of a motor used on at least one make of professional projector. The company is located in Chicago.

Well, anyhow the thing is sufficiently absurd to provide a laugh, so let's laugh and—let it go at that!

A First Attempt

Charles Harris, who signs himself "Operator Liberty Theatre," Klamoth Falls, Ontario, says:

This is my first attempt at writing the department. In reading the August 15 issue I got a knockout from brother Hiles little item about you using a can opener to get into the lamphouse. It reminded me of a so called a projectionist, with five or six years' experience, changing the leads on the lamphouse to change the polarity of the carbons.

I have a 75 ampere Wagner Converter as a source of D. C., with a polarity switch to reverse the polarity, which may be necessary every time the converter is started. I had explained to this highly experienced projectionist, who was working relief, all that seemed necessary to be explained.

One matinee I went fishing (lots of that here), leaving him in charge. I was passing the theatre when the cashier called to me that the operator was having trouble getting started. (Hey, waddy y' mean operator. In the beginning you sign yourself as operator of the theatre, and now the operator is having trouble getting started. Whatcha mean, huh?—Ed.) He was changing the wires. Said he had forgot about the polarity switch. What is your opinion of him anyhow?

I am not much of an artist, but will do the best I can to draw the picture of a tool which is handy in the booth (projection room—Ed.) as a frame-line finder on fade-outs. File a notch between each fourth tooth of an old intermittent sprocket. To find the frame line fit the teeth in the sprocket holes of the film back of the fade out, so that the notch is over a frame line. You have then only to roll the sprocket along the film, keeping the teeth in engagement with the holes, of course, and wherever a notch comes next to the film, there is a frame line. Trust this will help some of the boys in finding misframes in fade-outs.

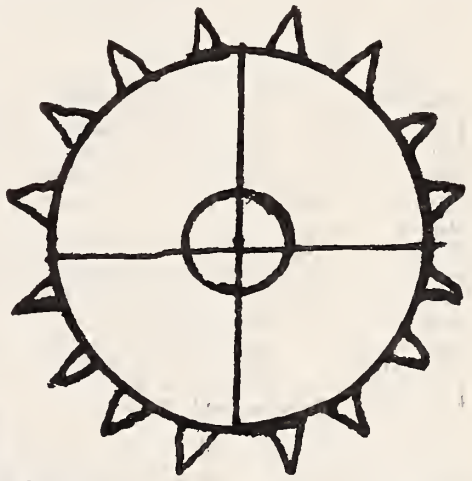
As to what I think of the man who forgot the polarity switch: Well, brother, let us reason together for a moment. Working with a regular motor generator set, as this man probably always had done, there is no polarity, switch, and to change polarity one must, perforce change the wires. This man forgot that there was a polarity switch. I am going to reap your disapprobation by saying that that fact was not enough to condemn him as an incompetent motion picture projectionist.

Freely granting that he should not have forgotten, still he had (we will assume) never worked with one. We are creatures of HABIT (you yourself proclaimed that fact when you used "Operator" and "Booth" in your letter) and habit said "change the wires." He was in a strange place, and most of us may be pardoned for being just a wee bit confused and nervous, unless we have worked a lot as relief where many theatres were involved, and thus, become accustomed to dealing with strange apparatus.

Now mind you this man MAY have been a four flusher. He may have been thoroughly incompetent. I don't know. I merely say that a man must not be too strongly condemned for one blunder in a strange place, where he butts into something which is directly contrary to the practice he has always known.



Your fade-out stunt is good. You have shown a handle attached to the sprocket. For myself I think I would prefer to mount it in a wooden block on the bench by running a small bolt, or a large wire through it to serve it as a bearing. It then would only be necessary to insert the sprocket teeth in the sprocket holes so that one of the notches is opposite a frame line, and pull the film along until the desired point is reached. Amounts to the same thing, only seems to be quite a bit more convenient. Also the mark may be made merely by filing straight across the face of the sprocket—two lines at right angles—so placed that they fall between sprocket holes and pass through center. There are sixteen teeth on each side of an intermittent sprocket, you

Bluebook Answers No. 368 to 372

Question No. 368—This is a question submitted by Messrs. Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia. "The driving motor of a motion picture projector is marked 1/8 horsepower: Three amperes. Working this out makes the motor appear as only 28.4 per cent. efficient. Is not this an exceptionally low efficiency for a motor?

The following came through on this one: Ray Gnaegy, Paducah, Kentucky; C. H. Hanover, Burlington, Iowa; Thoreau and Clark, Vancouver, British Columbia; G. L. Doe, Chicago, Illinois; T. R. Guimond; Mobile, Alabama; Allan G. Gengenbeck, New Orleans, Louisiana and Chas C. Colby, Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Gnaegy says:

Yes, this is a very low rate of efficiency, but it must be remembered that all small motors have low efficiency.

Doe says:

I am not thoroughly familiar with the efficiency performance of small motors, but while it is low, I believe that quoted is considerable lower than it should be, unless the motor happens to be single phase, in which event I believe it is about as high a rate as will be found in small motors.

The information, however, is not sufficiently complete to enable one to give a concise answer anyhow, for there is a decided difference in the efficiency of single phase, 2-phase and 3-phase and D. C. motors, though the difference as between the two last named is very small. Brothers Thoreau and Clark have not, you will note, informed us as to what the current supply is.

Dealing with large motors, it is a very fine one indeed which will show in excess of seventy-five or eighty per cent., and the smaller ones, without exception I believe, operate far below those figures, efficiency decreasing, for any given type of motor, just about in proportion to the decrease in size.

As I said in the first place, I am not as familiar with this subject as I should be to discuss it, but from what fragmentary information I have, I think what I have said is not far from correct.

The editor is unable to find anything in text books at his command which deals with the relative efficiency of motors of various kinds and sizes. Hawkins, page 384, volume No. 2, tells us a little, in very general language, relating to motor efficiency, but nothing which has any bearing on the question under discussion.

Thoreau and Clark, who asked the question, and who should be smacked on their combined wrists for not making it more specific, discuss the matter thus:

Single phase motors are never efficient. At least up to this time, no single phase motor has been manufactured that is nearly as efficient as 3-phase and the still more efficient D. C. motor.

In the 3-phase and D. C. motor there is to all intents and purposes no period of zero in the applied voltage, as there is in the case of single-phase.

Sure, but who the hotel bill said anything about a single, a two or three phase motor—in the question, I mean apparently you were too darned economical with ink when you spread that question on paper, but I am to blame also, for I should have seen its inadequate wording, so we'll all go out and get spanked together.

C. H. Henning, Iowa City, answers thusly. It really isn't much of an answer, but anyhow here it is:

The three 1/8 H. P. motors we use are more efficient than the one in question. They are: Robbins and Myers motors, 2.4 amperes—35 per cent. efficient. Sherman motor, 2.5 amperes—34 per cent. efficient. Jannett motor, 2.7 amperes—31 per cent. efficient.

So that is that, and we will now land on

Question No. 369—In just what way do fuses prevent the operation of a faulty circuit?

All the above, plus brother Henning, answered this one correctly. Gnaegy answers thus:

Fuses prevent the operation of a faulty circuit because when we install a new fuse without having remedied the trouble on the circuit which caused excess of current flow and melted the old fuse, the same excess will occur and will, of course, melt the new one.

This fact forces us to find and remedy any fault in a circuit which causes sufficient excess current flow to melt a fuse before the circuit can be used at all.

Colby says:

Fuses prevent the operation of a faulty circuit because when a fault developes in an electric circuit which is sufficient to "blow a fuse," the same fault, if not remedied, will continue to "blow" fuses as fast as we can put them in, until the fault is found and remedied.

All of which is eminently correct, by heck, so we will now climb over the fence and have a look-see at Question No. 370—What various types of fuses is it permissible to use in theatres?

This question brought forth a varied assortment of answers in one or two respects, evidently because of local laws or rules governing the use of the "link" fuse." I will therefore remark that in some localities it is either permissible or obligatory to use link fuses for certain purposes. In New York City, for instance, link fuses are required for the circuits supplying the projectors, but in the projection room ONLY. In other words, the projectionist must fuse his individual projector circuits with link fuses. This was because it would then be very easy for an inspector to see any "boosters" the projectionist might attempt to use.

Messrs. Thoreau and Clark say:

In theatrical work only three kinds of fuses are used. In most localities only two, i. e. the cartridge and plug. However, so cities insist on the use of link fuses for certain purposes, which same must, in every case, be boxed in. The advantage claimed is that the link fuse cannot be shorted without that fact being immediately apparent to the inspector.

All of which is eminently correct.

Doe says:

Depends somewhat upon local rules or laws. In general only "plug" fuses and cartridge fuses may be used, but there is a subsidiary requirement with regard to the latter, in that while ferrule contacts may be used for anything under sixty amperes, over that current flow only knife-end cartridge fuses are permissible.

In some localities, however, iron cabinet encased link fuses are required, on the theory that whereas "boosting" may be hidden from the inspector, unless he make careful, detailed examination of each fuse, when plug or cartridge fuses are used, this is impossible with link fuses.

Excellent! Clean your glasses, smooth your hair and ears down, Brother Doe, and toddle up to the head of the class, where you may remain until some one maybe beats you to it on Question No. 371—What various markings should be stamped on fuses?

Hanning says:

The amperage and voltage capacity of each fuse should be marked thereon.

Cooley says:

(A) Their capacity in amperes and volts. (B) Underwriter's indorsement. (C) Name of manufacturer, which is correct, though seldom done in its entirety. In fact it could hardly be done on link fuses from lack of space. However everyone agrees that the voltage and amperage capacity, at least, should appear.

Question No. 372—Name all the various points at which fuses should be installed.

I'm sorry boys, but every darned one of you stubbed your toe here, except Gnaegy. Take a good rubber at his answer and then go into your closet, close the door tight and blush. He says:

Fuses should be installed at the following points: (A) Main service fuses located ahead of the main house switch. These fuses carry all the current used in the house, except the exit lights and such other lights as are used during the performance, and which must be burning in case of an alarm of fire or other catastrophe. The exit light and other emergency light circuit should be connected ahead of the main fuses, and have separate fuses of its own. (B) The stage, if the theatre has one, usually has a separate set of feders, which must be fused. (C) Fuses on each and every individual circuit in the theatre, and where wire sizes may change, if any such places there be, in a circuit. These fuses must be at the point where each circuit starts. This of course includes all stage circuits, projection room feeders and each circuit in the projection room, all incandescent and motor circuits and, in fact, as I have said, every circuit in the theatre. (D) Each emergency and exit light must, in addition to the fuses in the circuit itself, have a separate single fuse for each individual lamp.

I have changed brother Gnaegy's language, but have added nothing to his reply.

Hey, wait a minute! I'm wrong. I thought Thoreau and Clark fell down on the emergency and exit lights individual fuses, but they did not, their answer is correct throughout. I apologize for not reading more carefully.

Brother Hanover, of Burlington, Iowa, says:

Brother Richardson, I feel that I owe both yourself and the Moving Picture World a debt of gratitude. I had benefited by the department and through your books for many years, but this Bluebook School, while I took up answering the questions mostly out of curiosity at first, has given me the study habit. It has caused me to accumulate a pretty good library of reference books, and, best of all, by following your advice and making a real, consistent, persistent effort to sell my boss the idea of projection importance, I've actually had my wage raised VOLUNTARIALLY by the said friend boss.

I nearly fell off the perch when he called me into the office a few days ago, told me he believed the excellence of my work had

The Rewards of Leadership

Leadership in industry and business today requires organization, resources and a wealth of specialized experience and technical knowledge.

Because the American Seating Company has the organization, resources, the required experience and knowledge of real leadership, it is entrusted with the Seating of America's Foremost Theatres.

resulted in increased patronage, and informed me that hereafter I would draw five extra dollars per week.

Friend Boss is not at all a bad sort of chap, but he is hard boiled, and won't pay out a cent more than he has to, as a rule, BUT this I will say: He has always been willing to pay the price, provided he was convinced the goods were worth it.

And now I'll let you in on a secret. You have asked for street or theatre address of correspondents, but I have not sent mine; also (here is the secret) Hanover is not really my name, but merely one assumed for the purpose of corresponding with the department.

My reasons? No they are not the same as those of Brother Doe, but merely that in a relatively small city one usually gets a lot of criticism when one starts writing to a paper, and gets himself into a lot of arguments also. I know for I was once a correspondent of the department in another city, using my own name, and that was what happened. I therefore write "Hanover," street and theatre address unknown, and all that is side-stepped.

I promise you, though, Brother Richardson, that some day, after the Bluebook School is finished and done, you shall know who I am. Meanwhile no possible harm is done, and the good work goes on. I would not have told you this, except that I felt mean about not coming across when you asked for addresses.

Well, friend Hanover, I had suspected something of the sort, because I received a letter from a Burlington projectionist some months ago saying that there was no projectionist by the name of Hanover working in or known in that city, and asking how come. I merely advised the writer that I did not know, and mailed him a couple of your envelopes and one of your answers. As it was all typewritten, even to the signature, that could do no harm, and it was proof positive that the Hanover letters came from Burlington ALL RIGHT.

know. I have re-drawn the sprocket face, merely to show the method of making it. The cross lines represent the notches.

NOTE: Sprocket makers are NOT advised to pattern the teeth on their sprockets after those I have drawn. They might be worse—but even so they are quite punk enough.

And now my good Canadian brother, don't get all fussed up because I have not agreed with you, and have criticized your nomenclature. The first I did because I think you were in error. The last because you were directly at fault in following a perfectly foolish custom when it is evident that you knew better. However, be a good sport and come again whenever you've something you wish to speak your mind upon. Maybe I'll agree with you next time, and anyhow you did break the ice and write to the department which tries, earnestly, every one of the fifty two weeks in the year to help YOU, and the profession from which you derive your corned beef and cabbage, ice cream and soda and such other things as you can pry enough money loose from friend boss to get!

Correct

The Da-Lite Screen and Scenic Company, manufacturers of the Da-Lite screen, lays the following before me:

Acting upon your proposition as explained in the Projection Department, this compay will submit four different types of screen surface for test. We are pleased to co-operate with you in this matter, and hope it will result in stressing the importance of a proper reflective surface in connection with the theatre projection equipment.

However, while it is very important that exhibitors and projectionists have reliable data concerning the reflective and diffusive powers of screen surfaces, we do not believe that knowledge alone would insure the best type of screen, as the quality of the light, quality of the screen and various other considerations have an important bearing on every decision which is based on all important facts. We thank you for having brought this matter to our attention.

Unquestionably the writer is correct in his contention that there are other important considerations besides reflective power and reflective characteristics. That is an understood fact. This department has no desire to meddle with matters which the exhibitor and projectionist of ordinary intelligence is in position and may decide for himself, except in individual cases where its advice directly is asked.

What the screen test is designed to do is make information available concerning those things which the projectionist and exhibitor cannot possibly accurately test for themselves, and concerning which there has been a vast amount of plain bunk set forth by some screen salesmen in the past. All we propose to do is enable the projectionist to select a screen surface which is suitable for his house insofar as has to do with diffusion, and to also enable him to compare different surfaces as regards their relative power of reflection.

With the durability of the screen structure color tone, the excellence of its mounting, or even the durability of its surface it is not our purpose to deal.

I believe, however, the projectionist has the RIGHT to ask which will enable him to determine with certainty whether or not a certain screen surface is such as will give maximum service, without fade-away in the theatre it is proposed to use it in. In the past costly screens have been bought and installed by exhibitors, which were totally unfitted to auditorium conditions. Screens have been made and sold by men who apparently knew absolutely nothing whatever of the problems involved in the diffusion of light in auditoriums of various widths.

Up to the time of writing, six manufacturers have either already submitted samples for test, or have signified their intention of so doing. These include the Raven, the Da-Lite, the Minusa, the Werstner, the DeVry and the Gardner.

Reflector Type Lamps

Recently I was up in the projection room of the Rivoli Theatre, New York City, which same is one of THE motion picture theatres of Greater New York. For years they have been using 120 amperes and an ordinary arc for projection. When I heard that Supervisor of Projection, Harry Rubin, had caused reflector type lamps to be installed, I was surprised. The lamps are the Peerless. The screen illumination apparently is fully equal to that supplied by the ordinary 120 ampere arcs. The reflector type lamps are using twenty-eight amperes.

From there I went to the Criterion and Rialto, both of which are under Supervisor Rubin's charge as to projection matters, and both of which have Peerless lamps installed.

I found the new lamps were not yet in use at the Criterion, though they were connected up and were to be put into service within a day or two. I was disappointed, because Joseph Basson, president of Local Union 306 New York City Motion Picture Projectionists, and himself a very able man, is Chief Projectionist at the Criterion. I had hoped to have his opinion concerning the lamps.

At the Rialto the screen was well illuminated. Before the change they had used 110 amperes. They now use 28. At both the Rialto and Rivoli I asked the men this point blank question: "Were the theatre your own property, would you change back to the ordinary arc?" The answer was, in both cases, a prompt and emphatic NO.

At both theatres there seemed to be a doubt that the definition of the picture was quite as good as it was with the old optical system. This has been reported from other sources. However, notwithstanding this possible fault, no one who has used the newer types of reflector arc equipment seems willing to go back to the ordinary arc. If there really is any difficulty in the matter of definition, I have full faith to believe it will soon be ironed out.

My own opinion is that there is now no longer any real reason for using the ordinary arc for motion picture projection.

Mazda? Yes. Mazda has its field and will remain.

High intensity? Yes, it also has its field, though it is not impossible that the reflector type lamp will be improved to a point where it will supersede the high intensity. The new Peerless lamps have already displaced high intensities in several high grade theatres, and reports have it that both projectionists and managers are satisfied with the results.
